All this may be affirmed, with equal truth and promise, of Germany, and all the older countries of Europe. The facts of current history, all with one accord, prove that sustenance is now everywhere growing rapidly more abundant for the people of every progressive community. I need say nothing of the supplies of the manufacturing and mechanic arts. These are, in a good sense, unlimited and illimitable in their nature. Before we sent the first bale of cotton to England, in 1790 the British people had but one yard per annum of cotton cloth for each person. Immediately before our rebellion they consumed an average of thirty yards. In the wares and implements made from the useful metals the very miracles of magic are realized in their multiplication. Your own memories will serve to show the increase in travel and transportation. The railways of England, not more than half the length of ours, two years ago carried a number of passengers equal to one quarter of the inhabitants of the globe, and transported men and commodities weighing a hundred and forty millions of tons a hundred and thirty-five millions of miles, or the distance from the earth to the sun and half-way back again—some improvement since it required three days to carry the most important news a hundred miles from London. Is human nature shrinking in presence of its material conditions? See how faith in nature's laws and agencies enables its disciples to say to this mountain, "Remove hence to yonder place, and it shall remove; nothing shall be impossible to you." Has not human intelligence already gone so far in the subjugation of materialism that it must ere long attain an entire masterdom over the animal, vegetable and mineral kingdoms? Within a century, indeed, we have added a new continent to our dominions; we have invaded the realm of the imponderables, and added the impalpable and invisible gases, the lightning and the light, to the trophies of discovery and the resources of use. But England is not a country in which a true political economy can be born. Its systems are all founded upon the disorders of misgovernment and the ill-distribution of the products of industry. Pauperism, potato rots, and emigration are the puddles from which they draw their principles and prejudices.

There is a healthier fountain here, and a more hopeful philosophy. Mr Carey, now only waiting for immortality until he shall have "put if this mortal," has amply refuted every assumption of the "dismal science." He has demonstrated a continually increasing supply of food, and all things else necessary to life and growth, with a constantly decreasing fecundity in the human race, with all improvement now proceeding in the pursuits of industry. Among the best of the prophecies and proofs of the better time coming," is his law of the substitution of the abundant and cheap for the scarce and the dear in all the commodities required for the support and development of human life. From savages to, through all the intervening stages up to the most advanced civilization, the law or process of substitution runs with cumulative force. In the lowest condition men live almost wholly upon the animal world, plundering and destroying it; a step further, they begin to cultivate the earth and bring the vegetable world into their service; then the mineral world is captured, and finally the subtlest agencies of nature, whose pavilion is in the clouds, submit to his dominion. Neither earth nor man are being impoverished; neither is exhausting the other. With the mastery of the one grows the service of the other at even pace, without assignable limit in interactive development.

LOVE.

BY HANNAH MARIA PEALE.

I stood within a mighty fane of the old chivalric days;
The sunshine poured through stained glass its rainbow-tinted rays;
Upon a gallant company they fell with dazzling sheen;
But paler were they than the hues they blended with, I ween:
For there were pomp and pageantry, fair dame and lordly knight,
And all the dazzling blazonry of the days of papal might.
Before the altar decked with gems a youthful lady stood,
But the fair red gem that decked her was her own true womanhood:
A tint like rosy morning's light lay on her graceful cheek,
But clear and truthful glances told the love she could not hide;
And, oh, if woman e'er may lean on aught beneath the skies,
I deemed no blight would dim the trust in that fair lady's eyes;
For one there stood beside her, whose noble brow and form
With the soul of ancient chivalry and lofty love were warm;
I saw their glances mingling, and I knew that each had read
The solemn words "FOREVER ONE!" in what those glances said.

One healing draught
Of the bright eternal morning, by the weary spirit quaffed,
Shall banish all the joys and sorrows of this short life's journey seem,
But as lights and shadows falling on the pathway of a dream.—Ibid.

Spiritualism.

DR. S. L. MCFADDEN AND WIFE, MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN, Spiritual Test Medium, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have removed to No. 248 W. Madison St., corner of Sangamon, Chicago.

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers to call and see them They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law unto themselves,—to be their own teachers, teachers, doctors and preachers. All Bodies are invited to attend free of charge. The Contradictions of the Bible, Lying Spirits, and false representations publicly explained. Sittings for the examination of diseases, and private communications, from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n15 12t

DR. SAMUEL MAXWELL,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN

Tenders the aids of magnetic touch, and the use of appropriate magnetized remedies. Also makes clairvoyant examinations. Patients to be treated by letter should send age, sex, and leading symptoms. Board in private families if desired. Come to, or address,

SAMUEL MAXWELL, M. D.
73 SOUTH SIXTH ST., RICHMOND, IND.
v10 n13

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large reserves to secure. Send stamp for Circulars. C. E. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 12, No. 121 Lasalle St., Chicago.
v10 n13 tf

Spencer's Positive and Negative Powders, for sale by Colby & Co.

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

Eighth National Convention.

The American Association of Spiritualists.—The Eighth National Convention will meet at Troy, New York, on Tuesday, the 12th of September, at 10 o'clock in the morning, and continue a session three days.

Each active State or Territorial organization of Spiritualists, within the limits of the United States of America, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members of such organization, and of each working local society, and each Progressive Lyceum within the boundaries of such State or Territory, provided that only one general organization shall be entitled to representation from any State or Territory. Each Province of the American Continent shall be entitled to one delegate for each working association within its limits, and the District of Columbia shall be entitled to two delegates.

Each active local Society, and each Progressive Lyceum of any State, Territory, or Province which has no General Association, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members.

These Associations are respectfully invited to appoint delegates to attend this meeting and participate in the proceedings.

HANNAH F. M. BROWN (Chicago, Ill.,) Pres.
HENRY T. CHILD, M. D. (624 Race St. Phil.), Sec.

New York State Spiritualist Association.

The Fourth Annual Convention of the New York Spiritualist Association will be held at Starr or Carroll Hall, Le Roy, Genesee Co., Saturday, Sept. 2d, at 2 o'clock P. M., for the election of officers for the ensuing year, and also to choose delegates to attend the National Spiritual Convention, to meet at Troy, New York, Sept. 12th, and for the transaction of such other business as may come before the convention.

This State Convention meets in connection with the Medina and Spoor and Quarterly Convention, which is to convene on Saturday, at 10 o'clock, and continue in session both Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 2d and 3d.

A cordial invitation is extended to all truth-seekers to attend all the sessions.

J. W. SEAVER, Pres.
P. J. GLEN, Sec.

Richmond, Iowa.

The Spiritualists and friends of progression will hold a meeting, commencing on Friday evening, August 11th, 1871, and continuing over Sunday, in Adams' Grove, Snake Hollow, near the schoolhouse, 4½ miles northwest of Richmond, Washington Co., Iowa.

Good speakers and healers will be present from a distance.

The invitation is to all.

WM. GATHERCOLE.

Two-Days Meeting at Albion, New York.

At an assembly of the Spiritualists of Orleans Co., today, it was resolved that a two days meeting be held in Albion, Saturday and Sunday, the 22d and 23d days of July next, and that J. G. Fish and Leo Miller be invited as speakers. Entertainment will be provided for friends from a distance.

A. C. WOODRUFF.

Hymeneal.

MARRIED.—Under the authority granted by the Religio-Philosophical Society, Brother Thomas Gales Forster publicly consummated the marriage of Mrs. Anna Reynolds and James H. Blankley.

Mrs. Reynolds is well known as an excellent trance and test medium, and we are happy to announce that she will continue to give seances at her new residence, 1219, North 8th St., Philadelphia.

HENRY T. CHILD, M. D.

Obituary.

Passed to Spirit life, from Easton, Kansas, June 30th, 1871, the wife of James W. Oliphant, aged 54 years, 4 months, and 3 days. She leaves 6 small children to mourn her loss.

BELVIDERE SEMINARY,

FOR YOUTHS OF BOTH SEXES,

Belvidere New Jersey. Fall Term begins Wednesday, Sept. 13th. One of the most liberal institutions in the land, being strictly non-sectarian. It has the superior advantages of a beautiful and healthful location, added to the comforts and genial influences of a pleasant home, with excellent opportunities for obtaining a practical education in any or all of the several degrees, Scientific, Literary, and Polemic. Pupils graduate in each department, also in Commercial.

For catalogues, address Miss Bush, Principals.
v10 n11 9t.

813 RACE ST.

R. R. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, can accommodate MEDIUMS visiting that city with first-class rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.
v10n13 tf

IT COSTS

Only about one third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Ready Book-Binder. Size suited to any publication, from the smallest Monthly to the largest Weekly. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both styles and Binder. Size for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 18; price $1.20 and $1.50. Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph or from lock of hair, readings of character; marked changes, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with pre cription; adaptation of those needing marriage; directions for the management of children; hints to the inharmoniously married, etc.

TERMS—$2.00 for full Delineation; brief Delineation—$1.

A. B. SEVERANCE,
457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE, WIS.
v7n19tf.

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services. v9 n3 tf

CARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.

Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, with or without top. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

N. KINNEY.
v9 n20 3m.

Bible in India and Hindoo New Testament.

We will send the above-named rare books free of postage, on receipt of $3.50.

MEDIUMS.

CLAIRVOYANCE.

Dr. P. T. Johnson examines diseases by receiving lock of hair, name, and age, stating sex.—one dollar accompanying the order. He also prepares a sure antidote for OPIUM AND MORPHINE HABITS; three months will cure the most inveterate case. Charges, six dollars per month. He also prepares a Sure Cure for Ague,—50 cents per box. Will be sent by express. Address Ionia, Ionia, Mich.
v10 n11 tf

J. G. W. ENTWISTLE,

CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN.

No. 194 South Clark Street, Room 3, Chicago.

He is prepared to treat any of the many forms of disease, and possesses a peculiar insight into the cause and character, and a controlling power over it which seems wonderful (even to himself). His medicines are purely vegetable. In valids at any distance will be as thoroughly examined, and the means of cure (if curable) as definitely pointed out as if they were present, by sending a lock of hair, giving name, age, sex, and two leading symptoms of the disease. Usually no fee is not treated. Examination fee, by hair, $2.00.
v10 n8 9t

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex; occupation, temperament, (if not known), send photograph). Address P. O. Box 80, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.
v10 n8 tf

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, two dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for mediumistic development, one dollar.

Address, Taunton, Mass.
v10 n10 tf

MRS. E. MANIFOLD

Medical, Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium. Parties at a distance examined by lock of hair. Price, $1 00. Prescriptions, $1.00. Magnetic Remedies sent to all parts of the country. Address Mrs. E. C. Manifold, P. O. Box 1926, Rockford, Ill.
v10 n7 tf

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,

Healing Medium,

Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. We rely entirely on the controlling influences. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance those that desire, and can afford the expense. Delineation and advice in a variety of ways. Enclosure we give gratuitously to all our patients, when presented by our guides. Our former custom has been to close an epistle with the applicant's hand-writing or lock of hair; but to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write—if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to number up an enumeration of gifts that we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $3; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $1 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 45, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis.
v10 n1 tf.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by Rhenom, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can treat disease at a distance, tell the past, present and future—advice concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $3.00. Delineation of characteristics with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.
n7n10 tf.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium

148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

Mrs. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure in the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

Of one prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controlling her accomplish the same, is done as well when the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $1.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $3; answer to sealed letter, $1. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS.

Madison Doherty, having severed his connection with A. D. Willis, at Chicago, has opened a Gallery, at Indianapolis, Indiana, where he will sit for spirit pictures.

Parties at a distance wishing these pictures can get the same result as if present, by inclosing a lock of hair, a picture, and the fee of three dollars, and post office stamp stating the day and hour they wish a trial. Money refun ded if no result is obtained.

DOHERTY & PURSELL, PHOTOGRAPHERS.
Nos. 94 & 96 East Washington street,
Indianapolis, Indiana.
v10 n12 3m

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

ROSICRUCIAN MUSINGS.

By F. B. Dowd.

Well! how do you prosper? and how does the world use you? I asked not long ago, as I shook hands with one of the leaders of radicalism, one who is really a "big gun," and a scourge to superstition and bigotry whenever he opens his mouth, either for himself or for the invisibles, who he says, speak through his hale, hearty organism. Oh! well enough! The world uses every man as he deserves! Don't you think so, Brother! "Yes! I think so!" was the reply of the genial man addressed. But I was not so easily satisfied, and went my way up and down the wearisome earth, musing as usual. Then this is the conclusion of one whose head is growing pale with the frosts of many winters; and a result of angel (?) teachings for many years—the result of a prosperous career of public teaching, and test giving, whereby the good Brother has been enabled to amass a competency, and ride triumphant upon the waters of "Life's tempestuous ocean." It may be true, for he certainly ought to know, but my mind went back to poor Austin Kent in his poverty and suffering, and to poor A. G. Parker, who died neglected among strangers; and of the many honest toiling millions, who, in poverty, eke out a wretched existence in garret and cellar; of the millions of unpaid sewing girls whose names tremble upon the good brother's lips in many of his public "Woman's Rights Speeches;" of the wrongs and outrages perpetrated upon the helpless women and children of all the large cities of our fair world—and I said it is not true. The world does n't use all men as well as they deserve. Perhaps, Brother——has received the reward due to his peculiar efforts and toil; but how is it with those whose motives have been just as good, whose hearts have been fully as noble, but whose brains have not been equal to the task, or whose "Brass" has not been fully "proof" as compared to Brother——, and who have not been backed by loving angels, but who have been broken up and wrecked by the same invisible powers who have built up Brother——, and that not from any fault of theirs, unless ignorance may be termed a fault. Behold! men rolling in wealth, and crowned with success and prosperity on all sides. Do they deserve this? In some cases, yes! But in the great majority, no! Unless fraud, deception, and wholesale robbery are deserving of public patronage, and fitting themes for public teaching and example. He who renders to "air and just equivalent for labor performed, or for wares exchanged, or purchased, never grows rich. Riches acquired, are expensive to the poor, when such acquisition is a result of speculation, either upon their daily toil or upon the products of labor. There is enough in the world for all, and were it not for the drones, and the injustice of the world bolstered up by the arrogance of such hard-hearted public teachers as Bro. ——, none would suffer. I say hard-hearted, because such a remark is heartless and soulless.

It sounded to me like the cant of those God-forsaken wretches, who from the pulpit preached in the name of God the right of slavery, which teachings cost the best blood and noblest sacrifices our mothers and sons could give to obliterate. Oh, give me the heart to say and feel, that my prosperity is not altogether of my own deserving, but rather a result of circumstances within and without myself, over which I have very little control. There is something in this retrograde of humanity, that falls like a withering curse upon human sympathy, and seals up the noblest attributes of the soul in the narrow confines of the tomb of selfishness. No man ever yet made such a remark, whose heart was softened by the manifold woes staring wildly from tearful eyes on every hand. I have almost always found the noble hearted, deserving ones, the victimized and the robbed, and that, too, by such as arrogate to themselves the God-attribute of deserving. There is many an unhung murderer, and many a thief enjoying liberty and public confidence. Paine deserves a better name than the world accords, and Socrates, Pythagoras and Galileo, deserved better than they received at the hands of an arrogant and unjust world. Do n't talk to me of deserving! The world's history is blackened all over with the blood of men deserving of all that earth can bestow, and the very atmosphere is tainted with soul-wrung agony from out hearts, who deserve better of the world. I know a noble, generous souled man in this city, who is now in his old age, toiling in the streets for bread, for himself and little ones. A few years since this man was wealthy, but, who by reason of his confidence in one of the deserving kind, was robbed and wrecked, whilst the robber and wrecker flourishes, enjoying plenty, and the confidence and patronage of this rotten, unjust world. Does he deserve success? and does the other deserve adversity?

No! a thousand times, no! The world judges from appearances which are always deceitful. There are many Shakespeares and Miltons toiling in obscurity, against adverse circumstances, whose great thoughts will die with them untold, while there are thousands in halls of legislation and in the pulpit, whose thoughts are all borrowed, and whose influence and teachings are a curse to mankind.

Look at the press of this country! Instead of leading and moulding public sentiment to better things, it panders and truckles to nabobs and corrupt legislation. Why? Because such minions are always helped into place for that purpose—not because they deserve it—while the man who dares to speak against public sentiment for the good of humanity, deserves and gets the faggot and the cross. The world owes its bondage, oppressive laws, bad morals, etc., to such as have always been considered deserving ones—they are priests, kings, and public teachers, who advocate such nonsense as provoked the muse of this article.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

WHO MADE THE FIRST WORLD?

By J. W. Garst.

Brother Francis seems to be greatly perplexed over this question. In summing the position that worlds are made by hands of spirits or disembodied men, he gets into a difficulty from which he can not very easily extricate himself. In the order of nature every world must have a pre-existence to man, and therefore, he will not contend that man made the first world, though he asserts very positively that man, who once lived on the earth, we now engraged in the spheres, and who has the power to create worlds, suppose that he made the first engine on every other planet. In every case a world is first brought into existence through the operation of nature's laws, and then, after being developed through the operation of the same laws for innumerable ages, it becomes capable of producing man; then man, after being developed through innumerable ages, becomes capable of constructing a steam engine.

But there is a great difference between the making of a world and the making of an engine. One is the work of infinite intelligence, the other of finite mind; one is the work of nature, the other of art. Man, though his powers be developed through billions of ages, can not by the aid of science and art, reproduce any of the works of nature. He can not make a buzzing fly, nor even the most insignificant worm that crawls upon the earth. Nor can the laws of progress do more than develop the powers that nature has given. Nature is eternal, and there is no power in the universe that can change her orders, or add a single production to her stores. Matter and spirit in every form and combination—all animals of every species, from the crawling insect to the giant man, all trees and plants, all flowers and fruits, worlds and systems of worlds, exist eternally, and have neither beginning nor end. It is true these earth forms or physical manifestations are transitory in their existence, but their spiritual essences are self-existent and eternal, as God himself.

We perceive in the light of nature that the questions, "Who made the first world?" or "the first man," or "the first flower," are equivalent to the question, "Who made God," or "the cause of all things," to which any man would answer, He is self-existent and eternal.

But Brother Francis presumes that new worlds are continually appearing in the heavens to take their places along with the already innumerable hosts that move in order and harmony, through the illimitable regions of space. And the question arises, if God nor man makes these new worlds, from whence do they come? Who is their author? We answer without hesitation, that worlds reproduce worlds, according to the same laws by which plants reproduce plants, and animals reproduce animals, each after its kind.

This law is eternal and universal as all other laws of nature are operating through every department of the universe, mineral, vegetable, and spiritual.

REMARKS:—The Brother do n't understand us. We believe that there never was a commencement to time, or a period when there did not exist worlds and systems of worlds. We claim that when mystery vanishes in connection with any work, then an Infinite God vanishes; and in all cases, individualized intelligences are found in connection with it. We could present a volume of evidence to sustain this conclusion, and shall do so at some future time.

Letter from Della E. Duke.

DEAR JOURNAL:—In your issue of June 24th, No. 14,—your Frontier Correspondent, in writing of "the laborers in the cause of humanity, who have preceded us in Kansas City so far as we have been able to learn where, etc., etc." The name of our worthy sister, Mrs. S. A. Horton, not appearing,—I am impressed to say that this pioneer in the cause of Spiritualism, who for fourteen years has been one of our most indefatigable laborers and reliable mediums, was in Kansas City last winter, and during her sojourn of three months,—lectured not only acceptably to good audiences, but gave hundreds of remarkable tests, to many who never before had any acquaintance with Spiritualism. "Honor to whom honor is due." We know Mrs. Horton personally, and love her tenderly, and have beheld a willing captive to the burning inspiration that fell from her inspired lips, and have also had test after test from our loved ones gone on before. She is ripe in experience, and a rich inheritance awaits this noble worker beyond the "evergreen shore," where night cometh not, and where all the cares of life are unknown, and where finds no abode, and where true worth, and not outside appearances, find an everlasting abiding place in the "soul of supreme truth."

Elgin is another garden spot of the West. Here the soul gathers largely from natures teachings. I wish I could report a greater spiritual interest here, but orthodoxy has too firm a foot-hold, and will require the united efforts and continued perseverance on the part of true workers to ever evoke any satisfactory results. I suppose there are some Spiritualists here, but the only practical results of mediumship which has come to our knowledge, is shown in the good works of Mr. George Marshal and his estimable wife, who are healers,—honest in their efforts,—true, sensible, conservative Spiritualists. They have labored largely and deserve the best encomium my pen can give. To such workers the soul ever gives homage. Why are there not more like them. Wayward workers. Eleven millions of Spiritualists, where are they? Echo answers, where! Do we find them among the high born and sumptuously clad? Indeed not! If there are any among such, many of them are too politic to declare themselves free, but rather stand by, and let their more humble neighbor bear the brunt of the battle, while they gather the harvest! Great will be their surprise when on the other side, they find it is the producer that has the "reward of merit," and not the consumer. Mr. A. Brown is also a healer, and his wife a clairvoyant. They are young people, zealous, and full of the spirit to do and to act,—anxious to spread the truth, oftimes to their detriment pecuniarly. Mr. Brown tried to hire some rooms where he could have some physical manifestations,—but owing to prejudices, he was unable to secure them. I find to be a Spiritualist and practice what you preach, is to suffer the calumny and slander of those who seem to think one of the requisites of an orthodox Christian, is to malign your brother man, declaring the falsity of a thing without proving its quality. I believe in proving all things, and holding fast to that which is good. This applies to persons as well. Do not take what another says about any one, but go yourselves, investigate with an honest heart and faithful purpose. I have charity for the ignorant who know no other way only to accept what some poor, bigoted, half-educated orthodox preacher, (whose face is so long drawn that should a ray of sunlight happen to glance athwart it, "would slip off without making any impression), has to tell them. But my charity does not extend to those who can read with their own understanding, and who speak of that which they know not of.

My noble husband has an extended practice here in Elgin and vicinity. My heart is made glad by smiling faces, who daily come with blessings for the Doctor, and words of thankfulness that they have learned the better way. He works effectually not only to cure the sick in body, but is constantly preaching the "new gospel" which does away with the old Mosaic doctrine of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth," and "love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you." Such teachings are the balm of Gilead to the sin sick soul, and the world is hungering for them. Let the good work go on, and may the angels bless it, is the prayer of

Yours truly,

DELLA E. DUKE.

Elgin, Ill., June 21st, 1871.

A SAD STORY OF MAN'S INHUMANITY TO WOMAN.

Saturday night last, at ten o'clock, a young man was sitting in the reception room of [illegible] place. At length her mother came and took her away. A day or two afterward the young girl was sent to St. Luke's Hospital, where she died. While on her death-bed she related to a Christian minister who attended upon her in her last moments, the sad story of her ruin.

More than a year ago she had found employment as a nurse in the family of a wealthy merchant. Being young and comely to look upon, she attracted the attention of the merchant, and he attempted to lead her into the path of sin, but she resisted his blandishments, and refused to yield to his entreaties. He persisted, and she left the house and obtained a situation in the country. Still he pursued her, and learning that her situation was too laborious for her strength, he induced her, under promises of more respectful treatment, to return to his house. But he was bent upon her destruction. Instead of instilling into her mind the precepts of the church, of which he was a prominent member, he labored artfully and incessantly to inspire her with an unholy passion for himself. By continued importunities and protestations of love—assurances of undying fidelity and devotion, and all the various devices of the artful seducer, he finally succeeded in winning the confidence of the girl, and for a few months he revelled in the "guilty gladness" of his most sinful lust.

The natural consequence ensued, and then came fear and anxiety, and to hide one crime a more terrible one was resorted to. In order to hide the evidence of her shame and his own perfidy, he took her to one of those detestable wretches, whose occupation is that of the abortionist. He then sent her into the country—not to be nursed and taken care of, but to perform menial service in a family, who imposed upon her labors to the severe if not the ruin of her health. She became totally blind, and her nervous system was completely shattered. She concluded to return to her mother, and sent a telegram to her to meet her at the depot. The dispatch was not delivered for four hours, and all that time the sick girl remained at the depot. When she was sent to the hospital, the minister, finding she could not survive, urged her to reveal the name of her destroyer. She refused at first, saying she loved him better than her life; but as death approached and laid his icy hand upon her, she sought forgiveness of heaven, and related to the man of God the bitter story of her young life's shipwreck. She passed away like a beautiful flower, blighted in the morning of its blossoming. He who had sent her to her grave, despised and dishonored, moves in the best circles of society—trusted as a wealthy merchant—respected as a father and husband—honored as a church member; but what must be the state of his conscience! But this case is not a rare one. The world still moves on.

Letter from H. C. Davidson, M. D.

BRO. JONES: By accident there fell into my hands a copy of the RELIGIO PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. Although considerably torn and soiled, I was enabled to learn something of its mission. I would like very much to see a copy or two (back numbers will do as well) with a price list of books. If I am pleased with the JOURNAL and books, I would become an agent if you desired it.

I subscribe to no creed on earth. "The world is my country—to do good my religion." I was brought up strictly religious, reading everything that opposed the least of its ordinances in the most heinous light. It is no exaggeration for me to say I have read the Bible through twenty times, and I have particularly noted every text which seemed to favor my views of religion, from the first of Genesis to the end of Revelation. Ten or twelve years ago, meeting with some opposition touching the divine authenticity of the Bible, I was led to examine thoroughly that book, with a view of establishing the fact of its divine origin. The result was confusion and perplexity.

I am now "old in infidel." If I attend church, which I sometimes do, infidelity receives a large amount of attention.

Such a course has led me (though contrary to my feelings) to challenge the clergy, or rather to state that I would meet any of them in this part of the country, and undertake to establish the fact that all religions were originated in the ignorance and superstition of mankind, and are unfounded in fact. The proposition received no attention yet.

Poplar Bluff, Mo.

Reply: We can supply the books you desire. You will find the price and postage in the Book List, published in the JOURNAL which we send you.

Your views in regard to the origin of all religion are correct, and yet, strange as it may seem, many liberal-minded men and women, even Spiritualists, desire to follow in the footsteps of past ignorance, by erecting another temple to the priestess of superstition,—an American Association of Spiritualists, with all the paraphernalia, under a new name, and in a modified form of ancient priestcraft—a new religion, as many would christen it.

May good angels protect us, and continue to thwart all such effort. May the sunlight of truth and wisdom illuminate the minds of the people to a perception of the great truth that the mission of science and sound philosophy is to dispel every form of religion which is based upon ignorance, superstition, and the false doctrines of a designing priesthood, even from the straitest sect of Pharisees down to the most advanced liberalists. Every day's experience teaches us that all such forms of organizations, are but means of instituting castes, classes and distinctions among men, to the end of supporting drones from the hard earnings of laborers; to the end of giving a popular class of moralists leaders an advantage over their fellow-men.

Every year a few more women get together in the name of Spiritualism, and put forth some childish scheme to the above end, but, thanks to the better inspirations from spirit life, the day is past in which an intelligent people—Spiritualists—can be led into any such bondage for the benefit of a priesthood.

Letter from Frances A. Logan.

BROTHER JONES:—Crowded churches and halls have greeted me in most places. At Augusta the people disliked to open their churches for a Spiritualist, but did so, providing I would say nothing of Spiritualism in my temperance lecture, and on my return there I found the liberal element so exasperated in consequence of the self-theses and bigotry of the churches, that the large hall was freely tendered me. A brass band in attendance called forth large audiences on two evenings, to my lectures on "Woman's Rights" and "Spiritualism. A lawyer and another gentleman acknowledged themselves Spiritualists before the crowded audience. Thanks to the angels for inspiration.

The appreciation and applause, induces me to feel that other speakers on our faith would do well to call. Isaac Palmer's, J. Hackett's, and

The County Clerk of Rock County, is a firm Spiritualist. "I go from home to-day to be gone a few days, in care of my loved sister, E. H. Babcock, at Genesee, Wisconsin.

Janesville, Wis., July 2, 1871.

Voices from the People.

IRONTON, MO.—Wm. Reel writes.—I would rather do with one meal a day than be without the JOURNAL. The "Search after God" is worth the price of the paper. It has given me light, and I can now see plainer the beyond which the M. E. Church never could show. I wish some medium would come this way. I have a home of my own, and they would be welcome to it. I am now in my 64th year, and never heard but one lecture—never attended one seance.

KIRKWOOD, ILL.—E. D. Goodwin writes.—You have been a long time searching after the God of my orthodox neighbors, who they say has hid himself away (in the rubbish) from the children of earth since the days of Moses; but the fun of it is, that with all your delving, digging, and blasphemous searching, he has n't condescended to let you see his back parts. Is it possible you are ignorant of his sayings? Has he not told you that, "No man can see God and live?" The last I remember hearing of him, he overshadowed a beautiful young virgin, and begot Jesus, who came to save us from our sins; and if the Jews had n't killed him, and had he only lived until now, with S. S. Jones and others, in America, I reckon he would have been more than a match for the devil. Brother Jones would have taught him to value money better than he did, for I see by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL that he is also hunting after "greenbacks," and through a little yellow, telltale, on the covering of my weekly friend, I see that he is also after one Goodwin, Goodwin, and others, with a very short stick. Well! I hope soon to get out of this orthodox hell, out of which they say people never get, I think I had now better pay my debts, and for which you will find a check inclosed.

Now, sir, I would have you know that this is a religious neighborhood, and well supplied with hell-fire insurance companies, and if I had only insured in any one company, and let your JOURNAL do, I could have had all these years to live, for my hell would not have been so hot, and I might have got a "cup of cold water in the name of the Lord." This I most assuredly know, as I do that they are followers of their God, for one of the elect pillars of the Presbyterian church, a red headed agent of the Lord Jesus Christ's hell-fire insurance company has overshadowed a virgin of African descent, fifteen years old, and by whom she had in due time two children of mixed colors, one a male and the other a female. The virgin before the war, was the slave of the insurance agent. His wife has turned their Hagar out of doors, and we hear she is in the county poor house. Can old Jerusalem go ahead of this? If you think so, I can give you more such. This, too, is the word of God, for I the Lord have spoken it, and cursed be he who adds to, or diminishes to or from these words of mine.

MANHATTAN, KANSAS.—J. H. Akin writes.—It is with pleasure that we renew our subscription. We began as a trial subscriber. I think we will try it as long as we live.

WEST ELKTON, OHIO.—Thomas A. Pollok writes.—My profession is that of teacher. I have taught the public school for three years. It has been known all this time that I am a Spiritualist, but not until these recent developements have I had any opposition. I should like to have charge of a liberal school where truth could be taught. I almost feel like among the orthodox, I May all the good angels and every intelligence aid you in hunting up God. Let the readers of the JOURNAL know when you find him.

LOWELL, MASS.—A. Green writes.—Inclosed I send one dollar to your widows and orphan's fund.

Rem arks: In behalf of those you aid, we thank you.—ED. JOURNAL.

ADYEVILLE, IND.—A. J. Adye writes.—The fact is, I am bound to have the JOURNAL. I do n't get it for nothing, but I get it as cheap as I can; but it is a good thing to have in a family,—as I believe in raising up children in the right way, and they are not apt to depart from it.

GLEAD, LAKE, IOWA.—Bell A. Chamberlain writes.—Say you have not received some JOURNAL, and continue to send it. Well, you have awakened thought in hundreds of minds.

BRUNSWICK, MO.—O. V. Eastman writes.—You will find inclosed three dollars for the continuation of the JOURNAL, for another year. You see I do not forsake you. I subscribed for your paper before it was issued, and have continued ever since, and find it more interesting every time it comes.

FLINT, MICH.—G. N. W. Sweet writes.—The "Search after God" is to me truly interesting and instructive,—more to be appreciated than pearls from the ocean, or gold from the mines. At the commencement I did not care to read it. But now it is the first piece that claims my attention. Go on, brother; the world will be the better for its teachings.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—R. L. Smith writes.—I am working and acting as an agent for the JOURNAL in this place. Spiritualism is very bright here at present. Mrs. D. D. Hyzer is lecturing in this city this year. We have no church, with a very fine audience. Spiritualism in this place commands respect; it is looked upon as something to be respected.

Remarks: Thank you, brother. We hope every one of our old subscribers will imitate your example. See our "Entirely New Proposition" to reward all who will help to circulate the JOURNAL.

PALATINE, ILL.—J. R. Baldwin writes.—The "Search after God" is worth the subscription price of the JOURNAL for one year. All the rest of the valuable articles contained in it.

LUCY, CAL.—M. M. Thornburgh writes.—In hearing of the roar of the mighty Pacific, I find broad hearts and believing minds—minds receptive of the holy influences of spirit communion; those that believe that the loved ones have gone are not lost, but are waiting on the other shore to welcome them home to a labor of love. One, a lady of eighty six summers, a dear, hopeful soul, awaiting with pleasing anticipations the happy moment when she can look through the veil and behold the many dear ones just out of sight, but still permitted to lend their holy influence to cheer and to brighten earth scenes and trials. She not only believes in, but lives the philosophy of Spiritualism; and takes much comfort in reading the JOURNAL. The communications, especially, seem to have a soul-cheering influence over her, that drives away every care.

WINTERSET, IOWA.—J. F. E. Whedon writes.—I am doing what I can to introduce new ideas among the people, by sending out books, papers, and such cheap publications as I am able to buy; and I find a great advancement by this means has been made within two years, not only among outsiders, but with a host of those whose religious notions had become stereotyped for all time. We hope to be able by another winter to support a course of lectures by some able and competent speaker, whose considerations here could hardly fail of being a success. We hope by next December to have a railroad connection with Des Moines, which will bring this out-of-the-way place in sympathy and conjunction with the "inside world." Now that Henry Ward Beecher has so far modified as to adopt or accept the Darwinian theory of creation, squinched the fires of the orthodox hell, and left its closed-footed magistrate out in the cold, we can reasonably expect that now he will prove with Brother Francis in his "search after (preacher's) God." Go on with your "Search," Brother Francis, and when through with your present labors, I would suggest, as a matter of "variety," to find his ex-brother's divinity hash.

FOND DU LAC, WIS.—Wm. D. Cook writes.—I have received your most excellent paper, the JOURNAL, and am well pleased with its form. It comes laden with rich food for a hungry soul like myself, who has long been fed upon the husks of old theology, and am just commencing to see the light.

WATERKA, ILL.—Mrs. C. Robinson writes.—Inclosed please find the amount to renew subscription for one year. Will you please to send me the above expired, and we cannot think of missing our weekly feast spoken of in the columns of your true and liberal paper.

Price-List of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books ordered, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies	1.50	20
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Pahastrock	1.50	20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers	.25	02
Allen Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker	1.25	16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase	.25	02
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Double	1.50	20
Apocryphal New Testament	1.25	16
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbot. Paper	.50	06
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth	.50	06
A Lecture in Rhyme. The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. F. A. Logan	.15	02
Arcana of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child	.25	02
Arabula; or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Abbe Beale, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph. Cloth	1.50	20
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis	1.50	16
Apostles, Translated from the French] by Renan	1.75	20
A Stellar Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis	1.50	16
Astro Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor	2.00	24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. C. Wright, small edition	.25	02
Large do	1.50	12
Antiquity and Doctrine of the World by G. H. Tousain, M. D.	.25	2
An Eye Opener, by Zepa. Cloth	.75	12
Paper	.50	04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by F. G. Forster	.15	02
Analogy Between the Facts of the Bible and the Facts of Modern Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster	.15	02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle	.25	04
Answers to Questions, by Rev. Grover Price 25 Cents
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child	1.00	12
Blossoms of Our Spring, (a Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle	1.25	16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen	.50	06
Book of Job, with Notes. Van Ness Cloth	.75	1
Branches of Palm, by Mrs J. S. Adams, a book for every Spiritualist	.25	02
Bells, by Professor W. Denton	.15	02
Bhagvat-Geeta, or Hindoo New Testament	1.50	.16
Conjugal Sins against the Laws of Life and Health, by A. M. Gardner, A. M. M. D. Paper	1.00	08
Cloth	1.50	12
Number Constitution of Man	1.75	16
Common Sense Thoughts on the Bible, by William Denton	.10	02
Cosmology, by G. W. Kenney, M. D.	1.25	20
Common Sense, by Thomas Paine	.50	02
Child's Guide to Botany, by H. C. Wright	1.25	16
Chester Family, or the Curse of the Drunkard's Apple-tree, by Julia M. Friend, with an introduction by H. C. Wright	1.00	12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M. D	1.00	12
Christianity No Finality or Spiritualism Superior to Christianity by Wm. Denton	.10	02
Criticism on The Theological Idea of Deity, by M. R. Craven	1.00	.10
Descent of man, by Darwin. Two Vols. ($2.00 per Vol	4.00	.48
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Astounding History	1.50	20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the sixth edition of 1715	1.00	12
Devil's Pulpit, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life	2.00	24
Dawn. A Novel of intense interest to progressive people	1.75	24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph	1.50	20
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 4 cents	.75	12
Errors of the Bible. Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature. By Henry C. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth	.50	8
Edgeworth's Theological Romance	.50	06
Empire of the Mother, over the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright paper	.50	06
Cloth	.75	12
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen	1.75	24
Free Thoughts Concerning Religion, or Nature vs Supernaturalism, by A. J. Davis	.50	2
Fugitive Wife, by Warren Chase. Paper	.25	4
Festival Night, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilkinson. Morocco	.50	4
Gondla, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle	1.25	16
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase	.15	.04
Gospel Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 8 vols, viz: Vol. 1 The Physician; Vol. 2. The Teacher; Vol. 3. The Seer; Vol. 4. The Reformer; Vol. 5. The Thinker. Paper	1.50	20
Cloth	2.00	24
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students	1.50	16
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	16
God Dealing with History, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth, $1.50; postage, 12 cents. Paper	.75	08
Habits of Good Society	1.75	.20
Hierophant, or Gleanings from the Past, by G. C. Stewart	1.00	.08
Health by good Living. W. W. Hall M. D.	1.50	20
Harbinger of Health, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper	.50	6
Cloth	.75	12
Key to the Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism
How and Why I became a Spiritualist	.15	02
Hidden Harlow's Vow, by H. Wentworth	.15	02
How to Write, by R. G. Miller, M. D.	.50	4
How to Talk, by R. G. Miller, M. D.	.50	4
Hedged In, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Author of Gates Ajar	1.50	16
Hollow Globe	2.00	.20
Harmonial Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy exposed	1.25	16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe, by J. W. Draper, M. D., in 2 vols., cloth	3.00	40
Human Physiology, Statistical and Dynamical, or the Conditions and Causes of the Life and Mission of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D., in 2 vols., cloth	3.00	40
History of the Supernatural, (2 Vols., 850 pages each	3.00	36
Hell, Dr. Harris, D. Whitter	1.50	16
Intuition, by Mrs. F. Kingsford	1.25	16
Important Truths, a book for every child	.30	2
Is the Bible Divine? by R. P. Flander, paper	.25	02
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con	.25	02
Inspirer's Text Book. Paper	1.25	12
Instructive Communications from Spirit Land, Mrs. M. H. Part, Medium	1.25	16
Jesus of Nazareth, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds	1.50	16
Jabbi, or Inquirer's Text Book by Robert Cooper	1.25	16
Is it the Gospel of Science? by W. D. Gunning	.15	02
Jesus of Nazareth, by Alexander Smyth	1.50	20
Jehovah Unveiled, or the Character of the Jewish Deity Delineated	.25	4
Joan of Arc—A Biography, translated from the French, by Sarah E. Gutcheon	1.00	12
Kidder's Secrets of Sea Keeping. Price, paper bound 50 cents. Bound in cloth	.75	08
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale 2 vo. 670 pages, last edition yet published	2.00	40
Koran, with Life of Mahomet	1.50	20
George Sale. Sent 72 mo., 472 pages	1.50	24
Life Line of the Lone One, by Warren Chase	1.00	12
Life of Thomas Paine, with critical and explanatory observations of his writings, by G. Vale	1.00	16
Life of Jesus, by Rev. Robert Taylor	1.25	20
Love and Its Manifestations, by J. Rondolph	1.50	20
Lyric of the Golden Age, by J. S. Adams	2.00	20
Lemuel Protractum, or Marrying as it, and as it is not	1.50	16
Harold Sr., by C. S. Wescombe	1.00	16
Life and Moral Axioms of Confucius, by M. R. M. Wells	.25	02
Letters to Elder Miles Grant, by Rev. Moses Hull	.25	02
Living Present, Dead Past. H. C. Wright. Cloth	.75	.08
Paper	.50	.04
Lyceum Guide. Cloth cover	1.00	.16
Boards .75, 16
Paper cover	.50	.04
My Love and I, by Abby M. Laffin Purvis	.50	8
Male Beauty, or Hints on the Biography of A. J. Davis	1.75	20
Memoria, by Myron Colby	.25	02
Marriage and Parentage, by Henry C. Wright	1.25	20
Marriage, or Affinity Analyzed, by A. B. Child	.25	02
Midnight Prayer	.10	02
Moses and the Israelites, by Merritt Monroe	.25	02
Mrs. Packard's Prison Life	1.50	20
Morocco	2.50	20
Morals of the Bread of Life, by D. D. Gatwell.	.10	.02
Manual for Children, (for Lyceums,) by A. J. Davis, Cloth	.50	6
Morocco, gilt	1.00	8
Abridged	.25	2
My affinity, and other Stories, by Minnie Dean	1.50	20
Mediumship, its Laws and Conditions, with Brief Directions for the Formation of Spiritual Circles, by J. M. Peebles	.25	4
Man a Spirit, by T. G. Forster	.15	02
Man Woman and Child, by T. G. Forster	.25	02
Manifestations, Modern, from 1850 to 1868, by Emma Hardinge	1.75	20
Mind Reading, or how words reveal the character, by J. Caldwell	.10	2
Morning Lectures (Twenty Discourses) by A. J. Davis	1.75	20

dan and his relations, by Professor S. B. Brittain	4.00	40
Nature's Divine Revelations, by Andrew Jackson Davis	3.00	40
New Testament Miracles, and Modern Miracles, by J. H. Fowler	.10	4
Night Side of Nature, by Crowe	1.25	16
Ordeal of Life, Through Dr. J. G. Grisanel, Medium	.25	04
Orthodoxy False, since Spiritualism is True, by Wm. Denton	.10	02
Our Planet, Geology by Denton	1.50	20
Optimism, The Lesson of Ages	1.50	20
Origin of Species. Darwin	2.00	36
Origin of Civilization and Primitive Condition of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock	2.00	24
One Religion, Many Creeds, by Rose Winslow	1.50	.02
Origin of Species, with Notes and References, by G. F. Hitchcock	.10	.02
Poems and Hymns, by A. J. Davis	2.00	20
Pre-Adamite Man, by Randolph	1.50	20
Physiology of Woman, by C. Morril, M. D.	1.50	20
Plandocles—The Gospel of Reason, by Epes Sargent	1.25	16
Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse, by A. J. Davis. Paper 60 cts; postage 8 cts. Cloth	1.50	.16
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M. King	1.75	.24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lizzie Doten	1.25	16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Horace Wood, Medium. Cloth,	.60	08
Paper	.25	04
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King	1.50	16
Rules for forming Spiritual Circles, by Emma Hardinge	.15	02
Sexual Physiology, by R. T. Trall, M. D.	2.00	20
Strange Visitors, Dictated through a clairvoyant	1.25	20
Spiritual Harp	1.50	20
Abridged Edition	1.00	12
Sequel to The Love Life, by the Spirit of Dr. R. H. Ease	.50	8
Spiritual Tracts by Judge Edmonds	.20	4
Self Abnegation; or the true King and Queen, by H. C. Wright. Paper	.50	6
Cloth	.75	12
Spiritualism, or Directions in Development, by A. M. Ladies. Paper	.50	6
Soul Affinity, by A. B. Child, M. D.	.20	02
Sexology as the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. E. O. Willard	1.50	24
Six Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Hosea Hardinge, Paper	.75	08
Cloth	1.00	12
Soul of Things, by William and Elizabeth Denton	1.50	20
Spirit Manifestations, by Adin Ballou	.10	02
Spirit Mysteries Explained, by A. J. Davis	.25	02
Supremacy of Reason, by Moses Hull	.10	02
Social Evils by Mrs. M. M. King	.25
Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism, by Mrs. M. M. King	.20
Sense and Nonsense, E. M. Landis. M. D.	2.00	20
Songs of Life.—S. W. Tucker	1.00	12
Spiritual Songs.—S. W. Tucker	1.25	02
Spirit Life of Theodore Parker, through the Medium Mrs. M. Hardinge	.40	04
Seven Hour System of Grammar, by Prof. D. P. Howe.	1.50	.20
Paper	.50	.06
Science of Evil, by Joel Moody	1.75	.20
Searchig, Randolph	3.00	.30
Spiritual Manifestations, by J. S. Rymer	.10	.02
Sunday Question and self contradictions of the Bible	.20	.02
Spiritagena	1.00	.12
The Fountain, by A. J. Davis	1.00	12
The Irreco-cilable Records, or Genesis and Geology, by Wm. Denton, Cloth	.25	04
The Bible in India	.50	.06
The Faithful Guardian, an Inspirational Story, by J. William Van Namee	1.50	16
The Bible in the Balance	1.50	16
That Terrible Question, by Moses Hull	.10	02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. B. Davis	.5	02
The Dynamic Cure, by Leroy Sunderland	1.50	12
Tale of a Physician, by A. J. Davis	.25	02
The Future Life, by Rev. Robert Taylor	1.50	20
The Question Settled, by Moses Hull	1.50	16
The Gates Wide Open, by George Wood	1.50	16
The Gates Ajar, by Miss. E. S. Phelps	1.25	16
The Orphan's Struggle, by Mrs. H. N. Green	.15
The Pearl Diver by Dr. G. W. Kirby	.15
The Present Life, by Rev. Robert Taylor	1.50	20
The Trance, by Leroy Sunderland	1.50	16
The Great North-West, by W. Hemstead	1.00	12
The Merits of Jesus Christ and the Merits of Thomas Paine as a substitute for merit in others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright	.25	8
The Philosophical History of Voltaire. Fifth American Edition, 576 octavo pages, two steel plates, Largest and most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $10.00	5.00	60
The Dispute, by Rev. Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a history of the origin, evidence, and early history of Christianity	1.50	16
The Lunar Mystery, an Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten	.30	02
The Deluge, William Denton	.10	02
The Voices, by Warren Chase. Boards	1.25	16
The Ignorant Philosopher, Voltaire	.25	2
The Woman who Dared, by Epes Sargent	1.50	20
Theological and Philosophical Writings of Thomas Paine	2.00	24
Thomas Paine's Pilgrimage in the Spirit World	.75	.08
The Spiritual Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D' Holbach	2.00	24
The Psalms of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover	.50	06
Bound cover	.75	08
Cloth	.50	16
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D.	.25	02
The Practicals, by J. J. Davis	1.75	20
The Tah o, a Satirical Rhapsody	.10	.02
The Restoration Dream Book, compiled from all languages, by R. P. Randolph	.50	.04
The Art of Conversation	1.50	.16
The Arts of Writing, Reading, and Speaking	1.50	.16
Underhill on Rumseism, Post-paid	1.50
Unhappy Marriage, by A. B. Child	.25	4
Unwelcome Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper	.25	4
Cloth	.40	12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow	.75	.06
Vestiges of Creation	.75	.06
The Bible, how, when and how preserved, by R. P. Ballou. 12 mo.; Cloth	1.50	12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Daru	1.00	12
What is Right, William Denton	.10	2
What is spiritualism, and shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? by Mrs. M. M. King	.25
Whatever is, is Right, by A. B. Child, M. D	1.00	12
Writings of Cicero	.10	02
Wolf in sheep's Clothing, or God in the Constitution. Moses Hull	.10	02
Your Book of Spiritualism. Cloth, Paper,	1.25	20
	.50	06

WE ARE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular rates, and, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as may be desired. If sent by mail, one fifth more than the regular price of the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. In making remittances for books, buy postal orders when practicable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

THAT WONDERFUL BOOK

H. SNOW,

819 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, G-ton's Anti-Tobacco Preparation, Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & co.'s Golden Pens, Planchettes, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. ☞ Remittances in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HENRY SNOW, P. O. Box 117, San Francisco, Cal.

Jesus of Nazareth.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,

No. 601 North Fifth St., St. Louis, Mo.,

Keep constantly on hand all the publications of the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular liberal literature, including Religio-Philosophical Journal and Banner of Light, Magazines, Photographs, Parlor Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

PARKER'S
NEWLY IMPROVED DOUBLE BARRELED
SHOT GUN
BEST IN THE WORLD
PARKER BROTHERS
MERIDEN CONN.
SEND FOR A CIRCULAR
New York Office, 37 BEEKMAN ST.

Rail Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railway—Great Short and Direct Line. Depot corner Wells street.

Ticket Office, south-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Cedar Rapids Passenger	8:30 a. m.	6:00 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10:55 a. m.	3:50 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.30 a. m.	*7:00 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	10:00 p. m.	7:00 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	*10:00 p. m.	*7:00 a. m.
Dixon Passenger	*4:00 p. m.	*11:30 a. m.

Freeport Line.

Freeport and Dunleith Pass	*9:00 a. m.	*7:35 a. m
Freeport and Dunleith Pass	*9:00 p. m.	*2:00 p. m.
Rockford, Rigin, Fox River and State Line	*4:00 p. m.	*11:10 a. m.
St. Charles and Elgin Passenger	*4:15 p. m.	*9:45 a. m.
Junction Passenger	5:30 p. m.	8:30 a. m.
Kenosha Accommodation	*4:15 p. m.	*9:30 a. m.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukee Mail	*8:00 a. m.	*12:10 a. m.
Day Express	*9:45 a. m.	*4:50 p. m.
Brunswown Accommodation	*1:00 a. m.	*2:00 p. m.
Rose Hill, Evanston, and Highland Park	1.00 p. m.	3:40 p. m.
Afternoon Pass	*3:45 p.m.	*7:40 p.m.
Kenosha Pass	*4:15 p.m.	*9:10 a.m.
Waukegan Passenger	*5:30 p.m.	*8:30 a.m.
Wankegan do	*4:00 p.m.	*7:55 a.m.
Milwaukee do	11:00 p.m.	6:00 a.m.

Kenosha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street Depot.

Wisconsin Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street

St Paul Express	*10:00 a. m.	*7:15 p. m.
Night Passenger	*4:00 p. m.	*5:30 a. m.
Waukegan Accommodation	*5:30 p. m.	*8:30 a. m.
Woodstock Accommodation	*2:30 p. m.	*10:30 p. m.
Barrington Accommodation	5:15 p. m.	7:55 a. m.

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.
H. P. Stanwood, General Ticket Agent

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road.

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. Ticket Office 66 South Clark street.

Mail	*8:30 a. m.	*7:00 p m
Special N Y Express	*9:30 a. m.	*4:00 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	*10:15 a. m.	*7:00 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	5:15 p. m.	7:20 a. m.
Night Express	*12:00 p. m.	*6:30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Line.

Day Express	*7:30 a. m.	*7:50 p. m.
Night "	*10:00 p. m.	*6:30 a. m.

P. B. Moran, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Railroad—Union Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office Lake st., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

Mail Train	*8:35 a. m.	*9:50 p. m.
Night New York Express	*9:00 a. m.	*6:30 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	12:15 p. m.	†7:30 a. m.
Night Express	*12:00 p. m.	*6:45 a. m.
Kalamazoo Accommodation	*4:15 p. m.	*12:00 p. m

Cincinnati and Louisville Trains

Day Express	*9:00 a. m.	*9:30 p. m
Through Express	11:30 p. m.	†9:30 a. m

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	*9:30 a. m.	*11:30 a. m.
Accommodation	*4:30 p. m.	*6:30 p. m

HENRY C. WHITWELL,
General Passenger Agent.

H. B. RAGGLES, Gen'l Superintendent, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Hinsdale Accommodation	*7:45 a. m.	*6:15 p. m.
Mail and Express	7:30 a. m.	*9:50 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10.55 a. m.	*4:15 p.m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*7:45 p. m.	*6:30 p. m.
Night Express	*12:00 p. m.	*6:45 a. m.
Evening Express	*5:00 p. m.	*7:30 p. m.
Aurora Passenger	10:30 p. m.	*6:30 a. m.
Aurora Accommodation	*4:15 p. m.	*9:45 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	10:00 p. m.	†7:30 a. m

Banker Express, Saturdays.

Sanford Powell, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office 63 Clark St. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	*9:30 a.m.	*7:45 p. m
Cairo Express	*9:15 p.m.	*7:00 a. m.
Rocket Day Passenger	*8:15 a. m.	*7:45 p. m.
Rocket Night Passenger	*9:30 p. m.	*7:00 a. m.

On Saturdays this train will leave at 4:45 p. m.

Hyde Park	*9:30 a. m.	*7:45 a. m.
"	*2:30 p. m.	*7:00 p. m.
"	*4:30 p. m.	*9:30 a. m.
"	*6:30 p. m.	*11:30 a. m.
"	*8:00 p. m.	*12:45 p. m.
"	*9:15 p. m.	*7:00 p. m.

(St. Louis through Train.)

Day Express	*9:30 a.m.	*9:15 p. m.
Fast Line	†8:15 p. m.	*7:00 a. m.

H. McKisson, Gen'l Supt.

W. P. Johnson, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Madison and Canal Streets.

Mail	*9:30 a. m.	5:10 p. m.
Day Express	*9:00 a. m.	6:00 p. m.
Atlantic Express	8.15 p. m.	8.00 a. m.
Fast Line	2.00 p. m.	8.00 a. m.
Valparaiso Accommodation	4.00 p. m.	7.20 a. m.

W. C. Gilman, Gen. Pass. Agt., 65 Clark st.

Chicago and St. Louis—Depot, corner Madison and Canal sts

Express Mail	*9:15 a. m.	*9:00 p. m.
Joliet Accommodation	*4:30 p. m.	*9:35 a. m.
Night Express	11:30 p. m.	6:00 a. m.
Lightning Express	*8:00 p. m.	*4:25 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and sundays excepted. §Except Mondays.

T. B. Blackstone, Pass & Gen'l Superintendent.
A. Newman, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Office 95 Dearborn st.

Chicago, Danville and Vincennes Railroad.

Milwaukee Depot—Corner Canal and Kinzie Sts., West Side. Freight Office at G., G. & I. R. R.'s Office, corner Halsted and Carroll sts.

Mail Train Chicago time,	8:45 p. m.	8:15 a. m

Dodge, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad. cor Van Buren and Sherman Streets.

Pacific day Express	10:00 a.m.	4:15 p.m.
Pacific Express	*7:30 p.m.	*4:00 a.m.
Pacific Night Express	11:00 p.m.	*7:00 a.m.

An elegant parlor sleeping car is attached to the 10 a. m. train, running through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

A. E. Sawyer, Gen'l Passenger Agent.
R. M. Jones, Gen'l Superintendent.
P. A. Hale, Asst'l Gen. Superintendent.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

Cincinnati Express	*9:00 a. m.	5:30 p. m.
Columbus Express	*9:00 a. m.	*2:25 p. m.
Cincinnati Night Express	11:45 p. m.	*7:00 a. m.
Columbus Night Express	*7:00 p. m.	*7:00 a. m.
Logansport Express	*4:30 p. m.	9.15 a. m.

H. B. Stone, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Ticket Office Corner Randolph and Dearborn streets.

Goodrich's Passenger Steamers.

For Milwaukee and West Shore ports *daily at 2 00 a. m.
For Grand Haven and East Shore ports *daily at 5 00 p. m.
For St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, *daily at 12 a. m.
Green Bay ports, Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 p. m.

*Sundays excepted. †Mondays excepted. ‡Saturdays excepted.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and Spirit world. By Thomas Paine, through the hand of Horace G. Wood, Medium.

Price 25 cents, postage 4 cents. For sale at this Office

The Biography of Satan;

or an Historical Exposition of the

DEVIL AND HIS FIERY DOMINIONS,

Showing the oriental origin of the belief in a Devil and Future Endless Punishment. All about the

MOTHER OF HARLOTS, ETC., ETC., OF HELL

Choice of Evil Men—Casting out Devils, etc.,

By E. HEATH, Medium of Communication between Spirits and Mortals.

Price 75 cents. The Trade Supplied, at Liberal Rates.

For sale at the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Publishing House, 187 & 189 Clark St., Chicago.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR PSYCHOMETRIC RESEARCHES AND DISCOVERIES. By William and Elizabeth M. F. Denton.

This valuable and highly interesting work has become a part of the standard literature of the country.

Price, $1.50cts, Postage, 20cts.

LECTURES ON GEOLOGY, THE PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR PLANET. A valuable scientific work.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

COMMON SENSE THOUGHTS ON THE BIBLE. For Common Sense people. Twelfth thousand, revised and enlarged.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

THE DELUGE, IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

WHAT IS RIGHT. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

BE THYSELF. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

For sale at The Religio-Philosophical Journal Office.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW WORKS BY PROF. DENTON.

"ORTHODOXY FALSE,

Since Spiritualism is True."

Price, 10 cents: postage, 2 cents.

THE IRRECONCILABLE RECORDS,

OR GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

160 pages. Price: paper, 25 cents, postage, 4 cts cloth, 40 cents, postage 8 cts.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

JESUS OF NAZARETH.

A BOOK FOR WOMEN;

TALKS TO MY PATIENTS,

BY

MRS. R. B. GLEASON, M.D.

A book by a woman, for women, on the diseases of the sex. The Liberal Christian, speaking of the book says:

"After reading the whole of this book, we pronounce it the most admirable and excellent that we have ever had in its class. It is written for women; it is full of wise counsels and suggestions regarding the very things in which so many people most need assistance. It is a safe book for young people to read, for any body indeed, and this can be said of very few books devoted to such subjects. There is not a sentence in that can be perverted or misused, so as to do any harm. We wish the book could be read in every household in our country."

Harper's Magazine says:

"We wish the chapter 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every Mother in the land."

Mrs. Dr. Sales says:

"I would rather have written that book than been queen of the greatest empire on this small globe of ours!"

Godey's Lady's Book says:

"This book treats in a thorough yet delicate manner of all the troubles, cares, and diseases of women. We do not hesitate to say that it is the best book of its class we have yet seen."

Price, $1.50; postage, 16 cents. Address Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

THAT WONDERFUL BOOK!

CONJUGAL SINS

AGAINST THE

LAWS OF LIFE AND HEALTH,

AND

THEIR EFFECT ON THE FATHER MOTHER AND CHILD.

BY AUGUSTUS K. GARDNER, A.M., M.D.

Late Professor of Diseases of Females and Chemical Medical Midwifery in the New York Medical College.

CONTENTS.

I. The Modern Women's Physical Deteriorations. II. Local disease in children and its cause. III. At what age should one Marry. IV. Is Continence physically injurious? V. Sexual Pollution. VI. The injurious results of Physical Excess. VII. Methods used to prevent Conception and their consequences. VIII. Infanticide. IX. Conjugal relations during the period of Menstration. X. Conjugal relations between the old. XI. Marriage between Old Men and Young Girls XII. What may be done With Health in View, and the fearful God before us. Appendix.

Price in cloth, $1.50, postage 16 cents; in paper, $1.00, Postage 8 cents. The Trade Supplied.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 and 189 So. Clark St., Chicago Ill.

BY

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,

BY C. L. JAMES.

An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce legislation. For sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo Post paid for 25 cents.

vp.nlt-17.

PAUL AND JUDAS,

GOD

DEALING WITH SLAVERY.

God's Instrumentalities in Emancipating the African Slaves in America.

SPIRIT MESSAGES

Given During the Years 1860 to 1870, Inclusive,—from Franklin, Lincoln, Adams, Jackson, Webster, Penn, and others to the Author.

THOMAS RICHMOND.

This is one of the most interesting books in the whole catalogue of Spiritualist publications. Its author is well and widely known throughout the Western States, he having been one of the early pioneers and a man of extraordinary energy and ability, who would make his mark in any country. After quite a useful life of over sixty years, he now, in his seventy-fifth year, is as strong and hearty, and as capable of doing business as he was fifty years ago. His ability, energy, and acquaintance with many of the leading men of the country, pointed him out to Franklin and other distinguished spirits as the most fitting instrument with which they were to accomplish a mighty undertaking. The manner in which they worked through him and the results achieved are herein related by the author in a book of 250 page.

Price: Cloth, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. Bevelled paper sides and cloth back, 75 cents. postage, 8 cents.

☞ For Sale, Wholesale and Retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark street, Chicago.

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

HOUSEHOLD MAGNETIC

Wood Engraving of a household magnetic machine

Is a necessity in every and one can recognize its value. Sent by express to any part of the country, C. O. D. Send for circular. Address, Household Magnetic Co., Rockford, Ill.

READ! STUDY! DIGEST!

39,308 CURES

BY THE POSITIVE

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

Settled Speakers Once More.

We cheerfully give the following statement a place in Brother Wilson's department, leaving him to deal with the matter as seemeth good to him, when he reads this. It would, however, been wise to send the communication to Brother Wilson instead of us, that he might have answered in the same issue of our paper. We have no doubt Brother Wilson will attend to this matter in a spirit of kindness:

BRO. E. V. WILSON—DEAR SIR:—YOUR repeated references to the Cleveland Society of Spiritualists in a recent number of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, is a sufficient reason for the following communication:

Reading with mingled pain, and regret your severe article in the JOURNAL, June 16th under the caption of "Settled speakers once More," we were reminded of the three-edged sword, designed to cut E. S. Wheeler, J. M. Peebles, C. B. Lynn, and the Cleveland society especially, and all generally, who may honestly differ from you in regard to the best methods of promoting Spiritualism. It is a common complaint that societies are divided; that there is little harmony among Spiritualists, and that mediums, with few exceptions, are privately, if not publicly seeking to slur and undermine each other, and are not such societies as yours just designed to stir up contentions, enmities, and produce further inharmonies?

When speakers pursue this course, what can be expected of the people? Does it become an editor to write thus of a brother co-worker, "Wheeler boiled over—struck out straight from the shoulder, and planted a scathing right under the lug of our noble article?" Does it comport with the dignity of a public teacher to sneeringly call all, or any of the Spiritualists of Cleveland, who may have employed and paid him, "pious souls"? And then, what was it to you whether we employed a "settled speaker" or an itinerant, a normal, or a trance speaker? We are of age, and as an organization feel abundantly competent to manage our own affairs in that respect. We have not contracted debts that we can not and shall not pay; and we feel it to be our privilege to employ speakers one Sunday, one month, or one year, as the interests of truth seem to us to demand. We claim to be the judges in this matter, without dictation from an outsider. In your letter to us from Lincoln, Ill., August 27th, 1870, you state, in relation to opening in Cleveland, in so many words, "I shall do you harm, for I shall oppose your having settled speakers." Why "opp se?" This wrangling combative element, indulged in by so many of our lecturers, is evidently one of the principal causes of the present unsatisfactory and unsettled state of our most important cause.

We regretfully, we nevertheless feel necessitated to correct several of the erroneous statements (we hope undesignedly) made by you, in your personal allusions to E. S. Wheeler, J. M. Peebles, C. B. Lynn, etc.

1. You say, "The Cleveland Society under E. S. Wheeler's fatherly care, dwindled down to a corporal's guard."

2. Sephas B. Lynn writes falsely, stating that the society had been increased, and partially lifted out of debt under J. M. Peebles fatherly ministrations."

3. "Brother Peebles, we believe, asked to be located in Cleveland."

4. "Thirteen morning lectures of thirty minutes each—thirteen evening lectures of forty minutes each."

5. "A few visits to the Lyceum in session."

6. "Brother P. filled the desk in Oct., 1870—receipts less than the expenses. E. V. Wilson filled the desk during November, and the receipts were in excess of the expenses. Brother P. filled the desk during December and January, 70–71, and the receipts were considerably less than expenses. Sister Cora filled the desk during February, E. V. Wilson during March, Brother Howe during April and May."

The above misrepresentations we feel called upon to correct, by a truthful statement of the facts.

1. Our society did not dwindle down to a "corporal's guard;" but the meetings were generally well attended during Mr. Wheeler's stay with us.

2. C. B. Lynn's statement, that there was greater harmony, an increased attendance, etc.—while Mr. Peebles ministered to us, was substantially correct.

3. Mr. Peebles did not "ask to be located in Cleveland,"—on the contrary, we desired and urged him to settle with us for a year. Mr. L. King, one of the committee, was the first who spoke to him on the subject. In a recent letter from Mr. K. (now of Detroit, Mich.) to Mr. P., the following statements in point, occur:

"You did not ask the society on your return from Europe, to employ you; but the society, as well as myself, was very anxious to engage you for a year. I personally saw nearly all of the members myself, and then made the proposition to you. We were determined from the first to have you, and further, I know you gave general satisfaction, and that there was more harmony and interest in the society on the first of February, when you left, than ever before."

Mr. A. A. Wheelock's statement in regard to the same matter, is couched in much more positive terms.

4. Mr. Peebles lectures averaged from thirty-five to forty-five minutes Sunday mornings, and usually over an hour in the evenings. Of their length, those living in East Cleveland frequently complained, because, if they remained to the close, they missed the last street car.

5 Mr. Peebles never missed attending the lyceum sessions once during the several months he spoke for us.

6. You may have forgotten what Hooker says in regard to suppressed facts, and to what they are equivalent, if not, why did you not mention the receipts from collections taken, while you were with us in March, and other financial matters of the same period? Mr. Peebles spoke for us some in August—all of October, Dec. nber and January, and is engaged for the last Sabbath in this month. The collections from those in attendance have never been exceeded under any other speaker, as shown by the figures before us. The fact is, we have had no speaker, for whose services, the receipts at the hall have paid expenses, except Mrs. Hardinge, and here only by her generosity in giving us a benefit. Therefore, we see neither the propriety, goodness, or wisdom of your boasting, concerning our financial success in connection with your labors here. Mr. H. D. Thomas, President of the Cincinnati Society of Spiritualists, who is now in our city, has given us the pecuniary receipts and losses from their speakers. One of these months, at least, parallels our experience of March.

In accordance with the anxious desire, so expressed by the friends of the cause here, we made an engagement with Mr. Peebles for a year, with the understanding that he could be absent whenever he felt a desire to visit other societies of the field, where in his judgment, he could better subserve the interests of truth and right, and pursuing the path, our only regret is, that we consented to his leaving us at all, firmly believing that had he not been absent from us a single month up to the present May, we would now have been in a very prosperous condition. The few months that he was with us, however, have only confirmed our previous convictions, that a settled speaker, if intellectual and consistent, devoting his whole time to the interests of the society,—making social visits—calling upon the sick, attending funerals, and forming acquaintances outside the lines of Spiritualism, is far better adapted to give character and permanence to our organizations, than weekly or monthly engagements. These matters, however, are to be determined by the combined wisdom of individual societies, and not by the dictation of speakers. The spiritual field is wide, and there is work enough for all who sincerely love the truth. None should try to build themselves up by pulling others down; neither should they misrepresent or underrate the labors of their co-workers. Such a course is neither just nor magnanimous. As sincere laborers in Spiritualism, striving to advance the cause, we look to our speakers and mediums for examples worthy of imitation. If these are not truthful, candid, charitable and forgiving, who can we expect will be? Have we not a right to expect from those who see and talk with the angels, superior precepts and practices? You, Brother Wilson, have ample sufficient of life to know that "grievous words stir up anger." When shall we all feel and fulfill the words of Christ, "Blessed are the peace makers?"

We write in the spirit of kindness and justice, desiring, as do you, the prosperity of Spiritualism.

GEO ROSE, D U. PRATT. Pres't.
L. KING. M C. PARSONS, Treas.
JOSEPH GILLSON, Sec'y.

The following Preamble and Resolutions were unanimously adopted at the close of Mr. Peebles' lecture in Lyceum Hall, Cleveland, on Sunday evening, June 25 h, 1871:

WHEREAS, We, the Spiritualists of Cleveland, have had the privilege of listening for some four months, during the last fall and winter, to the teachings of Brother J. M. Peebl s, known extensively on both sides of the Atlantic, as a man in whose heart is the law of kindness whose tongue, when circumstances seem to require it, is a two edged sword, whose utterances are wisely adapted to conditions, and whose labors to enlighten and exalt humanity are indefatigable. And,

WHEREAS, While favored with his services, we enjoyed the greatest degree of harmony, with large and increasing audiences, hence, it was and is, to us a matter of deep regret that circumstances will not permit his remaining with us, at least one year. And,

WHEREAS We have learned that he is again on the eve of sailing for Europe, therefore,

Resolved, That we hereby tender him our assurance of unabated regards—fondly cherishing the hope that his voyage may be a safe and pleasant one, and result in the recuperation of his over-taxed mental and vital energies.

Resolved, That we commend him to the guidance and protection of, and soul-satisfying communion with those "ministering angels" who are accomplishing through him their purposes of benevolence to persons, both in earth and spirit-life, while we fervently desire to ag-in see his face in the form, and listen to the music of his voice.

Resolved, That these proceedings be officially signed by the President and Secretary of our organization; a copy thereof transmitted by the Secretary to Brother Peebles and others, forwarded for publication to the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, the Banner of Light American Spiritualist, Crucible and Present Age.

D. U. PRATT, President.
JOSEPH GILLSON, Secretary.

Letter From H. B. Alden.

BRO. JOHN: It is with pleasure that I again have the opportunity of sending you a "strap," for which you will please forward a copy of the JOURNAL, that fearless and true exponent of the Spiritual and Reformatory movements of the world, to John S. Shear, Lowell, Mich., an old Spiritualist, but a trial subscriber to the JOURNAL. H. W. Stevens (whose name I sent you, formerly a Baptist, but I be an Adventist, now on the same boat seat) says he obtained one thought from his first paper that was worth his subscription; that is, every thing that has reason must fight; Reason never will fight for us Adventists!

I hope to make a good addition to your list, at our next quarterly meeting, and more at a time, but it is gratification enough to me to send one name to you, and for writing, and to pay my own postage, to know that another candidate is knocking at the door of the Temple of Truth for admittance, knowing by experience that if they seek diligently, they shall find and it shall be opened unto them, and they shall finally bask in the sunshine of Light, Liberty and Love.

Lowell, Mich.

Remarks: Thank you, brother. All such favors are duly appreciated. We are under renewed obligations for many such favors daily conferred by many subscribers.—ED. JOURNAL.

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled THE SUNDAY QUESTION, and SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.

This work consists of 133 large, closely printed pages It is an exhaustive review of the so-called Sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the sandy device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL to any new subscriber on trial for three months. And we will send the above work and the JOURNAL for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the JOURNAL three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the JOURNAL will avail him or herself of this generous offer, and thus secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

THE

VOICE OF PRAYER,

A Poem by W. S. Barlow, Author of

"The Voices."

This little poem is fully equal to any of Mr. Barlow's best efforts, and should be read by everybody.

Printed on fine tinted paper with blue line border. Price 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark st., Chicago.

Forms, Stereotype Castings and Engravings, for sale at the office of the JOURNAL, 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

[THIRD EDITION, REVISED AND CORRECTED.]

JUST PUBLISHED!

A Complete and Truthful History of that Good Man and

PRINCE OF MEDIUMS,

Jesus of Nazareth

BY

PAUL AND JUDAS,

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, PAUL and JUDAS, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, nearping all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely-printed pages.

REMARKABLE WORK

PRICE, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St. Chicago.

THE PSALMS OF LIFE,

A COMPILATION OF

PSALMS
HYMNS, ANTHEMS,
CHANTS,
ETC.,

Embodying the Spiritual, Progressive, and Reformatory Sentiment of the Present Age. By John S. Adams.

This work has been prepared with special reference to the large and increasing demand for a volume expressing the sentiments and views of the advanced minds of the present day, and meeting the requirements of every phase of Reform. It is entirely free of Sectarianism, of all the theological dogmas of the past, and fully recognizes the inspiration of Spirit, in every condition of life on earth.

This book contains five hundred and twenty-two choice Gems of Poetry, with suitable music on each page from Handel, Hadyn, Mozart and Other Distinguished Composers.

It combines the advantage of "Hymn" and "Tune" Book It is produced with a Classification of Subjects, and Complete Indexes of First Lines, Tunes and Meters; and being of convenient size, is generally accepted as the alike desirable for the LECTURE-ROOM and the HOMES OF THE PEOPLE.

Standard Music Book of Spiritualism, Radical ism and General Reform,

"I think there is in the book a great proportion—no, I think I ought to say a greater amount—of beautiful and truly spiritual poetry than in any other collection I have seen, whatever the size of the volume."

Rev. John Pierpont.

PRICES:—Paper cover, 60 cents; Postage, 6 cts. Board cover, 85 cents; Postage, 12 cts. Cloth-bound, 90 cents. Postage, 16 cents.

☞ For Sale at the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL BOOK STORE,

187 and 189 South Clark St.,

Chicago, I.

v9n19 tf.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY.

A SCIENTIFIC AND POPULAR EXPOSITION OF THE FUNDAMENTAL PROBLEMS IN SOCIOLOGY.

BY R. T. TRALL, M.D.

The great interest now being felt in all subject relating to the Human Development, will make the book of interest to every one. Besides the information obtained by the perusal of the various ..... treated in improving the offspring a higher degree and value to human life and not less enhanced.

This work contains the latest and most important discoveries in the Science and Physiology of the Sexes: on the Laws and Causes of Human Life; How and when Conception, Impregnation, and Conception occur; giving the laws by which the number and sex of offspring are controlled and variable characters; in regard to the beginning and rearing of beautiful and healthy children. It is high-toned and should be read by every family. With eighty fine engravings.

The work has rapidly passed through ten editions, and the demand is constantly increasing. No such complete and valuable Work has ever before been issued from the press. Price $2.50. For sale at the Religio-Philosophical Journal Office, 187, and 189 So. Clark Street, Chicago.

HESPERIA:

AN EPIC OF THE PAST AND FUTURE OF AMERICA.

By Mrs. Cora L. V. Tappan.

☞ PRICE: $1.75; postage, 20 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

CHRISTIANITY

ITS ORIGIN, NATURE AND TENdency considered in the light of Astro-Theology.

By D. W. Hull.

This book is, so far as it goes, a thorough refutation of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plagiarized from ancient heathen. Being unlike almost any other book ever written on the subject, it cannot but be deeply interesting to all. Its explanations of Scripture are lucid, and so self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.

☞ For Wholesale trade and retail, at the office. Price at retail, 50 cents; postage, 4 cents.

ABSTRACT OF COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was composed by Ezra, Nehemiah, and other prophets, from 1300 to 600 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 64 pages. Price 25 cents. AMERICAN NEWS CO., N. Y.

v10 n3 4w

JULIA DAKE CASTENLINE, M. D.,

TREATS SUCCESSFULLY CHRONIC AND ACUTE DISEASES. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO DISEASES OF WOMEN. 661 North 13th Street, Philadelphia.

v10 n16 tf.

AGENTS! READ THIS!

WE WILL PAY AGENTS A SALARY OF $200 per month, or allow a large commission to sell our new and wonderful inventions. Address M. WAGNER & Co., Marshall, Mich.

v10 n16 4w.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

ATTRACTIVE NEW BOOKS.

—o—

ERNEST RENAN'S WORKS.

THE LIFE OF JESUS.—THE LIFE OF SAINT PAUL.—AND THE LIVES OF THE APOSTLES.

These three remarkable books, by the great French Philosopher, are attracting the intense attention of all readers. "They are of great power and learning, earnestly and honestly written, beautiful in style, admirable in treatment, and filled with reverence, tenderness, and warmth of heart."

☞ Price $1.75 each; postage 20 cents.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA;

Or, the Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation. Translated from the French of Louis Jacolliot. A remarkable volume, which is making a great sensation in Europe, and one that the professedest advocates of thinking people. ☞ Price $2.00; postage 30 cents.

HABITS OF GOOD SOCIETY.

A hand Book for Ladies and Gentlemen; with hints and anecdotes concerning also points of etiquette, good manners, and the art of making one's self agreeable. The best and most entertaining book on the subject ever published.

☞ Price $1.75; postage 20 cents.

THE ART OF CONVERSATION,

With directions for Self-Culture. Teaching the art of conversing with ease and propriety, and setting forth the literary knowledge requisite to appear to advantage in good society. A book of real merit and intrinsic worth.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

THE ARTS OF WRITING, READING, AND SPEAKING.

A remarkably clever book that every one, whether educated or not, will find of immense advantage and profit. A capital book for young people. Price 75 cents. THE ART OF CONVERSATION. ☞ Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

☞ These books are all beautifully printed and handsomely bound in cloth covers, with gilt backs.

For sale wholesale and retail by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Artificial Somnambulism.

The author of the above named book, is a philosopher of large experience and great power.

In this work he treats of the philosophy of mind as demonstrated by practical experiments during the last twenty years. No work has ever been published which so thoroughly demonstrates many popular theories to be unfounded, and fallacious; and at the same time gives a rational theory for phenomena manifested.

DR. FAHNESTOCK is a thorough believer in spirit communion, and teaches in this work the modus operandi, as a demonstration.

The following is the table of contents of this valuable work.

CHAP. I.—HISTORICAL SURVEY. Mesmer not the discoverer of the state—His theory of it—Its examination by the French commissioners—Their conclusions—The author's remarks.

CHAP. II.—Of the causes which have retarded the progress of the science.

CHAP. III.—Of the conditions necessary for the production of the somnambulic state, with instructions how to enter it, etc.: I.—Of the instructor or "operator." II.—Of the patient. III.—Of the sensitive. IV.—Of the sensations experienced by those who enter this state. V.—Of their awaking.

CHAP. IV.—Theory of this state.

CHAP. V.—Of the somnambulic proper sleep. I.—Of a partial state of Artificial Somnambulism.

CHAP. VI.—Phreno-Somnotism.

CHAP. VII.—Of the senses: I.—Motion; or, the power to move.

CHAP. VIII.—Of the functions of the faculties. I.—Consciousness. II.—Attention. III.—Perception. IV.—Memory. V.—Association. VI. and VII.—Likes and Dislikes. VIII.—Imagination. IX.—Imagination. X.—Will.

CHAP. IX.—Of the peculiar functions of perception in the different faculties while in a natural state. I.—Of the peculiar functions of perception when in a state of Artificial Somnambulism. II.—The functions considered when in a state of Artificial Somnambulism. 1.—Consciousness. 2.—Attention. 3.—Perception. 4.—Memory. 5.—Association. 6 and 7.—Likes and Dislikes. 8.—Judgment. 9.—Imagination. 10.—Will.

CHAP. X.—Of reading or knowing the mind. I.—Illustration. II.—Illustration. Theory of Dr. Collyer. Mental alchemy or electrifying.

CHAP. XI.—Of the identity of other mysteries with this state. II.—Of the mysteries practiced by the modern magicians of Egypt. III.—Of the "mysterious in Cagliostro." IV.—Earth mirrors. V.—Of the Obi and earth glass. V.—Second sight. VI.—Phantasma.

CHAP. XII.—Transposition of the senses.

CHAP. XIII.—Natural sleep.

CHAP. XIV.—Natural Somnambulism. I.—Trance.

CHAP. XV.—Of intuition.

CHAP. XVI.—Presentiment or foreknowledge.

CHAP. XVII.—Of interior provision. II.—Of exterior provision. III.—Wisdom. IV.—Wisdom.

CHAP. XVIII.—Sympathy. I.—Clairvoyance. Clairvoyance at a distance.

CHAP. XIX.—Of the sense of hearing.

CHAP. XX.—Of the senses of smell and taste.

CHAP. XXI.—Of the sense of feeling.

CHAP. XXII.—Of the sense of motion. Of their physical strength.

CHAP. XXIII.—Of the influence of Artificial Somnambulism on the state of life. Influence upon a healthy subject. II.—Of the influence of Artificial Somnambulism upon diseased subjects.

CHAP. XXIV.—Artificial Somnambulism considered as a therapeutic agent.

CHAP. XXV.—Of the kinds of disease cured while in this state. Cases of St. Vitus's dance. II.—Epilepsy. III.—Dyspepsia. IV.—Intermittent fever. V.—Fever VI.—Case. VII.—Inflammatory rheumatism. VIII.—Chronic rheumatism. IX.—Hysteria. X.—Melancholy from unrequited love. XI.—Case. XII.—Case. XIII.—Case. XIV.—Contraction of the muscles of the fingers XV.—Scarlet fever. XVI.—Case. XVII.—Case.

CHAP. XXVI.—Surgical operations.

CHAP. XXVII.—Obstetrical cases. Conclusion.

This valuable work is for sale at this office, at $1.K per volume, postage 30 cents. See book list in another column. ☞ The trade supplied on reasonable terms.

NEW EDITION—REVISED AND CORRECTED.

THE VOICES

Three Poems.

VOICE OF SUPERSTITION,
VOICE OF NATURE,
AND
VOICE OF A PEBBLE.

By Warren Sumner Barlow.

THIS volume is startling in its originality of purpose, and is destined to make deeper foot-prints among posterity than any work that has hitherto appeared.

From the dawn of earth's history, through all their word, and proven by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to the present day!

THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes. While other writers have dwelt upon the myths of Moses, the author has created a beautiful Temple on the ruins of Superstition. Judge Dailey, of New York, in his review of this book, says: "The author has dared to go where few have to be classed among the ablest and most gifted didactic poets of the age."

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality in matter and Mind, Fraternal Charity and Love.

The book is a repository of original thought, wending subtle conceptions of language, beautiful and pleading in style, and one of the few works that we'l grow with its years and mature with the centuries. It is already admired by the thousands of readers.

It is a handsome book, on heavy, fine paper, bound in beveled boards, in gold style; nearly 300 pages. Price $1.50, postage 20 cents. For sale by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

AN EYE-OPENER.

"CITATEUR PAR PIGAULT."

LE BRUN,

DOUBTS OF INFIDELS.

Embodying Thirty Important Questions to the Clergy; also, Forty Close Questions to the Doctors of Divinity.

BY REV.

☞ For sale at the office of this paper.

Price, by mail, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In paper, 50 cents; postage, 4 cents.

ROSICRUCIA!!!

THE ROAD TO POWER!! SECRET SOCIETY! P. B. Randolph's Rosicrucian Letter, containing initiation of a new order of things, containing principles, ideas, and advice for success. Price, $1.00. Address in the order of Rosicrucians, P. B. RANDOLPH, Boulogne-sur-Seine, France.

v10 n16 4t

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Dico hominem externum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN HELMONT

—o—

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutatory, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Test or trial packages mailed free for 25 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 71 F St., Washington, D. C.

v10 n11 tf

THE

HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF

M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,

AND WRITTEN BY

PROF. WM. F. LYON.

—o—

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"The book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth.

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither do they present them as an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely reasonable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect.

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"The central idea contained in the following work, and the one theme most of these chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with its shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the EXTERIOR, is accessible to all persons who are specially favored by nature that may be found in the unexplored open Polar Sea. And this opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from the outer surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail or steam either way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds in one.

12mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

☞ For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1785 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE

BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON.

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanscrit, or ancient language of the Brahmins.

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, and after nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago.

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS

OR THE

WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE

REVEALED TO MAN.

The Medium, in his address to the public says:

The Medium (David Corless, of Huntley's Grove McHenry Co., Ill.,) through whom this work was given, has been a careful observer of the phenomena of "Modern Spiritualism" for over twenty years and during the time as a writing medium, the humble Medium through which hundreds of philosophical and scientific lectures have been given to attentive listeners. Of himself, he can only say he is an unlearned farmer, advanced in years. He asks for this pamphlet a careful and attentive perusal.

The Introduction entitled "The Unveiling," treats of man as the grand objective ultimate of Life's Unfoldings:

He stands at the pinnacle of all organized Life in the native purity of all things.

On page twenty-four, the author treats of "the way mediums paint likenesses, in the true order of the development of the arts and sciences.

No part second, under the general head of Inspiration Revealed, the author treats of "How Mankind Manifest their presence through Physical Bodies of Mediums. How the writing is done. How we influence Mediums to speak. The fullness of all kinds of knowledge obtained. The ring test and the carrying of Musical Instruments around the room explained."

This work is neatly got up and consists of seventy-three closely printed pages and we hesitate not to say that it contains more original thought upon important subjects, a few only of which we have enumerated, than any other work of equal size we have seen.

☞ Price 50 cents; postage, 3 cents. For sale wholesale and retail by the publishers, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

EMPRESS!

THE "EMPRESS" and other Hubbell Corsets, FOR

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send stamp for circulars. Address: "EMPRESS" Corset Co. 189 Clark St., Room 19 Chicago.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY

THE ARTS AND SCIENCES, LITERATURE, DEVOTED TO ROMANCE AND GENERAL REFORM.

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause: she only asks a hearing. [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR. CHICAGO, JULY 29, 1871. VOL. X.—NO. 19.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

SLANDER.

BY MRS. M. J. WILCOXSON.

If there's anything I hate 'tis scandal;
If aught deserves the name of Vandal,
It is this fiend to peace and love,
Which has no part with souls above.
If there 's anything I feel to crush,
Or grind to powder with my feet,
It is this hissing snake I'd hush,—
This cobra in the mercy-seat!
If ever arm of mine were strong,
It were to strike this viper wrong!
I've seen so many innocent,
By this fell fiend to sorrow sent!
I've seen so many happy homes
Transformed to hells or living tombs!
I've seen the trust of woman blighted—
Her wrongs, swift ripening, never righted!
I've seen this harlot try to smother
All the love of sister, brother!
I've seen her wrest the sobbing child
From mother, by her hatred wild.
I've seen her 'tween the husband, wife,
Draw two-edged sword, all red with strife.
I've seen the fire gone out,—the hearth
Grown cold, where once sweet childhood's mirth
Rang joyous 'round the cheerful blaze
That flashed its warmth in happy days—
Where music soothed the listening ear,
And seldom fell the scalding tear.

This whelp of sin I fain would slay,
For she hath made the best her prey.
I've seen her trail her deadly slime
O'er fairest gardens in spring time,
And sweetest bloom all blighted fell
Into her trap thus sprung of hell!
The tint upon my loved one's cheek
Faded, and now bereaved I seek
That blessed bower of the soul,
From which all pure affections roll,
Purity to her on shining track,
Those that have fled her cruel rack!
For blush and bloom of summer fruit
Could not her envious spirit suit,
And lightnings of her fire-red hate
Shivered my tree, and called it, FATE.

I've seen upon the battle-field,
Where man will die before they yield,
The snarling brutes disputing there,
With hound and growl, their loathsome share,
And lifeless hearts become the food
Of vultures in that feast of blood!
I've seen the scarred and mangled form
Lashed by the icy sleet and storm,
After the War-God's molten hail
Had smote the warrior's mortal mail,—
But ne'er a sob or stifled groan
Went up as prayer at Nature's throne;
The hand of Death had stayed the pain,
And beasts and birds might tear in vain!
I've seen the dread vs cane's breath
Roll on in waves of fire and death,
And heard the earthquake's sullen roar,
As it drank in the peaceful shore,
And opened wide its monster throat,
Engulfing hamlet, bridge, and moat,
When one dread doom alike befell
The good and ill—the sick and well!
With all this I could only mourn
The mountain and the valley shorn
Of life and peace by one fierce blow,
Which scarce gives warning in its flow.

FAIRE spurs the warrior on to death—
NOIR is there MALICE in the breath
Of earthquake, or the lava-flood,
Or vulture-beak, or beastly brood.
But, oh! 'tis MAN, the worst of sins,
By which the harlot, SLANDER, wins.
"Wine," did I say? Yes, wine a name
Made odious on the roll of fame!
At last she wins deserved contempt,—
Loses the trust of all exempt
From that vile leprosy of heart
Which rends the dearest ties apart.
And let her win an odious fame,
The price of peace, and life, and name!
Win at the last due execration,
For thus destroying reputation,
And hunting down for days and years
A child of God whose burning tears
Have dripped along life's weary path,
And tracked this tigress in her wrath!

I envy not her power or place;
God grant her wiles may never gnaw
With brazen front of specious art
The portals of my human heart!
Before I dare to drive the steel
To throbbing brain, when I may heal,—
Before I dare to use my tongue
With viper threat at hearts long wrung,
Long struggling 'neath life's heavy load,
I pray to thee, oh, Father, God,
Palsy my hand, and palsied be
My lips, profaning man and Thee!

A Pathetic Dirge.

The following appeared in the Detroit Post. The name of its gifted author has been withheld from the public.

Grim death has taken darling little Jerry,
The son of Joseph and Syrena Hackett;
He's gone to heaven riveted with the dysentery,
And will be perished in his little bowels.

It was the Savior wanted little Jerry,
Which suffers little children to come to him;
He very probably thought he is practising very Assiduous like the little angel hymn.

Most likely 'twas wounding injured little Jerry;
His bowels seemed to clamp his stomach's boss;
But with the angels he gets plump and merry,
For there 's no snoring-bottles there he 's gone.

From Forney's Democrat.

FROM OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Waiting for Us.

So weary!

The pen seems very heavy to-night. There is a blur on the letters traced on the paper before us as the pain points, cluster, dart, and hover before the eyes. It is almost midnight. Not a soul in all this house awake but the writer of this. Sleeping, resting, perhaps dreaming of loved ones, or miles away in spirit communing with silent visitors. If we could only sleep! But not now. Our work is not done. Good friends everywhere tell us they miss this, our familiar heart-talk with them, so we write and work and work—and work and write.

We said they were sleeping. So they are. Before us is a sofa. When this chapter is finished, the pen wiped and put away; the inkstand covered and shoved back, the desk put in order, we can rest on that sofa, and sleep. Perhaps our good angels will visit us then. Sometimes they do. They bend over us and smile, and we can almost feel them put back the hair from an aching brow. Then they take us with them, up and away; far, far away from here. And they tell us of the future life; of the lives of others. How they whisper great thoughts and beautiful ideas to earnest workers—sweet hope to weary watchers—golden promise to those whose hearts are true, and a Heaven for all.

We shall be glad to sleep! It is hard work to work hard—to succeed. But the reward does so encourage the heart and beautify thought. It is glorious to work, to study, to write. If we can only make one boy, or girl, or man, or woman, or home happier, then we, by this chapter, shall have planted one little seed to blossom here—to give fruit on the journey Over There.

Perhaps we can help an enemy by words written to-night. Then we shall be happy. Of course we have enemies, those who speak ill of us, who by cruel words would drive us to be very, very far from good. Sometimes it is hard to be good, when those who do not know you, are trying to break down and crush out the good aspirations all have. None of us can be perfect. If we were, this were Heaven, and mankind but separated Deity. We think of our friends and go on, no matter what men may say or think. God knows, and we know, that we are satisfied with our work, our task, our heart contentment.

It is not what others think of us that brings happiness or misery. It is what we are. The speech is known as it is reported in each one's work we do, the life within us, is our character. If we live for the speech of changing tongues we live but sorry lives! If we live to a purpose, noble within us born, we are happy, and shall reach the golden shores with an individuality to our credit Over There.

So we work in hope to do good; to make somebody better and happier. To surround ourselves and whoever we may love, and who love us, with comforts, for true Christianity bids us to make all of heaven we can while on earth. It is not necessary that we should have a stated hour to pray, for there is no sleep with those beyond this life who hear us at all times!

The lines grow to fill pages. The watch before us tells in its way the same story of flying time. Pretty soon its works will run down as will our life here—to be set going again by a power greater than the wondrous mechanism before us knew of. It will run down to-night, to-morrow, as we shall all live in the Eternal! There are good watches and poor ones. Watches to be relied on; watches that cannot. So with men—with women.

There are men who never engage in a great work; who keep no correct time, who are as useless as the mind not put in the hour-glass. Men who fear to live. Who fear to begin. Who dread the end. Who fear to die! As if one should be afraid to go home!

* * * * * * * * *

Before long we shall go to our home. We shall close our eyes, and thus bid good-bye to all the pens, and ink, and paper, and desks. We shall finish our work and rest. Shall go away with the good angels who so often and often come to us; who so often have told us of danger and carried us to great rewards; who are with us even now, bending over us, so we can feel their kisses, and know they are with us to bless, to guide, to protect, to inspire; to lead on, and on, and on to the gardens of God, where none but loved ones will be with us, working in harmony to and for a purpose—great, grand, beautiful, and for the Eternal.

As men give us words, so do good angels give us ideas at times. They come with messages from beyond the curtained philosophy of those who are afraid to look to the great light in the East. They come with words of cheer, of encouragement, of truth, of wisdom and continual revelations from worlds we shall visit, to work in after our work be finished here.

And they tell us each day more and more that in the Eternal there is, and ever will be, work for all of us. That none of us will stop, or be destroyed, or kept from reaching the highest position a progressive mind can reach. They tell us that death is beautiful, as it is but a change to the better—from the street to the parlor—from darkness to light. They tell us that then we shall have power to go in thought, as our papers gone now—from home to home, from heart to heart, or mind to mind, whispering ideas, truths, hints, suggestions; making hearts happier and men better; telling and convincing those who seek knowledge, as for years and years we have sought it, that all who strive here to be good, and pure, and true, and loving, and earnest, and progressive, will have to them help given, and information imparted, till they too shall be planters here—reapers there!

* * * * * * * * *

We have often been in company with the good angels, who to-night will hold us as a child is held in its mother's lap or embrace, to visit workers who slept as we shall some day—to waken in a better home. We have been with those who go forth in spirit at times to whisper grand ideas to inventors, and then help them on with their plans. With those who whisper great thoughts to preachers of religion and workers for progression, and then with those who whisper these truths again and again, till they are believed even by those who were brought up in hate and superstition, and fear of death, and dread of eternity, as we were. We have been often with those who are workers in spirit, witnessing even their labor to find persons willing to listen to truth—willing to escape from long-worn, soul-enslaving fetters, and to help them reach minds, as minds must be reached and operated upon by minds, else this were eternity, and the glory, and the power, and the grandeur, and the greatness of God, and the world itself complete from the beginning. Perhaps you do not understand? It is not clear to us. Minds grow here—but grow Over There more. We are none of us to be destroyed. God is not foolish. Grant the creation—the flood—the immaculate conception—the crucifixion!—Grant all these! Would God come to earth to commit suicide?

No! It was to teach us that there is a life beyond the grave. That men may revile, and slander, and even crucify! Yet we shall come again, if we were but workers for the Right and for man while on earth. So with all who work boldly, steadily on. Not as now. But shall walk as Bunyan did, with the burden removed; shall come and go, and go and come in spirit, as the breeze comes with health; to help educate and make happier, and more contented, and homelike, and heart-guided, all who wake or who sleep while we rest, and rest with our good angels and guardian spirits, who have been with us often and often before this [illegible] Night.

From the Chicago Tribune.

Spiritualism in New York.

A meeting of the Dunedin Mutual Improvement Society was held in the hall below the Athenæum last evening, for the purpose of resuming the debate on Mr. Meer's lecture on Spiritualism. Mr. Charles Smith, as President of the Society, presided. Mr. Norman having made some remarks, Mr. Russell moved, "That the subject of Spiritualism has already been so far investigated as to prove it unworthy of belief, and that it is of no use or advantage to the human race." The motion was overruled by the Chairman. The mover said that Mr. Stout had not given a distinct definition of such terms as "Modern Spiritualism," "evil spirits," etc., and that instead of giving a rational explanation of the causes of the Spiritualistic phenomena, he had jumped to the supernatural and brought down the spirits wholesale. He quoted extracts from Mr. Stout's speech, and characterized them as "very learned." Mr. Redmayne denied the assertion made by Dr. Carr at the last meeting, that Spiritualists were impostors. He also said that Mr. Home had been "elongated" 9 inches, and not 16 feet, as had been stated by Dr. Carr. He commenced to read a communication from "spirit land" to a Dr. Dexter, an American doctor, but was interrupted. He himself was a skeptic until he had investigated for himself, and he could not resist facts. (A voice—"What are the facts?") There were forces, and powers, and intelligences, and it was but reasonable that they should come from spirits. He had attempted to form circles, and had been successful until some persons in the party asked such frivolous questions, as "How many pots and pans are there in this room?" and "How many pots and pans are there in the kitchen?" The "good influence" answered these questions, but it immediately vanished, and if he were a spirit he would do the same, if questions so frivolous were asked him. He concluded by asking his hearers to investigate the subject. Mr. Beveridge believed that Spiritualism was true when considered as being produced by the agency of natural laws, though some of them, or their operations, were not yet understood, but as to its being the work of spirits, that was simply humbug. It also concerned matters of faith, and such things were too serious to be played with. Mr. Jago said they had the evidence of educated and scientific men on the subject, and they could not be deceived as he or the meeting could. Their evidence was of more value even than if the subject had been investigated before the meeting. He, however, would not accept the hypothesis of Spiritualism. Mr. Stout, in reply, contended that the position which he took up at the opening of the debate had not been trenched upon. As to his terminology, he would have to use the word "Spiritualism" until Mr. Russell could suggest a better. He contended that religion had not anything to do with the subject. Spiritualism is not in any sense a faith, therefore should not be treated on a religious basis. Investigators should take facts, and from them deduce a theory. He complained that many facts respecting Spiritualism had been misrepresented. He would not go to the length of asserting that the Spiritualistic hypothesis was the correct one, but to him, at least, it appeared to be the most rational one. The question that "Spiritualism is worthy of investigation," was then put, and carried, seventeen voting in the affirmative and four in the negative.

LECTURE ON SPIRITUALISM.

A lecture upon the subject of Spiritualism was delivered last evening at St. George's Hall, under the auspices of the Dunedin Mutual Improvement Society, by Mr. W. D. Meers. His Worship the Mayor occupied the chair, and there was a large audience, the hall being crowded.

Mr. Meers commenced his lecture by giving an account of the manner in which he was first led to examine the subject of Spiritualism, and read extracts from his diary, setting forth some of his experiences. By means of the circle, he said, he became developed as a clairvoyant as well as a clairaudiant, and could not only see spirits very distinctly, but when his own spirit was en rapport with another spirit, they could converse as freely as any two persons now in the flesh. He then described the manner in which he was developed as a healing medium. On the evening of the 3rd April, 1859, his friends, Mr. Child and Mr. and Mrs. Wilks, called to spend the evening at his house, in London. Mr. Child was very unwell, feeling a nervous depression, attended with pain in his chest and back. On his arrival, Mr. Meers, who was in a clairvoyant state, saw a spirit with him, who told him (the lecturer) that he (the spirit) was anxious to magnetize Mr. Child, but could not do so without the assistance of a medium. On Child asking which of the mediums present could best be used, he was told that Mr. Meers could, and he then followed the instructions of the spirit, by doing exactly as it did. The lecturer then made sundry passes, which he described, and the result was that the patient in a few moments declared himself free from pain and perfectly restored. Mr. Meers then described his first vision of the spirit-world, and read several communications which were written, through his hand, by departed friends and relatives. One communication was written, in the presence of several friends, in three minutes, which would take him at least half-an-hour to copy, under ordinary circumstances. On one occasion he had decided to consult his physician about a severe cold, when his arm became "spiritually agitated" for writing. He sat down with a pencil, when a prescription was given by a spirit physician, named Forbes, which could not possibly have been written without the interposition of a power independent of his own. After the second application, it performed a most perfect cure. The lecturer then read extracts from a work entitled "Spirit Identity," by Dr. Hare, of Philadelphia, a gentleman who had devoted fifty years of his life to the investigation of Spiritualism. The skeptic, he said, tells us that Spiritualism is nothing but magnetism. He denied the assertion, and as an authority, gave the name of Professor Varley, who says that the phenomena he had witnessed cannot in any way be produced either by electricity or natural magnetism. In answer to the assertion that the phenomena are the work of Satan, the lecturer quoted the names of good men, who asserted that it is God-like and elevating. He next treated of the general teaching and philosophy of the subject. Spiritualism he said, advocates charity and universal love; it tells us that we have a natural and a spiritual body, and that a spark of divinity called the soul, is the life principle within them; that, on the change to a spiritual state, we ought not to lose any opportunity of cultivating and exercising the noblest and best characteristics of our nature; that every man can both here and hereafter make his surroundings either Heaven or Hell, or more properly speaking, promote his own happiness or increase his misery; that while here we are men having natural bodies, while in the next sphere we are seen with spiritual bodies. When the spirit withdraws from its earthly tabernacle, it takes the life principle or soul with it, the affections being as warm for those left behind as when with them in the body. He did not think that anything could be found in such a belief, that was not in harmony with the idea of Divine love and goodness.

At the conclusion of the lecture, a vote of thanks to Mr. Meers was proposed by the Chair man, and carried by acclamation.

SPIRITUALISM.

SIR.—I was astonished to hear at the meeting held in the Athenæum Hall, for the purpose of discussing the merits of Spiritualism, and also to learn from a perusal of some letters in your columns, that some persons have determined to oppose Spiritualism because they believe it to be the work of the much traduced Devil. My astonishment arose from the consideration of the fact that if we look back over the pages of history, we shall find that, according to the same evidences as that on which we hold many much loved beliefs, namely, the testimony of the conservative portion of our forefathers, the Devil has been the originator of nearly all the measures which have benefited our race. Let those who deny this, transport themselves by the power of their imagination to Italy in the time of Galileo, and consider the difficulty which His Satanic Majesty and his worthy servant had to face in laying the foundation of that science which has since formed so elevating and favorite a study, and which has done so much for the world in helping to perfect the science of navigation. Let them remember that, according to the same testimony, it was His Majesty who urged on Luther to his good work; that it was he who was the motive power in steam; that he was the electric messenger; that it was he who stirred up geologists to study the crust of the earth; and that it was he who tormented our puritanical forefathers by raising up good spirits to persuade them to cast aside their sour looks and ascetic habits, and make life as enjoyable as possible. If then, what I have said is allowed, and I cannot see how persons who regard history as a good authority on which to rest their religious convictions can deny it, we ought to encourage his Satanic Majesty in his last endeavors to enlighten mankind, rather than give him the cold shoulder. For, if we do encourage him, what, judging by his past services, may not his efforts to lay open communication with the spirit land do for us? Traveling by steam may be put in the shade, the expensive telegraph lines may be rendered unnecessary, and mankind may be brought into closer contact and friendship than ever. For my part, I think his Satanic Majesty should receive every encouragement, and that we should at once substantially recognize his past efforts on behalf of humanity. I would therefore suggest that in this land of testimonials and addresses, a subscription should at once be set on foot, so as to buy a wooden spade and shovel, or a golden three-tongued pitch fork, and that an address thanking His Satanic Majesty for past kindnesses, and praying for a continuation of them, be prepared; also that our Superintendent and Mayor be requested to wait upon him, and present them to him in the name of the people here. Hoping that gratitude may prompt the people to do as I have suggested, I am, etc. PLUTO.

From the Banner of Light.

Superior Mental and Physical Manifestations.

We are pleased to know that opportunity now offers to witness a very superior class of spiritual manifestations, at the private residences of such of our citizens as desire to test for themselves, or exhibit to their friends, the remarkable phenomena, which have now passed through the stage of merely exciting wonder and astonishment, to that of challenging scientific attention and profound thought.

Mr. Harry Bastian is the medium, and we are pleased to introduce him here as a modest, quiet and intelligent gentleman, who commands respect for his own qualities, as well as interest in the manifestations which occur in his presence. He is accompanied by Mr. Ira Davenport, whose experience of varied physical manifestations is probably larger than that of any other one man, and who says of Mr. Bastian that he is every way qualified to give just that kind of evidence which to sincere investigators must prove conclusive.

At a private seance held on Tuesday evening last, at the residence of Charles Wing, Esq., in Charlestown, four voices, differing as much in all essential characteristics as would the speech of any four mortals, held intelligent and familiar conversation with the several visitors, while the room of the medium was filled with various musical instruments floated about the room, being played upon softly at times, touching the visitors, and again bells, tambourine, guitar and harmonicon played in concert, while the medium was bound fast to his chair. While thus bound, chair and medium were both lifted upon the table. While firmly bound, hands and feet, paper being placed on the floor, and the position of his feet being determined by marking around them with a pencil—a coin being placed on the toe of each boot; also upon the top of each knee; also upon each hand, as the arms were tied across the breast; also upon the head—the guitar was instantly taken from the table, and while it sailed about the room most delicately vibrated by some exquisite touch, immediately succeeded by a loud clash of instruments, and a call for light, when a solid iron ring was found upon the medium's arms, but the position of the feet and the coins undisturbed. The seance occupied some two hours, and was entirely satisfactory to all present.

It is not the intention of these gentlemen to give public hall exhibitions, but rather to present to thoughtful and cultured persons, under the protection of their own private residences, opportunity for studying these phenomena. We commend their intention to the favor of our citizens.

Spiritualism in the Wesley Family.

Miss Julia Westwood's new work on "John Wesley, and the Evangelical Reaction of the Eighteenth Century" (Macmillan and Co., publishers), contains ample references to the Spiritualistic manifestations and supposed supernatural occurrences of Wesley's career, which are treated by the author with candor. Speaking of the revival phenomena, the fits, screams, and ravings which in some cases accompanied conversion under his preaching, she observes that the lower middle-class of Hanoverian England were "turbulent," and that they relished a "kind of spiritual gin." But while "these causes all help to explain the spread of the disorder, they do not explain its origin. What remains, then, when the large element of nervous irritation, unconscious acting, and that strange love of producing a sensation so remarkable in uneducated persons are subtracted? There remains, no doubt, as one element distinct physical disorder, which we may identify, for instance, with the dancing mania of the fourteenth century.

* * * * But this is not all. Any one who studies the account with the same attention as he would give to that of any other strange event, will be convinced that there was something in the personal influence of Wesley, (for it certainly does not remain in his sermons) which had the power of impressing on a dull and lethargic world such a sense of the horror of evil, its mysterious closeness to the human soul, and the need of a miracle for the separation of the two, as no one, perhaps, could suddenly receive without some violent physical effort."—Medium and Daybreak.

—How unequal and unjust is the distribution of rewards and demerits! When will it cease?

—"The Kingdom of Heaven is within us"—and the Kingdom of Hell likewise. Both Heaven and Hell are states of the affections.

—The person who takes advice of his temper, installs his worst enemy as chief counsellor.

—The next best thing to a sensible speech is a prudent silence.

READ the advertisement of that most wonderful work, JESUS OF NAZARETH.

The Rostrum.

LECTURE NO. XXVI.

On True Freedom, by Emma Hardinge, Delivered at Harmonial Hall, Philadelphia, January 2nd, 1870.

Phonographically Reported for the Religio-Philosophical Journal, by Henry T. Child, M. D.

INVOCATION.

Oh, Thou Supreme Ruler of the universe, in whose hand are times and tides and seasons, we have heard the requiem voices of the dying year, sounding out, passing away, passing away, until the last echo was hushed, and the voice was still, and the year is gone; it is gone with all its freighted woe and sorrow, its life and death. Many a tender bud has blossomed into life to bear its storms and trials; many a ripe flower has fallen; many a bright and glorious one has been untimely nipped—life and death have been busy with us; many a crime has stained us; many a trespass has bowed us down; many a dark record has been written upon our hearts, that may never be blotted out, and many a bright one, too, side by side with the darkness, has shown the day spring that all is done, and done forever. In the midst of our records for past mistakes, of our remorse and anguish for committed crimes, of our sorrowful memories of the past away—we hear the joy-bells ring out the dawn of another year. This, our first Sabbath gathering; this, the first holy day, when we put off the shoes of materiality from our feet, and tread with thee on the holy ground of spiritual aspiration,—this day looks sadly and solemnly upon us, as if nature wept for the past, and sympathized in the heart throbs of pain that sad memories have left behind. Oh, our Father, thou who wilt waken up the light, thou who wilt yet smile in the green spring and teach us to rejoice in the glorious summer that shall be; wilt waken up also the spring of grateful memories in our hearts, and sunny hopes in our spirits. Teach us of all thy wonderful ways, of thy care and providence. Help us to trust thee; help us to cast all burdens upon thee; help us to remember that thy way is eternal progress—that thy hand, however heavy upon us, is only for discipline, for reform, for good, for teaching. Show us how truly this life is but a probation, a strife and struggle in which our inborn souls are yearning for brighter and better years that shall never pass away. Help us this dark morning, this sad weeping morning, to discern the sunlight of thy countenance; to feel thy providence, thy truth and thy strength, amidst all our darkness and sorrow. Oh, bring us comfort—the wings of inspiration. Though the voice of earth be still, make music in our hearts. Though the sun in the heavens be clouded, let the sun of the spirit shine, and thine be the glory forever and forever.

LECTURE.

"Stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free; be not again entangled in the yoke of bondage."

These are words full of deep and most philosophical meaning; they have not been understood; they have been grossly misapplied; they have been perverted from their legitimate use, but they are so full of hopeful, earnest religious meaning, that I apply them now to you as Spiritualists. For, however much you may feel discouraged at times, I know and feel that to you has been given the work of the nineteenth century; a work which involves destruction, first, and then reconstruction.

For twenty years we have been compelled to toil in the work of destruction mainly. We have been called upon to strike heavy blows with a reluctant hand and purpose—scarcely yet fortified by a thorough consciousness of the truth that we were called upon to give. In fact, we have been required to build wiser than we knew. I believe that the hour is now arriving, even with this eventful year, when those that shall be found strong enough, worthy enough, true and faithful enough, must enter upon this, the highest and holiest work that has ever been given to man. I believe that there are soldiers now in the ranks faithful and resolved, and in full understanding of their truth, who are now called upon in this year, 1870, to commence the work of reconstruction, and it is for this purpose that we propose in the addresses, that we shall be permitted to give through these lips, to speak each morning of the laws of life, disclosed by Spiritualism, and in the evenings, of some of the truths revealed to us of the hereafter.

This morning, we start on this enterprise by considering the nature of the eternal or higher law, which Spiritualism has brought into view. You will understand, for you are thinkers; intellectual Spiritualists, that this reform has revealed to us some new features of life—something of the law of right and wrong. We have at last discovered it to be permanent. We may define as right, that which produces good and use to the individual actor, and to all around. Right is that which never injures self, nor yet another, but as every law is modified by another law, so the law of right demands of this a modification. We never can rightfully do aught that will injure ourselves, nor yet another. But we must learn to respect the rights of majorities and of minorities. There are times when we are called upon to do right in some especial instance, and whilst we do justice to ourselves, and it may be, justice to the few around us, we may perform apparent injustice to others.

There are laws which act heavily upon us—laws which we do not groan beneath, but which we are compelled to endure for the sake of the masses who are weaker than unto ourselves. You and I may not need the restraint of law. In this sense alone do I admit any modification in the standard of right.

The standard of wrong is equally essential. It is that which injures self or another. Whatever operates as a wrong upon another is equally wrong to ourselves. We cannot abandon this admitting the modification which I have claimed for the law of right, for they are but forms of the same eternal law of justice. Thus we are plundered, and the law of right, perhaps, may be on the side of the plunderer, who is hungry and lacks food, for he has received from his heavenly Father the gift, or rather necessity, of life; it is forced upon him,—the demand of God through man for the means of sustaining life in his organism. If society has deprived him of them, it commits a wrong—having kept back bread that our brother needs.

For the sake of the great masses of society, we are compelled to repudiate the act of plunderer, to protect the masses from the lawless and strong; hence the laws against plunder; and for this purpose we even make an example of the sufferer, that the rest may be saved.

These are the only modifications which I admit that the rights of the majority,—of those who are not yet laws unto themselves,—must be considered. With this modification only, I insist that there is a standard of right and tion.

[illegible]

Why was it said of old, "The way of the transgressor is hard?" Who makes it all—society alone, or ourselves? Consider well every offense which we have agreed to call an offense, whether perpetrated in our own presence or that of another.

Then question whether we do not find the law in our members, in our own organs,—the standard of right and wrong,—and however we may bend from this, whether by sophistical artifices, by vague philosophy, by unsound theories, it exists, and has existed in every age. It has stamped upon it that form of life which we call physicality, retribution.

Why was it said of old, "The way of the transgressor is hard?" Who makes this standard? Not society alone. Consider well every offense which we have agreed to call such, whether perpetrated in our own persons, or those of another. Then question whether we do not find the law in our members, in our own organization,—the standard of right and wrong. The drunkard who trespasses upon the law of temperance, feels this. He may claim that he commits no wrong. Though we deny this, we know that society is deprived of uses which they are entitled to, by every act that enervates and exhausts the powers of man without accomplishing any good. We point to these as evil ones distinct and unmistakable of the truth of our statement that we can not commit any act which is now recognized, as an offense, which does not carry with it its own retribution. I speak of coldness, selfishness,—every description of vice. The selfish man alienates himself from his kind, deprives himself of the warm and tender sympathies of his kind.

There is no outward law to compel love, and sympathy, and affection, but the higher law carries itself its eternal sequence.

I see the poor man, beneath the weight of poverty, with thread-bare garments; still, with all these, I see him the center of love and affection; little children are attracted to him; the hand of kindness is outstretched to him; a smile mantles his face, and makes kindred feelings. I see the strong, the proud, the rich, the selfish; they walk through life in great desolation and isolation. Thus each individual makes the law of right and wrong in their lives.

I call your attention to two laws, which are definitions each great religious reform is enunciated before mankind. I shall take the two most potential examples on record. The history of these are to be found in the old Jewish and Christian Scriptures,—Moses and Christ.

In the life of the Jewish lawgiver, we find an especial mission to proclaim an external law, so perfect, so admirable, that every form of life was provided for. It was perfect in its kind,—was practical, and strictly adapted to the condition of that nation. This law followed the Jewish people, and was adapted to all their wants, their garments, their social intercourse, to all their ceremonials, to the physiological laws, and every description of morality. These laws, I repeat, were very wise; they were for a people who were unconscious of the meaning of justice, of order, of harmony, of life, of principles, of the various methods that were necessary to render life harmonious and orderly. Hence you perceive the strict necessity for such laws. But we see that in obedience to them, and in observance of the rituals and penalties that were to be administered under the law, there was no room for spiritual growth; there was no room for the exercise of kindliness and charity, for the edict compelled justice, without admitting of any legitimate use for the sweeter and more tender emotions which we now call charity and kindness.

All the justice between man and man that was necessary for strict order in social, commercial and national life, are fully laid down. The Jew under this system, had he been obedient to the law, would have become an automaton; would have acted mechanically. Such was the necessity of the time, and such will it ever continue to be under that law.

Under the Gospel of Jesus of Nazareth, he enunciated love as the most sublime and glorious principle, and when our hearts are filled with the warm and tender feelings of that Christian element of love to one another, we can not break the law,—it is impossible. Let the law prevail; let the strictest discipline of law be enacted—we need it not.

The man or woman that loves, can never commit wrong. Take it here, to-day—we walk beneath the discipline of external law that nature has provided for us. But I ask you, can these laws touch those sweet and tender emotions of the spirit, that make us lovely and unselfish?

When we enter a public assembly, we are beneath the shadow of law. We are compelled to observe certain forms of manner. We are not permitted to disturb those that are around us.

Thus everywhere, we are under the influence of law, and the higher law requires us to be gentle, courteous, and kind, to give of our knowledge to the ignorant; to bestow your strength upon the weak. The higher law is full of love, and when man go out among their fellows under the influence of this law, they will not heed the external law, and it will pass away. This holier and more gentle law would make a heaven upon earth. It would produce a change in the institutions of life, as each one came to occupy the place that God designed for them, and without interfering with any of those individual or social conditions of man's relationship, would render each one so sweet, and so pleasant, and bring such a universal interchange of love and kindness, as would impress all with the idea of man's exalted station in the land, and thus would be formed a great and beautiful interchange of kindly purposes and uses; and this law which Jesus attempted to institute, which he designed to teach, appealed to those who were on the external,—even to a people who knew nothing except the outer law. This law commanded them to hold all things in common. He endeavors to teach his disciples that they should bear the crown of martyrdom for the truth. He proclaimed the great truth of the Universal Fatherhood of God, and brotherhood of man.

When we consider the teachings of this pure spirit throughout, we perceive it is all based upon the one great philosophical idea, that love in the human heart covers all forms, all laws, and outworks all necessities; its followers do not need any other law.

Religion and philosophy have gradually developed this truth. Though we do not practice it, we know it. There is not a Christian church on this continent or in Europe that does not use single temple of worship where the name of Christ is proclaimed, that men do not acknowledge that that name signifies the sweetest, highest and holiest teachings that ever were given to man, yet the hardest, most cruel and remorseless laws that are now, or ever have been enacted upon the face of the earth, have been inspired by professedly calling themselves Christians. The sword of war and the gallows are Christian institutions; the jail and the penitentiary, with all their hideous systems of punishment, are the same. Very few of the reforms originated in Christian institutions. The efforts for the relief of the outcast, must look elsewhere for sympathy.

The law gives to the capitalist protection, but do not look to it for those who have no home, no bread, no means of earning the necessities of life. Laws are on the side of the strong; for the protection of property—its accumulation, and not its distribution.

I say these things because I would have you understand as Spiritualists, in this day of civilization and knowledge, you are called upon to go forth and uphold the standard which is planted in the higher nature of man, and was upheld by Christ, and to take it from those who call themselves Christians, because they misrepresented it. They have taken his name, but with it the force of the old Jewish law, maintaining that still, because they have not inaugurated the law of Christ, which is love. Because of these things, I do believe it has been vouchsafed to you fearlessly to hear and reveal the law of love,—something of which I now propose to show you.

The great doctrine of immortality is proved to you, and it is settled that the soul lives forever. This is now based upon scientific and demonstrated facts. But we have gone beyond this. We have opened communication with spirits in every part of the world, and we know that without any collusion or connection, they have revealed to us certain general facts and features of the life hereafter. The details are as various as the spirits; but from every grade of that life they return and tell us something of their conditions.

The universal response from that life cannot be mistaken. The one pivotal point around which every revelation centres, is the fact that all happiness hereafter, as here, is to be obtained through the outworking of the law of love; that the failures, the penalties, the sufferings, the result from all errors, from all temptations to which the human spirit is subject in every variety and character of sphere,—all result from infractions of the law of love. They all centre upon the one pivotal point, that the law of love is the highest and most perfect of all laws. Murder, sensuality, every form of wrong result from infractions of this great law. Christ came to lift mankind above the old laws of retaliation and force, and if we, through the revelations of spirits, can stand in the liberty with which Christ has made us free, we are no longer bound to the old law.

He who loves entirely, recognizes his neighbors' rights, and is incapable of violating any just law; he may be a pilgrim in any country, but he will still be above the laws of retaliation. Love for himself, love for the wonderful organization that God has given him,—respect for this, will lead him to endeavor to comprehend the beautiful structure which God has built up. When we do this, we cannot do anything to injure these or interfere with the performance of all the functions that belong to these bodies.

Temperance will rule throughout all our members when we are fully possessed with love and honor for ourselves and for every other human creature. We only perform half our mission if we stand with selfish isolation—a self-love and egotism which destroys the true interest in humanity.

When this universal principle of love exists within us, and is active, then we must go forth and labor to benefit the world.

Spiritualists, I put it to yourselves, whether, with these grand revelations from the spirit-world, whose summary is to be found in the one word love,—I put it to you in every form and variety of experience that spirits have realized, whether of happiness or misery, whether it has not been once again entrusted to you to proclaim the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free, fearing not what the outward law may do for you. It is for you that I plead. It is for you to represent before the world this great law of love.

I know that you are the most heterogeneous mass of reformers that has ever been got together. Here you are in multitude larger than ever yet have been gathered in so short a period of time.

You have all rallied round one central point of belief, recognizing, as all do, the fact of spirit-communion. You must all recognize this great central truth to which I have pointed. Other [illegible] personal experience, have you not received [illegible] from spirits, those whom you have called dead, in which this one celestial truth did not reveal itself? Ask yourself if this be not truth. Show us if this be not so. Show us when the moral and intellectually strong, the proud, the mighty, return, though they have lived up to the external law, though every iota of its discipline has been observed, show us when they return with sweet words of joy and bliss upon their lips, rejoicing, and it will be the view of the great truths that they have found the law of love. They are filled with kindness and charity, are pitiful and forbearing, to all. Can you not understand that it applies to this heavenly mission which is drawing you together by inevitable necessity, into kindred and congenial relations? Do you not understand that love means kindness, charity, mercy, forbearance and justice, which spreads out to every human being that which you would ask for yourself, in all your relations in life?

Have we not found that our own thoughts are substantial? that even the breath is freighted with good or evil to our fellowman?

On Spiritualists, what a glorious revealment has been yours. Shall you, through unfaithfulness, present cover and failure to the world? If so, you have entered upon Spiritualism without the smallest conception of its genius.

We should read as the teachings enunciated 1800 years ago by Christ, the spirit, and now being demonstrated by revelations from the spirit-world. We have been entrusted once again to proclaim this higher law,—not with our lips only, but in our lives. Let us take it home with us this day, and we shall find how easy it will become to be kind, merciful, and loving.

We shall no longer need to seek for means to bind ourselves together,—the bond will be there. We shall no longer marvel why we come together;—the bond will be in our hearts.

This kindness and forbearance which we exercise one toward another, will form a bond of union, stronger than sects or dogmas, or all the creeds that have yet been formed. It is for this reason that spirits, by silent, invisible, iconoclastic hammers, have broken up all our external associations. We have not come on the right basis. We have endeavored to legislate upon the past externally, and not upon the interior law, the interior spirit of harmony and love which alone can bind man to man. Just so long as we range ourselves beneath the external law, its bondage will be upon us. Spirits will never sympathize with our efforts to organize thus; we shall be broken and scattered, and only become a shame to the world.

We are the most multitude, having a beautiful religion, a glorious philosophy,—and these demand loving kindness, forbearance, and charity which should prompt us to join shoulder to shoulder and hand to hand, to bear aloft the whole standard of our holy religion and philosophy.

It is a shame and reproach upon us if we profess to be disciples of this higher law of love, if we do not give evidences in our lives of kindness, mercy, and charity. If we fail in these things, the spirits will find others in the world who will be true to them,—who will stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made them free, and never again enter into the bondage of the external law.

God give us grace to perceive this law of love, strength to carry it out, and courage and patience to wait for it, if the hour has not yet come, and that we may live it out better to-morrow than we have to-day. Let us carry home with us this law. Let us practice it even in the smallest acts of kindness and courtesy to one [illegible] strong enough to go [illegible] the world, and they [illegible] of us, as they did in olden times: "See how these Christians love one another." They shall see that Spiritualism bears the highest and holiest fruits of love,—not alone for and among themselves, but for the homeless and hungry poor,—for all God's children everywhere,—a love that can share the blessings that Providence has bestowed upon us; that in the daily acts of our lives, when we shall have out-wrought this great law of love, and are free from the bondage of external laws, then we shall indeed be true Spiritualists. We shall be prepared to build the church of humanity.

We need again and again to rehearse the truths that spirits have brought, until we can all feel that the spirit-world is very near to us, and we may rejoice in the assurance that there has dawned upon the world a bright and holy day—a day when we are to start afresh in life, and proclaim to all mankind the true Spiritual reformation and liberty wherewith Spiritualism has made us free.

Spiritualists Celebrating the "Fourth."

BRO. JONES:—The glorious old FOURTH came to the good Libertalists and Spiritualists of Geneseo and vicinity. By previous appointment they came from far and near, to celebrate the day in a spiritual pic-nic.

Temporary seats, tables, and rostrum had been erected on the beautiful grounds of Dr. Jonathan Allen, by some of the wide-awake brothers; Mr. Perkins being (as the saying is) the soul of the thing,—that is, the leader.

Speakers were on hand, and the audience was called to order about 10 o'clock, A. M.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer, of New Boston, was called upon to open the exercises of the morning by an invocation. Then followed a short but stirring speech from E. S. Roberts, of Cambridge, and he sat down amid hearty applause, and cries of "Go on," etc.

A poem was then read by Dr. Abba Lord Palmer; following with an address upon the subject, "What God has for Spiritualism. Dust or the Truths in its Philosophy and Teachings." The Rev. M. Perverse, of Mineral, spoke a few words, with a hope to cheer and help the inquirer on in the search after truth; said he was still a minister in the Christian Church, but was willing to find out what was truth.

Dinner with its usual pic-nic delicacies, was partaken of with jovial and pleasant feelings, from the rustic tables spread beneath the cool bowers of the trees. After enjoying the viands of the table, and holding merry and social converse for a short time, adjournment was made to the cooler portion of the grounds, when the was called to order by Mr. Perkins. Exercises opened by an inspirational invocation by Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

AFTERNOON SESSION

Mr. C. H. Doty followed in an eloquent and scholarly oration, upon the subject of "New Truths, and what good they have done." For beauty and sublimity of thought and language, scope and happy illustrations, many said they never heard its equal.

The poem read by Dr. Abba Lord Palmer at the forenoon session was then called for, as many wished to hear it declaimed a second time. Many went on the being again read, as it was upon a subject that lay near the heart of the fathers and mothers, and savored of the realities of life and the after life.

By this time the young folks had got to dancing, and seemed to be having a good time; but the old and staid held a conference, and are concluding it, passed resolutions, that a grand mass meeting of Spiritualists be held the 1st Saturday, Sunday and Monday in September, appointing Dr. Jonathan Allen, C. H. Doty, and Dr Raymond, as a committee to call the convention; also requesting Dr. Abba Lord Palmer to report for the columns of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, an account of this spiritual pic-nic held here in this place.

So by the united request of the assembly, I make this report, hoping there were many spiritual pic-nics held this year on the "Fourth," and may they rapidly increase, is the ardent wish of a humble but willing worker in the cause of truth and reform.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

Geneseo, Ill., July 8th, 1871.

Manifestations at Hartford, Ohio, in 1855.

I am a resident of Pamyumany township, Mercer Co., Pa.; live four miles East of the centre of Hartford, Ohio; have lived where I now reside, some nine months.

About five weeks ago, my attention was arrested by a very sharp and loud whistle, seemingly in a small closet in one corner of the house. This was followed by loud and distinct raps, as loud as a person could conveniently rap with his knuckles. This closet is secured or fastened by a wooden button that turns over the edge of the door. This button would frequently turn and the door open without any visible agency. This was followed by a loud and distinct (apparently) human voice, which could be heard perhaps fifty rods.

After repeating a very loud and shrill scream several times, the voice fell to a lower key, and in a tone about as loud as ordinary conversation, commenced speaking in a very distinct manner, assuring the family that we would not be burned, and that we need fear no injury, as we were in no danger. These manifestations being entirely unaccountable to myself and family, we searched the house to find, if possible, the cause of this new and startling phenomena. We found no one who could be guilty except ourselves. Again we were startled by a repetition of the screams, which were repeated about a dozen times, when the voice proceeded to inform us that the conversation came from the spirits of two brothers, calling themselves George and Henry Force, claimed to have been murdered some eleven years since, and then gave us what they represented as a history of the tragedy, and insisted that we should call in some of the neighbors to hear the disclosure. John Ranney, Henry Moore, and some dozen others, were then called in, to whom the same story was detailed at length. We could readily discover a difference in the voices professing to come from the brothers.

About half an hour after these manifestations commenced, my wife brought a ham of meat into the house, and laid it on the table, and stepped to the other side of the room, and it was carried from four to six feet from the table and thrown upon the floor.

At another time, a bucket of water was, without human hands, taken from the table and turned upon the floor. This was followed by a large dining-table turning round from its position at the side of the room, and carried forward to the stove, a distance of more than six feet. This was done while there was no person near it.

The same table has since been thrown on its side without any human agency, and often been made to dance while the family were eating around it. At one time, dishes, knives and forks, were thrown from the table to the opposite side of the room, breaking the dishes to pieces.

On another occasion, the voices requested Dr. Richardson to remove the dishes, which being done, immediately the table commenced rocking violently backward and forward, and continued the motion so that the dishes could not be washed upon it, but were placed in a vessel and set upon the floor, from which a number were thrown against the chamber floor overhead and broken to pieces. What crockery remained, was attempted to secure by putting it in a cupboard and shutting the door, which was violently thrown open, and the dishes flew like lightning, one after another, against the opposite side of the room, and all were broken to pieces.

At another time the drawer of the table was drawn out, and a plate which had been put there broken against the wall. This kind of demonstration continued till nearly all the crockery about the house was broken.

At different times the drawers of a stand in one of the bed-rooms have been taken out, and once carefully placed on the bed. A large stove-boiler, filled with water, while standing on the stove, was tipped up, the water turned on the floor, and the boiler taken off the stove and set down some six feet away. A tea kettle has often been taken from the stove in the same manner, and thrown upon the floor. At one time a spider, containing coffee to be browned, was taken from the stove to the chamber floor, and there thrown down. Frequently, when Mrs. Richardson has been baking buckwheat cakes on the stove, the griddle has been taken from the stove and thrown across the house; and often cakes have been taken from the griddle while baking, and disappeared entirely.

At one time the voice, speaking to my wife, said it could bake cakes for George, a boy at the table. She immediately stepped away from the stove, when the batter, already prepared for baking, was put on the griddle, and turned at the proper time, and when done put on the boy's plate. The voice then proposed to bake a cake for Jane, my daughter, who was at work about the house. The cake was accordingly baked in the same manner as before stated, and taken across the room and put in her hand.

During all these occurrences the talking of the two voices and others, has continued, and still continues daily, with such manifestations as I have detailed, and many others not mentioned. The conversations and other demonstrations have been witnessed daily by myself and family, as well as by many others, who have visited my house to see these strange phenomena.

I will only add that the spirit (the voice) gave as a reason for breaking crockery and destroying property, that it is done to convince the world of the existence of spirits.

JOHN RICHARDSON.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 6th day of January, 1855.

WM. J. BRIGHT, Justice of the Peace.

James H. Moore, being duly sworn, says: I have witnessed many of the occurrences given by John Richardson, in his affidavit,—such as conversing with the voices, seeing the table move about, etc.

JAMES H. MOORE.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 6th day of January, 1855.

WM. J. BRIGHT, Justice of the Peace.

MINNESOTA.

Report of J. L. Potter.

BROTHER JONES: My report for June is as follows:

Places visited, Farmington, Minneapolis, Osseo, Elk River, and Princeton.

Number of lectures delivered, fifteen.

Number joining association, six.

Amount taken in collections and yearly dues, $27.15. Traveling expenses, $8.05.

The Spiritualists at Osseo are building a new hall. They dedicated the same to humanity and the spirit-world, June 18th. Everything passed off smoothly, and our cause received strength, materially and spiritually.

At Elk River, Brothers Fullers and Cleeland are building a hall that was used June 25th for our lectures. It will be open to Spiritualism and the spirit-world, for Messrs. Fullers are the leading Spiritualists in the place, and will not shut its doors against us; neither will they prevent their orthodox friends coming in, and listening to the lectures, or tripping the light fantastic toe with us poor deluded Spiritualists, on the Fourth, or at any other time they may feel a desire for better things than theological husks. Our cause is gaining ground daily in Minnesota.

Many are siding us to-day that have not given the subject a passing thought heretofore. Brother Fred L. H. Willis has at last said what I wish every Spiritualist in the land could realize. Hear him:

"I believe it to be the fault of Spiritualists everywhere, that we are not respected in all our rights."

This is true, so far as my observation goes, and I have had this as my motto for several years: No compromise with theology of any kind, liberal or otherwise.

If the Spiritualists would work together as one man for the upbuilding of our cause, letting all side issues alone for the time being, orthodoxy could not stand before us five years, for we can beat them in the circle-room, or at court, in the halls of legislation, or on the rostrum. The only places they excel us, is in the state prisons and the asylums for insane followers of Jesus. I am willing to be beaten there, even by our good Christian brethren of the churches.

We are having an interesting time here,—large audiences every night, and not an orthodox to molest or make us afraid; for the word opposition to our cause has been buried beneath table-tipping in his own house. A young lady, that he knows is not a humbug, was the medium. He being the head man in the Congregational church, to say he saw the table move, without the lady or any one else touching it, does not hurt our side at all, but has done him some good.

Thus the work goes on in Princeton. Let us unite our strength, friends, work together, and we shall certainly win in the end.

Princeton, Minn., July 1st, 1871.

—As in the material, so it is in the moral and spiritual world. While some are born poor, others come into the world "with a silver spoon in their mouth."

—There are thousands of persons who struggle harder against the current of their passions and appetites, and end only by becoming the pariahs of society, than do other thousands, who are worshipped for their high social and moral virtues.

—To be saved, it is needful to shed the natural blood of no second person, but, rather, to purify thine own spiritual blood.

—"He that hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance. But he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that he hath." This is the principle of the world, and how true it is. It takes from the poor man his "ewe lamb," and gives it to the man of many flocks and herds.

—A great many people make life less an endeavor to be something than to appear to be something. Hence they are forever at cross purposes with other people, in the attempt to improve it.

LITERARY.

OUR RELIGION: MANY CREEDS—By Ross Winans. John Dai' Forges, Publisher, Baltimore.

No field of investigation or discovery is more interesting, instructive, or profitable than that of religious history, yet until quite recently but little attention had been bestowed upon it. Christians were content in the belief that God, who in times past, bestowed all his care and patronage upon the children of Abraham according to the flesh, had transferred his entire affection to the heirs of that old mythical shepherd according to faith.

The chief Christian idea is that the All Father, lavishing his infinite love and parental care upon us, consigns the rest of his children to the guardianship of the devil. This narrow and uncharitable belief was begotten by selfishness and born of ignorance in an age when travel was impossible, books unknown, and when commerce as a great system of intercommunication, had no existence. Now since boats and papers parade all lands, commerce finds entrance at every port, and man has become a true cosmopolitan, we discover that all peoples are the chosen of God, and that the essential principles of religion, are spontaneous and universal, springing perennial in the human heart, and bearing such fruits as they may under the variously existing circumstances, none being more unfavorable than the belief in a capricious, vindictive and partial God.

The book before us is the careful and able production of a mind thoroughly stored with facts pertaining to all existing religions. The author being a profound thinker and logical reasoner, has probed to the core the prominent systems of religious faith. The result of this is to show that all religions have a root in human nature, and that they respond however meagerly to the hunger and thirst of the soul. We discover also that in point of intrinsic merit, there is little difference between the leading historic religions, and that the religious teacher who shall embody all wisdom in his teachings and all virtue in his system of moral ethics, is yet to appear, if ever.

Our author traces the Christ-idea which pervades all religions to the superstition that God is a capricious tyrant, difficult of approach. With this view of the All Father the desire to have an advocate at the court of Heaven who should possess unbounded influence, was parent of the thought that such a mediator had been or would be born. These mediators are all nondescripts, half god, half man. It is established as a fact also that their divinity is not discovered by their contemporaries, who look upon them as men only. It is long after they are dead that some enthusiastic disciple or designing priest gets up a series of wonderful stories in relation to their birth and doings. These stories are all marvelously alike. When you have read the record of Krishna, you have substantially all the rest, and especially that of Jesus. His birth was predicted by seers. A new star appeared and stood above the place of his nativity. Wise men came to do homage to him. The king became jealous and ordered him slain, and his parents saved him by flight after having been warned in a dream. As Krishna lived long before Jesus it can not be claimed that the story is a plagiarism upon Christian mythology. The reader is left to judge whether the Christian is not stolen from the heathen legend. The author reviewing in a most able manner the prominent and palpable errors of Christianity, also presents in contrast with this system, which Francis Edingwood Abbott denominates the Gospel of Humanity, the Harmonial Philosophy with its natural beauty and simple truth. The work taken as a whole is one of deep research and absorbing interest, and we have read it with great pleasure and profit.

CHRISTIAN LIBERALITY.

Letter from W. D. Mann.

BRO. JONES:—It is with pleasure that we record the liberal Christian spirit of the Trustees of the Baptist church of Fox Lake, Wis, in cheerfully granting the use of their fine church edifice for the funeral services of one of their oldest and most esteemed residents, George Morgan, Esq., and also for the true, manly spirit of their beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Walker, who aided your servant in conducting the funeral services. Greater unity and whole-soulness than was manifested by all, it has never been our pleasure to meet with. Mr Morgan was a liberal philanthropist all his life—liberty of conscience was inherent in his nature. Freedom from oppression and vice, constituted the work of his long life. Slavery and intemperance he abhorred, and never feared to stand up for the right all times, and on all suitable occasions; hence when the war for freedom began, he gave his sons a God-speed to the field of battle, and with their father's ever cheering words, they fought for liberty, and are still fighting for the elevation of the Freedmen in Mississippi. It was with pleasure we heard the citizens of Fox Lake say, "Truly he is an honest man, and ever zealous in behalf of oppressed humanity." A firm, unwavering believer in the Harmonial Philosophy, he desired the services of a speaker of his faith at his funeral, and as you requested it, we went and spoke a few words of consolation to the mourners. The church was crowded to its utmost. The singing by the choir of the church excelled in harmony and appropriateness any we have ever heard. Truly, Fox Lake is in advance of other towns in true Christian spirit. God bless them all.

Chicago, Ill., July 15, 1871.

LECTURE BY DR J. STOLZ.

Letter from George Mee.

DEAR JOURNAL:—Allow me to say a word through the columns of your paper, of the work of progressive religion in this place; also give an expression of gratitude to Dr. J. Stolz, of your city, who favored us with an excellent discourse, on his visit here, on the "Free moral Agency Doctrine." His lecture aroused many to new thought, and started them into new fields of investigation. He takes the position that we are wholly governed by the force of circumstances, conditions and outside influences, over which we have no positive or immediate control; that we are subject to the laws of God and nature, capable only to make choice of the right and the wrong, the good and the evil, the merits and demerits of these forces and circumstances and conditions as they affect us and demand obedience. This choice he says we make in accordance with the knowledge we have obtained, which is a knowledge for the previous education, experiences and surrounding agencies, operating circumstantially upon us, producing this knowledge, or so-called knowledge, which governs the choosing principle of the mind. The effect he claims that man is not free in any sense, which was a startling idea to many here, but the Doctor happily sustained every point, proving every step from the highest authority and science. Practically he says we are forced to provide for the wants of the body; are forced to rest, exercise, sleep, bathe, &c. Mentally we are fed, by the objective world and experience, from which not upon the wants of the body, we think, and are compelled to help it, and that morally we are no more free than in any other sense, or department of human life. For if it were otherwise how could we be held responsible or even accountable; free, and at the same time not free, is an absurd contradiction, and to teach so is irrational and productive of evil.

The sticking point, however, with many in this community, and the inquiry made, "to whom are we responsible?" The doctor answered this briefly, that knowledge is the highest judge to whom we are responsible, and which judge holds his claim upon us until the "last farthing is paid; that man must for himself alone, and suffer the consequences of all wrong doings, which is the incentive or motive power of all human progress, device out rewards and punishments in accordance with the deeds done in the body."

The speaker further proved his position by showing that we never act until we are acted upon and never without motives, which motives are produced for us by a combination of circumstances, a focalization of forces, thus creating the motive over which we have no control.

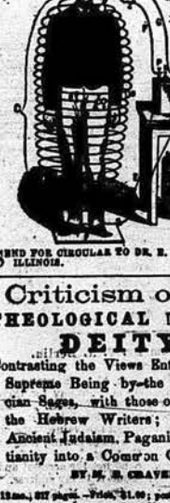
The doctor is a forcible and comprehensive speaker and we hope that he will be called on many times to speak on this subject. We have a band of active workers here, and the unbelievers are rapidly becoming interested, and begin silently to investigate the glorious Harmonial Philosophy. We are further happy to announce that E. V. Wilson will be with us the first week in August. We expect a good time, people are begining to inquire "what shall we do to be saved."

Lowell, Ind., June 29th, 1871.

Letter from J oseph Baker.

BRO. JONES:—Allow me through your journal to speak a few words to its numerous readers. I have been paying a visit to an old acquaintance well known to most of the liberal minds of the West, Mrs. Dr. Stillman Severance. I find her very pleasantly situated, and she gave me good cause while there. I wish to say to the sick every where, that Dr. Severance is a woman of thorough medical education, possessing fine clairvoyant and magnetic powers. Her practice is Hygienic and Magnetic, and I would recommend her to those needing treatment or advice, as one who understands her business and will do all she advertises. Those who have listened to her logical, deep and impressive lectures, know of her depth of thought and strength of purpose. She is a woman in advance of the age, and hence by many is been misunderstood in the past, but is fast receiving from the most advanced minds the appreciation of merit she so richly deserves. Keep her in the field and busy with preaching and practicing, for she can do both. I also had an opportunity of testing Bro Severance's powers, as a delineator of character, a real soul-reader, and have never met his superior, and would say to those who are skeptical and wish to have facts, as well as those who are posted that wish advice for themselves or friends, to where can you receive the best of compensation for the money invested. Together they are doing a good work which will last and be lovingly remembered, when those who have purse called them have been laid to rest. I am now in the Soldiers' Home, with no congenial companions but my angel visitants, with my soul looking for active work in the good cause, but my flesh refuses to do service. How my weary soul longs for home and friends, but cannot for reasons best to remain there. I have been helped by some of the good friends, for which I am exceedingly thankful. I shall go South to say soon as upon as the cool weather comes as I can get enough means to get there. I cannot beg. I had rather lie here with no companionship but coarse Germans—waiting for what? I should like to be able to have the companionship of my wife while I sojourn on this side the mystic river, but will not complain. Any friend who may wish to address me can do so at Janesville, as my wife is still there. I am unable from paralysis to write myself, but employ an amanuensis.

Milwaukee, June 29th, 1871.



Letter from J Straight.

BROTHER JONES.—I observe in some of the late Nos. of the JOURNAL some remarks in relation to "Good for Spiritualism." How every man who was individual knows that among mankind, no two can be found, who look so near alike, but that they can be distinguished one from the other; and the phrenologist knows that they are so different in the mental as in the physical. Indeed one need not be a phrenologist to be aware of this fact, for any one of good, sound, reasoning faculties, and fair powers of observation, knows it.

Now what would be thought of a tailor who should make garments for the mass of mankind, of the same size and pattern, and of the same kind of cloth for large and small, old and young? Still, I think he would be quite as reasonable as he who would get up a creed for all. To be a Spiritualist one has to be possessed of moral courage sufficient to think and act for himself, and as Brother Dowd says, "Paddle his own canoe." True, it may be less fatiguing to take passage on board the steamer public opinion, and pay your fare, and be landed, you know not where, than to "Paddle your own canoe" against the current; but the latter gives the greater freedom of action, and if one is on the wrong course, he can turn about without asking the captain and crew.

Hastings, Minn.

The Great
MAGNETIC CURE.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR TO DR. E. SMITH, NORMAL, ILLINOIS.

Criticism on the
THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY,
Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.
BY H. B. CRAVEN.
12mo., 227 pages. Price, $1.50; postage, 16 cents.
, For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Jesus of Nazareth
THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,
BY C. L. JAMES.
An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce law. Price, $1.50; for sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo. Post paid for 25 cents.

REPLY OF WASH. A. DARRAH, ESQ., PRESIDENT of the Pa. Association of Democratic Editors, to Hon. Thomas H. Dodd, L.L.D. 12mo.; postage, 2 cents. For sale at the office of this paper.

New Books.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.
WITH
Criticisms on its Opposers,
AND A REVIEW OF HUMBUGS AND HUMBUGGERS, WITH PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXPERIMENTS IN THE SCIENCE—FULL DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT AS A REMEDY IN DISEASE—HOW TO AVOID ALL DANGER.
THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;
How to develop a good Clairvoyant
THE PHILOSOPHY OF
SEEING WITHOUT EYES.
THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND, BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.
BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D.,
LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.
Price $1.25. Postage 19 cents. The Trade supplied. Address S. S. Jones, Chicago, Ill.

Jesus of Nazareth
ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.
A MANUAL OF
SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY
By Hudson Tuttle.
WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. PRICE $2.00; Postage 24c.
This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.
Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.
While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to new hopes and aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.
, Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Given Through Alexander Smyth.

Exeter Hall!
Exeter Hall!
HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL
The following are extracts from a few of the notices of Exeter Hall, the Theological Romance:—
"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—[Public Opinion, London, England.
"It is indeed a wonderful book."—[New York Mail.
"We commend it to the widest, popular approval."—[Banner of Light, Boston.
"We have no hesitation in declaring this a great work."—[Universe, New York.
"The book is well and powerfully written. * * * The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason.'"—[Liberal, Chicago.
"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—[Democrat's Magazine, New York.
"Convincingly illustrative of the errors of Theology."—[Investigator, Boston.
"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—[Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.
Price, 60 cents. Postage, 4 cents.
For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

BY PAUL AND JUDAS.
MRS. MARIA M. KING'S WORKS.
THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURE, as discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe; The Solar System—Laws and Methods of its Development; Earth—History of its Development; Exposition of the Spiritual Universe. Price reduced to $1.75; postage, 24 cents.
REAL LIFE IN THE SPIRIT LAND. Being Life Experiences, Scenes, Incidents, and Conditions, illustrative of Spirit Life and the Principles of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, $1.50; postage, 24 cents.
SOCIAL EVILS: Their Causes and Cure,—Being a Brief Discussion of the Social Status, with reference to Methods of Reform. Price, 25 cents; postage free.
THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY VS. DIABOLISM. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.
WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM? and SHALL SPIRITUALISTS HAVE A CREED? In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.
GOD THE FATHER and MAN THE IMAGE OF GOD. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.
, For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

BUY IT. READ IT.
The Bible in India.
HINDOO ORIGIN OF
Hebrew and Christian Revelation.
TRANSLATED FROM
"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."
BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.
EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:
"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the infancy of regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the venerable soil of India, was transmuted and stifled by the altar that substituted for intellectual life a soul-brute existence of dreaming impotence.....
India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother is sending forth her children even to the utmost east has, in unfailing testimony of our origin, bequeathed as the legacy of her language, her idea, her morals, her literature, and her religion.....
To religious despotism, imposing, speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....
.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I yet shrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."
, Price $2.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

For Sale at this Office. Price $1.50.
Spiritoscope Pocket-pieces and Magnetic Founders. For sale at this office.

MEDIUMS' DIRECTORY.

The Religio-Philosophical Journal being an especial friend to all true mediums will hereafter publish a complete Directory giving the place of all professional mediums, &c. We advise none on the subject. We will afford better facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time, that we may keep their place of residence correctly registered.

NB. It is a lamentable fact that some mediums so far forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not unfrequently even of those who are far their superiors. The names of such persons will be erased from this Roster as soon as we have evidence conclusive of their indulging in such unkindness.

It should be borne in mind that visiting mediums carry contagious influences—so to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control the medium visited: be sure that the medium you see is both a certain person, another better or worse—all having their friends, and justly so, too, and all equally honest and useful in their sphere.

CHICAGO.

Banks children, 227 S. Morgan St. ‡
Mrs. Ellen Brown, 126 W. Jackson St.
Dr. W. Cleveland ——Wabash Avenue
Mrs. A. Coleman, 74 W. ——— st. *
Mrs. De Wolf, 165 West Madison St. ‡
Dr. S. Dwyer, 253 West Madison st. Guinon
Dr. L. P. Griggs, 100 W. Randolph street, cor. Peoria. *
Mrs. Ingram, 48 Portion St and 39 Honore Block ‡
Mrs. M. Jenks, 176 W. Van Buren street. *
Mrs. J. Kelly, 48 Randolph St, Le Tourneau
Dr. S. L. M. Fields and Wife, 248 W. Madison St.*‡
Mrs. C. Moody, 106 12th street. * ‡
Mrs. A. Mitchell, 1 Wabash Avenue.* ‡
Madame Ritter, 201 S. Clark St. ‡
Mrs. M. Smith, 141 c. Union St*
Dr. Spencer, 51 Third Avenue.
Dr. M. L. Sherman and Wife, 306 South Clark St.*‡
Dr Samuel Underhill, 189 S Clark street.*
Mrs. S. T. Viner, 681 Wabash Avenue. ‡
Dr. J. Wilbur, 160 W. Randolph st *
A. D. Willis, Jr. Clark & Madison st. ‡
Mrs. M. S Weeks, Room 30 Larmon Block, Chicago.

BOSTON.

Dr. H. B. Storer, ††
Mrs. Julia A. Friend, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. S. J. Hackaday, 283 Tremont St.
Dr. Main, 236 Harrison Ave.*
Mrs. A. C. Latham, 202 Washington St.
Professor Mahan, 8 Beaver Place.
Mrs. L. W. Leach, 97 Rodney St.*‡
Mrs. Marshall, 30 Edinboro St.
W. H. Mann, 149 court—12 h to 2‡
Mattie E. Sawyer, 24 Broadfields St.
Mrs. B. Sprague, 1015 Parrish St.
Mrs. B. Morrell, 1346 E. Haven St.
Mrs. Taylor, 541 Washington St.
DeWitt C. Hough, 813 Race st ‡
Mrs. Stoddard, 813 Race St.

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Danford, 64 Washington Ave.†
Miss Blanch Foley 634 Third Ave.
Mrs. H. Seymour, 149 Bleeker St.
Mrs. A. Smith, 307 E. 14th St.
J. William Van Namee, 439 Fourth Ave.*††

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Mrs. Helen Grover.
Mrs. M. S. Gotchall, 413 N. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lewis, Bloomington, Ill.‡

SAVANNE CITY, N. J.

Mrs. B. Wallis.

GREEN GARDEN ILL

Mrs. Caldin ††

GENESEE, WIS.

Mrs. E. W. Salom. * ‡
Mrs. E. A. Leggo.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

A. B. Severance and Mrs. J. H. Severance, M. D. 49 Milwaukee street Milwaukee, Wis. ††
W. W. Herring, 128 Spring street, Milwaukee, Wis.*

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, Box 1321, Rockford, Ill. *
Mrs. M. J. Colson S. Rockford, Ill. ‡

RICHMOND IND,

Francis S. Haswell, 96 N. Marion street.
Dr. Samuel Maxwell, 72 S. 6th street.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Wm. H. Hatch, 138 Kearney St.

ST. CHARLES, ILL.

Mrs. Leonard Hoffman.* ‡
D. P. Rayner, M. D.*

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Mrs. Mary E. Beech.

WHITEWATER, WIS.

Mrs. A. B. Severance ††

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Orrin Abbott, Minneapolis, Minnesota. *
Little Annie. Only 8 of Iowa. ‡
Jonathan Allen, Gaines, Ill.
D. Gano Atwood, Lake Mills, Wis.
Miss M. A. Phelps Dayton, Ohio. *
D. Atkinson, Marietta, Ohio ‡
Mrs. Jane Bowers, Kansas City, Mo. *
Mrs. E. A. Blair 106 Hide st., Salem, Mass. ‡
Dr. H. Butler, Wellsboro, Tioga Co., Pa.*
H. E. Cousins, 38 Orange st., Newark, N. J.*
Mrs. J. F. Currier, Cincinnati, Ohio.*
Mrs. J. G. Grahs, 24 Hoffman Block, Cleveland, Ohio.
George M. Dunton, Algona, Iowa. ‡
J. W. Fitz, Alden, Ill. ‡
Mrs. E. K. Everest, Boris Gold, Mo. ‡
David S. Fuller, Davenport, Iowa. *‡
Alonzo Hall, Schenectady N. Y. *
J. S. Fayette, Gibson, N. Y. ‡
Dr. D. W. French, 116 High st, Columbus, Ohio *
Mrs. W. L. Gay, Canastota, New York. *
Dr. J. M. Holland, 208 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs Iowa. *
Judge D.L. Roy, Mobile, Alabama.
U. S. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
Dr. R. Heed, 83 Whitehall st., Atlanta, Ga.*
Mrs. Hyatt Ferris, Traveling. †
Minnie Jeffries, Traveling. †
Dr. P. T. Johnson, Ypsilanti, Mich. *
Mrs. C. Lathrop, 97 East Harrison street. *
Mrs. A. Wm. C. Lawson, Tuscaloosa, Ala. ‡
Mrs. E. E. Moore, Care W. Chase & Co., 601 North 5th street, St. Louis, Mo. *
J. H. Nolan, Waterville, N. Y. ‡
Mrs. L. Nichols, Newburg, Md.*
Mr. John D. Odell, Waterloo, N. Y. *
Dr. Abbe L. Ormsbee New Boston, Ill. *‡
Mrs. Mary Reed, 48 Bedford St. *
Mrs. M. E. Rhodes, Riverside, Ind.
H. B. Star, Port Huron, Mich. ‡
Isaac Sackett Sloan, Covington, Ind.‡
Mrs. A. C. Smith, Aurora, Ill. ‡
Mrs. A. Swift, Aurora, Ill. * ‡
Mrs. P. W. Stephens, east side of 4th street, between I & J. Sacramento
H. H. Sherman, Gahanna, Ohio. ‡
Annie O. Torrey, Hyattsville, Md. ‡
A. Thomas Taylor, Rose Station, Ill. ‡
Warren Wright, Waterloo, Seneca Co., N. Y. *
Mrs. Fanny Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas. ‡

* Healer.
† Spirit Artist.
‡ Psychometrist.
§ Examines and Tests.
‖ Writes and Answering Sealed Letters.
¶ Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

Jesus of Nazareth
MOSES HULL'S WORKS.
THE QUESTION SETTLED, a Careful Comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. Price, $1.50; postage 16 cents.
SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED. This sharp and brilliant little book, by one of our ablest writers and most efficient speakers should be read by all. Price, 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.
THE SUPREMACY OF REASON. This little work is a masterly arrangement on the Supremacy of Reason. The author handles sectarianism as opposed to reason, without gloves. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.
THAT TERRIBLE QUESTION.—Being an Essay on Love and Matrimony. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.
THE WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING; or, God in the Constitution. An incisive interpretation of the symbols of the Book of Revelation, and the Apocalypse, together with an argument against recognizing God, Christianity, and the Sabbath in our National Charter. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale, wholesale, and retail, at the office of this paper.
, For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

JESUS OF NAZARETH.

JESUS
Health by Good Living.
BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,
Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."
THIS book is to show how high health can be maintained at common diseases cured by "good living," which means eating with a relish the best food, prepared in the best manner.
The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game, fruits, and the grains which make bread.
The best cookery preserves the natural tastes and juices.
As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get this great blessing without money and without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down town:" What shall a man do? What shall fat men eat? How to get fat: Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Spring diseases: Children's eating: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' eating: Cold feet and headache: Biliousness: A hair liver: Mischievous tonics: The out-door air: Why are we dispeptic? Dissipation after eating: Cole slaw: Certain cure of neuralgia: Nervous debility: Air and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

It tells

How to cure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure biliousness: How to cure nervousness: How to cure exhaustion: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean, How to get good sleep: How to maintain high health, How to avoid disease: And all these without medicine: without money; without price.

It tells about

Luncheons and how to take them: Late dinners and how to take them: How drunkards are made at eating-houses: How girls are spoiled at boarding-schools: How health is lost: How home love is lost: How love-reading ruins them: How love of dress is fanatical: How young men are ruined about: How bad matches are made: How good wives are made at home: How home influences purify.
Price, $1.50 Postage 16 cents For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

OF

DR. E. P. MILLER'S WORKS.
The Cause of Exhausted Vitality, or Abuses of the Sexual Function. Cloth $1,00, Postage, 12cts.
Every Young Man and every Young Woman, every Married Man and every Married Woman, Should read it.
A vast amount of suffering, as well as physical, mental and moral ruin would be prevented, if all were acquainted with the facts contained in this work and followed its excellent advice.
Vital Force, How wasted and How Preserved. Cloth $1,00, Postage 12cts; Paper Cover, 50cts, Postage, 4cts.
Mrs. Francis Dana Gage says; "I earnestly wish that it could be read by every mother in the country."
It is an invaluable work and should have a place in every family library.
How to Bathe, a Family Guide for the Use of Water in Preserving Health and Treating Disease.
Paper Cover, Price 40cts. Postage, 4cts
Important Truths, By Mrs. E. P. Miller, M. D.
Price, 20cts, Postage, 2cts.
This little work is written in a style adapted to children's Minds, and no parent need fear to place it in their children's hands as an opening to conversation and advice on points upon which their future health, happiness, and even life, largely depend.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NAZARETH.
SECOND EDITION.
A WORK OF GREAT RESEARCH.
ONE RELIGION: MANY CREEDS.
BY ROSS WINANS.
"We object to what the Church demands, an unbounded and unjustifiable confidence in the infallibility of the writings of Moses and the prophets, and the writings of the Apostles. We dissent from a sentimental ail-consent to an impossibility composed of God and man. We protest to that Christian theology, or we have it, as taught by God himself, nor by Christ himself, nor is it consistent with established facts, nor is it comprehensible by our reason. We would show you that Christianity as it is existing as it is better than other systems taught in other than Christian countries, and in some respects not so good.
The Historic part of the Bible, and in relation to the creation of the world, has its counterpart also to the several systems of theology, briefly mentioned. They all had their cosmologies based on equally good authority and equally wide of the truth, as that recorded in the Bible. The time and manner of the creation, no man has ever known, or ever will know, in this life; nor is such knowledge of importance in preparing us for the life to come."—EXTRACT from PREFACE.
This book is a large 12 mo. of nearly 400 pages, printed on fine, heavy tint-ed paper, and is sold at much less than the actual cost. Price, $1.50; postage, 32 cents.
, For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

The Most Wonderful Book
THE CAREER
OF THE
CHRIST-IDEA IN HISTORY.
A COMPANION VOLUME TO
"THE CAREER OF THE GOD-IDEA."
BY HUDSON TUTTLE.
CONTENTS.
I Introductory; II Career of the Christ-idea in Hindostan and among other Races: III Prophecies of the Advent of Jesus; IV Conception and Genealogy; V Birth of Jesus; VI John the Baptist—his relation to Jesus: VII Sermon on the Mount; VIII Miracles; IX sending forth the Apostles; X The fatal journey; XI Burial and Resurrection; XII The Descent into Hell XIII The Gospels; XIV Resume of the Life and Character of Jesus; XV Causes of the Extension of Christianity; XVI The ultimate of the Christ-Idea.
Price $1.25. Postage 16 cents.
The demand for these new works of Hudson Tuttle both in this country and Europe, is unprecedented.
For sale at the Religio-Philosophical Journal office.

EVER PUBLISHED,
THE Science of Evil;
OR
FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.
BY JOEL MOODY.
THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the question, and unveils the mystery of Evil, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be the LIVER WHICH MOVES THE SMALL AND INTELLIGENT WORLD.
The book is a large 12 mo., of 288 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.25; postage, 20 cents.
, For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. S. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
J. R. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE
Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1.—3 mo.
☞Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial
TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Orders, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN CENTS, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names entered on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the ensuing year, with or without further reminder from this office

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office—whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTION.

Upon the margin of each paper upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 10th, 1870, it will be marked, "Smith J.—10 Dec.—0." The 0 means zero. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—10 Dec.—0, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as '70 for 1870, or '69 for 1869.

☞Those sending money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, JULY 29, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER XLIX.

CAN GOD POSSESS AN ATTRIBUTE COMMON TO HUMANITY, IN AN INFINITE DEGREE?

In ancient tradition, as recorded in the Bible, it is stated that Adam and other noted Bible characters conversed with God. Mohammed, also, was highly favored in being allowed to hold converse with the Divine Architect of the Universe! With certain traditional characters—existing, however, only in the imagination—it was an easy matter to converse with God, and receive directions in regard to the duties of life from his own lips. Times, however, have changed. No one is so foolish to-day, as to suppose that God is endowed with vocal organs, or the power to transmit his thoughts to mortals, through the instrumentality of his voice. In ancient times, when the people were securely bound by the chains of ignorance and superstition, it was an easy matter to inculcate the idea, and find believers, too, that God could communicate to man by words and signs. Gradually, this belief vanished from the minds of the people, and they came to the conclusion that it is utterly impossible for him to hold communion with his children in the manner specified. This progress was of exceedingly slow growth and development, and those who denied the possibility of God talking as man does, were considered heretical, blasphemous, and their opposers were ready to cry, "Crucify them! crucify them!" It is difficult for many, to-day, to relinquish a belief in the narration of Moses, as contained in Genesis, so deeply has it become imbedded within their nature. While many have relinquished the belief that Moses was correct in his statement, they would still consider that person a blasphemer who would state that God can not talk, can not think, see, hear, or feel! The moment you apply one human characteristic to a God, you must apply all. Man can think, conceive, execute his purposes, and talk! You say God can think, conceive, execute his purposes, but he can not talk! Can you judge God from a human stand-point? Yes, says the Orthodox; Yes, says the logician; Yes, echoes from a thousand voices,—"Judge God from a human stand-point!"

1. He can think,
2. Can conceive,
3. Can execute his purposes,
4. But can not talk, or converse with mortals.

How different from man:

1. He can think,
2. Can conceive,
3. Can execute his purpose,
4. Can talk.

All humanity are willing to acknowledge that it is impossible for God to express himself through the voice. Would it not be a grand idea of the Infinite, to lecture to his children; to materialize organs, and go forth, and with Nature for his tabernacle, proclaim his grand truths? But he can not talk! He needs garrulous old ministers to define his true nature, and speak for him! When he sees the contention that exists, hears the voice of the ministerial rabble, and feels the effects of false teachings, we wonder if he do n't think that it would be well for him to define his true position, and relieve the world of darkness, superstition, and ignorance. A God that can think, conceive, and execute his purposes, and can not talk, is not very useful in this garrulous age of the world! Then if we judge a God at all, it must be from a human stand point. You can not conceive of attributes unless they resemble human kind. But can the attributes of God bear any comparison with those of humanity? Of course not! Why? Can you compare finite power with all power? Let us see:

1. All power is an attribute of God,
2. Finite power is an attribute of man.

Logician, see the two placed side by side! Puny man, can you not see the point? Really, it is so plain, that we hardly dare attempt to explain. God has ALL POWER, then where is the finite power of man? We have assigned to God all the power that exists, then we ask the thinker, how any can be left to finite man? The very fact that man possesses finite power, at that moment destroys an All Powerful God. Can you, then, apply any attribute to God that man possesses? We say emphatically, No! To apply one attribute of man to God, would necessitate applying all! Poor Ministers, to how little purpose you think! They know that man possesses certain attributes, and they apply them to God, and they will wisely tell you that he possesses all-power, omniscience, is exceedingly merciful and loving. Every attribute they apply to him in an infinite degree, is possessed by man in a finite degree. Does not the finite attribute destroy the infinite attribute? Can God possess all the power there is, when you possess the least grain of power? No! Have you all the specie in the world while I have a silver half-dollar concealed in my pocket? Can God possess all power, and you possess finite power at the same time, and you be independent of him? Think to some purpose! When you reason, try to destroy or refute your deductions! The world would be wiser and better to-day, if humanity had a right conception of what God is.

But here is the way God is formed:

1st.—Enlarge man's power until it becomes infinite.

2d.—Increase his wisdom until it becomes omniscient.

3d.—Increase his dimensions until they become omnipresent.

But tell us, pray, what right has any one to say God can think? You think, and straightway you entertain the idea that God can do the same thing. If God possesses one attribute of man, why not all? Where do you propose to stop in the formation of your God? You judge him from your own make up—from your own standpoint. You have no more right to consider God infinitely good than you have infinitely bad. One conclusion is as correct as the other. To find God, then, we must go outside of human attributes, for no two are alike in nature. The Hindoo says it is good to throw the child in the Ganges, or crush the aged under the wheels of the Juggernaut. The Indian says it is good to burn or scalp his prisoner. The chaplains of the Union army said that the war that was waged against the South was good, while those in the South declared that it was good to defend themselves from such an attack. Yet God is Infinite Good! You cannot form an idea of him by taking human attributes as a standpoint. If God has the attributes of a man, like what man would he use them? Mankind have power,—ah, how they use it! like Booth and Brutus; like the midnight assassin; like the thief that prowls around at night; like the incendiary who burns the beautiful edifice. This philosopher, this profound minister of the gospel would tell you God only used his power for good! How does he know? Power is used for evil among human kind more than it is for good, it is often said. To assign God power, who could tell how he would use it? He made man, it is said, and see how he uses his power! War, murder, robbery, debauchery, oppression,—all that is mean, dirty, contemptible, low, vile, and degrading, is consummated with power; it is a human attribute. Shall we assign an attribute to God that is used for such vile purposes? But God, you say, will only use it for good purposes. Did he when he formed Adam? Did he when he made Nero, Brutus, Booth, Caligula, Haynau? Ah,—God use his power for good purposes, and yet man, in many instances, a monster?

Reason to some purpose. Don't malign God by assigning to him any of the attributes of man. When you stand before an audience and define God, do so clearly, concisely, and understandingly. The world is tired of generalization. It has heard of God, of Infinite God, of Father God and Mother Nature, and now it desires something practical. A few general terms, based on nothing, will not suit mankind.

If you say that through the instrumentality of God man was created, you charge God with all the evil that exists. He could not give a nature to his children that was foreign to himself.

"Stop!" says the caviler; "you are blaspheming. You say that God cannot see, cannot hear, cannot think?"

We said you cannot apply the attributes that man possesses to God, and then declare in the next breath that he is infinite. Shall we tell you why? Columbus could stand an egg on its end, although those present had tried in vain to do it, and you wish us to demonstrate that which is yet more simple—that an Infinite God cannot possess any of the attributes of man in infinite degree. You say he can. The declaration from a million voices says he can. Echo from a thousand hills says, yes. We say, he can not. Our voice is feeble; our arm weak; our influence as we write is confined within a little room,—still we feel moved to say, he can not!

Do we feel alarmed in beating back the tide that seems to rise against us? Do we tremble as we hear sounding on the breeze the sentence "You are landing us on the cold, desolate, bleak, dark, damning shores of Atheism,—depriving us of a God,—ruining the hopes of humanity?" Do we tremble as we see the fear excited on all sides at the Atheistical tendency of this vein of thought? Child of earth, listen! To-day we sense the presence of a master mind. The world to-day breathes freer because he has spoken. His silent voice has been heard all through the United States, the Canadas, and in Europe. They have sent their messages of congratulation to him who has so boldly inaugurated this Search; who fearlessly has allowed one long in spirit-life, to use his brain, and stir the world with thought as it has never been stirred before. Where will he lead you? Fear not the result. You can not see the shore you—all around is one vast expanse, and you feel lost! and shall we cry, "Save us, Master, or we perish?"

Ah, somewhere is a haven of rest, where our ship can enter and furl its sails—rest its anchor and repose forever; and we feel assured that its freight has redeemed a world!

The light is breaking, breaking! The lightnings have flashed, the thunders roared, the elements seemed in terrible commotion,—and we have passed through all the disturbances of nature and life, and we will cast anchor where the sky is clear, the breezes fragrant, and all things bear upon them the smile of love. We shall land on no "bleak shores of Atheism," where the desert air stifles the aspirations of the soul.

But can God possess any attributes that belong to man? Wait and see.

[To be continued.]

Is it so?

We are pained to hear it reported that the new and famous physical medium, Harry Bastian, while in Boston, was caught assisting the performance, if not, in fact, making all the manifestations himself, that have heretofore, in his presence, been attributed to spirit agency. Is it so?—American Spiritualist.

"Reported!" Well, that is enough to set something afloat to the world to injure the character or reputation of a person! Madame Report is ever on the alert, putting her knows into everybody's business, and trying to introduce black spots into every person's character. She is as omnipresent as an orthodox God, and constantly imitating him in sending forth lying spirits, that some King Ahab may be destroyed.

There is in every community some one ready to start the cry, "Crucify him! crucify him! Had Madame Report been allowed to control the JOURNAL, not a physical medium in the field would have been allowed to be mentioned in our columns.

Many of the Spiritual speakers have each singled out a physical medium, which he or she believes to be a vile impostor, and have flooded the country with abuse against them. A prominent Spiritual lecturer singled out Mrs. Ferris, who is holding seances with great success, in Terre Haute, Ind., and has denounced her in bitter terms as an impostor. Another lecturer, a lady, selected Laura V. Ellis, and sent forth her accusations against her wherever a Spiritual paper would publish them. Laura is now holding seances, and wherever she goes, Spiritualists are loud in her praise. Moses Hull was exceedingly bitter against Mrs. Mollere, and regarded her as an arrant humbug, freely expressing his opinion on that subject in public. But fearing he might be mistaken, he nobly investigated her case more fully, and, like a true man, admitted his error, and then extolled her mediumship to the skies. Those who have been equally as bitter against Mrs. Ferris, Laura V. Ellis, Harry Bastian, and others, have acted as improperly as Brother Hull did in so suddenly condemning Mrs. Mollere; but not like him, in this respect, they have taken no steps to convince themselves that they might be mistaken, but have flooded the country with their accusations against them. What unkindness!

All of our physical mediums are doing a grand good work. They are subject to influences not well understood, and Spiritualists should be slow in crying impostor. W. H. Church, a splendid medium, one of the best, if not the very best in the field, was several years ago holding seances in Kentucky. At one circle, parties came with the sole purpose of exposing him, and so positive were they that he was a humbug, that the spirits, in order to create excitement and discussion, entranced him, and when the lights were extinguished, unloosed him and compelled him to produce the manifestations! He was detected! What did this prove? Nothing. Those in attendance got what they went for. They went for deception, and it was meted out to them, and the agitation produced thereby did good. If a circle meets only for the purpose of witnessing deception, they are apt to get it. If they come together in the spirit of truth, they will never be deceived. Then, before accusing physical mediums of being impostors, study well the character of the circle, and you will generally find the origin of the imposition there if anywhere.

In regard to Harry Bastian, Laura V. Ellis, and Mrs. Ferris, we could produce a large volume of evidence, showing they are excellent mediums and are doing a good work. The Portland (Me.) Monitor alludes as follows to Harry:

"Not long ago, we spent a pleasant evening with our good friends, H. C. Clayton, Esq., and his amiable lady, at Chelsea, Mass. While there, we, with others, witnessed some singular manifestations in the presence of Mr. Bastian, a young man from the interior of New York, which may be of interest in these modern days, when our clergymen, admitting the reality of spirit intercourse, ascribe all the phenomena to evil spirits. The manifestations were similar to those occurring in the presence of the Davenport boys.

"Mr. B. was tied securely by a gentleman selected by the company; the light was extinguished, and in about a minute was relighted, when he was untied, and retied with a knot which none present could undo. His coat was taken off, while he was thus securely tied to the chair, and the coat of a gentleman in the company put on, under the ropes, quicker than we can tell it. Mr. Bastian then died, was lifted upon the table, when down again, iron rings were instantaneously placed upon his arms, etc; and all the while, after the lights had been extinguished, bells were rung and thrown about, and voices were heard speaking through the trumpets, which were sometimes on the table and sometimes on the floor. Once, coffee was placed on the medium's hands, kneed, and after a noisy demonstration, footsteps on the floor, and the movement of the guitar through the air, these were found still remaining unmoved. Still tied, he then took his mouth full of water, and while in this condition, four distinct voices spoke through the trumpets, talking familiarly with those present, and giving those present scientific explanations of the phenomena, played tunes on the harmonicon, which requires a mouth to accomplish, and one who said his name was Weber, conversed freely in the German with a German gentleman present, and

"George Fox, the leader, who claims to have been in spirit-life four hundred years, remarked that the time was coming when these things would be done in the light, and mortals should see and converse with their spirit friends face to face.

"We are informed that Mr. Bastian will visit Portland at no distant day and give our people an opportunity of witnessing these remarkable phenomena."

A New Role.

We are informed that his honor, Judge Goddard, the autocrat of the Superior Court, has announced his intention of presenting the Spiritualists of Portland to the Grand Jury for indictment. This is a brilliant idea, and the sooner he tries it, the sooner we shall learn the limits beyond which freedom of thought and opinion can not go. We recollect something about one George Jeffries, an English Judge of the seventeenth century, who transmitted to posterity a reputation for zeal that will never be forgotten. Has our friend any ambition in that direction?—Portland (Me.) Monitor.

If the honorable autocrat above-mentioned, presents the Spiritualists of Portland to the Grand Jury, he will do more to promote the cause of Spiritualism, and unite its adherents, than can be accomplished in any other way. But what will he present them for? Perhaps as witches! That idea amuses us. Supposing we could have the religious farce of Salem acted over again, with himself as Judge!—with him presiding, it would be an easy matter to convict the Spiritualists of Portland of the heinous offense of riding broomsticks and holding converse with the Devil! Perhaps he will have a few mediums cast in the deep water, and if they sink and drown, declare them innocent; but if they succeed in reaching terra firma, pronounce them guilty. We would like to know the character of this Judge. Is he a devoted Christian? To what church does he belong, and is he a lineal descendant of those who burned witches? The persecution of Spiritualists has been tried! Thus far those who would oppress us have been beaten at their own game. The vile orthodox physicians, animated with a desire to crush all healing mediums, attempted to pass a law in Wisconsin, to restrict them from practicing the healing art, under heavy penalties, but fortunately, they were badly defeated, and returned from the Legislature looking like whipped spaniels. The grand victory achieved by Spiritualists in in this contest, may be attributed to the bold stand taken by the JOURNAL, and the active exertions of Spiritualists, in flooding the country with the petitions we sent forth. If Judge Goddard will attempt to play the role of a Jeffreys, he will meet an opposition on the part of all reformers, that he little anticipates. Try it, Judge; present the Spiritualists of Maine to the Grand Jury.

Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson.

This lady will answer calls to lecture during September, October, and November, in the States of Illinois, Missouri, and Kansas. Those wishing her services, will apply immediately, and save her needless traveling expenses in making out her route. The following testimonials are from the Wheeling (Va.) papers. The Register says:

"The lecture on the "Origin of Man," delivered by Mrs. Wilcoxson at Hendrick's Hall, last evening, was well attended, and by our best and most intelligent citizens, who listened with great pleasure to the manner in which the eloquent lady handled the difficult subject she had chosen for a lecture. She is one of the most fluent and easiest lecturers we ever listened to, and seems to handle the most difficult theological problems with an ease many of our D.D.s might envy."

The Intelligencer speaks as follows:

"This lady lectured yesterday morning and evening, to large and deeply attentive audiences. Any one hearing her, can not avoid being convinced that she is sincere in what she says. Her quiet, dignified demeanor on the rostrum, her plain and precise language, uttered forcibly, and without rant, impresses her hearers favorably—confirming those in their opinions who already sympathize with her in belief, and inducing those who have heretofore given no attention to the subjects upon which she lectures, to bestow on them more than a passing thought.

"The Hall was well filled again on Tuesday evening, to hear Mrs. Wilcoxson. Her subject, selected by a gentleman from the audience, was the 'Fall of Man, and the Vicarious Atonement of Christ.' These two propositions are fundamental, and of the gravest import. Notwithstanding the impromptu character of the subject, she held her audience for a full hour, spellbound, with a comprehensive and eloquent discussion of her theme. Without indorsing the theology of the lady, we are compelled to admit that she exhibits great versatility of capacity, and is enlisting a deep interest."

Mrs. Wilcoxson will speak in Bloomington, Ill., on Sunday, August 20th, morning and evening. Those desiring her services, can address her in care of this office.

Letter from Dr. T. N. Berlin.

S. S. JONES—Dear Sir: About a year ago I sent you the sum of fifty cents to pay for three month's subscription for the JOURNAL, for my father. Now it appears he has taken it ever since, but has not sent you the value. My father's name and address is Jesse Berlin, Wilkins Postoffice, Alleghany Co., Pa.

My father is dead. Send me the account and I will cheerfully pay. Send it to my address.

DR. T. N. BERLIN.

Farmington, Minn.

REMARKS.—Thank you, dear brother. Your example is worthy of imitation. It is in bold contrast with some other cases that have come within our observation. We could mention cases where the family of a deceased Spiritualist parent have unlawfully ignored an honest indebtedness for the JOURNAL, notwithstanding they were heirs to the estate of the deceased, of several thousand dollars. Their religion forbids them to give countenance to Spiritualism by paying such indebtedness.

Investigation of Spiritualism.

The phenomena produced by Home, the American Spiritualistic medium, in London, are being made the subject of a careful examination by Prof. Crookes, the eminent chemist; Dr. Huggins, the equally eminent astronomer, and Mr. Sergeant Cox, of the English bar. The results of the yet incomplete examinations, are recorded in the London Scientific Journal. The Investigators are satisfied of the immense scientific importance of the subject. Professor Crookes and Sergeant Cox both seem to be convinced of the existence of a nerve atmosphere, of various intensity, enveloping the human structure. Dr. Huggins has not yet been able to satisfy his mind, and wants to make further experiments.—Exchange.

It is well. Several years since, at a National Convention of the savans of America, the venerable Professor Hare introduced the subject, with a recommendation for a careful investigation by that body, into its claims; he at the same time advising the assembly, that he, while attempting to show its fallacy by scientific research, had become convinced of its truth.

Although Prof. Hare stood at the head of the scientists of America, his proposition was treated with ridicule, and himself, for the first time, with contempt. So potent were the prejudices of acknowledged scientific men ten years ago, that the Spiritual Phenomena and Philosophy could not get a respectful hearing, when asked for by one of the leading scientists of America. The world moves!

"The Witches."

BROTHER JONES:—I write, thinking you or your numerous readers would like to hear something more in regard to the Franklin County witchcraft cases—not being an eye-witness, I can only give you hearsay evidence. I am informed that these remarkable girls have not had any of those periodical "spells" or partial entrancements that they were wont to have awhile back, and that these influences (whatever they are) have nearly or altogether left them, and they are now pursuing their natural avocations, unmolested by what has been termed supernatural influences. The probabilities are, that if these girls could have had proper surroundings, they would, ere this, have become well developed, useful mediums. A correspondent of the Du Quoin Tribune more than intimates that the whole affair was the result of rascally Spiritualism,—a copy of which I forwarded you, over the signature of "Broad Gauge." I now inclose an appropriate and pertinent reply from a correspondent in the Du Quoin Republican of yesterday, over the signature of "Spiritualist."

DANIEL WHITE.

Du Quoin, Ill., July 15, 1871.

Basket Picnic.

A cordial invitation is given to all the lovers of free speech, free platform, and equal rights, to attend a basket picnic, to be held in Mr. D. M. Larkin's Grove, near his residence, situated three miles West from the city of Madison, on the old Territorial Road, on the 23rd of July, 1871. Exercises to open at 10 o'clock, A. M. Mr. Larkin has very kindly offered the use of his premises gratuitously for the occasion.

A very fine gathering of free thinkers was held at the same place, the 25th of June past. Exercises opened at 1: 30, A. M., by prayer from Mrs. Ford, of Dayton, Wis., followed by Mr. C. N. Haskins, of Mazomania, who made some very practical and telling hits. A variety of other speakers complimented the occasion. It is hoped the same and others will be present at the following meeting.

Jesus of Nazareth,

By Paul and Judas, through Alexander Smyth, Medium, has been in such high demand of late, that the second edition was entirely exhausted before we had the third edition ready to supply the demands.

To those whose orders remain unfilled, we can say, that but a few days more will elapse before their books will come to hand.

While speaking of this wonderful book, it may not be amiss to say that the best minds of the present age are seeking for and giving it a careful perusal.

Fraternal Call.

Bro. Cephas B. Lynn, from Boston, who has been traveling in the West during the past year in the interest of our worthy cotemporary, the Banner of Light, gave us a fraternal call last week, while en route for Louisville. He has an engagement to speak in Decatur, Illinois, on the first Sunday in August.

THOSE WHO WISH to have this paper discontinued when the time is up to which it is paid for, should notify us of that wish two weeks before such time expires, as it takes that time to get it out of the mailing machine. When an order to discontinue is given by those in arrears, remittances should be made to square up in full, including the two weeks which the paper will be mailed the subscriber after such notice is given.

BROTHER J. P. H. has the thanks of the beneficiaries of the Widows' and Orphans' Fund for a donation of thirty cents. Every little helps to send the JOURNAL to poor women and children.

Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote.

The most certain and perfectly harmless antidote for the poisonous effects, and remedy for the tobacco appetite, is known by the above name.

It is compounded by Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated medium of Chicago, while entranced by a celebrated chemist, long in spirit life. This antidote is warranted to break the habit of using tobacco by the invetorate lover of the weed, when the directions (on each box) are followed.

Agents for selling the same throughout the country are wanted. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office. Price $2.00 per box—sent by mail free of postage, on receipt of the money.

Personal and Local.

—Brother Corwin, of Five Corners, N. Y., writes: "We have some excitement and a good deal of interest in Spiritualism in these parts now-a-days. I lectured a week ago yesterday by invitation, at the house of Albert Hoon, Lansingville, and expect to do so again next Sunday. We have manifestations of a convincing character in several families, concerning which, I want to write you, and will try to, before long."

We would like very much to hear from our good brother, for we are personally acquainted with him, and know he is doing a good work for the cause of Spiritualism.—[ED. JOURNAL.

—Sister Mary A. Chute informs us that Mrs. Anna Middlebrook is to speak at the next grove meeting at Phoenix the 30th of July.

—Samuel Clegg, of Dodgeville, Iowa, has a son who sees and describes spirits, and who is controlled by one who proposes to explain the ancient hieroglyphics on the pyramids of Egypt.

—Mrs. F. W. Calkins is still doing a good work in healing and giving tests at Peotone, Ill.

—J. W. Hall sends $3 for renewal, but no post office nor state. What shall we do?

—S. B. Hough, writing from Leland, Ill., says: "In all, we have had some six or seven lectures by disciples of the new dispensation. Dr. Robert Greer, magnetic healer, has also been here on two occasions, sowing the seeds of free thought, as well as good health. He has been successful, not only in healing the sick, but in arousing the jealousy of established physicians. He makes us another visit the 5th of the present month, and will remain a week or more. I think that if we could have lectures during his stay, that they would be well sustained."

—Jennie Ferris, an excellent medium for physical manifestations, is holding seances in Terre Haute, Ind. She is delighting the good people there.

—Dr. Wm. B. Fahnestock comes out with the following business card: "I will teach the statuvolic or somnambulic art to those who desire to teach it to others, or will teach it in schools, lyceums, or medical institutions, etc. Dental or surgical operations cause no pain to persons who are in this state, and when an injury has been sustained, they can keep the part in an insensible condition until restoration has taken place. Even Consumption has been cured in this way. When in this condition, the faculties are all clear-minded; and as suffering, mentally, as well as bodily, can be relieved by an act of their own will—all should embrace a knowledge of this art, which is the only scientific, inexpensive and common sense method of eradicating the ignorance as well as the ills that the mind and body of man have been so long subjected to. Ladies taught the statuvolic art, in which they can cure themselves of all nervous, inflammatory or painful diseases, as well as to pass through labor, surgical operations, etc., without pain.

—W. M. McElvain, writing from Grant's Hill, Mo., says that the citizens there would like to have a good lecturer and test medium visit them.

—We have received a paper published at Victoria, Vancouver's Island, and it contains the following item in reference to Spiritualism: "The Dean of Christ Church, at the conclusion of his sermon yesterday morning, adverted to that class of necromancers known as Spiritualists, regretting that Spiritualism had extended itself to this city. The reverend speaker exhorted against the belief in such a doctrine, and addressed some kind words concerning the strange lam."

—A correspondent writes us that there is a fine opening at Princeton and Trenton, Mo., for a good trance speaker and medium.

—C. H. Weaver, M. D., of Minnesota, sends us several extracts from papers, showing the licentiousness of ministers of the gospel. Not a day passes away that we do not receive some evidence of the licentiousness of professed Christians.

—The Boston Herald says: "A well-known citizen of Nashua, after enduring the unpleasantness of living in a 'haunted house' for three years, has related the mysterious circumstances that surround him, and resigned considerably in disgust. The strange noise has been repeated at frequent intervals, down to last Friday night. At times the noise is like that produced by chopping wood, and continues for an hour or so. At others it is heard many times by the entire family. At other times there is a noise of moving chairs and tables in the kitchen. There is also the noise of conversation between two men in the cellar. Sometimes there is the noise of hoeing on the roof, and at other times there is the noise of pick and shovel in active use. These strange and inexplicable noises have at last determined the owner of the house to send his family away, while he will try and ferret out the mystery."

—St. Louis has some bigoted councilmen who would not hesitate to favor any enactment to crush out liberal tendencies. The following ordinance was introduced by Mr. Bain: "Any person who shall, in this city, carry on the business of fortune teller, clairvoyant, astrologer, sight seer, or any avocation of like kind or nature, or who shall in any way, by any devices or means, profess to tell the future, for the destiny of mankind, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction, shall be fined not less than fifty, nor more than five hundred dollars."

—The Medium and Daybreak speaks as follows of "psychic force" among the Zulus: "At a meeting of the Anthropological Institute last week a paper was read from a distinguished surgeon at Natal, reporting many most extraordinary developments of nerve or psychic force witnessed in him among the Zulus, and which even throws into the shade the phenomena witnessed by our own psychists."

—During the month of August Mrs. F. O. Hyser will lecture in this city. She is the lady who entertained the good Spiritualists of Baltimore for so long a time by her elegant lectures and poetic improvisations.

—Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith has nobly sustained herself as one of the most eloquent advocates of our cause during the time she has lectured here.

—The Roman Observer alludes as follows to the JOURNAL: "The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL is an eight-page, forty column periodical, devoted to the interests of the Spiritual philosophy. In its pages can be found choice sermons, interesting lectures, able debates, and reports of conventions. Besides, it reports many of the wonderful manifestations daily occurring in the various communities throughout the country. It gives the name and address of most of the public mediums and speakers in the states. It advertises most of the Spiritualistic literature that has been published. It publishes many articles that show a depth of scientific research and a profoundness of thought rarely to be found. It is a journal that will give all about a thousand dollars. The friends and foes alike of this philosophy should take this paper if they have any desire to keep posted in these matters."

—The members of the "Northern Evangelical Society," as it is called, are a new order of perfectionists in Scotland, who believe themselves entirely sinless, as pure and innocent, indeed, as God himself, and that all other sects are devoid of the true spirit of religion.

—A letter from Rome relates that at the funeral of a Jew named Cerfeyn, who was a national guard, the honors were followed by a number of his comrades, and only of his own religion, but also Catholics. This is said to be the first example of such tolerance and equality ever witnessed in the Eternal City.

—Read "JESUS OF NAZARETH."

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

LARK MOORE.

In Memoriam.

Passed on to the higher life, from the residence of his daughter, Susan C. Waters, on the 7th of July, Lark Moore, in the 83rd year of his earthly pilgrimage.

We give the substance of our remarks at the funeral, which took place from the residence of Wm. and Susan C. Waters, Bordentown, N. J., on the 11th inst.

"Gathered as a shock of corn, fully ripe." We stand, to-day, in the presence of one of the most solemn lessons which the Great Father has appointed for his children. The beautiful angel of death has been here, and has loosed the spirit from the older garments that this beloved father has worn so many years, and we are about to lay it away in the common wardrobe of our Mother Earth, while the spirit has gone forth free to meet its kindred. Thomas Gales Forster, on an occasion like this, presented the following illustration:

"You go into the studio of an artist and there behold a magnificent statue molded in clay, on which, for years, the artist has been expending his noblest energies in tracing out the lineaments, and bringing forth his highest conceptions of beauty and symmetry. As you stand there, admiring the work, the artist enters, and with a great hammer strikes the statue, and it falls to pieces before your eyes. In a moment, while you are weeping over the sad loss, there rises before you another statue in the image of the former, but far more perfect and beautiful. Now your sorrow is turned to joy, and you recognize that the artist knew well what he was doing."

We stand here to-day beside the clay-built form of our venerable friend. The old form that we have been so long familiar with, has been stricken down by the hammer of death, and as our soul-vision is opened, we see that other statue that has so long used that form for its purposes in this life, and the spirit smiles as we recognize him thus in our midst.

The lessons of life have this one great aim,—to make us know each other better, in order that we may realize love each other, and thus grow into the highest and most beautiful ideal of our heavenly father. And so death comes, not to rob us of our loved ones, and leave us lonely and sad upon the earth, but to give us one of the grandest lessons of life.

Personally, we have not known much of this beloved father. Only once have we met, but it was a blessed meeting. We saw him, physically, suffering and anxious to go home, to be released from the old body; at the same time he was resigned to the will of our father in heaven. We sympathized with him, and sought to relieve him. We saw him mentally, and the clear eye of the octogenarian shone out beautifully, and the words of wisdom fell from his lips; but, above all, we saw him soul-wise, and he said to us as to a younger brother, "Come in here." Not merely physically did we meet and recognize each other, but his opened the doors of his mental habitation and asked us in there; more than this, the most sacred place, the holy of holies, the home of the soul, was opened to us, and we entered in, and we saw the treasures that he had gathered through long years of trial and suffering and earnest effort. So we know him, and we shall always know him, and this is the only real knowledge that we can have of one another. How many there are in this world who live together a whole lifetime and never enter each other's honest, or know each other's sacred thoughts and feelings! They speak to each other through the screens and windows, and endeavor to conceal almost everything from those whom the world supposes to be near them. Life is almost a failure for such as these, for we can only truly love those whom we really know, and can only know in On occasions like this, when the death angel has come with its blessing, we may feel like opening the house that has been so long closed, and then we come near to each other, and look into the great heart of humanity, and hence nearer to God. These affections bind us together, and in those tender and loving feelings which come over our souls in hours like this, the entire world, with its strife and discord, recedes from our view, and the heavens are opened to us, and we feel that we love our friends, our relatives, those whom we have associated with, better; and that all mankind are our brothers and sisters, and feeling thus, they become more really so.

Hence, the lesson of the hour becomes good and useful, and though Nature calls for the tears of sympathy and affection, and we freely give them, yet we have no cause to mourn for ourselves, or for the dear departed, whose form lies here, while he stands beside us in the glorious resurrection, which he has experienced, and which is full of joy and gladness. He had filled out life's full measure on earth, and the death angel, "with noiseless hand, came and unlocked life's flower encircled door, and bade the spirit walk free."

How sagely he reached forth the hand, and how joyous was the meeting with the loved ones there. She, the fond companion of his life here, and others who had gone before him, met him there, and he realized, as the poet said,

"I rose like a mist from the mountain,
When day walks abroad on the hills;
I rose like a spray from the fountain,
From life and its wearying ills."

As we lay away that venerable form, we feel that it is hard to part with the casket that we have learned to love, though the gem is gone. We know that those welcome footfalls shall no more be heard; that the music of that pleasant voice can no more fall upon our outward ears, and as we place the form away, we drop a tear of affection. Oh, could you see the bright shining face in its bean ty, you would realize it as a joy forever. We see our risen friend standing on the mountain peaks of the Summer Land, and as he looks down upon us, a shade comes over his face, not for himself, not for the loved ones who are around him with joy beaming face, but for those who are left to toil and struggle and the mists and the cares of earth, and the echoing notes of his voice come to us now, saying, "Be of good cheer; I have overcome the world. Stand fast in your integrity, and bear yourselves manfully."

Yet a little while, and the angel of death shall come to emancipate your souls from the thralldom of the flesh, and set you free. Work on, earnestly and faithfully, in the great harvest field of the Lord, and know that loved ones from this shore are ever near, seeking to help you onward and upward to their bright home of peace and love, the realm of immortal bliss, where we shall all meet to part no more, but to labor on eternally. And as you realize this, you will learn that there is nothing to fear but evil and wrong. The sting of death will be gone, and the soul, recognizing that it is in the hands of its Maker, and fulfilling the mission day by day, shall repose in confidence, knowing that all is well. Then we shall look upon such scenes as this rather as transfigurations than as times of mourning and lamentation; and being fully conscious of the presence of our loved ones around us, we shall desire, as did the apostles, to build for ourselves three tabernacles in which we may dwell forever.

Then, in thankfulness to our Heavenly Father for his abundant mercy and goodness, which have followed us all the days of our lives, our prayers will go forth. The inspirations of our souls will be that like loved companionships may be ours forever, and in our daily walks and labor, we will strive that the light of the glory of the angel world, that shines within our souls, in calmness and serenity, may go forth into the world, and be seen and felt by our fellowmen.

Having so learned the beautiful lesson that death teaches, with silence as a benediction, let us commend our souls to God and to his ministering angels now and ever more. May the peace and love of God be with us and abide.

Soul Growth.

We have spoken of soul needs, of conditions in which there is such a demand for sympathy and appreciation that they must come, but when they do come, there comes also a responsibility with them. God does not send his sunshine and dews and gentle rain upon the grass and the flowers without requiring that they in return shall give forth their verdure and beauty and fragrance. They can not grow without giving compensation for all they have received. So when a soul stands side by side with a kindred soul whose appreciation and love it has sought for and received, it may not always be sunshine. There must be dew and clouds and rain. And when the soul is thus appreciated, it stands, as it were, before a beautiful mirror and sees itself as it never had before. Then comes sorrow for the shades that have marked our pathway, and the weaknesses that have beset us in our journey. The soul, conscious of these, feels like shrinking from those who read its inmost thoughts and interests, and who with their appreciation, were bringing sympathy and aid to it, and the sensitive soul says, I can not let these, my brother or my sister, suffer. Let me go away into the deep solitudes and bear my burdens alone, and let these growth pains work out my salvation.

We can not do this for the tie that binds us to these loved ones will not let us go, but will give them such a sense of our condition that they must suffer also. And herein lies the true atonement. That sympathetic love that cheers and strengthens our souls in the hours of deep and proving baptisms, but can not remove these, for they must have their time—true growth is slow. So one growth follows another, and as we advance, we can in very deed preach to those spirits in prison bound with the bonds through which we have passed, and thus shall we be able to open the windows of these prison bound souls, and let the light of heaven in to them. But we can not do all for them. Growth is slow and painful always, and as our souls learn to drink of the bitter waters, they grow stronger. And all through life, the strength thus gained has a double mission,—to make us stronger, and to enable us to aid others in similar conditions.

So are we all saviors, one of another, and every lesson in the school of life, whether dark or bright, is calculated to give us power to become a saviors of our fellow men, and to bridge over with our sympathies the narrow stream that divides them from us.

Let us then, go forth with earnestness of purpose, and desires to build these beautiful bridges, not for us to go down in their condition, if they are below us, but for them to come up to ours. We can see human souls as they groan in agony, growing still brighter and purer with each throe of pain, and we say, hold still, oh, brother or sister. The fire will burn the dross only, and the pure gold shall shine brighter when this is removed, and always when the fire has done its work we can see how grandly beautiful the soul has grown.

We close this article with the following poem:

I HOLD STILL.

BY CHARLES T. BROOKS.

Pain's furnace heat within me quivers,
God's breath upon the flame doth blow;
And all my heart in anguish shivers,
And trembles at the fiery glow;
And yet I whisper, as God will,
And in his hottest fire hold still.

He comes and lays my heart all heated,
On the hard anvil, minded so,
Into his own fair shape to beat it,
With his great hammer, blow on blow;
And yet I whisper, as God will,
And 'neath his heaviest blows hold still.

He takes my softened heart and beats it,
The sparks fly off at every blow;
He turns it o'er and o'er and beats it,
And lets it cool and makes it glow;
And yet I whisper, as God will,
And in his mighty hand hold still.

Why should I murmur, for the sorrow,
Thus only longer lived would be;
The end must come, and may to-morrow,
When God has done his work in me;
So I say praying, as God will,
And trusting to the end, hold still.

He kindles for my profit purely,
Affliction's hot and fiery brand;
And all the fiercest blows are surely
Inflicted by a master hand;
So I say praying, as God will,
And praying, suffer and hold still.

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS.

Madison Doherty, having severed his connection with A. D. Willis, at Chicago, has opened a Gallery, at Indianapolis, Indiana, where he will sit for spirit pictures.

Parties at a distance wishing these pictures can get the same result as if present, by inclosing a lock of hair, a picture, and the fee of three dollars, and post-office stamp, stating the day and hour they wish a trial. Money refunded if no result is obtained.

DOHERTY & PURSELL, Photographers,
Nos. 94 & 96 East Washington street,
Indianapolis Indiana.

v10 n17 8m

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large PROFITS to AGENTS. Send Stamp for Circulars. O. E. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 12, No. 181 Lasalle St., Chicago.

v10 n13 tf

MRS. E. MANIFOLD,

Medical, Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium. Parties at a distance examined by lock of hair. Price, $1.00. Prescriptions, $1.00. Magnetic Remedies sent to all parts of the country. Address Mrs. E. G. Manifold, P. O. Box 1094, Rockford, Ill.

v10 n7 tf

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services.

v9 n3 tf

CARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.

Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, one or other top. This vogue is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and is a handsome wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used, and [illegible]

[illegible]

v9 n25 6m.

JULIA DAKE CASTERLINE, M. D.,

TREATS SUCCESSFULLY CHRONIC AND ACUTE DISEASES. "SPECIAL ATTENTION TO DISEASES OF WOMEN." 861 North 12th street, Philadelphia.

v10 n16 tf.

AGENTS! READ THIS!

WE WILL PAY AGENTS A SALARY OF $200 per month and expenses, or allow a large commission, to sell our new and wonderful inventions. Address M. WAGNER & Co., Marshall, Mich.

v10 n20 6m.

Spencer's Positive and Negative Powders.

For sale by this office.

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

Eighth National Convention.

The American Association of Spiritualists.—The Eighth National Convention will meet at Troy, New York, on Tuesday, the 19th of September, at 10 o'clock in the morning, and continue a session three days.

Each active State or Territorial organization of Spiritualists, within the limits of the United States of America, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members of such organization, and of each working local society, and each Progressive Lyceum within the boundaries of such State or Territory, provided that only one general organization shall be entitled to representation from any State or Territory. Each Province of the American Continent shall be entitled to one delegate for each working association within its limits, and the District of Columbia shall be entitled to two delegates.

Each active local Society, and each Progressive Lyceum of any State, Territory, or Province which has no General Association, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members.

These Associations are respectfully invited to appoint delegates to attend this meeting and participate in the proceedings.

HANNAH F. M. BROWN (Chicago, Ill.), Pres.
HENRY T. CHILD, M. D. (634 Race St. Phil.), Sec.

New York State Spiritualist Association.

The Fourth Annual Convention of the New York Spiritualist Association will be held at Starr or Central Hall, Le Roy, Genesee Co., Saturday, Sept. 2d, at 2 o'clock P. M., for the election of officers for the ensuing year, and also to choose delegates to attend the National Spiritual Convention, to meet at Troy, New York, Sept. 19th, and for the transaction of such other business as may come before the convention.

This State Convention meets in connection with the Mediums and Speakers' Quarterly Convention, which is to convene on Saturday, at 10 o'clock, and continue in session both Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 2d and 3d.

A cordial invitation is extended to all truth-seekers to attend all the sessions.

P. J. OLIN, Sec. J. W. SEAVER, Pres.

Richmond, Iowa.

The Spiritualists and friends of progression will hold a meeting, commencing on Friday evening, August 11th, 1871, and continuing over Sunday, in Adams' Grove, Snake Hollow, near the schoolhouse, 4½ miles northwest of Richmond, Washington Co., Iowa.

Good speakers and healers will be present from a distance.

The invitation is to all.

WM. GATHERCOLE.

Nunica, Michigan.

The Spiritualists of Nunica, will hold a two days grove meeting, on the fifth and sixth of August, 1871. Mrs. J. H. S. Severance, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, will deliver the address. Other good speakers are expected to be present.

A cordial invitation is extended to all. Come orthodox! Come world's people! Come Free-thinkers! Come Spiritualists! Come all, and have a good time.

Ample provision will be made for friends from a distance.

R. R. JENNINGS.

Obituary.

Born into spirit-life, from his home in Deansville, Oneida County, New York, Thomas Adlo Ely, aged 72 years.

For many years has our brother been the standard-bearer of spiritual truth, and many hungry souls through his means have been fed, many a weary medium been welcomed to his hospitable home, until with bodies strengthened, so his cheered, and purses replenished, they were ready to go out into the world to fight against superstition and error. His name was once upon the church book, but he had long ago outgrown its creed. His last moments were cheered by a knowledge of spirit-life.

The funeral services were held at his home, the house being filled with those who knew him best and loved him most. A few appropriate pieces were sung, and then the spirits through me spoke words of cheer to those that are left this side the vail. Then we gave to Mother Earth that which was here, while all felt that his life had just begun among the angels.

He leaves one son to fill his place; may he fill it as nobly as has his sire is our prayer.

MRS. E. A. WILLIAMS.

Born to earth and passed on to the Summer Land, on the day and month of her birth, Jennie King Lewis, aged two years, daughter of Dr. Thomas J. and Elvira D. Lewis. She was highly mediumistic, intelligent, and affectionate.

May her bright spirit help to push the clouds along the car of spiritual truth on earth.

Dr. Thomas J. Lewis.

BELVIDERE SEMINARY,

FOR YOUTHS OF BOTH SEXES,

Belvidere New Jersey. Fall Term begins Wednesday, Sept. 13th. One of the most liberal institutions in the land, being strictly non-sectarian. It has the superior advantages of a healthful and beautiful location, added to the comforts and genial influences of a pleasant home, with excellent opportunities for obtaining a practical education in any or all of its several departments, English, Classical, Literary, and Scientific. Pupils graduate in each department, also in Gymnastics.

For catalogues, address Misses Bush, Principals.

v10 n17 9t.

813 RACE ST.

R. R. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, can accommodate MEDIUMS visiting that city with fine rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.

v10n13 tf

IT COSTS

Only about one-third Bookbinders' prices for do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Ready Bookbinder. Sizes suited to any publication, from the smallest Monthly up to the largest Weekly. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both Style and Binder. Also for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL No. 15; price $1.20 and $1.50.

Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph or from lock of hair, readings of character; marked changes past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with pre- [illegible]

[illegible]

DR. S. L. MCFADDEN AND WIFE, Magnetic Physician, Spiritual Test Medium, Business Clair voyants, etc., have located at No. 368 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago.

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future; give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil; the cause and cure of inharmony, etc.; thereby enabling persons to be a law unto themselves,—to be their own physicians, teachers, doctors and preachers. All Mediums are invited to attend free of charge. The Cosmogleistique of the Bible, Lying Spirits, and False Messiahs for sale at the office. Given.

Spencer's Positive and Negative Powders.

For sale by this office.

MEDIUMS.

James Brooks,

The Great Developing Medium, will send printed instructions, which never fail to develop in full those who have any mediumistic powers. Send for them at once. Test your spiritual gifts. Inclose two dollars.

Address 806 S. Clark st, Chicago.

v10 n19 tf

J. G. W. ENTWISTLE,

CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN.

No. 194 South Clark Street, Room 3, Chicago.

He is prepared to treat any of the many forms of disease, and possesses a peculiar insight into its cause and character, and a controlling power over it which seems wonderful even to himself. His medicines are purely vegetable. Invalids at any distance will be as thoroughly examined, and the means of cure (if curable) as definitely pointed out as if they were present, by sending a lock of hair, giving name, age, sex, and two leading symptoms of the disease. Insanity and file not treated. Examination fee, by hair, $2.00.

v10 n18 9t

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex, occupation, temperament, (if not known, and photograph). Address P. O. Box 50, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.

v10 n8 tf

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, $1 dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for mediumistic development, one dollar.

Address, Taunton, Mass.

v10 n19 tf

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,

Healing Medium,

Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. We rely entirely on the controlling influences. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance those that desire, and can afford the expense. Delineation and advice in a variety of ways. Emblems we give gratuitously to all our patients, when presented by our guides. Our former custom has been to come en rapport with the applicant by the hand-writing or lock of hair; but to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write—if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to lumber up an advertisement with what we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $2; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $1 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 45, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis.

v10 n1 tf.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYAN PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by Hair, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advice concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $2.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.

n1 v10 tf.

MRS. A. M. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium

146 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

Mrs. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the ocontal object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE forces latent in the system and in herbs. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter; and however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her [illegible] which the spirits control, [illegible] done as well when [illegible] to the patient in person.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $1.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $5; answering Business Letters, $1. The money should accompany the application. To INSURE a reply.

CLAIRVOYANCE.

DR. P. T. JOHNSON examines disease by reading lock of hair, name, and age, stating sex,—one dollar accompanying the order. He also prepares a sure medicine for OPIUM AND MORPHINE HABITS; three months will cure the worst case. Circular, one cent. Charts, six dollars per month. He also prepares a Sure Cure for Ague,—50 cents per bottle. Will be sent by express. Address box Ypsilanti, Mich.

v10 n17 tf.

DR. SAMUEL MAXWELL,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN,

Treats the sick by magnetic touch, and the use of appropriate magnetized remedies. Also makes clairvoyant examinations. Patients to be treated by letter should send age, sex, and leading symptoms. Board in private families if desired. Terms to, or address,

SAMUEL MAXWELL, M. D.

73 South Sixth St., Richmond, Ind.

v10 n17

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

THE LAWS OF SPIRIT COMMUNION.

By D. P. Kayner, M. D.

NUMBER FIVE.

How are the "raps" produced, or in what way are disembodied spirits enabled to make audible concussions through which to convey intelligent communications to those still in the form?

The proper answer to this question will carry us beyond the laws of the gross physical, as such, into the realm of the mental or psychical. We must therefore first inquire, as did Paul of the Corinthians:—"How are the dead raised up? and with what bodies do they come?"

It is evident they do not come encased in their former physical covering; for that has been deposited in the earth to return again to its chemical elements—the minerals thereof, and to eliminate during its decomposition the finer gaseous elements to help sustain other forms and growths. There must needs then be some other body in which the spirit dwells when once it is fully separated from its earthly form. And of this body, Paul seems to have had some conception, for in passing to answer the question he says:—"Thou sowest not that body that shall be, but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body."

Now, when we learn that we are throwing off a magnetic emanation corresponding to our every thought, act and deed, and that these circle around us, forming a soul envelope in which we are encased—an atmosphere which any one coming into our circle of influence, or psychic force, feels and is attracted or repelled thereby—and that this magnetic envelope, formed of the tidal soul waves that flow out from our inner selves, constitutes in its ebb and flow the vital forces of the physical body while we dwell in it, and becomes the covering of the spirit when we no longer remain therein;—or, in other words, the magnetic soul-waves of individualized selfhood constitute the inner life of the physical, and the outer covering of the spirit,—hence "to every seed (or spirit) his own body," then we shall know something of "the body with which they are raised up," and have a starting point from which to study their powers and modes of action.

Each individual spirit is here manufacturing a spirit body. As A. J. Davis once said: "We are all running a factory." Our associations and surroundings make the conditions which form the warp, and our individual thoughts, words, acts and deeds are the filling that completes the web. And such garments as we weave in the room of life, will we be clothed with when we pass to the inner Life in the world beyond. Every seed then will have his own body, because the organic law in its relations gives him that, and can give him no other. Each will have their own and none can rob another. Equal and exact justice will prevail. But if the resurrection were to be physical, literally, this could not be. For the body of one generation decomposes, eliminates its finer gaseous elements into vegetation. The animals feed upon it, and it becomes incorporated into their structure and tissue—they in turn are slaughtered and eaten by man, and he departs this life, and his body passes through like stages, until, according to the theological vagary, a general resurrection of the physical bodies shall be proclaimed by the angel Gabriel, and all the dead that were in their graves are to come forth to a general judgment. But what God can do justice to such an occasion? How divide the elementary parts which have passed through these various changes, and have been part and parcel of the bodies of the different generations as they passed away? Could infinite skill extricate itself from the difficulties of such a scheme of sublime stupidity? It certainly could not without the assistance of an Œcumenical council and an infallible Pope; and might even then require the additional aid of the sinless and spotless clergy to help work it through, and if that failed, would require to be engrafted into the Constitution, in order to raise a standing army for the purpose.

Such a doctrine carries the evidences of its falsity upon its face as a scientific absurdity. With what bodies came Moses and Elias? With what body came the spirit that opened the prison doors for Peter? With what bodies came the "innumerable host" that appeared to the shepherds and proclaimed "Peace on earth, good will to men." And what general judgment had raised up those bodies?

We here come to the fact which clairvoyants and seers have seen and proclaimed, and spirits themselves declare to be true, that the spirit rises (or is resurrected) out of the corporal body at the time it departs this life, and gathers therefrom and from its own surroundings, the elements wherewith it forms a body, and that it continues to rise as it progresses on and on, and ever onward in the spheres of light.

The spirit then, has a body, and that body, when it enters the spheres, partakes of, and is related to, the physical elements out of which it has been eliminated. It is therefore in a condition, from its elementary organization to act chemically upon the magnetic elements of ponderable physical objects, when conditions are supplied through which action can be produced. The conditions requisite to the production of the "raps" are the presence of a "medium"—that is some person whose magnetic emanations are in harmony with the magnetic states of the spirit, and those combined with the so-called imponderable elements of ponderable substances, produces the concussions somewhat after the manner of an electrical discharge, in which the hydrogen of the atmosphere combines with the floating carbon masses. In this case both elements being present, then the spiritual elements of the flesh is seen which produces the report and reverberation, while in the "rape" the concussion is only perceptible.

Three essentials are necessary in their production:

1st. A positive intelligent mind or spirit.

2nd. The presence of a negative mind or medium through which the spirit can combine to act.

3rd. Some ponderable substance which has been infilled or imbued with the living presence of the medium and spirit, and then through the action of the will of the spirit controlling, these combined elements are set in operation.

Now a spirit, comprehending the thought, desires or expressed wish of their present, can and does so operate on these elements as to give positive evidences of spirit presence and identity; and, as in the case of James Graham, before referred to, often comes unexpected and unthought of.

Let our sectarian friends call it "electricity," "magnetism," "odylic force," "the Devil," or what they will, it is more in the intelligence displayed in the control of so-called "inanimate matter," giving intelligent answers to questions, often of the deepest scientific character,—bringing long since forgotten scenes back to the memory, and furnishing evidence of immortality in causing us to know that we are standing in the presence of our departed friends, and holding intelligent communion with the world of life beyond, for want of which the sectarian world has been languishing in fear upon the very verge of despair. This intelligence not only brings us a knowledge of immortality which theology has failed to demonstrate, but also gives us an idea of what immortality is.

The first tiny "rape" understood, struck the death blow to creeds. It was the iconoclast hammer that should break down the false images that theology had set up—that should shiver and lay prostrate the division walls that bigotry had raised to partition off society into cotes, and that should destroy a personal devil and demolish a literal hell.

It was more—it was the first message from across the river, on the wires of affection's kindred ties, sent greeting by the immortals to those loved ones still left lingering on this shore, telling them the "river of death" was bridged—the two worlds joined and a communion, never again to be destroyed, had been established between the two worlds, proclaiming—

> Joy to the earth! and joy in heaven,
> Wide superstition's chains were riven,
> And light and life to mortals given.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

ARE WE LIKE THE FOOD WE EAT?

By Dr. [illegible] S. Bake, M. D.

DEAR JOURNAL:—[illegible] is clipped an extract from an article [illegible] for the Banner of Light, by E. S Holbrook. As the subject is of vital importance, I have a few words to say:

"Editors Banner of Light:—[illegible] May 6th, you gave a lengthy [illegible] pamphlet entitled, 'Social Evils: [illegible] and Cure,' by Mrs. Mary M. [illegible] series published by William [illegible] with commendation; and you say 'the [illegible] is important, and the author treats it [illegible] sophically. The burden of it is, that [illegible] are like the food they eat,' and the climax [illegible] the assertion is a terrific onslaught upon the use of swine's flesh, because 'it fattens scrofulous elements, is a scavenger by nature, attracting from the atmosphere, soil, vegetation and water, the loathsome element, which, in the human system, develops itself as scrofula, and generates many other diseases. It wallows in the ditch, absorbing this element from the mire. It ravages the forests and fields in its wild state, as Nature's efficient agent for secreting this poison from the earth, air, and vegetable life. Man, in using it for food, eats what is Nature's effort to extract from the substances designed for his food before he takes them. Thus he defeats her benevolent design in the production of the swine.' The author assigns to poisonous reptiles the same office, that of extracting poisons, etc., and to rats, men would like 'defeat Nature's object in creating them.'

"This, you say, Messrs. Editors, is a 'philosophical treatment of an important subject.' That the subject is an important one no one will deny, and hence its treatment should be regarded; and I would say, in order that our philosophy may be commended, that such extraordinary propositions as these—that the office of the reptile is to absorb poisons from the surroundings; that the natural function of the swine is "only this and nothing more;" that thereby the flesh becomes diseased and is unfit for human use, in that it imparts those poison and diseases; that people that use it are or become low and swinish; and generally, that people should be like what they eat—should be very strongly supported by evidence before they are promulgated from such a source.

I have observed for a long time that it is very common among Spiritualists, and among many others—vegetarians, water-curists and the like particularly among those where some one monster idea swallows up all others, and where some well-nursed fantasy, cyleptic in action, supplies the old method of reasoning from experience—to insist that people are like the food they eat; and, making every time a special adaption of their assertion to the swine, they say if you eat the flesh you become swinish; and for this reason they hold swine's flesh, as food, in holy horror; and others, still, have a final clincher by way of assertion, at least, though it is given as a reason) that the swine is a mere scavenger, whose office in Nature is to absorb the poisons and diseases (such as they say of the mad-stone), and bear them away from humanity (as the scapegoat of the sins of the people); and hence, if we eat him, we are swallowing not only the "poor beastie" proper, but also aggregated and concentrated poisons and diseases therewith.

From all my reading and observations I have seen no general truth in these propositions; but only this: That swine's flesh may, like any other one thing, be injurious to some few at all times; and, on account of its richness and in the manner and extent of its use (too often gross, no doubt), may be injurious to some others; while it is not injurious to the many, it properly used."

Notwithstanding the writers inability to disprove Mrs. Maria M. King's statement—viz.: that people are like the food they eat, and moreover, that all swine are scavengers, and develop scrofula in the human system—nevertheless, his article may have a tendency to mislead many honest seekers after truth.

My experience as a physician has given me ample opportunities to be advised in this matter. Hundreds of invalids, suffering with cancers and blood diseases, I have treated in several of the States, and I find that farmers and pork-eaters are the ones principally affected. Adam Clarke says that if he were to offer up a sacrifice to His Satanic Majesty, it would be a roasted pig stuffed with tobacco. Persons who have had the care of swine, know that when sick, they invariably find the opening on the lower joint of the front legs stopped up, and if this is not opened again, so that the poisonous, scrofulous matter can escape like any sensible being, they soon die. My own observations, and those of my students, develope the startling fact, that the hog not only has almost imperceptible germs of scrofula, millions of them, but often minute living animals, that have caused the death of hundreds of pork-eaters.

It is also a fact, that when many a large, fine-looking porker has been killed, it was found that the lungs were nearly consumed, and so diseased that a natural death was at hand.

Our forefathers and pioneers who opened up the Western Continent, performing herculean tasks, and thought nothing of walking ten miles before breakfast to the post-office. What was their diet? Deer, antelope, bear, fish, birds, etc., and they never knew what it was to be sick, timid or lazy. But alas! how physically degenerated we have become since domesticated animals like the hog, is one of our chief articles of diet.

Our greatest living seer, Andrew Jackson Davis, and one of our very best authorities on the subject, and whose testimony is that "Where ranked come to fully understand that swine and various breeds of fowls are but automatic gastronomical machines for rooting up, and thus forwarding for the singular use of higher organisms, a great mass of otherwise poisonous and disgusting material, most people will forthwith cease devouring their flesh as a suitable article of food."

The following analysis of food is an admirable statement, showing that pork is less nutritious than other animal food. We have in the different varieties of food we eat, the phosphates, the nitrates, and the carbonates. The first nourish brain and bone; the second makes nerve and muscle; the last makes fat:

	Phos. parts.	Nit. parts.	Carb. parts.
Beef gives	3	15	90
Mutton	3	13	40
Lamb	3	12	40
Veal	3	10	50
Venison	4	16	15
Salmon	3	20	15
Oysters	2	10	10
Codfish	3	14	8
Eggs	3	15	6
Wheat	3	15	60
Rye	3	13	72
Corn	3	11	73
Buckwheat	3	8	35
Barley	3	17	10
Oats	3	20	66
Beans	4	24	57
Peas	3	23	60
Rice	1	4	80
Potatoes	1	1	22
Turnips	1	1	21
Cabbage	1	20	6
Butter	0	0	100

By the last item, one may see he can eat a firkin of butter and never get a thought. It, however, answers a good purpose, and supplies plenty of carbon. When brain force is required, brain food should be eaten. When physical labor is to be performed, the food that makes nerve and muscle is to be preferred.

"The poet could never draw inspiration from a barrel of pork or a bin of potatoes."—A. J. Davis.

Carbon is rich; the hog has plenty of it, but what office in the human system does it fill? It simply supplies fat, and the human stomach never yet digested either fat or alcohol. The saliva and gastric juices have no effect whatever upon it, but it works out of the stomach somewhat similar to water forced out of a syringe, often producing diseases of the duodenum, etc.

Men and students who desire brain force should not eat pork, for it has the least of all animals brain-making properties, and the laboring man should not eat it, for the reason that he can get meat that is healthier, cheaper, and more strengthening (beef, for instance), also from the grains: beans, etc. A mixed diet is to be preferred. Too much meat is, however, eaten, especially in the summer.

Prevention is far better than the cure, and it is the absolute duty of parents especially to understand the nature of food and its adaptations in promoting vigorous growth and sound constitutions in their children. "Nature everywhere teaches that the slower growth develops the greater power." Milk for babes; strong meat for men. On meat diet children become precocious, and it oftimes sows the seed of crime and vice. Until they are fourteen years old they should not eat meat. Coffee and greases, with tobacco and alcohol, is also injurious. Uncleanliness also is an avenue to crime and licentiousness. Gross food makes the body gross. Gross thoughts make the mind gross. True Spiritualists have no vicarious atonement, for they need none. They believe that it is better to be born well than to be regenerated.

Chicago, Ill.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

EXCITING EXPERIENCE.

An Evening among the Saints.

BROTHER JONES: I am persuaded by many liberal friends in this vicinity to present a statement of the following circumstances and facts for publication in the JOURNAL.

As this is my first introduction as a correspondent for your paper (although I have been somewhat actively engaged in the reformatory field more than thirty years) I hope for a philosophical consideration at the hands of your numerous and intelligent readers, promising that I may, perhaps, hereafter have something more bright and cheering, if I shall again and occasionally be admitted to occupy space in your well-filled journal.

Under circumstances of peculiar trial, or unusual pleasures, the sensitive mind and heart of mediumistic persons, naturally and involuntarily seek for sympathy and kindness at the hands of those who have had like experience. It is thus I appear before your readers and among the working mediums, to tell a story of one evening's experience at this time.

One cold, rainy night, about the middle of April last, having spent the day in the vicinity of Niles, in the early evening, I was waiting in the small town of Somerville, for as the dense darkness had fully cast its sable mantle over the fields and forests which surrounded the beautiful little hamlet.

An orthodox meeting-house, standing upon a beautiful eminence, and being surrounded with trees, the unfledged and naked branches of which were swaying in the storm-winds, and uttering a dirge-like music, prophetic of the sad reminiscences which were in reserve to be carried in my thoughts for many days, was brilliantly lighted. I learned there had been a "protracted effort," which had lasted several weeks.

Remembering the days which are past, and in which many of my dear relations who are now in the Summer Land, used to take pleasure in going up to the house of the Lord," as they called it, I walked in and was seated among the professing Christians. I was a stranger and entitled to respectful usage. And if a sectarian bigotry were capable of civilization, and common courtesy, I should have received it, as I was determined to conform to order and decorum among the assembled saints, how much soever the exercises might be unpleasant or unsatisfactory to my mind.

The audience was small because of the storm, and the minister delivered a short discourse, making a strong mechanical effort, as it seemed to me, to make an impression. He presented what he called a conversational speech, taking for his theme the subject of "babes,"—the binding force of habit or custom, and he alluded at considerable length to the fashions in clothing and dress.

After the minister concluded his remarks, the brethren and sisters were called upon for a free conference. A half hour more or less had passed in these exercises, when in the order of sitting, it seemed to come my turn to speak; and the minister, observing the spirit moving upon me, said, "Now, brother, it's your turn—speak."

I arose to Speak, resolving not to say anything radical, and alluded to the main point made in the ministerial discourse, and made some pertinent and, perhaps, somewhat amusing remarks about the various and eccentric modes of dress which have appeared among men and woman during the past thirty or forty years. The minister soon interrupted me and called me to time, and the following dialogue ensued:

Minister.—Tell us you love Jesus!

Speaker.—I suppose I am on the floor, and I am not saying anything about Jesus just now.

Minister.—Well, we don't want to hear anything about the fashions.

Speaker.—But you presented this subject in your discourse, and I was only adding a few remarks upon a theme you have introduced yourself. If the meeting is not free, I can take my seat, as it is no part of my purpose to create disturbance.

Minister.—Well, if you can't tell us you love the Lord we order to have you take your seat.

Speaker.—Very well, sir. But, as my apology, if I need to make one, I have been accustomed of late years to attend free meetings, and I had almost forgotten, for the time being, that a common, religious meeting was not free to any unless they first proclaim the stereotyped and unmeaning watchword, "I love Jesus."

AFTER THE MEETING AT THE TAVERN.

At the close of the meeting, I went to the tavern. The landlord was a young convert, and had recently joined the church. The subject of religion came up for a freer discussion. An orthodox man present asked me if I believed the Bible.

"Do I believe the Bible? Well, that question is quite indefinite. If you ask me if I believe there is a Bible, I might answer, yes, and add that there are very many and numerous kinds of Bibles, or so-called sacred books. Of the Christian Bible, I believe there is a great deal of truth and beauty in it; that there is a high-wrought inspiration and beautiful sentiment inculcated in it by some of its authors; and on the other hand there is much that is ridiculous and absurd. So you will see I have considerable faith or belief about the Bible."

And I went on to speak of the condition of the Roman Catholic church with reference to the Bible, as follows:

"In that branch of the Christian church, the priest is presumed to have the sole prerogative to read and expound the Bible, and the lay members are expected to take his interpretations as infallible. But among the Protestant churches the ministers profess to believe in individual liberty in regard to the Bible. Each individual may read and understand the Bible for themselves, and there can be no composition or dictation in the case; and these professions comport most admirably with the spirit and genius of this American government." But I remarked that I had doubts if the minister we had heard this evening, and who would not allow me to speak ten minutes, unless I first announced that I "loved Jesus," would live up to the Protestant professions. I thought he would insist upon interpreting the Bible according to the modern understanding of the Methodist discipline.

I made a few remarks with reference to the recent efforts which have been made to change the Constitution of the United States, and make an orthodox instrument of it.

The landlord and the other man present had done their share of the talking, so far as they were able and inclined, but finding that reason and argument failed, the landlord suddenly clenched his fist, and placing it near my face, delivered a very vehement speech about as follows:

"You, sir, are too old a man,—you have seen too much of this world,—you are too well posted,—you can't talk in this manner in my house! Now get up and take your duds and leave! You staid at my house once before over night, and you made some remarks at that time upon religious subjects, which I did not like. Now, be off and never come under my roof again!"

Although it was then eleven o'clock at night, and very dark and rainy, feeling a little excited, and a good deal disgusted, I got up, took my valise, and walked nearly two miles to another hotel where I found respite from the professed Christians, and was kindly and respectfully cared for among the publicans and sinners.

I submit these statements, hoping for the dawning of a happier and more propitious future, when the toils and conflicts of this transition state shall have passed away, and the golden age of purity and love shall come to bless and save the world of mankind.

I am fraternally,

C. S. ROWLEY.

Summerville, Mich.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

"Buncombe."

It is now settled. All those poor, deluded half-witted shallow-minded sensitives, who insist upon any knowledge of their own—any sensations peculiar to themselves—or any difference of opinion with Dr. Fahnestock, are now easily disposed of by being styled "imaginatives!" And, of course, should any of us honestly meet Dr. Fahnestock's theory with the honest sense of our own honest experience, and contend for the "magnetic" philosophy, how easy it is for him to tell us, poor fools, we do not have such experience—we "imagine it" all!

And now, not altogether a disciple, but a teacher comes to his aid in the person of A. B. Orr, M. D., and talks learnedly of "unmeaning jargon" "puff out the cheeks"—"nonsensing nonsense," etc. All these Allopathic M. D.'s must whet their rusty swords now to do battle with the "healing medium," "—and first of all, they must bring "animal magnetism" to the block, for nothing can be done to destroy competition, if animal magnetism is suffered to live. So here comes our Brother Orr as champion, with a lingo at once "particular branch of the manufactory of silver shrines for the Goddess Diana!" O, Brother Orr, how could you tempt me so to pick up that stone and throw it back at your glass houses? But all the world does not know that Dr. Orr, was once a valuable "medium" for Dr. Fahnestock—a sort of Nicodemus, who practiced preaching for the Orthodoxy, and wore the title of Rev., and furiously threw off the clerical vestments, and donned the "communbulic state," and gave to Dr. Fahnestock a portion of this very theory. And lo! now he is talking as if he knew nothing about it, till Dr. Fahnestock instructed him in the matter! Say, Dr. Orr, how came you to leave off the double capacity of preacher and medium in that manufactory of "silver shrines for the goddess Diana?" Was there any "buncombe" in the change, or did "the silver shrine" tempt you to "a louder call?"

Now, if you can bring mesmerism and healing mediumship into contempt, and help the dilapidated doctors defend their sinking craft, they will allow you the D. D. Such an originate almost any sort of "buncombe," that will take the silver out of these healers' hands, and put it into theirs. And then it may prove a good job for the originators—as a "rose by any other name will smell" far sweeter than this foe to the drug and bell—fire system—"magnetism," or "healing mediumship." But don't forget your "school-boy days, for imagine that "the science of the soul" has anything to do with this "magnetic variation" of the reasoning compass, for if you call that man "a mineralogist" who makes horse shoes, what will you call the man who, a preacher and medium, goes begging notice of the Medical Faculty? Let us "imagine!" Your doubting sister.

M. J. WILCOXSON.

Letter from C. H. Doty.

BROTHER JONES:—Yesterday my wife and I visited Dr. Abba Lord Palmer at Geneseo, for the purpose of obtaining tests from spirit life. We were more than satisfied. Six spirits were seen and described,—three for my wife, and three for myself. The form, height, eyes, hair, mouth, appearance, dress, habits and will-power, etc., were so accurately described, there was no chance to mistake their identity. Information was also obtained from our departed, of great interest to us. It is no more than just for the people to know that the angels tarry in her presence, and that those desiring to commune with the departed loved ones, can find a favorable opportunity through her.

Aikinsaw, Ill., July 10, 1871.

Voices from the People.

LAPEER, MICH.—John Brock, writes.—I am thankful you have continued to send the JOURNAL so long without hearing from me but if I don't have quite a feed enough the JOURNAL supplies its place. We are in want of a good medium to deliver a course of lectures, and stir up the minds of some that are getting lukewarm. O how I have been gratified by reading the "Search." It is a good thing,—an eye opener.

ERIE, ILL.—John S. Barridge, M. D., writes.—Enclosed please find fifty cts for a trial of your great and good JOURNAL, which I received yesterday. The brother who wants the paper has been reading mine and wants to try it for three months. He has been a member of the M. E Church. So thinks that the Search after God is one of the grandest things that he ever read.

YATES CITY, ILL.—Wm. A. George writes.—In reading the JOURNAL, week after week, I see the article headed "Who are they?" With regret I acknowledge myself as one. One gratification is, you receive Spiritualism as ample security for the payment of your paper. However as I suppose you do not wish to carry the account to the next state of existence, either with or without security, I promise to pay you as soon as possible; by the first of Sept. I thank you for your paper, and the lenity which you give.

Remarks:—All right. Better then than later. We expect many will respond to the promptings of justice in like manner as soon as the now growing crops are harvested.

IRONTON, MO.—Wm. Reel writes.—I would rather do with one meal a day than be without the JOURNAL. The "Search after God" is worth the money. It has given me new light, and I now see plainer than before which the M E Church never could show. I wish some medium would come this way. I have a home of my own, and they would be welcome to it. I am now in my 64th year, and never heard but one lecture—never attended one seance.

BOAZ, WIS.—S. S. Hoostanger writes.—I read in the editorial of one of the late Nos of the JOURNAL, these words: "We have not forgotten them!" As I am one of "them" spoken of, I must say that I am very glad to know you remember me; that your "wrath" did not "wax hot" and blot me from thy book of remembrance," for I like your paper and would not know how to do without it, as in its columns I find healthy, substantial food, for the internal mind which I never could find in the old school advocates.

Brother Francis' Searching article alone is worth more than the amount enclosed ($6.00) which you will please accept in payment for the JOURNAL for last year and this, and oblige one who has been one of "them" long enough.

WOOSTER, OHIO.—Miss Hattie G. Cleaver writes.—I send you one more name as a "trial subscriber" for your JOURNAL, which I think one of the best papers I ever read. I trust that he will prove a permanent one.

K REVILLE, IOWA.—D. A. B. writes.—Although it is scarce three months since I first saw a number of your truly excellent paper, yet in that short time I have learned to love it dearly. The "Search after God" is highly instructive to all who have read it. May your publishers have success in their noble work of sending the light of truth into every corner of the land, beyond all your hopes and wishes.

GALVESTON, TEXAS.—F. Simms writes.—Your numerous correspondents who have so highly commended your articles under the caption of "Search after God," are entirely correct, and I, being landed on the "bleak and desolate shores of Atheism," but were only glad to get rid of the Jewish conception of a vindictive Jehovah.

Remarks: Our brother Simms is too hasty in coming to a conclusion. You will not be landed on the "bleak and desolate shores of Atheism." One brother informs us that he has not uttered a prayer for nearly a year, being held in impatient suspense by our articles. Others are calmly reading them, and sensibly reject what they do not believe to be true, feeling that they have too sound a mind to do otherwise, and who can read an atheistical article with the same critical eye that they can any other, not fearing that they will be injured thereby. Those who are alarmed at the atheistical tendency of the "Search," seem to infer that it will cause converts and do harm! Whew! We do n't write especially to make converts, but to give the views of one who has been long in spirit-life, on this great question. Thousands endorse the statement of our spirit guide. They read the articles, then carefully criticise them, knowing that they are fully competent to decide for themselves. Those who dare not read a work on Mormonism, fearing that they would be induced to have a plurality of wives; better not read the "Search" carefully, for they may thereby be induced to wish our position true, whether they believe it so or not. Our readers, as a general thing, are radical thinkers, ready to grasp any new truth from whatever source it may originate.

ONEIDA, N. Y.—W. S. Tilson writes.—Inclosed you will find two dollars, for two trial subscribers, both of whom will, without doubt, become permanent ones. I think that I can send more names in a short time. There are so many Spiritualists in Central New York, yet but few meetings are held, as yet.

CHICAGO.—J. B. Fox writes.—"The Bible," a little book by S. J. Finney, which I received through your kindness, was carefully read, and is in my estimation, an excellent and interesting work, and I would recommend it to all liberal minded people. It is an excellent article for old fogyism.

ALMONT, MICH.—R. E. Hunter writes.—I take great interest in reading the JOURNAL. It is so full of thought. We have read the "Search" but failed in all cases to read it all. Preaching that which abused myth of sectarianism. Whether all of it is true or not, it is a revelation which will open the eyes of many who are now blind. Hope it will appear in book form, then it will be in better shape for reading. In that it will be more connected than in the weekly paper.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—W. G. Baugh, writes.—We cannot do without the dear JOURNAL, and welcome it as we do the bright rays of the morning sun. It brings food for our hungry souls and leads our thoughts far out and on to those bright realms beyond where our dear ones are ever watching over us.

The Delaware State society of Spiritualists meet in this city every Sunday afternoon and evening at 3 and 7½ o'clock at their hall. Mrs. F. O. Hyzer will lecture until further notice.

Our cause is progressing very fast. Large audiences attend every lecture of Mrs. F. O. Hyzer. She is awakening a deep interest in the cause.

AUTON, MASS.—J. H. Tower, writes.—Enclosed please find one dollar and fifty cents for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL from March, 1st, 1871. Should have sent sooner but sickness prevented. The JOURNAL is a great consolation to us in our declining years. Would be pleased to see an article in relation to this side the river. The Search after God is a masterly production. I am anxious to see when God will be found.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—M. L. Fay writes.—Please send me the JOURNAL for three months, and I hope by the time that expires I will be able to send for it for a year or more. I thank you very much for sending it to me as long as you did from of charge. Will you please be kind enough to send me the four back numbers with this week's, I am so much interested in the article called "Search after God," that I feel lonesome every week without it.

TIPTON, IND.—H. W. Parker writes.—Words are inadequate to express the pleasure your journal fills in my affections and those of my household.

PORT HURON, MICH.—Mrs. Hamilton writes.—Inclosed find $2 00, to continue the subscription of your paper. The longer I take it the better I like it.

Price-List of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books desired, and the additional amount named in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies. 15 10
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Fahnestock 1.50 20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers. 50 06
Allen Yale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker 1.25 16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase 25 03
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Devlin 1.00 20
Apocryphal New Testament 1.25 16
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbott. Paper 50 06
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth 50 06
A Lecture in Rhyme.—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. P. A. Logan 15
Abuses of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle 1.25 20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle 1.25 20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child 25 03
Aesthetics, or the Divine Gospel, by A. J. Davis 2.50 20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph 1.00 06
Apocalypse, Unveiled 1.50 20
Appearing Crisis, by A. J. Davis 75 12
Aquarius, (translated from the French) by Rosan 1.75 20
A Better Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis 1.00 16
Astro Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor 1.50 24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. C. Wright, small edition 40 12
Do. do. do. large edition 1.50 12
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Tousley, M. D. 25 4
An Eye Opener, by Zepa. Cloth, ... 75 12
Paper 50 04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story 15 2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster. 15 03
Analogy Between the Facts of the Bible and the Facts of Modern Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster. 15 02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle. 2.00 24
Biography of Satan, by R. Graves. Price 35 Cents
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child 1.00 12
Bible Marvels, (A Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle. 1 00
Beyond the Breakers 1 00
Bible, or views of life in the 1.50
..... by Robert Dale Owen 2.00
Book of Poems, by J. Wm. Van Namee. Cloth 75 8
Brotherhood of Price, by Hon. J. S. Adams, a book for Young Spiritualists 1.25 16
Bellgrand, by Professor W. Denton 15 4
Blessed Gods, or Hidden Mow To Learn 1.50 16
Dealings, Rise against the Laws of Life and Health, by A. E. Gardner, A. M. M. D. Paper 1.00 06
Cloth 1.25 12
Comber' Constitution of Man 1.75 16
Common Sense Thoughts on the Bible, by William Denton 10 02
Cosmology, by G. W. Ramsey, M. D. 1.00 20
Common Sense, by Thomas Paine 20 03
Christ Idea in History, H. Tuttle 1.25 16
Cluster Family, or the Curse of the Drunkard's Appetite, by Josie H. Friend, with an Introduction by H. C. Wright 1.00 12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M.D. 1.25 16
Christ Crucified, a Spiritual Exposition Superior to Christianity, —Wm. Denton. 10 02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by M. B. Craven. 1.50 16
Descent of man, by Darwin. Two Vols. ($2.00 per Vol.) 4.00 45
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Interesting History 1.50 20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the ninth edition of 1715 ..... 1.00 12
Devil's Pulpit, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life 1.00 20
Dawn. A Novel of intense interest to progressive people 1.75 24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph 75 12
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 4, cloth 75 12
Errors of the Bible. Demonstrated by the truths of Science, by Henry. G. Wright. Paper, 50 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth 50 4
Easter Hall, a Theological Romance 50 06
Evenings with the Mother, over the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright paper 50 04
Cloth 75 12
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen 1.75 24
Free Thoughts Concerning Religion, or Nature's a Theology, by A. J. Davis 20 2
Fugitive Wife, by Warren Chase. Paper 25 4
Festival Night, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Medium 5 2
Guide, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle 1.50 20
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase 20 04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 5 vols. viz: Vol. 1 The Physician. Vol. 2 The Teacher, Vol. 3. The Seer: Vol. 4. The Reformer: Vol. 5. The Thinker. each 1.50 20
Gymnic Manual for Teachers and Students 1.50 20
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle 1.25 16
God Doubter with Biography, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth, $1 00; postage, 15 cents. Paper, ... 75 06
Habits of Good Health, by Miss Lizzie Doten 1.75 20
Harbinger, or Gleanings from the Fens, by G. C. Stewart. 1.00 06
Health by Good Living W. W. Hall M. D. 1.00 12
Health by Exercise and Bath, by A. J. Davis 1.50 20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper 50 4
Cloth 75 12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper 50 8
Cloth 75 12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism 1.50 24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. C. Wright 1.25 12
How and Why I became a Spiritualist 75 12
Helen Harlow, by Mrs. J. Whitebreast 1.50 20
How to Paint, by F. J. Steele, A. M. Paper, 50 cts. Cloth 75 12
Gadgell Ex, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Sunny Alley 1.50 16
Hollow Globe 2.00 20
Harmonial Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Kindred Delusions exposed 1.25 16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe by J. W. Draper, M. D. LL. D. in 2 vols 4.00 60
Human Physiology, Statistical and Dynamical, or the Conditions and Course of the Life of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D. L. D. 600 pages, with 150 cuts 4.00 60
Hymns of the Spirit, (A Vols., 340 pages) each 2.00 40
Hat. By Mary E. W. Sharp 1.50 16
Hallelujah! by Mrs. F. Wilcoxson 1.50 16
Immortal Truths, a book for every child 30 4
Is the Bible Divine? by S. J. Finney, paper 50 8
Cloth 75 12
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con 25 2
Inquirer's Text Book, by Robert Cooper 1.50 16
Investigations Considerations from Sept. to Last, Mrs. M. E. Pratt, Medium 1.25 16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds 1.25 16
Inquirer's Text Book by Robert Cooper 1.25 16
Is it the Despair of Science? by W. D. Gunning 1.25 16
Forest of Hermoth, by Alexander Smyth 1.50 20
Jehovah Unveiled, or the Character of the Jewish Deity Delineated 50 4
Jesus 18 Ages: A Skeptical Treatment from the Pulpit, by Sarah M. Grimke. 1.75 20
Kidder's Secrets of Dry Keeping. Price, paper 50 06
Kidder's Secrets of Dry Keeping. Price, cloth 75 08
Kiss, (with explanatory notes, by George Saint'n. 60 pages, fine edition) 1.00 06
Kersey's Grammar, Illustrated 1.50 20
Life Line of the Lone One, by Warren Chase 1.00 12
Life of Thomas Paine 20 3
Life of Theodore Parker 1.50 16
Lyric of the Morning Land, by G. Vale 1.50 16
Lyceum Guide, by A. B. Child 1.00 16
Lyceum Manual, by A. B. Child, M. D. 1.00 16
Lyceum Banner, by J. M. Peebles 1.00 16
Lyceum Inspirational Guide, by J. M. Peebles 1.00 16
Lyceum Manual, by A. J. Davis 1.00 16
Lyceum Guide, by A. J. Davis 1.00 16
Lyceum Guide, by A. J. Davis 1.00 16
Lyceum Guide

From the Du Quoin Republican.

The Witchcraft Case.

Editor Republican: A correspondent of the Du Quoin Tribune, writing from Pitts Hill, over the title of Broad Guage, has evidently found a mare's nest in Williamson County, at which he cackles for the Tribune, and the Tribune for the public.

This correspondent has informed the people, through the great circulating medium of the Tribune, of extraordinary insanity in the cases of the Misses Williams, which has created much excitement for many miles around, and has called out hundreds of people of nights, to witness the extraordinary and superhuman feats which they perform.

This beneficent correspondent, Broad Guage, being evidently wiser than others of his community, has volunteered his services to enlighten the people as to the cause of the great mystery, and to thereby confer a great benefit upon the ignorant masses.

Some of the less knowing ones suggested witchcraft, as a solution of the mystery, at which Broad Guage demurred, notwithstanding the fact that he tells us that on dismounting at the house of Mr. Williams, he examined his horse's mane, to see if there were any stirrups in it, and gave orders to his steed to not allow witches to ride him some.

He tells us that the cold chills ran down his back, and that his feelings were indescribable when he saw the Misses Williams standing on the top of the house, looking like angels, fairies, or ghosts, singing a beautiful song, and swelling the quiet twilight air with heavenly music.

No doubt his mind was greatly relieved, and that he was enabled to wipe away the great rolls of perspiration that had accumulated on his brow, when the savan of the Tribune came to his rescue and informed him that it was the Devil.

We are indebted to the two for the first information that the Devil can use the human organism as an instrument through which to discourse heavenly music. In fact, we were not aware that the Devil was a musician at all.

But it seems that, upon reflection, Broad Guage was not fully satisfied that it was the Devil, after all. Casting about, he scented a report that a quack doctor had been seen about the premises. His perception of a new lead was sharpened to keenness, and the probable key with which to unlock the mystery was almost within his grasp. It might be that the quack doctor had been guilty of the heinous crime of duping! But when he was informed by physicians that there was no known drug that would make girls crazy enough to jump from the top of a barn thirty yards, to a tree, and cling—to hang on the eave of a house by their chins—to jump from the roof down, and pass through a hole in the gable end of a building, none too large for a man to crawl through—to catch flies and eat them—to pick up pins where none could be seen, and swallow them—his perplexity was none the less relieved, and he was enabled to shed about as much light upon the subject as a sandpaddle upon the moon.

But he was not willing to give it up so. He pushed his investigations farther. Somebody's reputation must suffer as an explanation of the mystery which he had not brains enough to solve, and this must serve as a sweet tit-bit for the Tribune.

Like the members of some of the wild African tribes who, when their chieftain dies, all become frantic, and rush wildly in search of somebody until they find the one who they suppose put the spell on their king, and then offer up his body as an atoning sacrifice to their heathen god,—so, in this case, somebody must suffer for the supposed crime of duping, mesmerizing mediumizing, or proselytizing in the wrong direction. One Hall seems to be the chosen victim.

Broad Guage strikes a new streak of light, which is the final climax. He says Mr. Williams, the father of the girls, who, he takes pains to tell us, is an uneducated man, whose muscle is better than his logic, paid him a visit, and informed him that, sometime since, one Hall, a Spiritual medium, Universalist preacher, doctor, etc., ingratiated himself into the family of Mr. Williams; that he (Mr. Williams) became a convert to the doctrine of Universalism, under Mr. Hall's preaching; that he—this ignorant old man—some time afterward got huffy at Hall—the reason why, he could not explain—and insulted him in his (William's) own house, when Hall and others had come home with his family from church to take dinner; that when Hall undertook to reason him out of his angry mood, Williams, finding his logic not so good as Hall's, turned upon him and gave him a sound thrashing.

Some time after this extraordinary affair, the girls went crazy.

Now, to put on a clincher, Broad Guage tells us that Mr. Williams is down on quack doctors, renounces Universalism, and curses Spiritualism. These facts he says, give the only explanation to the strange cases, and from this astounding revelation, the cocoa-headed editor of the Tribune goes into ecstacies and proclaims that the veil is lifted! A rascal exposed!

He praises his correspondent and thinks everybody ought to thank him for ferreting out the mystery and exposing the rascal. He goes on to moralize—"Doctors, above all professional men, save ministers of the gospel, should possess honor, virtue and decency." We say so too: and we say further, that editors should possess honor, virtue, and decency, and at least a small share of brains.

We will also suggest that it is in bad taste in a preacher who has a dark side to his own moral character to write up the dark side of the preacher of another denomination, even though he had the evidence of his guilt. We are personally acquainted with Mr. Hall, and will vouch for him as good a moral character as is possessed by either Broad Guage or the editor of the Tribune.

We propose to lift another veil, notwithstanding the fact that the Tribune informs us that Broad Guage was well guarded in his exposition.

The whole thing is an underhand thrust at a large class of religionists who embrace in their number many of the brightest intellects of the age, as well as the purest character, whose moral examples their persecutors would do well to follow—a people who teach a philosophy whose sublime and pure than either the correspondent or the editor of the Tribune ever dreamed of, who invite all scientific minds to criticise their theory, and who will bow with gratefulness to all unspotted characters who will criticise their morals.

We entertain no malice toward either the correspondent or the editor, but we hope that their prejudices may not give way toward sentiments that the brains of the correspondent, as well as those of the editor may become mediums through which may flow much knowledge to the people, instead of being, as at present, the sewers through which flow the gossip, malice, and prejudice of ignorant people.

We hope those unfortunate girls will soon be restored to health and happiness, and their character shielded from the insults of the ignorant and vulgar; that a scientific solution may be given to the matter, nobody's reputation injured, the parents consoled, and the people made the wiser. SPIRITUALIST.

"What Is It?"

BRO. JONES:—In your last issue, I see two articles headed as above, in which the phenomena exhibited by the two daughters of Mr James Williams have, by some been ascribed to Witchcraft, and especially so by the young ladies themselves.

This is another instance of the ills resulting from false teaching—and there can be no doubt that the belief on the part of the girls is the cause of their condition, and of the phenomena which are nightly exhibited through them. But to explain why these young ladies are so effected.

There can be no doubt that both are mediumistic, or natural somnambulists—and because they believe that a certain person, supposed to be a witch, has power over them at a certain time, the effects which are witnessed follow that belief—solely because they think or believe that they will—and falling into the somnambulic condition, every evening (for their are clear-minded), frolicsome or mischievious spirits take advantage of their condition and control them—hence, all the "wonderful" results which follow—but do so, only because all who are connected with the young ladies are ignorant of the laws of somnambulism or spirit control.

The only remedy is to teach the girls the truth in regard to [illegible] somnambulic control themselves from entering the [illegible] condition, by an act of their own will, and they [illegible] exercise it if they make the effort, the consequences of ignorance and of a false belief, will cease in an instant.

When will the Doctors of the church and of physic look at things in their true light?

Fraternally,

WM. B. FAHNESTOCK.

Lancaster, July 11th, 1871.

E. V. Wilson's Appointments for August, 1871.

August 4th, 5th, 6th—Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, we will speak in Lowell, Indiana,—a three days meeting; free to all. The friends in Lowell, know how to conduct a revival. Let all come to the feast of reason and communion of souls. This will be our only visit to Indiana this year. The friends will send some one to meet us at Crown Point, on Friday morning, the 4th of August.

August 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th,—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, we will lecture in Princeton, Ill., four lectures. On Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 11th, 12th, and 13th, we will lecture in Morris, Grundy Co., Ill., giving four lectures. On Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, August 18th, 19th, 20th, we will give four lectures in Maquoketa, Iowa. We will speak in Independence, Iowa, on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, August 22nd, 23rd, and 24th, three lectures. We will lecture in Cedar Falls, Iowa, on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, August 25th, 26th, and 27th, four lectures.

At Shell Rock, Iowa, we will lecture on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings, August 28th, 29th, 30th, and 31st, 1871.

We will lecture in Minnesota during September, 1871. Headquarters at St. Paul.

Parties addressing us during August and September, will address us at the places where we are on Sundays. Please remember this.

Letter from H. C. Parker.

BROTHER JONES:—The friends of progress may be glad to know that even in this distant corner, the cause of Spiritualism has many brave defenders, and is surely advancing over all the obstacles that ignorance and bigotry, under the name of orthodox religion, can throw in its way.

The masses here are wonderfully priest-ridden, and regard and persecute every one as a heretic or infidel, who dares reject their church dogmas, or to call in question the validity of their Bible as they interpret it. They hold that we should blindly accept the doctrines taught by the churches as of Bible authority, and as too sacred to be weighed in the balance of reason and common sense. They still think a brimstone Hell is absolutely necessary to make men good, and still invest old Split-Foot and various smaller devils with a great deal of power, such as leading Spiritualists astray by personating their departed friends.

They can not deny all the phenomena of Spiritualism, but hold that it only devils and wicked spirits communicate. They think it would be just like their God to let loose legions of devils and wicked spiritsto lead mankind astray, while he keeps all the good shut up in Heaven, no matter how much they may desire to return to earth and shield their loved ones from the influence of the devils and wicked spirits let loose upon them. They regard it as horribly heretical to believe that a pious mother returns to lead her children in the path of virtue, but hold that it is orthodox to believe that devils and wicked spirits return to lead the sons in the path of sin.

They are now growing terribly alarmed at the rapid spread of that "most dangerous kind of immorality and infidelity, called Spiritualism," and have sounded a truce among themselves, and have resolved to unite in crushing out this terrible enemy, that threatens to swallow them up together.

Their feast have lately been greatly increased by the arrival among us of Rev. A. J. Fishback, who delivered a course of five powerful lectures on Spiritualism. His affable manners, his deep earnestness, his undoubted sincerity, won for him the confidence of all, while his unanswerable arguments made those institutions of ignorance, superstition and intolerance called churches, tremble. Rev. Mr. Horn, of the M. E. Church South while he refused to meet Brother Fishback in debate, took refuge in his own church, where none could reach him, and let himself loose in a tirade of abuse and misrepresentation against Spiritualism. Brother Fishback remained over one day longer than he had intended, to reply to this so-called argument, and never did I see a man more completely used up than this poor Horn was. Brother Fishback then challenged him again to debate, but he backed down. I then challenged him and he backed down, but concluded to retreat again into his church, where none of us can reach him, and there make his reply.

We will further R. V. Wilcox, who is soon to be here, with the notes of this discourse, and if he finds the game worthy of his notice, Mr. Horn will receive another drubbing. Bro. Fishback has well cleared the ground, and prepared the way for Wilcox, who, we hope, will tear up all the old, rotten stumps of error and superstition.

Springfield, Mo., June 18, 1871.

AN HONEST MAN OR WOMAN when they desire a newspaper discontinued, inclose arrearages, and say so. Exceptions to this rule are almost invariably found among church members, or those leaning that way. They trump up a pious lie to get rid of paying honest dues. Such people will be prompt ly exposed, so far as this paper is concerned.

Letter from H. H. Smith.

BROTHER JONES:—We are progressing finely. Last Sunday, a week ago, we dedicated a hall to humanity, in and out of the earthly form, to be called Liberty Hall, where all can think and speak for themselves, and they alone be responsible therefor; where belief has nothing to do with our actions or sayings. Those that believe that spirits communicate, or do not, can have an equal chance. We unite for humanity, and to do the greatest good to the greatest number, agreeing to disagree, and running our chances with all others in having Spiritualism come out in the ascendency. If we have the best talkers, and truth with us, it will come out uppermost and be established; if not, it will fail.

We keep our Lyceum going, and shall try to make it a success. We had Brother Potter with us, and Sister Colburn gave the opening address, which was appropriate, and well received. Brother Potter, Brother Thomas, Brother Fuller, Brother Thayer, Brother Campbell, and Sister Fuller, all acquitted themselves well in speaking, and friends from a distance, and our own friends, listened with attention and appreciation to those noble and soul-cheering sentiments, so nobly and profoundly uttered by all who attempted to speak on that occasion. It was a feast of fat things,—especially the thirty dollars donated by the audience to our society, for the purpose of finishing our Hall, which is only enclosed, and the floor down.

May liberty, charity, and a forgiving spirit, ever rule in our midst, till all sect and party strife cease, and we become as one, believing that our friends and ministering spirits that have left the form can, and do come to us through the laws of Mesmerism in all its phases, and proclaim to us facts of their existence, and teach us the science of life, so much needed and sought for by all liberal minds and free-thinkers.

Osseo, Minn., June 26, 1871.

Testimonial.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON, 148 Fourth Avenue, the celebrated healing medium, received the following application for diagnosis and prescription:

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON:—Please find inclosed three dollars and a lock of my hair. I am a young man, twenty-one years of age—always having had good health until the last of August, 1870, when I was taken with the chills and fever, and have had them ever since—sometimes every day, sometimes every other day, and sometimes every third day; it only being broke for one and two weeks at a time, by my taking quinine and patent medicines. I had my last chill yesterday, evening. It lasted full two hours, and then a very severe headache and fever set in, which lasted about eight hours.

Please send prescription as soon as possible, and oblige.

Yours with much respect,
EUGENE A. B. HATCH.

Peotone, Ill., June 18, 1871.

Mrs. Robinson, under spirit control, diagnosed the case and prescribed a remedy, and the following letter shows the result:

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON:—I took the medicine you prescribed for me, ten days. Had one chill the day after I began taking it, but have not had one since. I think that I am well, and hereafter when I am sick, I shall write for your excellent assistance.

Yours truly,
EUGENE A. B. HATCH.

Peotone, Ill., June 30, 1871.

Hundreds of the worst cases, treated and cured, simply by letters through the mails, by the above-named medium, are never reported to the public. In many cases, the patients do not like to have their names go before the public.

☞ IF MISS LOU M. HOPPER will communicate with her friends in Cincinnati, she will afford them much pleasure.

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled THE SUNDAY QUESTION, AND SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.

This work consists of 123 large, closely printed pages. It is an exhaustive review of the so-called Sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, to any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we will send the three work and the JOURNAL for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the JOURNAL three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called LIFE'S DIFFICULTIES, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the JOURNAL will avail him or herself of this generous offer, and thus secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street Chicago, Ill.

☞ We are in want of dues for the JOURNAL. When it is not convenient to pay all, let us have a part, as an earnest of a good will. Wake up! we are in earnest.

Bible in India and Hindoo New Testament.

We will send the above-named rare books free of postage, on receipt of $3.50.

ABSTRACT OF COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was not written by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets, from 1300 to 586 B. C. The abstract is of five volumes in 64 pages. Price 20 cents. AMERICAN NEWS CO., N. Y. v10 n3 tf

REPLY OF WASH. A. DANSKIN, ESQ., PRESIDENT of the First Spiritualist Congregation of Baltimore, to Rev. Thomas E. Bond, D.D. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale at the office of the paper.

Fruit Spangler's Positive and Negative Powders, for sale at this office.
Address, S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

[THIRD EDITION, REVISED AND CORRECTED.]

JUST PUBLISHED!

A Complete and Truthful History of that Good Man and

PRINCE OF MEDIUMS,

Jesus of Nazareth

BY

PAUL AND JUDAS.

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most

REMARKABLE WORK

in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, PAUL and JUDAS, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, merging all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely-printed pages.

PRICE, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

ATTRACTIVE NEW BOOKS.

ERNEST RENAN'S WORKS.

THE LIFE OF JESUS.—THE LIFE OF SAINT PAUL.—AND THE LIVES OF THE APOSTLES.

These three remarkable books, by the great French Philosopher, are attracting the earnest attention of all readers. They are of great power and interest, and are beautifully and elegantly written, beautiful in style, admirable in treatment, and filled with reverence, tenderness, and warmth of heart.
 Price $1.75 each; postage 20 cents.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA;

Or; the Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation. Translated from the French of Louis Jacolliot. A remarkable volume, which is making a great sensation in Europe, and exciting the profoundest attention of thinking people.  Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

HABITS OF GOOD SOCIETY.

A hand-Book for Ladies and Gentlemen; with hints and anecdotes concerning nice points of taste, good manners, and the art of making one's self agreeable. The best and most entertaining book on the subject ever published.
 Price $1.75; postage 20 cents.

THE ART OF CONVERSATION,

With directions for Self-Culture. Teaching the art concerning with ease and propriety, and setting forth the rules for acquiring the power to appear to advantage in good society. A book of real merit and intrinsic worth.
Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

THE ARTS OF WRITING, READING, AND SPEAKING.

A remarkably clever book that every one, whether educated or not, will find of immense advantage and profit. A capital companion for that ever popular work, THE ART OF CONVERSATION.  Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

☞ These books are all beautifully printed and handsomely bound in cloth covers, with gilt backs.

For sale wholesale and retail by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

NEW EDITION—REVISED AND CORRECTED.

THE VOICES

Three Poems.

VOICE OF SUPERSTITION.
VOICE OF NATURE.
VOICE OF A PEBBLE.

By Warren Sumner Barlow.

THIS volume is startling in its originality of purpose, and is destined to make deeper inroads among poetical an bigots than any work that has hitherto appeared.

THE VOICE OF SUPERSTITION takes the creeds at their word, and reviews by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary!

THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes. While others have too often only demolished, this author has erected a beautiful Temple on the ruins of Superstition. Judge Baker, of New York, in his review of this poem, says: "It will unquestionably endure the test to be classed among the ablest and most original didactic poets of the age."

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality in matter and the eternal Oneness and Love.

The book is a repository of original thought, awaking noble conceptions of God and man, humble and pleasing in its tone, and one of the works that will grow with its years and mature with the centuries. It is already admired by its thousands of readers.

Printed in beautiful type, on heavy, fine paper, bound in beveled boards, in gold style; nearly 200 pages. Price $1.50, postage 16 cents. Very liberal discount to the trade. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

AN EYE-OPENER.

"CITATHUR PAR PIGAULT"

LE BRUN,

DOUBTS OF INFIDELS.

Embodying Thirty Important Questions to the Clergy; also, Forty Close Questions to the Doctors of Divinity.

BY ZEPA.

☞ For sale at the office of the paper.
Price, in cloth, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In paper, 50 cents; postage, 6 cents.

ROSICRUCIA!!!

THE "ROAD TO POWER!!" SEXUAL SCIENCE! F. B. Dowd's Private Lectures to Ladies and Gentlemen. A pamphlet of 60 pages, containing prindples, practice and advice beyond price. Ignorance is the curse of mankind. Price 50 cents. For sale by the author, F. B. Dowd, Davenport, Iowa.
v10 n15 tf.

THE

VOICE OF PRAYER,

A Poem by W. S. Barlow, Author of "The Voices."

This little poem is fully equal to any of Mr. Barlow's best efforts, and should be read by everybody.

Printed on fine tinted paper with blue line border. Price 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Deo hominem externum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN HELMONT.

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutatory, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Test or trial packages mailed free for 25 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 72 I St., Washington, D. C.
v10 n11 tf

THE

HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF
M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,
AND WRITTEN BY
PROF. WM. F. LYON.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"THIS book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of [illegible],—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought, which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"THE central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of these chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed within the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture that may be found in the unexplored open Polar Sea, and this opening can be easily explored by a broad and deep channel leading from one surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail or steam either way; with as much facility as they can pass through any other waters of our most crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be fully consistent with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12 mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1785 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON,

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskrit, or ancient language of the Brahmins.

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS

OR THE

WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE

REVEALED TO MAN.

The Medium, in his address to the public says: The Medium (David Corlies, of Huntley's Grove McHenry County, Illinois) through whom this work was given, has been a careful observer of the phenomena of "Modern Spiritualism" for over twenty years and during that time he has been the humble Medium through which hundreds of philosophical and scientific lectures have been given to attentive listeners. Of himself, he can only say he is an unassuming tested farmer, far advanced in years. He asks for this production no credit, but entirely disclaims personal merit.

The Introduction entitled "The Unveiling," treats of man as the grand objective ultimate of Life's Unfoldings.

He also stands at the pinnacle of all organized Life in the native purity of all things.

On page twenty-four, the author treats of "the way mediums paint likenesses, in the true order of the development of the arts and sciences.

In part second, under the general head of mysteries Revealed, the author treats of "How Mankind Manifest their presence through Physical Bodies of Mediums. How the writing is done. How we influence Mediums to speak. The fullness of all kinds of language is posited. The ring fest and the carrying of Musical Instruments around the room explained."

This work is neatly got up and consists of seventy-three closely printed pages and we hesitate not to say that it contains more original thought upon important subjects, a few only of which we have enumerated, than any other work of equal size we have seen.

 Price 50 cents; postage, 5 cents. For sale wholesale and retail by the publishers, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

THE

Descent of Man,

AND

Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 600 pp. each, Price $3.50 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

EXPRESS!

THE "EXPRESS" and other Rubber Goods,

FOR

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send stamp for circular. Address: "EXPRESS" Co. 189 Clark St., Room 19 Chicago.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause; she only asks a hearing. [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR. CHICAGO, AUGUST 5, 1871. VOL. X.—NO. 20.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

I DREAMED I RESTED ON THE SLOPE.

BY C. A. LOWE.

I dreamed I rested on the slope
Of a bleak mountain, lone and high;
Afar were grief and joy and hope,
Above I heard the eagle's cry.

"And here," I said, "will I abide,
Afar from cruelty and wrong;
No human ills shall me betide,
And Nature here will make me strong."

Thus day by day and hour by hour
I waited Nature's touch in vain;
More abject grew, and suffered more,
From olden grief, from present pain,—

Till weary of my aimless life,
I sought the haunts of men again,
Grieved for their hate, deplored their strife,
Hoped with their hopes and felt their pain.

My dream is past, my strength renewed,
My lesson practiced day by day;
Self-love's exclusive pride,
I tranquil walk my destined way.

THE NEW FORCE.

A Scientific Testing of Mr. Home the So-Called Spiritualist—Curious Phenomena.

The Popular Science Review for July, which is edited by Mr. Crookes, an eminent chemist, and a Fellow of the Royal Society, contains an account by himself—partly confirmed and attested also by Dr. Huggins, the eminent astronomer, whose great and quite recent services in relation to the astronomical application of spectrum analysis have been acknowledged in all quarters, and who is one of the most distinguished members of the Royal Society, and by Mr. Sergeant Cox, both of whom were present—of some very curious experiments made on Mr. Home's asserted physical powers as a medium, as it is called, though, of course, no countenance is lent by the experimentor or his friends to the hypothesis of the agency of invisible beings of which the word "medium" is a remnant. Mr. Crookes and Mr. Sergeant Cox both seem convinced that these experiments prove the existence of a peculiar force which they call "psychic," proceeding directly from the nervous system of specially constituted persons, and which is exerted independently of the muscular system, probably propagated, suggests Mr. Sergeant Cox, who, as the least scientific, is the readiest of these speculator inquiries, through that "nerve-atmosphere of various intensity enveloping the human structure" which Dr. Richardson has discovered. Dr. Huggins, the most eminent scientific man of the three, is by far the most cautious and reserved in his statements. He gives in his general adherence to Mr. Crooke's account of the experiments—"your proof appears to me to contain a correct statement of what took place in my presence at your house," but as to one of the most curious facts involved in it—namely, that an accordion continued to float about "without any visible support" in the copper-wire cage contrived for it by Mr. Crookes, after Mr. Home's hand had been entirely withdrawn, and, under these circumstances, to play musical airs without being touched by any hand—Dr. Huggins states that his position at the table did not permit him to be a witness to the withdrawal of Mr. Home's hand from the accordion, though he writes to Mr. Crookes that "such was stated at the time to be the case by yourself and by the person sitting on the other side of Mr. Home." He adds, "the experiments appear to me to show the importance of further investigation; but I wish it to be understood that I express no opinion as to the cause of the phenomena which took place." Dr. Huggins' evidence is of the greater weight, so far as it goes, from the great caution and reserve with which he gives it. He appears to confir generally the accuracy of Mr. Crooke's description, except as to the performances of the caged accordion, when Mr. Home's hand was removed; but he evidently does not regard the experiments as going further than to justify and even show "the importance" of further investigation. Even this from such a witness as Dr. Huggins is remarkable testimony.

But what was the precise nature of the facts to which, supposing them to be amply authenticated by future tests, such as Dr. Huggins himself would regard as satisfactory, these experiments point? It is this—that in the presence of certain specially-gifted or specially organized individuals (whether the facts, if true, depend on the organization, or on the power of will, or on the nervous sensibility—in a word, on what they do depend—is at present all a matter of speculation), a force develops itself which produces, without contact, many of the results of muscular effort directed by a trained musical taste and ear. For example, Mr. Crookes (all whose test machinery had been prepared without the smallest knowledge, on Mr. Home's part, Mr. Home seeing it for the first time when he entered Mr. Crookes' house, had prepared a mahogany board three feet long by nine and one-half inches wide, and one inch thick, one end of which rested on a firm table, and the other was supported by "a spring balance hanging from a substantial tripod stand," with "a self-registering index" attached. Then, any pressure exerted on this board at any point nearer to the balance than the spot where it was supported on the table, tended to depress the end supported by the balance to an extent registered by the index—the board moving round the table-support as a round a fulcrum. Mr. Crookes, to test the balance, stood on one foot at the end of the board nearest the table, and Dr. Huggins said that the whole weight of his body then applied (140 pounds) only sank the index at the other end to an amount equivalent to one and a half pounds if applied to the balance-end, when he stood still, and to two pounds when he jerked up and down. Mr. Home, sitting in a low easy chair, simply applied his fingers lightly to the exact point where the board rested on the table (so that even hard pressure there would have only had the effect of securing the fulcrum instead of depressing the other end of the mahogany board), and under these conditions the opposite end was depressed by an amount widely varied, as if in waves, between three and one-half pounds and six pounds, which was the maximum attained.

This experiment was in some respects the most curious, as being the one which was in every respect most above-board—both literally and morally—and which was apparently fully attested by Dr. Huggins, as well as by Mr. Sergeant Cox and Mr. Crookes. If repeated often enough in the presence of competent witnesses, it would undoubtedly show the real existence of some new force not due to muscular exertion.

The other experiment was made with an accordion imprisoned in a drum-shaped cage of Mr. Crookes' own invention, the cage being made of lathes of wood and copper-wire to prevent access from outside; but this cage was placed beneath the table, and though Mr. Sergeant Cox and Mr. Crookes both seemed to have watched it there, and to have taken what they believed to be very careful guarantees that Mr. Home was not juggling, there can hardly be so much confidence placed in the reality of the facts asserted as in the case of the lever experiment. The cage was so made as to surround the accordion entirely, but not quite to touch the top of the table, leaving space enough to admit one of Mr. Homes' hands so far as to enable him to hold the accordion by the top. The observers on each side kept their feet on Mr. Homes' feet to prevent any use of them, and one of Mr. Homes' hands was placed on the table and carefully observed, the other at first held the accordion by the top, but the rest of the accordion was completely inside the cage, so as to be inaccessible. Held in this position, the accordion first began to vibrate and then to play tunes inside the cage. Mr. Crookes swept that he saw his hand on that hand of Mr. Home which held the instrument, and that he found it absolutely still at the very moment the instrument was playing. Nay, he asserts, as we have already stated, that when Mr. Home removed his hand altogether and put both of them above the table, the accordion continued to float and play tunes inside the cage with no apparent support. Of course, as we have said, these asserted facts must be taken with great reserve, unless verified with sufficent repetition under every guarantee the scientific world may suggest. But should they be verified, and we think the existing testimony is quite sufficent to make this hypothesis conceivable, a good many more matters should be carefully investigated; for instance, this—whether any tune could be so played which Mr. Home himself could not play on the accordion, or any with which none of the persons present were able to play on the accordion, or any which none of those present were even acquainted, or whether, if none of these cases happened, it was only Mr. Home's knowledge of music, or indifferently that of any other of the persons present, which the tune appeared to resemble. One thing is certain, that if the facts asserted be true at all, the force moving the accordion must be in some way connected with a musically educated mind. The wind does not execute even "a well-known sweet and plaintive melody" on the Æolian harp. The movements of the accordion must clearly have been governed by the musical associations of some mind, and whether these were voluntary or involuntary—and either the one or the other is quite conceivable—it would be possible, one would think, to determine the mind in which they originated. Supposing the fact established, there is in it little that is more wonderful than the power of absolutely writing by telegraph, so many specific vibrations given to the wires at one end, cause given words to be written off at the other—for, of course, if there really be a "nerve atmosphere of various intensity round each individual," the vibrations given to such an atmosphere by distinct acts of thought, might produce corresponding contractions in the accordion. This is, however, purely speculative; but if these things are true at all, it must be determinable whether the mental source of the tune played by the accordion is, and no point could be of greater interest. The analogy would be close—though there would be one great difference—with established facts of the kind sometimes called electro-biological. We have been repeatedly assured by men of the highest trustworthiness that the power belongs to men of certain temperament, to influence by strong, silent will the action of certain other persons, so that, by expending a great deal of silent effort—for instance, on this desire that a given man shall scratch the tip of his left ear, that man is at last compelled, with no knowledge what for of the reason, to scratch the tip of his left ear. That such facts as these have been repeatedly verified is, we believe, certain. And the only difference in this case may be that the same kind of effect is produced on the motions of an inanimate object like an accordion—certainly most curious, as the facts we have alluded to are, also, most curious—but certainly, also, not more impossible than the others. What, however, we now wish to insist on is that there is prima facie evidence, a true bill found, which ought to be sent for scientific trial, in relation to this matter. Even Dr. Huggins declares this much; and Dr. Huggins is an authority such as no scientific man will dare for a moment to dispute. Whether there be "a new force" on the eve of discovery is not yet proved; but that there is sufficent suspicion of the existence of such a force to render it most desirable that the scientific world should either confirm or explode the hypothesis of its existence, and, in the former case, study its laws, is hardly disputable.

From the Chicago Times.

"Nerve Atmosphere."

The fact that riotous outbreaks occurred almost simultaneously in London, Vienna, Dublin and New York has been noted as great favoring the hypothesis that there is some subtle and secret means of mental communication between human beings physically far apart. "We need only to suppose," says a cotemporary, "this globe to be surrounded by an invisible atmosphere which vibrates with the shock of mind as the air does with sound, to understand how a riotous spirit in New York can be transmitted to cities three or four thousand miles away, without the intervention of any of the ordinary means of communicating thought and emotion."

Apart from the fascination which such theories always posses for imaginative and unphilosophical minds, there are numerous recorded facts that seem to support this particular one, visionary as at first thought it appears to be. The argument from an epidemic mob or war spirit has its weight, but it is not nearly so strong as that supplied by the numerous recorded instances where distressing tidings have been borne long distances, as if upon the wings of light. Many of these might be cited, but one well-authenticated case will suffice. A number of years ago, a student in Amherst college left from a scaffolding and sustained an injury of the spine, from which he subsequently died. At the moment of the accident, the young man's mother, who was many miles distant, experienced a violent shock, and received a powerful impression that some dreadful calamity had befallen her absent son. She told her husband and induced him to consent to her immediate departure for Amherst.

Well-attested phenomena of this description present themselves by the hundreds. They cannot be set to the account of accident or the mere whimsies of disordered or highly-excitable minds. They are facts in the world of mind which remain to be scientifically sifted. They are a very different character, and far less questionable than pretended premonitions, which may generally be set down as mere forebodings for which there may be sufficent known ground, or abundant cause in the physical condition of the individual. We all have "premonitions," and that very often, nine-tenths of which prove false. Ten tenth which, prove true is trumpeted to the world as something extraordinary, whereas, in fact, there is nothing extraordinary about it. A colonel, about to mount his horse and lead his regiment into action, passed with one foot in the stirrup, rested his head for some moments in the pommel of the saddle, turned, re-entered his tent, and wrote, "Send Henry home with my body." He then mounted and entered the fight, and within an hour was shot dead. His case proves nothing with respect to premonitions, one way or the other. He may have been forewarned of his death, or he may merely have felt those apprehensions which most men feel on going into battle, or he may have known that he would be exposed to unusual dangers.

The colonel's "premonition" does not greatly tax our philosophy. It may be readily accounted for on known principles. Not so of the tidings communicated to the Massachusetts mother. Not so of the knowledge of his brother's death imparted to Louis de Francais,—supposing the story of the Corsican brothers to be founded on fact. These are facts which our philosophy has not yet succeeded in explaining, and which we are forced to refer to some supernatural or hypothetical medium or agent of transmission, unless we reject them altogether; and that we cannot do without rejecting the testimony of thousands who can have no adequate motive for practicing deception. The presumption against them is by no means so strong as it is against the reality of premonitions, because they do not presuppose fore-knowledge or supernatural interposition. They allege the communication of things past and known, and not of things future and unknown. They are, therefore, proper subjects of scientific inquiry.

Indeed, these phenomena are by no means wholly at variance with common experience. How often do we hear persons profess their ability to detect the presence of others near them, without the aid of the recognized senses. And how often do we feel one's company to be agreeable, or the reverse, when we have neither seen nor heard him, but simply know that he is near. Probably all persons who have performed literary labor can testify that when they are engaged in writing, the mere silent and apparently harmless presence of certain persons is extremely annoying and distracting, while the presence of others may be either a matter of indifference or a positive stimulus. These influences often appear to be wholly independent of previous impressions concerning the persons who silently exert them. These facts of common experience, as well as those of unusual occurrence before referred to, at least suggest that mind may act on mind in a way not familiar to us, if indeed they do not prove that it does so as at all times.

After making all allowance for imposture, the [illegible] of the "mediums" give color to [illegible] that mind can act upon matter, [illegible] in strange ways. [illegible] made by Mr. Home, in the presence of the English investigators, is thus described:

"A lever was provided, so arranged that an ordinary man pressing with his whole weight on one end of it would exert a pressure at the other end—measured by a spring balance—of from one and a half to two pounds. Mr. Home, by merely touching the finger of one hand to this lever, at a point the least favorable to himself, produced a depression which the balance showed to be equal to from three and one-half to six pounds."

The investigators, Huggins, Crookes, and Cox, were satisfied that in this and other experiments equally strange no deception was practiced, and two of them were of opinion that the results were produced through the agency of what they call a "nerve atmosphere," enveloping the bodies of all men, but more intense in some cases than in others. May it not be that they have only obtained a glimpse of the truth? May it not appear eventually that this "nerve atmosphere" is something more than a personal emanation or attendent of each individual? May it not prove to be a universal medium, through which mind can transmit influences to remote mind and matter? May it not be that the difference between Home and ordinary mortals is that he knows how to avail himself of this medium, while they do not? There would be nothing more wonderful in this discovery than in some others that have been made since the world began. There is nothing more inherently improbable about the existence of a nerve or aura mind atmosphere, than there is about the known connection between mind and matter. The power a man possesses to raise his arm is wonderful and mysterious. The power to raise a stick or a stone by nerve volition could hardly be more so.

We forbear to speculate about the possible fruits of the discovery and development of a hitherto unsuspected power of mind over distant mind and over matter extraneous to the physical organism. Mr. Home's lever experiment is suggestive. By a touch of his finger, he exerts a force greater than that exerted by the weight of an ordinary man's body. Is steam then to be superseded by will? Why not? And what limit can be assigned to the power? If a whale, with his inferior brain, can propel his huge bulk with a force equal to that put forth by a good-sized steamboat, why may not the nobler brain of man pull up mountains by the roots by sheer volition? Is the telegraph to be superseded by the medium? Why not? If the Amherst student, untaught in the use of the nerve atmospheric telegraph, could notify his distant mother that he was dying with a broken back, assuredly the coming man of Darwin will be able to transmit the market reports from Chicago to Hong Kong, to whisper the news to his friends at the antipodes, by agitating the mind air, as he will know how to do. But alas for the newspapers, in these days, when everybody will be in spiritino-telegraphic rapport with every where!

The Philosophy of Life—Spiritualism—solves the mysterious problem. A guardian spirit of the son impressed the mother with the fact. To her it was a violent shock—a veritable reality. —ED. RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

From the Chicago Evening Post.

SPIRITUALISM.

A Lay Sermon.

A cable dispatch from London on Wednesday disclosed the fact that Professor Crooks, Doctor Huggins and Sergeant Cox, three eminent English scholars, have at last resolved to enter upon a calm and fearless examination of the claims of the phenomena of Spiritualism, especially the phase of those phenomena that are manifested by the somewhat famous American now in Europe, Daniel D. Home.

This determination should be hailed with warm approval by the thinking world. For some twenty years, now, the attitude of learned chemists, philosophers, and scholars generally, toward the development of this curious system which is called Spiritualism, has been simply disgraceful to science. Like common superstitious mortals, they have hesitated to cross what Emenemoser calls "the great ill-famed land of the marvellous;" when the principal purpose and mission of science is to demonstrate that there is no such realm within the sight of mortals. Compte is right when he predicates that all sublunary things are soluble in the crucible of the human brain, and that the realm of science has no horizon that can not be traversed. Called to the noblest mission under heaven, scientific men have sat down supinely in the presence of Spiritualism, turned their backs on it, and said, "We decline to investigate its claims, but we decide against the existence of the alleged phenomena on a priori grounds. It can not be that such things are not within the range of our own experience. That is all there is about it." Thus supreme science, when it should have been humble, has dogmatised; when it should have been alert and vigilant, has played the sluggard; when it should have been philosophical, has decided a grave question on the same grounds that Tycho Brahe decided that the earth was not spherical, and did not revolve around the sun.

Meantime, Spiritualism, has gone on from strength to strength. Nothing is to be gained by underestimating the number of its adherents or the rate of its progress. During twenty years, it has grown faster than any other American sect. From its origin with three persons sitting around an old table in Hydesville, N. Y., in 1848, it has grown to include millions, and is now sweeping over other countries like the wind. It has made tens of thousands of proselytes from every organized denomination, and has given little or nothing in return. It has scores of organs, and is bold, aggressive, and even bitterly belligerent in their character. It has its lyceums and trance-speakers in every ward of every city, and its open or secret circles in every country town. At every point of tangency with unbelievers, it is fiercely defiant, asking no quarter and giving none. And it numbers among its champions, not merely the ignorant and credulous, but very large numbers of intelligent and educated people. Such a vigorous system as this, neither Science nor Christianity can afford either to ignore or despise. They must meet it upon its own ground and fight it manfully, or it will have its own way.

Thus far, its claims have generally been met by sneers, and by supercilious dogmatisings about "inherent improbability." Instead of going at an investigation open-eyed, scientific men have scouted clairvoyance, clairaudience, psychology, impressibility, and all the more novel claims of Spiritualism, with simply "poh-poh!" It is high time this puerile method was abandoned, for the pooh-pooh era has passed away forever. The claims of the rappers, tippers, slate writers, and spirit-seers must be met upon their merits. There is no doubt that a very large proportion—possibly a majority—of the strange manifestations put forth by mediums, are either forgeries or phantasies, resulting on the one hand from wanton deception on the part of the performer, and, on the other, from illusion and delusion on the part of the spectator. The human mind strongly tends to absorb the marvelous, and, in its behalf to exaggerate what has thus been presented to the senses; and persons who fancy they are commissioned as telegraphic agents between the seen and unseen worlds—the land of bodies and the land of souls—must be subjected to an extraordinary and peculiar temptation to help the spirit messenger, and thus gratify the sitter and attest the genuineness of their mission. Frances Power Cobb's "unconscious cerebration" may also account for some things now attributed to spirits.

But after these considerations have had their full weight, and have accounted for all they can—after we have subtracted the results of imposture, insanity, vertigo, hallucination, the odic force, nervous eccentricities, and all unexplored muscular action, there still remains a large residum of well attested facts to be accounted for. Of this statement no sane person can entertain a doubt, who has made a fearless, conscientious and faithful exploration of the field. It is no longer safe to treat these facts with ridicule or with flippant indifference. Such men as Judge Edmonds, Professor Hare, and Professor Denton, as well as hundreds of thousands who know nothing about science, testify that they have witnessed phenomena which they believed not to have been produced by the ordinary agencies with which they are familiar; and many of the crowned heads of Europe, whose guest he has been, have already borne witness to his having seen Home's body carried about the room without visible power, and his hand lying unhurt in a bed of burning coals. Are these men all mistaken? Or do they all conspire to affirm a lie? If either of these hypothesis be true, it certainly furnishes one of the most remarkable examples of erratic mentality that the history of the world has known. Or, on the other hand, if they are not mistaken, and tell the truth, it is high time that such men as Faraday and Sir David Brewster in England, and Pierce, Agassiz and Felton in our own country, got rid of their wretched and ignorant affectations, and went seriously at the work of enlightening the people. Professor Crooks, the chemist, Doctor Huggins, the astronomer, and Sergeant Cox, the advocate, believe they have already discovered the existence of a sensitive nerve atmosphere enveloping the medium. Very well; so far, so good. Now let them press on, and ascertain and demonstrate how intelligence reaches out its lever through this delicate envelope, and moves on persons and things beyond. To be told that "it is electricity" is no answer at all. It is plain that during the next century the most startling discoveries are to be made in the recondite realm of psychology—in the shadowy region of twilight just beyond the solid plane where science has hitherto set its feet. In disclosing the method of the action of mind on mind, and of mind on matter, and, if possible, in reaching beyond and demonstrating the palpable after-life, is science henceforth to find its most eligible field and its grandest achievements. And on the verge of this untrodden world thinking men have long been encamped, waiting impatiently for a competent exploration to begin.

—W. T. Bishop, Jr., of Harrisburgh, Pa., writes as follows: "Dr. Child spoke here on Sunday, with acceptance. The pictures continue to be drawn at Mr. Potts. There is a marked improvement since Mr. P. saw you. New colors, designs, and more speed are developed."

—An old lady followed up an Episcopal bishop as he travelled through his diocese, and was confirmed several times before she was detected. She wished the ordinance repeated, because she "had understood it was good for the rheumatism."

—Dr. Franklin, when a child, found the long graces used by his father before and after meals, very tedious. One day, after the winter's provisions were salted, Benjamin said to his father, "I think, father, if you would say grace over the whole cask, once for all, it would be a vast saving of time."

—If you want to learn all about the growing state of Kansas, subscribe for the Kansas Advertiser published at Topeka, Kansas, by Ennis Piercy & Co., issued monthly, at 75 cents per year. It is invaluable to all who think of settling in Kansas, or who are investing their surplus funds in the lands of that promising country.

—READ the advertisement of that most wonderful work, JESUS OF NAZARETH.

The Rostrum.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

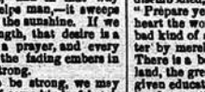
A Lecture by N. J. T. Brigham, Delivered at Harmonial Hall, Philadelphia, May 14th, 1871.

Phonographically Reported for the Religio-Philosophical Journal, by Henry T. Child, M. D.

INVOCATION.

Oh, God, Thou who art the loving father of every spirit, help us to understand what Thou art; help us to know something of that life of thine, so pure and changeless forever. Teach us, oh, God, that Thou art the spirit of all harmony and life. When we understand thy nature, we shall not need to call upon that nature for love, for as the earth answers the springtime with its leaves and blossoms, so shall we answer thy spirit with our gratitude and affection. Teach us that thou art our loving Father, —not a great overruling power so far from us that we can only speculate upon Thee. Teach us that Thou art not so far from us that we shall seek Thee long and vainly, and find Thee not. When we know that Thou art our Father, then can we approach Thee; then can we feel within our lives that love that shall make life itself a benediction. Teach us to understand Thee through all aspiration, and the inspiration of a thousand years of intuition. Teach us to understand Thee so fully that there will be no room, no place in all our lives, to cherish feelings of wrong,—no place wherein can be developed the plants of bitterness and hate, for all life shall be full of justice and of kindness. Show us the unclouded face of Nature; help us to read the notes of the day and the midnight heavens, for thy language to us through all these things; so shall we understand thee, and life shall be full of patience, and hope, and strength and earnest purpose, that will melt away in its shadowy outlines, until in the place it once occupied shall stand the bright spirit of Love. So shall we be full of understanding, and also of the blessings of peace forevermore.

LECTURE.



We will speak to you upon what has been called the "Lord's Prayer." It has been considered to be a model prayer, and men have taken it as such, and through every day are repeating it. Children's voices blend when night-time cometh, and they are singing to their innocent repose, these words. In churches this is reverently read, and in our own hearth, its words come like lingering echoes from far-off days, but how many of us are there who have felt the spirit found in these words? How many of us have waited sentence by sentence until we know just what each one means,—just what it is worth?

Before we speak of its own deep worthiness, it is necessary—although we have spoken on the subject of prayer—to explain what we mean by it. Prayer to us is a means by which we fly above the level of earthly circumstances, until, in a purer atmosphere, our spirits are purified. Prayer is not anything that changes any purpose of God; it is not anything that bends the Great Spirit nearer to us,—for should it do so it would prove him to be imperfect. We believe God is changeless, and if we could drag him down, it would prove that there was a lack of wisdom, as well as strength, in the Great Father, and then his goodness, his wisdom, and his justice could not be infinite and perfect.

Although we believe that prayer never did, and never can, change a law of God, because these laws are perfect, yet we believe in the utility of prayer; we believe that it has a divinely-beautiful purpose; that it is like an angel of which we have read, that came down to trouble the waters of a certain pool, until they were filled with healing power, and all those who were diseased, by going down when the angels had troubled the waters, were cleansed from their diseases. So prayer brings an angel that troubles the pool of the human spirit, and purifies all its waters, and our souls are clothed upon with garments of purity and peace.

Let any man or woman, in the midst of daily strife, in the bitterness and scorn that is so common in this conflict of this world,—let any man think for a moment of his mother who has passed on to the spirit land—of her mild, pure face bending over him with tender, deep, beautiful, reproachful eyes, just such as looked upon him in the innocent days of his childhood;—in the storm of sin if for one moment you can bring into your imagination the picture of that angel mother's face, how soon will that storm pass away! So in all the storms of life, the thought that our father, our mother, or those who have loved us dearly, are looking down upon us, will bring peace to us, and through the influence of true prayer, in our spirits cometh the baptism of purification,—and in that way we believe that prayer helps man,—it sweeps aside the clouds and lets in the sunshine. If we are weak and desire strength, that desire is a prayer. Every desire is a prayer, and every good and holy desire fans the fading embers in our spirits, and we grow strong.

While we are praying to be strong, we may feel about us the chains of some kind of bondage, and with every prayer there springs up a spontaneous effort to work out our salvation, and thus God through us is answering our prayers; so we lessen the distance between our souls and their highest ideal of goodness—which is God. We believe in this kind of prayer. It is a prayer without ceasing; and if we can thus pray without ceasing; if all our good desires, and every right impulse, is of itself a prayer, then with this understanding, we ask them to go into the depths of our subject, The Lord's Prayer, and weigh it sentence by sentence, and see how much wisdom, beauty, and meaning lie in these words of Jesus of Nazareth. When men repeat them and do not stop to think what they mean, it always seems to us like rattling the dead husks, but when we try to know what the meaning is, it is like going beneath the husks, and finding the golden grain that is there, which was hidden from our sight. To begin with the words, "Our Father who art in Heaven." Now, in these words, "Our Father," there is a meaning that those who believe that Christ is separated from our natures cannot receive. His life, in certain respects, was like our lives, his nature more beautiful, divinely gifted and harmonious, yet he was our brother, and bears the same relation to our spirits that the broad, deep, majestic river bears to the little stream that takes the same course and flows seaward, like itself. So in these two words, "Our Father," he expresses that which shows us there is no such distance between the teacher and the pupil as some have supposed. He had yond this earth, and who only at stated periods condescends to look over the affairs of men. He is not a king, a ruler who keeps us down, and tempts those who seek him, and who is afraid that men might build up a Tower of Babel, so that they may get into heaven by some underhanded way. He is "Our Father," not as earthly parents, who are short-sighted, and indulge their children to do that which is not good for them. They dare not bring a present shade of disappointment to the child; thus selfishness goes forth like a fog, and clouds and darkens the brightest sky. Perfect love always seeks for the highest good of its object. Jesus taught us that as earthly parents were willing to give good gifts to their children, far more so was our Father in Heaven to do so to his children,—willing to aid them at all times. Even when he smites and chastens them, it is because he loves them. He chastens every son that he receives. He chastens all, therefore he receives all. We are called to work out our own salvation, with the understanding that we are not to bring God nearer to us, but to lift our souls nearer to God.

"Our Father who art in Heaven." What does that mean? One person says it means just this: Heaven is a place,—it is not on earth,—it is above the blue canopy of the sky. We know why this name was first applied to the sky. The ancients believed that above the earth was a solid firmament, and that this was illuminated by the stars which God had made for that purpose. This firmament was supposed to separate the waters above the earth from the waters beneath, and they supposed that the windows of heaven were opened when it rained, and the waters came down upon the earth. So, from this idea they derived the term Heaven, and it was spoken of as the place of abode for the good spirits,—and the heavens were stretched out above the earth, as the dwelling-place of the Great Spirit. So he was spoken of in the olden times as dwelling in the heavens. There are men who think that God comes down to visit us occasionally; so in their prayers they ask him to visit his earthly vineyard and see how matters are prospering. When they repeat the words of this prayer "Our Father who art in heaven," it seems to them like sending a telegraphic message to him from this earth,—to his far-off abode of bliss,—and in his exciting God.

We do not need to change these words, "Our Father who art in heaven." Jesus declared that "the kingdom of heaven is within you;" He did not speak of a city whose paving-stones were made of gold. If there was any such place, and men went there, even the most pious of them, they would dig up the stones and sell them.

Jesus knew what he said when he declared that "the kingdom of heaven was within you;" that it was the result of goodness and virtue, and everything that is good and right. Can we not understand that part of his Sermon on the Mount: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." The pure in heart shall see God, because he is within all the elements of purity and goodness, and when these are in our spirits, the kingdom of heaven will be found there. On the surface of a river, when it is pure, there is a reflection of the heavens, but when it is covered over with any impurity, you can not see anything of this. So it is with the human soul; if discord and impurities are there you cannot see God or heaven; it is because there is cause he is far away,—it is because there can be no clear reflection, and such a soul can not see or understand him as "our Father who art in heaven." If we purify our souls, and take away all discord, all evil conditions, and bring peace and harmony, then in the purity of the soul we see God clearly as depicted in the heavens. Then we are prepared for the next sentence, "Hallowed be thy name; thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

When man understands God, it will not be necessary to hallow his name, to receive his spirit with reverence, for these will come from an understanding of his nature. You do not have to take a little child and teach it to admire the white and red colors of the rose; the beauty of the flowers calls forth its admiration more than any words you can use. So when man understands God in his heart he hallows his name. He sees in his nature the wisdom, the justice, the kindness of that soul of infinite harmony, and from the height and depth of his nature, he feels the spirit of reverence and prayer found regard that hallows the name of our Father in heaven, and asks that "thy kingdom come, thy will be done."

We know many persons who have said this prayer almost every day of their lives, and yet it goes from their lips perfectly meaningless. It drops like empty husks, and there is not anything there of fruit. Do they understand that when the Great Spirit of natural life gives the sunshine to the plants and flowers, it gives them a power to respond. So in our souls, when we realize this, we must respond. As John went forth, so must we, crying in the wilderness, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight his path, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

There is something more to do than merely to fold our hands, the very personification of religious indolence, and saying, "Thy kingdom come."

John saw the good time that was coming, and to-day the voices of spirits, embodied and disembodied, have taken up the cry, saying, "Prepare ye the way." When man says in his heart the world ought to be better, it is a very bad kind of a world. It will not be made better by merely saying, "Thy kingdom come." There is a better way. The liberalists of the land, the great philanthropists, those who have given education to the ignorant, freedom to the bondman, those who are laboring for all reforms, are saying in the right way, "Thy kingdom come." They are saying it with faith, because they are helping to bring it; they are the ones who are making the path straight—who are preparing the way of the Lord—and sooner or later they will be blessed with the coming of the kingdom of heaven. It is not for any of us to say there is nothing for us to do. We will look on at the great works of reformation and philanthropy that are going on in the world. How is the tallest building constructed? Brick upon brick, stone upon stone, timber after timber, and it rises, and when man looks at it in its magnificent splendor, he asks how it was constructed. Not alone the architect—the one who planned it—but every laborer, every hod-carrier, had his own work to do, and having done it, should have his own share of the praise. It is so as we are all helping to build the temple not made with hands, the temple of man's experience—man's wisdom. Let us remember that it is for each of us to say, "Thy kingdom come," and to say it actively by preparing the way, so that those who come after us may have the sunlight of truth on their paths.

Remember, then, always when you say, "Thy kingdom come," you are one who is to help bring it about, one who has a part to perform, a work to do in the great building. Then "Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven;" undoubtedly this not only refers to the conditions of peace and happiness that are called heaven, but to that place of existence where the disembodied spirits of men learn the excellence and wisdom of that country where the will of God is done more fully. These words bear a weight and meaning in themselves, and how many, think you, can say, when some great trial or temptation comes, "Thy will be done." Instead of going quickly to his work in the purpose of this, they pray to have it as they wished or prayed that God will add their desires and bring them some coveted blessing. We know, for a certainty, that the most terrible curse that could fall upon the children of men, would come if the prayers of men were answered always. Oftimes, that which we hold from us, for which we most earnestly pray, if it could come to us, would bring the greatest weights of misery upon us. When we repeat this prayer with our lips, let us feel it in our hearts, and know that when we have done all that we could do that seemed to be right, though our desires were not gratified, though our work was a failure, there was nothing more for us to do, we may know that "there is a destiny that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we will."

We should then be prepared to say, "Not my will, but thine be done." We sometimes believe that we could shape our lives and sunshine, but it would be like one who takes a forester, and thinks he will care for it and develop its most perfect life; so he keeps it where the sun can not fall upon it; in a conservatory where the air is warm; but the tree is not so perfect as it would be if it stood out on its own hill-side, where sunshine and the rains, and winds, may bring out its beauty and strength.

If we had only sunshine in our lives, we should never know what life meant. We need sorrow, just as the balloon needs ballast, and it is that which keeps us from going too high; it is that which keeps us from forgetting what we are, and if we really appreciate this, we can all say, "Not my will, but thine be done."

Some say, "If there is any truth in Spiritualism, why is it that spirits permit those whom they profess to care for, to have so many sorrows, so many disappointments and trials? We answer, because they do not profess to be wiser than God. They know that disappointment and trials are necessary to round out our lives into harmony. These are the means of bringing out your strength. There is a path that is best for you to walk in, and side by side the spirits walk all the way, and they seek to bless you, and they can often do this in your trials and sorrows, more than in anything else, it is through these, that you often receive power to do right and triumph over wrong. Then you should say even in the midst of all sorrowful as well as joyful experiences, "Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

"Give us this day our daily bread."

Some say here was a temporal, an earthly point in the prayer of Jesus. Perhaps this is true—still it has a deeper significance than that for us. Swedenborg believed that the Bible was a book of correspondencies. There is almost always one truth that underlies another,—so this part of the prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread." We know that in order to keep up the physical vigor and health, it is necessary for the body to be fed daily. We can only do our work properly when the demand for food is supplied. You may remember when the Children of Israel were fed with manna in the wilderness, it fell every day, that they could not gather any for the next day. The element of purity and goodness, and when these are in our spirits, the kingdom of heaven will be found there. On the surface of a river, when it is pure, there is a reflection of the heavens, but when it is covered over with any impurity, you can not see anything of this. So it is with the human soul; if discord and impurities are there you cannot see God or heaven; —we call them our compositions. When we catch the echoes of some mighty strain—when we hear vibrating through the corridors of our brain some grand and noble peal, we write it down, and call it our composition—it is but the vibrations of the land of music—it is but the chiming of the spheres, world upon world, and as these vibrations reach us, we catch the faint echoes, and thus do we make our shadow music in imitation of the realm of real music above. And so is it with all our gems of genius. We are not original creators; we are capable of all thoughts and all being, but we are endowed with these thoughts—we are endowed with this being, with this intellect; we derive it all from the great Fountain of Light, and that Fountain of Light deigns to let down the cup of inspiration through the hands of his ministering angels. These ministering angels are the spirits of the sixth sphere.

And there are others who, having performed their labors on earth—having bestowed upon this earth all the ministration that is entrusted to them—pass on and again become dwellers on the threshold. But this time they are dwellers on the threshold of those vast regions, those glorious realms of which we have spoken; where those do succeed that have overcome the world, where all of earthly knowledge and earthly duties are completed. Spirits who come to earth do tell us, like those spirits of the old Ohio woods, that they do behold with the eye of their spirits, open from time to time, tall, splendid angels, radiant and shining faces, glorious beings that seem to connect them with the vast world, which they only dream, but of which they know no more than that shining rays of light come from these vast places and penetrate to their worlds. These are spirits of the seventh sphere, and here our revelations cease. It is enough for us to know that our planet is a small, a very small speck in those illimitable realms of space of which mighty suns are the luminants, and vast revolving satellites are the shadows. It is enough for us to know that all these are before us, that the mountains of progress are for our feet to tread, that the conditions are born here on this earth—born through just such love as makes your patient, toiling mother endure the waywardness and fretfulness of the unconscious infant, even as our Father bears with us, as our Almighty and unknown God holds us up, with our pride and our weakness, our folly and our ingratitude, and still leads us forward through trespass and disgrace, through penalties and suffering, from one glory to another, and permits us, in the midst of our earthly darkness, to read the shining pages of such revelations as these to cheer us on the way, and give us courage and consolation for life and its evils—to throw them all behind us, and to be assurred that whilst our feet are pressing this earthly sward we are pressing on so long as we are in the path of that duty which consists of a duty to ourselves and our neighbors—passing on to conceivable glories from which there is no regression—from which there is no turning back. And though we have to win every step of the way, is it not worth the trial, is it not worth the battle, is it not worth the conflict?

If I have been permitted, then, this night to open up before you but a few pages of this glorious gospel, let me close with a narration of a very brief picture that was presented to me, to show you and to tell you why it only was to me to-day. It was given to me, some years ago, to remark why so much of penury, sorrow, poverty, hunger, and want crowded upon the unfortunate inhabitants of the cities—why such distress and sorrow was theirs, when the islands and continents in the far-off realms even of this earth, full of beauty, full of food, had room for all, harvest grounds for all, wealth for all? I murmured because the providence of the All-Father had not better, as I deemed it, disposed of his treasures, and given this vast store of wealth, and room, and food, and land to all his starving creatures. And then it was given me to behold the curtains of four centuries rolled back, and perceive the vast continent of the New World then unknown. I beheld the glorious forests, the primeval woods laden with fruit, and well stored with food for man, beast, and bird; I beheld the gigantic rivers, a thousand miles long, teeming with the grand fisheries—the magnificent hunting-grounds untrodden by the foot of man—the beautiful bowers, the blossoms, the gorgeous skies above—the silent stars, the only watchers of the vast continent—and none to possess it but the wild beast of the forest or the wilder savage of the woods. And again I murmured, and again I compared the wealth and luxuriance of this wonderful New World with the suffering of the overcrowded cities of the Old, and yet another picture was open before me. I beheld the birth of the new world, the spiritual world which permeated it; and there I saw how busy were spiritual beings toiling to cultivate this land, how carefully they guarded and tended and disposed of the forces of nature to irrigate the ground. They were the ministers—the unseen, viewless, but constant ministers—who administered the machinery of creation, and were the engineers that were working the grand law of progress. They had been ministering in this fashion century after century; thousands of years before angelic beings had stored, and cultured, and planted that land; and again I murmured, Why such waste of effort? And now the curtain rose, and the misty forms of the future dawned upon me, first of the solitary pioneer, and the lonely woodman, and next of the earnest crowds that were obeying the silent voice of the Infinite, who, in the order of progress, had mapped out the line of creation, and the march of progress Westward. I saw them pressing over the roads of destiny on to the New England shores, and stretching away in vast irrigating tides of population into the forests that the angels had guarded, on to the plains that the angels had cultured, into the bowers and gardens, and gathering the blossoms that their kind hands had tended—to possess the mines that they had discovered and stored up with wealth and treasure—to possess the goods which were all and each marked and labelled in the laboratories of Creative Wisdom and put aside until the fulness of time should come when man's hand was fit to receive them. I saw the guardian spirits of the ages whispering monitions into the ears of the pioneers, strengthening their hands, sustaining them in toil and hardship, leading them forward to possession of their great estate in the New World. And this lesson was given me to show me how the brighter and better continent of the spiritual world had been guarded, cultured, tended, and planted with the blossoms of human souls—had been prepared with all the love and wisdom of the great creative providential Father against the hour when the revelation was fit for man to receive. That hour is the nineteenth century. We stand in the dawning of this bright and glorious morning, and it is now given us to know what the All-Father and his ministering spirits have been doing. The land of our inheritance, the new world, has been revealed to us, and the spirits of those that men have called dead are the Columbuses that have sailed over the ocean of death, pressed to the shores of the spiritual continent, and now return to pour the treasures of its knowledge and its beauty upon this starving, ignorant, darkened, and material age of ours. This is the scheme as it has been revealed to me, and thus do I close the revelations that have been permitted to us in a few brief glimpses of the land of the hereafter.

—Benevolence sees very little original or other sin in the world, but a great deal of error.

From the Kenosha (Wis.) Telegraph.

LITERARY.

The Bhagvat-Geeta.

The Mahabharat is a poem said to have been written about five thousand years ago, and to consist of over a hundred thousand metrical stanzas, giving the genealogy and general history of the house of Bauarut, and relating more particularly the dissensions and wars of the two great branches of it called Kurroos and Pandoos. The Pandoos had been banished from Hastenapoor, at that time the seat of Government of Hindostan, and, after a time, the exiles returned with a powerful army, to avenge their wrongs, and assert their pretentions to the empire by right of their father. The Bhagvat of Geeta opens here, and is an episode, "called 'The Geeta of Bhagvat,' which is one of the names of Kreeshna. Arjoon is represented as the favorite and pupil of Kreeshna, here taken for God himself, in his last Ootar or descent to earth in mortal form." It is in the form of dialogues by Kreeshna and Arjoon, in eighteen lectures. It was translated from the Sanskreet by Mr. Charles Wilkins, in 1784, and published under the authority of the Court of Directors of the East India Company, by the particular desire and recommendation of the Governor General of India, Warren Hastings, Esq. An edition of only 261 copies was published by subscription at a very high price, in London, in 1785. The copy before us is a reprint from the London Edition, and is published by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago, S. S. Jones, Proprietor. It is a 12 mo. of 129 pages, paper and print fine, bound in embossed cloth, with gilt back. Price $1 25, postage 12 cents. We received the book with compliments from S. S. Jones, and in return tender him thanks.

We have been very much interested, in reading, hastily, the Bhagvat Geeta. We had seen notices of it, and had read quotations from it before its republication, and when there were but few copies of it in the English language extant, which had excited our curiosity and anxiety to read it; and, as it was written in the oldest known language, the Sanskreet, or as is more usually written, Sanskrit or Sanscrit, and an extract from one of the oldest, and possibly the oldest, written work in the world, we became the more interested in reading it. And when we found that in ethical, moral, religious, and spiritual doctrines it anticipated much, and perhaps in some instances surpassed, Judaism and Christianity, we became deeply interested in it. It has been said that Kreeshna became incarnate, and was born of a virgin. And those who claim that history furnishes evidence of at least seven Saviors of the world, each of whom became incarnate, and was born of a virgin, reckon Kreeshna as among the seven. Kreeshna fully and clearly taught the doctrines of re-incarnation and immortality.

Those who were able to distract or abstract their minds from things of sense, and contemplate the Deity without regard to works or reward, and were in Kreeshna and he in them, would pass into eternal life without having to become re-incarnated. But those who could not, or did not, and died without doing so, would have to become re incarnated, and some would have to become again and again re-incarnated before they succeeded. And by learning devotion and spiritual application of soul, and laboring with all their might, they become purified of their offences, and after many births, made perfect, and would at length go to the supreme abode.

Kreeshna thus taught the doctrine of immortality more clearly than it is taught in either the Old or New Testament. And, as the Bhagvat Geeta was written hundreds—thousands—of years before either the Old or New Testamend, Kreeshna could not have been indebted to either for the doctrine of immortality. The only question which could arise in this respect is, whether the Bhagvat Geeta is what it professes to be. And we believe that every one who has examined the subject, and is capable of coming to an intelligent conclusion, admits it.

It is generally claimed by believers in Judaism and Christianity, that people are indebted to the Bible—Old or New Testament, or both—for all the knowledge they have of immortality. On the other hand, a few have claimed that all there is valuable in either Judaism or Christianity was obtained from Egypt or India. The burning of the Alexandrian library has done much to prevent the world from obtaining a knowledge of the history, literature, arts, science and religion of Egypt. It is thought, however, that investigations that are being made will lead to a knowledge of much of them. With Hindoostan it is different. Libraries still exist there, containing ancient works, and access may be had to them. And there are many learned Brahmans who can assist in translating and interpreting them. And if the essential doctrines of Judaism and Christianity were anticipated and taught in Hindoostan long before either had an existence, the facts will soon be made known. On the other hand, if the Bhagvat Geeta is not an ancient work, it will fail to be received as such. The world will not long be kept in the dark or be deceived, but will ere long obtain a knowledge of the truth. And the truth of history, of literature, of science, of religion, and of things spiritual, is what we should all desire, for it will make us free and wise unto salvation.

Letter from George Armstrong.

BROTHER JONES:—Sunday July 9th, a number of the friends of religious progress, met at Lamont school house, seven miles south east of Milford, and organized the Prairie Green Society of Spiritualists, for the purpose of investigating and disseminating the truths of the spiritual philosophy. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, George W. Good; Vice-President, J. W. Hudson; Secretary, George C. Armstrong; Treasurer, S. P. Hunter. Spiritualists in other portions of the country, are respectfully invited to cooperate with this society, and thus aid in bringing before the people more generally lecturers and mediums. For a long time orthodoxy has had its own way—mostly berating Spiritualists, and misrepresenting and falsifying Spiritualism, and it is time for a hearing of the other side of the question, again. There are many who are tired of the old truths, who are seeking to free themselves from the thraldom of a theology which has nothing better to give in answer to the important query, "If a man die shall he live again," than that, "The living know that they shall die but the dead know not anything, neither have they anymore a reward, for the memory of them is forgotten." Eccl. ix. 5. Whose souls are hungering for the spiritual food, which Spiritualism alone can give, and as we have received bountifully, let us give. "For it is more blessed to give than to receive."

Milford, Ill.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,

BY C. L. JAMES.

An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce law reform. For sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo. Post paid for 25 cents.

v9 n18-tf.

New Books.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.

WITH

Criticisms on its Opposers,

AND A REVIEW OF HUMBUGS AND HUMBUGGERS, WITH PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXPERIMENTS IN THE SCIENCE—FULL DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT AS A REMEDY IN DISEASE—HOW TO AVOID ALL DANGER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;

How to develop a good Clairvoyant

THE PHILOSOPHY OF

SEEING WITHOUT EYES.

THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND, BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.

BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D., LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.

Price $1.25. Postage 12 cents. The Trade supplied. Address S. S. Jones, Chicago. Ill.

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

By Hudson Tuttle.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. PRICE $2.00; Postage 24c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the Author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to new hopes and aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.

Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

SECOND EDITION.

A WORK OF GREAT RESEARCH.

ONE RELIGION: MANY CREEDS.

BY ROSS WINANS.

"We object to what the Church demands, an unbounded and unquestioning confidence in the infallibility of the writings of Moses and the prophets, and the Evangelists and the Apostles. We dissent from a sentimental attachment to an impossible compound of God and man. We protest that Christian theology, as we have it, is not taught by God himself, nor by Christ himself, nor is it consistent with established facts, nor is it comprehensible by our reason. We would show you that Christianity, as taught among us, is no better than other systems taught in other than Christian countries, and in some respects not so good.

The historic part of the Bible, in relation to the creation of the world, has its counterpart also in the several systems of theology here mentioned. They all had their cosmologies based on equally good authority and equally wide of the truth, as that recorded in the Bible. The time and manner of the creation, no man has ever known, or ever will know, in this life; nor is such knowledge of importance in preparing us for this life to come."—EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

This book is a large 12 mo. of nearly 400 pages, printed on fine, heavy tinted paper, and is sold at much less than the actual cost. Price, $1.50; postage, 22 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MOSES HULL'S WORKS.

THE QUESTION SETTLED, a Careful Comparison of Biblical and Modern Spiritualism. Price, $1.50; postage 16 cents.

SPIRITUALISM UNVEILED. This sharp and brilliant little book, by one of our acutest writers and most efficient speakers should be read by all. Price, 20 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE SUPREMACY OF REASON. This little work is a masterly argument on the Supremacy of Reason. The author handles sectarianism as opposed to REASON, without gloves. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THAT TERRIBLE QUESTION,—Being an Essay on Love and Matrimony. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING; or, God in the Constitution. An in-volume interpretation of the symbols of the Book of Rev elation, or Apocalypse, together with an argument against recognizing God, Christianity, and the Sabbath in our National Charter. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale, wholesale, and retail, at the office of this paper.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE BIBLE IN THE BALANCE,

A Book for the Age and the Times,

and one that should be in the hands of every liberal man and woman in the land.

You want it for your own instruction, that you may be furnished with acknowledged authority to meet in argument any of the theologian, historian, chronologist and scientific man with his own weapons.

It discusses the matter of Bible canons, inversions, translations and revisions with ability, citing none but authors in the highest repute, and those that are above criticism.

The book is printed in excellent style, 12 mo., on new type and fine paper, with beautiful illustrations of the wonders and monuments of the Mississippi Valley.

It is substantially bound in cloth and contains three hundred and twenty pages.

The interest in the work is so great that orders were received for nearly the whole of the first edition before it was published, one party alone having received orders for over three hundred copies.

Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address: RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

v8 n26 tf.

THE Science of Evil; OR FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.

BY JOEL MOODY.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, Man could not exist. This work fully solves the problem, and unveils the MYSTERY OF EVIL, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be the LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo., of 362 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 24 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE for 1871 contains in every number one complete piece, fully worth the price of the whole year. Yearly, $1.50. Sold by news-dealers at 15 cents per copy. Specimen copies sent to those who intend to get up clubs. Specimen copy free. Address S. R. WOOD, Newburgh, New York.

LIST OF LECTURERS.

[PUBLISHED EVERY OTHER WEEK.]

HEADERS will kindly keep a standing register of such speakers as we have announced to us AT THE PARTIES INTERESTED, with a pledge on their part that they will keep us posted in regard to changes; and in addition to that, EXPRESS themselves a willingness to aid in the circulation of the JOURNAL, both by WORD AND DEED.

Let us hear promptly from all who accept this proposition and we will do our part faithfully.

J. Madison Allen, Ancora, N. J.
C. Fannie Allyn, Stoneham, Mass.†
Adin L. Ballou, Address Chicago, care of RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.*‡
W. A. Bowles, Yorkville, N. Y.†
Dr. J. E. Bailey, box 304 Laporte Ind.*‡
Rev. J. O. Barrett, Glen Beulah, Wisconsin.
Mrs. A. P. Brown, A. J. Industry Center, Vt. †
Eli F. Brown, Dayton, Ohio. ‡
Dr. W. A. Bryant, Address care of the Religio-Philosophical Journal, Chicago.†
Hattie Brown, Adrean: 19 West Washington St., Chicago.†
Henry A. Bench, Spring Valley, N. Y
W. H. Bancroft, Madison, Wis. *
Mrs. Bell A. Cheesebrough, Medford, Minnesota.†
Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Calkins, Green Oaks, Ill.†‡
H. T. Child, M. D., 241 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.*
Mrs. A. H. Colby, Winchester, Randolph Co., Ind.†
Y. B. Dyed, Rosicrucian, Davenport, Iowa.*
Lewis P. Cummings, Address care of the Journal.*
John Corwin, Five Corners, N. Y.
Andrew Jackson Davis, Orange, N. J.
Levi Dinkelspiel, Box 229 Decatur, Ill. †
Dan T. Edwards, Otter Creek, Mo. ‡ ♀
Mrs. M. A. Ellis, Indianapolis, Ind. *
Thomas Gales Forster, care Banner of Light, Boston. ♀
Rev. J. Francis, Ogdensburg, N. Y.
I. H. Garrison, Richland, Ill. *
D. F. Kayner, M. D., 44 Custer St. ‡
Mrs. M. M. King, Hammonton, N. J.*
L. Lewis, Valparaiso, Ind.
F. R. Lawrence, Ottumwa, Iowa.*♀
Geo. W. Lusk, Ho on Rapids, Mich.*
Wm. F. Lyon, 206 S. Clark St., Chicago.*
O. S. Lout, Pine Island, Minn. ♀
Mrs. F. A. Logan, Geneseo, Wis.
J. Mansfield, Berlin, Ohio.*‡
P. C. Miller, North Evansville, Mo. ♀
Joel Moody, Mound City, Kansas.
J. S. Loasby, Olympia, Vancouver, Washington Territory.
Mrs. S. A. Pearsall, Dixon, Mich.*
Mrs. L. R. Perkins, Kansas City, Mo. ‡‡
Dr. S. Pierce, Red Oak, Iowa.
Harriet E. Pope, Morristown, Minn.*
Isaac Paden, Woodhull, Ill. ♀
Rev. S. A. Pope, Mound City, Kansas. ♀
Mrs. M. M. Parry, Beloit, Wis. †
J. S. Rouse, Casey, Ill.
Mrs. S. Rogers. Address in care of A. J. Grover, Rock Island, Ill.*
Samuel Smith, Rockford Ill.*
Warren Smith, Alexandria, Madison Co., Ind.
Job Smyth, Hallsport, N. Y. ♀
Mrs. Mary Lansten Strong, Washington, D. C. ♀
Mrs. J. H. Stillman Severance, M. D., Milwaukee, Wis.‡‡
Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith, care of this office, Chicago.†
E. W. Stevens, Drawer 40, Janesville, Wis
M. H. Sherman, M. D., 230 Clark St., Chicago.*
Mrs. L. K. Swain, Union Lake, Rice Co., Minn
D. C. Seymour, Lawrence, Kansas. †
Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon.*
Mrs. Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon.*
Mrs. Sarah M. Thompson, Cleveland, Ohio. *
M. H. Tuttle, Lake Mills.
Mrs. H. A. Tuttle, Oil City, Pa.‡‡
J. B. Tupper, Jamestown, Wis. †
Hudson Tuttle, Berlin Heights, O.*‡
Dr. Samuel Underhill, Toledo, Ill *
J. William Van Namee, Mimico, N. Y.†
Mrs. M. J. Wilkinson, Care of Journal, Chicago, Ill.*
J. O. Wright, Box 2 Jamaica Plain, Mass.
Geo. Wilson, Lombard, Ill.†
A. B. Whiting, Albion, Mich.†
Lilah M. Wood, Adrian, Lenawee, Mich.
Dr. E. B. Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas.

* Inspirational.
† Trance.
‡ Clairvoyant.
♀ Missionary.
§ Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

The Great

MAGNETIC CURE.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR TO DR. E. SMITH, NORMAL, ILLINOIS.

Criticism on the THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY,

Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.

BY M. B. CRAVEN.

12 mo., 317 pages.—Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Exeter Hall! Exeter Hall!

HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL

THE following are extracts from a few of the notices of Exeter Hall, the Theological Romance:—

"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—[Public Opinion, London, England.

"It is indeed a wonderful book."—[New York Mail.

"We commend it to the widest popular approval."—[Banner of Light, Boston.

"We have no hesitation in declaring this a great work."—[Universe, New York.

"The book is well and powerfully written. * * * The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason,'"—[Liberal, Chicago.

"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—[Somerset's Magazine, New York.

"Convincingly illustrative of the errors of Theology. —[Investigator, Boston.

"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—[Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.

Price, 60 cents. Postage, 4 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

Health by Good Living.

BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,

Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."

THIS book is to show how high health can be maintained and common diseases cured by "good living," which means eating with a relish the best food, prepared in the best manner.

The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game, fruits, and the grains which make bread.

The best cookery preserves the natural tastes and juices.

As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get this great blessing without money and without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down town:" What shall a man do? What shall fat men eat? How to get fat: Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Spring diseases: Children's eating: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' eating: Cold feet and headache: Biliousness: A lazy liver: Mischievous tonics: The out-door air: Why are we dyspeptic? Discomfort after eating: Cole slaw: Certain cure of neuralgia: Nervous debility: Air and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

It tells

How to cure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure biliousness: How to cure nervousness: How to cure constipation: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean, How to get good sleep: How to make a high health, How to avoid disease: And all these without medicine: without money: without price.

It tells about

Luncheons and how to take them: Late dinners and how to take them: How drunkards are made at eating-houses: How girls are spoiled at boarding-schools: How health is lost: How it can be found: How to prevent eating dyspepsia: How love of dress is instilled: How young men are talked about: How bad matches are made: How good wives are made at home: How home influence purifies.

Price $1,50 Postage 16 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

DR. E. P. MILLER'S WORKS.

The Cause of Exhausted Vitality, or Abuses of the Sexual Function. Cloth $1,00, Postage, 12cts.

Every Young Man and every Young Woman, every Married Man and every Married Woman, Should read it.

A vast amount of suffering, as well as physical, mental and moral ruin would be prevented, if all were acquainted with the facts contained in this work and followed its excellent advice.

Vital Force, How wasted and How Preserved. Cloth $1,00, Postage 12cts; Paper Cover, 50cts, Postage, 4cts.

Mrs. Frances Dana Gage says: "I earnestly wish that it could be read by every mother in the country."

It is an invaluable work and should have a place in every family library.

How to Bathe, a Family Guide for the Use of Water in Preserving Health and Treating Disease.

Paper Cover, Price 40cts. Postage, 4cts

Important Truths, By Mrs. E. P. Miller, M.D.

Price, 20cts, Postage, 2cts.

This little work is written in a style adapted to children's Minds, and is a proper and fitting present for a place if in their children's hands as an opening to conversation and advice on points upon which their future health, happiness, and even life, largely depend.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

THE CAREER OF THE

CHRIST-IDEA IN HISTORY.

A COMPANION VOLUME TO

"THE CAREER OF THE GOD-IDEA."

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

CONTENTS.

I Introductory; II Career of the Christ Idea in Hindostan and among other Races; III. Prophecies of the Advent of Jesus; IV Conception and Genealogy; V Birth of Jesus; VI John the Baptist—his relation to Jesus: VII The sermon on the Mount: VIII Miracles; IX sending forth the Apostles; X The Soul journey; XI Burial and Resurrection; XII The Descent into Hell XIII The Gospels; XIV Resume of the Life and Character of Jesus; XV Causes of the Extension of Christianity; XVI The ultimate of the Christ-Idea.

Price $1,25. Postage 16 cents.

The demand for these new works of Hudson Tuttle both in this country and Europe, is unprecedented.

For sale at the Religio-Philosophical Journal Office.

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF

Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the venerable soil of India, was trampled and stifled by the utter that substituted for intellectual life a semi-brute existence of dreaming impotence.....

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost west has, in unfading testimony of our origin, bequeathed us the legacy of her language, her laws, her customs, her literature, and her religion.....

To religious deception, imposing, speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....

.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I yet shrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

 PRICE $1.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

A REVELATION!!!

of the

EXTRAORDINARY VISITATION of

SEPARATED SPIRITS!

Of Distinguished Men and Women of all Nations, as Manifested through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers."

The Spirits of WASHINGTON, FRANKLIN, PENN, GIRARD, ST. PATRICK, NAPOLEON, JOHN WESLEY, BYRON, GEO. FOX and Hosts of Celebrated Characters of the Past, who take Possession of and Discourse through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers," of New York, giving Wonderful Information respecting the Secrets of their Lifetime, and their Opinions of Present Criticisms concerning their Deeds, as well as their Immediate Condition in the World of Spirits.

PRICE:—35 cts; postage, 2 cts. Liberal discount to the trade.

ADDRESS:—RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 and 189 S Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

[redacted] ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞ All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1—4 mo.

☞ Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

[illegible] registration system has [illegible] to be virtually an abo[illegible] mail. All Postmasters [illegible] required to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names entered on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the ensuing year, with or without further reminder from this office

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office—whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it. until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—which the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTION.

Upon the margin of each paper, or upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 10th, 1870, it will be marked, "Smith J.—10 Dec.—0." The 0 means 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—10 Dec.—0, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞ Those sending money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, AUGUST 5, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER I.

CAN GOD POSSESS AN ATTRIBUTE COMMON TO HUMANITY, IN AN INFINITE DEGREE?

It has been wisely said that the moment you define God, then you lose him. The definitions given in regard to this personage are so varied and conflicting, that any one can gain but little, if any, information in reference to him by perusing them. It is useless to seek for him amidst the scintillations of those master minds that have existed in the past, for the views entertained are so contradictory in character, and so little elaborated, that they would do nothing but embarrass and confuse. There are, then, no lights now burning that can so illuminate the world that Deity can be seen, his nature discovered, and the character of his operations acknowledged. All is dark,—yea, impenetrable darkness on all sides! while the surging billows of superstition and ignorance render the night still more hideous! Is this condition of affairs always to remain? Will this darkness continue? Tell me, watchman, what of the night? No reason, no logic, no practical philosophy, nothing can flash forth an idea that will so illumine the world that God can be seen and recognized. He who can define Deity, must do so from actual knowledge, or not at all. What merit has your idea of God? Have you seen him, heard his voice or felt his influence? No! How can you define what exists only in the imagination? To prove the existence of a God, it must be done by language—simple words—and not by sight, hearing, or feeling.

1st. The feelings bear evidence that they have never sensed the existence of an Infinite God.

2d. The sense of hearing never recognized his voice, or even a whisper.

3d. The sight never detected his presence.

Supposing you wished to prove the existence of a person in a very dark room; you would do it through the instrumentality of the eyes, ears, and sense of feeling, or the action of the mind, reasoning from analogy, etc. If all these means failed to detect him, you would conclude no person was present. In endeavoring to establish the existence of a God, all the senses fail us,—totally fail us,—and we can only use words to present him to the minds of the people. An idea of God, if expressed at all, must be from a human standpoint. We cannot step outside of ourselves in applying attributes to Deity. In defining him, we only enlarge certain attributes of humanity. In a previous article we alluded to that fact, and in this we desire to still further elaborate.

The idea, then, of a God must be expressed in language that mortals can understand. What right has any one to say that God is all-powerful, omniscient, and omnipresent, or, as Prof. Denton declares, is Infinite Good? If you apply the attributes of humanity to a God, what is he but an enlarged man? If you apply one thing, or one quality, or one condition, that man possesses, to God, you must all! If you say he is Infinite Good, you could as reasonably declare that he is Infinite Evil. Now, just look at the absurdity of forming a God out of human attributes! You only take certain traits of man's character or condition, and apply them to God! Man is good, hence, having language that you can comprehend, you say God is Infinite Good. Why not call him Infinite Evil? You say he is infinitely merciful. You enlarge the mercy and tender feelings of man and apply them to your God. Because man can hate, murder, cause suffering, etc. One is just as much practiced as the other. Why not say God is an Infinite Hater? Again, in making, or defining your God, you extend your own attributes too far. You do not crystallize or form a being that can act. Why extend those attributes throughout all space? A being that fills immensity can not move; from the very nature of things, he can act only within himself.

In the formation or defining of God, human language and human attributes, the wise philosopher says, must be used. You say God possesses power, which is an attribute of man. Why not say he has an appetite, as well? Why stop with infinite power when we can as reasonably state that he has an infinite appetite? You must not stop, when you "make up" your God, with just such attributes as you deem fit to apply to him. There is a vile monster; his eyes gleam with hate and anger; a frown is on his countenance, and murder in his heart; his soul is a licentious pool, full of all manner of unclean things; his conscience is perfectly calloused; he is a hard-hearted wretch—a demon of the lowest order; yet he is a man! By him stands an old veteran in the cause of reform; how brilliant his eyes, expressing the lofty emotions within his soul!—and his countenance is all aglow with love for humanity. He constantly labors to benefit all, and his works of love can be seen on every side. Which of these men does your God resemble?

A God possessing any attribute of man is an impossibility! In seeking him, you do it through yourself. The moment you apply your own attributes to God, you destroy him effectually, for you limit him. If you say he has all power, we will declare emphatically that he has not, for we possess some power, in which event your God is not all-powerful.

A God to exist at all, and be infinite, must exist entirely independent of the attributes of man, and possess nothing in common with him? Prove this? Why if God possesses the characteristics of one, show me the person. You extend certain attributes to an infinite degree, and call them God. What man will you use? Is there a man in existence whose attributes you would be willing to extend to form a God? Tell me, pray. No! that man does not exist now, and never did exist, whose attributes you would be willing to enlarge and form a God therefrom. If no such a man in existence, how can you form a conception of that which does not exist? There is no one in existence possessing the attributes of God in a finite degree, and yet perfect in those attributes. How, then, are you going to form a conception of Deity when nothing exists to form a conception from? If you can form no conception of him, how will you define him?

To define God, and assign him attributes common to humanity, you must have those attributes actually in existence. How can you reason to show the nature of God, only from that which already exists? Why do you apply to him power as one of his attributes? Why stop there? Why not say that he is an infinite being, with passions to eat, drink, etc.? Reason to some effect, and if you wish to enlarge one of the attributes of man in your God, you must all.

It has been said hundreds of times, that the mind can not comprehend God. Then, how can language define him? Can the mind define that which it can not comprehend? As well describe a man you have never seen. If language can not define Deity, the mind comprehend him, the eye see him, the ear hear him, or the feelings sense him, where is your foundation to rest when you endeavor to prove his existence?

If a God, then, the question now is, has he any of the attributes of humanity? If we establish the fact that it is utterly impossible for him to possess any of the attributes common to humanity, we are doing away with an Infinite God. The idea of the existence of a God, originates from mystery and our own ignorance. The Negro who could construct his own rude hut alone, carrying stones to build its walls, in size in proportion to his strength, if transported to this country, and shown the stones in the Court House, would at once conclude that the man who built that must be as large as a mountain. We form a conception of God from our own surroundings and the circumstances of life. The Negro makes him a large man; but the various philosophers of the day have improved on that, simply enlarging the power, goodness, mercy, and intelligence to an infinite degree.

Again, if God possesses the attributes of man, would he not be like him in his various acts? Would he not lie, commit murder, and steal occasionally? Why, your mind would revolt at such an idea. Man does all those things, and he originated from this God, you claim! Where did he get the impulse to do these acts, if not from God? Did not the impulse to murder originate from him, the same as that which induces you to give alms to the beggar? Why not then say that God is both good and bad; forgiving and revengeful, the same as a man. But if he is Infinite Good, the same as Denton declares, there would be no room for the bad. If you make a God from a human stand-point, do n't select just such attributes of man as suit you, and apply them to him—but enlarge the whole man. To say that God is Infinite Good, is a meaningless term. If a Deity exists at all, you must look at him through your own senses, or grasp him with your own mind.

(To be continued.)

Cheap Advertising.

"The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL advertises the Crucible as being 'short lived.' Thanks. Wonder if the thought is cured by a wish to that effect."—The Crucible.

The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, has done no such thing. It is under no obligations to foretell coming events. It journalizes current and past events correctly when it considers the subject worthy and demanding notice.

The Search After God

Will terminate, we think, before it reaches the sixtieth number. We will in summing up, clearly and distinctly present the world with an Object, Element, Principle, or Quality of the Universe,—that which takes cognizance of all things.

Henry Ward Beecher Studying Agriculture Under Difficulties.

Henry Ward Beecher finished his professional labors for the season last Sunday, and taking Greeley's "What I Know of Farming" in his carpet-bag, has gone to his country home at Peekskill for the summer. Mr. Beecher is quite as much of a poet as a theologian, which accounts for his selection of reading matter for vacation.—Tilton's Golden Age.

Although we have had the the pleasure of perusing the Golden Age for some time, and although we have often found articles therein which we did not believe were well stained with truth, we are inclined to accept the above quotation. Just think of it! this eminent divine rusticating among the hills and lawns of the country, with Horace Greeley's work, "What I Know of Farming," under his arm. We are somewhat acquainted with the author of this book, having had the pleasure of hearing him lecture at Crosby's Opera House in this city, where he waddled on to the stage, putting us in mind of an "overgrown babe." His lecture was good, and was thoroughly systemized and arranged previous to venturing before a highly critical audience.

In what condition will the illustrious divine of Plymouth church be after reading Greeley's agricultural works? Can he preach "Christ crucified" successfully after his mind has been occupied in digesting a treatise on turnips, cabbage (both early and late), beets (especially dead beats), drainage, onions (with and without scent), various kinds of grass, etc.? How will all this mix with the "fall of man," the transgression of Eve, the perfidy of the serpent, Job's boils, Jeremiah's Lamentations, Ezekiel's Prophesies, the Vicarious Atonement, the passage of the Egyptians out of Egypt and the vision of Daniel. Will he not become confused in preaching, after he reads one of Greeley's letters to an inquiring mind, which is as follows:

New York City, July 1st, 1871.

DEAR TETHARD: Sugar beets are an excellent fruit to raise. Plant the seeds early, covering them with the quality of sugar you desire to make. If you should desire to raise molasses, cover them with the sorghum, New Orleans, or Havana molasses—depending on the quality that you desire. Plant the seeds the first of April, and tap the trees the following spring, and you can obtain all the molasses you want.

Yours truly,

HORACE GREELEY.

Will such teachings as that mix with old theology? Will not Beecher stock fall when the two assimilate? Really, Greeley's knowledge of agriculture is as popular as Beecher's religion, and when the two affiliate in the massive brain of the latter, we fear his mind will not correctly comprehend the beautiful teachings of Job, or the sublime utterances of Balaam's Ass. Beecher is eccentric, and to mix the eccentricities which he already has with Horace's, will make him still more so.

If Mr. Beecher had taken, in connection with this excellent treatise on agriculture, Greeley's last theological lecture, and read the two in connection, he would ere this have been a fit subject for the lunatic asylum. He can discuss the tariffs, protection for home manufactures, the Ku-Klux, but he is out of his element,—just as much as a fish is when out of water,—when he leaves the terrestrial or things sublunary, to discuss the celestial or things visionary. Really, these erratic notions of this eminent politician, his agricultural venture, and latterly his theological peregrinations, together with his aspirations for the Presidency, have rather muddled his mind, and he presents a strange appearance. Greeley the politician—the agriculturist and chemist—the theologian,—ah! not being right on the "God question," and fearing that he would be in favor of engrafting his mythical creature in the Constitution, he is not our candidate for President. We wait now with intense interest to see the effect of his agricultural work on the mind of Beecher. Perhaps he will on his return pray for the vegetable kingdom as well as the animal, but whether he will pray to Greeley's God, remains to be seen.

Many years ago, it was quaintly stated that Beecher swore—uttered an oath, one common to a driver when trying to render a balky horse more tractable. A correspondent of one of the secular papers has been giving his acts of life a chemical examination, and bursts forth with: "People think it is dreadful in the worldly to use vulgar oaths, and shock their esthetics. But when we see the Rev. Henry Ward skipround on the verge of profane expressions, what can be said? If that eminent divine would look a little more closely after his own morals, he would not cut so many didos—let his sympathies run away with him—as if he, puny mortal, could alter the inflexible moralities. Is there no one enterprising enough to reform him? He keeps many a soul on a see-saw of doubt and confidence about him, hardly knowing where to locate him, instead of commanding unqualified respect, as a man of extraordinary talents should. Perhaps he has not tilled his own soil as he should have done is why he is now studying Greeley on agriculture."

The remarks of a recent journal, that it would be 'worth going all the way to Heaven for,' to see the city missionary who died of starvation meet Mr. Beecher with his $20,000 salary, were much to the same point, so far as proving that Mr. Beecher would be none the worse for more humanity and less popularity.

THOSE WHO WISH to have this paper discontinued when the time is up to which it is paid for, should notify us of that wish two weeks before such time expires, as it takes that time to get it out of the mailing machine. When an order to discontinue is given by those in arrears, remittances should be made to square up in full, including the two weeks which the paper will be mailed the subscriber after such notice is given.

Letter from Thomas Woodliff.

BROTHER JONES: Shall I give you a detailed account of what I have lately passed through? But why trouble you with it? You are probably aware of the power of spirits. I am only known as a druggist, and cannot find any spirit to help me except one who took me to an insane asylum in this State, there to pass through an experience which would make a man shudder. Why I was taken is still a mystery. I am known here as a quiet man, and I was forced to act like a madman. I was forced, you understand, to personate a maniac. So well was it done that I underwent an examination before two learned physicians, who gave testimony in court, and I was pronounced insane. You can form an idea of the process of pronouncing judgment in such a case.

This little farce being ended, I was then a raving maniac; but "there was method in the madness." To enumerate all the mad sayings, would be of no use, but I am aware of the manner and the effect of it all. In the asylum I was also excited,—not violently, but more in a humorous strain. Thrown into a cell, on a stone floor, with little comfort, I assure you, I passed the night and day, and still another night. The scenes which I witnessed would make a sensitive person tremble, but the same power upheld me that forced me there. I was well enough, of course, but the physicians kept me three weeks, to see if a recurrence of mania would appear.

Being at home in my store now, I thought I would drop you a line. You can make any use of this you may see fit.

Yours in hope of a happy life,

THOMAS WOODLIFF.

Colfax, Cal.

Reply:—Your experience was doubtless severe. The superficial reasoner would pronounce it the result of a belief in spirit communion.

In all ages of the world spirits have communed with mortals. Insanity has prevailed in all ages. Spirit obsession has also been common with all people. Sometimes such obsession has been by intelligent spirits, who could, and did, give the world much light and knowledge, in regard to the future life; at other times ignorance on the part of the obsessing spirit, attending like ignorance on this plane of life, the result, as might well be expected, was persecution and death to the poor obsessed medium.

The morning of an age is now dawning in which intelligence prevails to a greater extent than in the past. Obsession is recognized as a species of spirit control, as common in the past as now, but not understood.

Spiritualism, so called, has enough intelligent men and women for its devotees, to look upon all such obsession as has in the past been denominated insanity, as intrusion by ignorant spirits, which exists by and in conformity with well-known laws upon the spiritual plane of life, and sufficiently known upon this to be effectually treated and cured.

In a few more years, the philosophy of spirit control will be so well understood and acknowledged, that the strait-jacket and cell will be entirely dispensed with. Healing mediums will then be resorted to as a mode of immediate and perfect relief in all such cases.

The obsessing spirit being, for the time, reincarnated in a physical form, can only be reached and expelled by another spirit, through a medium on the material plane of life.

The law of spirit control and power, heretofore a sealed book to mortals, is now rapidly being unsealed, and its beauty and excellence is becoming apparent to our understanding.

However severe the ordeal through which you have been compelled to pass, nevertheless, to you, and the world, it will add a chapter of benefits. There are mediums who give immediate relief in such cases.

We trust that these few remarks may elicit thought and provoke comment from thinkers.

Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith.

It was our privilege, on Sunday, July 23rd, to listen to a touching, tender, and earnest soul-appeal from this noble woman, in her lecture of that hour, based upon the scriptural account of "The Ten Lepers." She most eloquently depicted the state of Christendom at the advent of Modern Spiritualism, showed how blank skepticism had spread its dark pall over the land—the churches gave no proof of immortality, but imposed a barren form of belief—doubt and despair had taken possession of the human soul—when twenty-three years ago, the spirit-world began this great and glorious work, which had converted thousands of Infidels through its ministry, and lifted to the rostrum the child of fifteen years, as in the case of Cora L. V. Scott, and poured the burning eloquence of this new inspiration into the hearts of men. She plead her cause (for no one can help seeing she has made it her cause) with all the heroism of a consecrated life, and bewailed in most touching earnestness, the apathy, indifference, carelessness, and selfishness of those thousands of nominal Spiritualists, who, having drank at these spiritual fountains, and been freed of the leprosy of skepticism, now fall back into their comfortable seats, pander to the demands of the dissenting world, and forget the great work for humanity.

She plead the cause of our speakers and mediums in words of very fire, showing how they had left all, choosing lives of self-sacrifice and martyrdom for the truths of this angel-ministry, and pointed her hearers to the fact that many of them did not own one inch of ground in this great land, or even the means to bury their cold bodies when the necessity comes!—and all this, in this land of wealth and prosperity! She almost tearfully begged all Spiritualist to forget their paltry difference, their unworthy divisions, and unite in this great work which has been put in our hands by the angels. She pointed to the fact that while the sects were uniting, and against us, we had suffered these dissensions to estrange and divide. She believed that recent attempts to prevent the "exercise of mediumship, were a presage of what would surely come upon us in the future, and we would yet be forced to unite in self-defense, and to save us from persecution.

Mrs. Smith is one of the most chaste, earnest, and eloquent of speakers—her eloquence being not of the artificial kind, but deep, soulful, and convincing. She is a speaker that must wear well. Her delivery is of that sort that it does not distract the mind from that which is vital in her discourses, but carries with it the very essence of conviction, in that it confines in her own appearance all that she claims for this gospel of peace and good will to man. We are sure no society can afford to lose the faithful services of this devoted teacher, and we hope an effort will be made to push on our work with renewed enthusiasm.

"The World moves."

We are glad to chronicle the fact. Galileo first discovered this, but was soon compelled to renounce the position he had so wisely taken. Notwithstanding science has fully established this peculiarity on the part of Mother Earth, there are fools even now extant, who would deny it—and not long since, we heard an eccentric, but "well to do" farmer, declare that such a "revolution on its axis" was an impossibility, as "all the water in yonder pond would be spilt when it got round on the other side." This theory on the part of scientific men, received a tirade of abuse, which, if the earth had been modest in turning round, would have resented the insult by stopping awhile. Thanks to her, however, "she still moves." All facts, however born, must be tried in the crucible; must receive a certain amount of vile condemnation. A fact connected with religion, or one which presents an idea antagonistic to orthodox theories and views, will not readily receive the attention of scientific men. Generally, scientific men are moral cowards. They cater to religion; take stock in the Vicarious Atonement, or desire to use the blood of the lamb for chemical purposes, on their characters. In England, however, three scientific men have stepped forth, and with implements of investigation, are determined to test the character of the manifestations. One, Mr. Crookes, is a practical chemist, and is aided by Dr. Huggins, the eminent astronomer. The former, with his crucible, will be able to tell whether they belong to things terrestrial or sublunary, while the latter, accustomed to peering among the stars, can decide whether the phase of manifestation have a celestial origin. We patiently wait for the report of these scientific gentlemen. Perhaps like Professor Hare, they will come forth full-fledged Spiritualists, and will astonish the world by the announcement of the fact.

In this investigation, these scientific men expect to be able to prove, no doubt, that there is a "nerve atmosphere" surrounding each person, which, influenced by the mind, enables Home to accomplish all his wonderful feats.

Mediums in Chicago.

MRS. LORD, that truly celebrated medium for physical manifestations, holds seances, and is convincing many of the truth of spirit communion. Every one who can make it convenient, should visit her seances.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON, 148 Fourth Avenue, gives daily evidence of the presence of spirits, to old business men with advice, which leads to success in legitimate business enterprises.

Her powers as a successful medium in various phases are unsurpassed. Thousands in all sections of the country, are being cured of the various ills that flesh is heir to, by the most simple remedies, prescribed by her while holding a lock of the sick person's hair, without her ever seeing the patient.

Full direction for sending to her for a diagnosis and prescription, will be found in this paper.

THE BANGS CHILDREN have suspended their seances until cooler weather.

CHARLES H. READ, a splendid physical medium, is now holding seances in Wisconsin.

DR. MCFADDEN holds seances every evening, at 343 West Madison Street. He is like many other mediums, especially queer. But so far as our knowledge goes, he gives all who attend his seances, their money's worth. He is worth calling on for the oddity of the thing. In saying this of his seances, we mean no disrespect for his phase of mediumship. It is the right phase in the right place. Our spirit friends know their own business, and use mediums fitted to accomplish the object.

There are many other very excellent mediums, of different phases, whose addresses will be found in the Medium's Register, for Chicago.

A Spirit Artist.

Bro. N. B. Starr, of Port Huron, Michigan, made us a fraternal call a few days since. He is looking remarkably well for a man of his age—sixty-seven years.

Mr. Starr was developed as a spirit-artist eight years since. During that time, he has been controlled by eminent artists in spirit-life, to execute hundreds of portraits of spirits, which have been recognized by friends, and a very great number of landscape paintings. We have labored with Bro Starr during the last year or two, trying to induce him to locate at this great and growing spiritual center—Chicago; and it it is with pleasure that we announce, that it is probable that he will do so at no very remote time.

Compensation for Kindness.

A few days since, a good Spiritualist, acting in good faith, sent us a letter for publication, which we published in our last issue, extolling a lecturer (not a Spiritualist) who had visited his town, and given a discourse on "Free Moral Agency Doctrine." Now we learn that the said lecturer spares no pains, in public and private, to traduce the character of mediums and Spiritualists!

We with pleasure publish communications from our friends, but we respectfully ask them to be cautious in their laudations of men of the stamp referred to. Our paper is the friend of mediums, and will not knowingly lend its columns to praise their traducers.

Letter from Mrs. A. Le Flora Hill.

ED. JOURNAL:—We do not wish to part with the paper—like to read the articles it contains, but do not endorse the "Search after God." We would have liked that if Mr. Francis had found some kind of a God. But I think he is not going to do it. It is a most dreadful thought, to me, at least, that there is no God to aid this world of toilings, suffering mortals. As I understand it, Spiritualism teaches us that the bad can come back, as well as the good spirits, and that we are all more or less subject to the different influences of these spirits. If so, there seems to be a great necessity for a God. The testimony of spirits does not agree with regard to this subject,—some saying there is a wise and loving Father, whom we should worship, and others, like Mr. Francis' spirit guides, seem to laugh at the idea of there being one.

Mr. Jones, how are we to reconcile these discrepancies? We, that is, my husband and self, believe in the beautiful Harmonial Philosophy, but are only beginners in the faith,—only lately having the satisfaction of witnessing spiritual manifestations. How do we know that Mr. Francis' guide is infallible? Mr. Jones, please answer these few questions, and in the meantime, I hope Mr. Francis will find a God, for I think this world needs one.

MRS. A. LE FLORA HILL.

Eden Prairie, Minn.

REPLY: As the magnet is attracted by, and subject to, the lodestone, so we mortals are attracted and subject to the Great Positive Mind—the Infinite Father.

The nature of matter and the nature of mind are but little apprehended by the finite intellect of man.

God and Nature—matter and mind are one—that is to say, there is one eternal, omnipotent substance, which is Love,—that has a real existence; its minimum is matter, its mediate, or intermediate is mind, and its maximum is God! The higher comprehends the lower, and infiltrates itself into every molicular atom and monad in existence! So an intelligent spirit taught us in our early investigations into the philosophy of life—Spiritualism.

While we can not fully comprehend that which is illimitable and boundless, yet our conception of the idea advanced is sufficiently definite to awaken in our minds a realization of a loving Infinitude, of which we are integral parts—and as a member of ourself is loved and cared for by self, so we feel that we are loved and cared for by the GREAT POSITIVE MIND of the Universe—God. This thought awakens in us the spirit of love and adoration for all beings, as

"All are but parts of one stupendous whole, Whose body Nature is, and God the soul."

—[ED. JOURNAL.

Dr. Dake.

The Analytical Healer, Dr. Dake, is now operating in Michigan, and for a few weeks, can be consulted at the Everett House, East Saginaw. A rare opportunity for invalids in that vicinity.

☞ That bothersome habit of using tobacco, can be effectually cured by using Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote, according to directions.

For sale at this office. See advertisement in another column.

☞ The first page of the JOURNAL contains interesting extracts, showing which way the "wind blows."

☞ There will be a three day's meeting of Spiritualists at Bethany, Mo., commencing on the 29th of September, and closing on Sunday, October 1st.

☞ We have two able lectures,—one from Dr. Underhill, the other from Mrs. J. H. Stillman Severance, that will appear soon.

LITERARY.

The American Odd Fellow, for July, comes to us under new and more favorable auspices. Orange Judd, whose name is synonymous with success, has assumed an active interest in its publication. This magazine, which has always been a favorite with us, will now become still more attractive, and should be read by all members of the order. It also possesses genuine value as a family magazine. Published by the A. O. F. Association, New York City.

A Few Thoughts For a Young Man. By Horace Mann. Boston: Horace B. Faller, Publisher. Chicago: S. C. Griggs & Co.

This delightful little book was in very great demand years ago, over twenty thousand having been sold when first published, and there has always been a demand for it. Mr. Fuller has got out an edition which does credit to himself as a publisher.

Historic Americans. By Theodore Parker. Boston: Horace B. Fuller. Chicago: S. C. Griggs & Co.

Theodore Parker, the varied and profound scholar and eloquent pulpit and platform orator, was the object of intense hatred and abject fear on the part of the orthodox ministers and their bigoted followers in the city of Boston, who dreaded the power of his great intellect, the influence of his noble life, and united their entire strength to kill him, and finally succeeded in their object. They could not have done it surer or more certain had they assassinated him on the street. They drove him to a foreign country in search of that health and vigor which would once more enable him to stand up in their midst and combat them as effectually and manfully as in his better days. But alas, the venomous shafts of hatred and malice had sunk so deep into his sensitive nature that even the sunny skies and balmy air of beautiful Italy could not restore his exhausted constitution. His beautiful spirit freed itself from the worn-out mortal form, and found its peers in a more congenial clime on the other side of life, where, we have no doubt, he is happy, and from whence he is to-day influencing for good those he left behind, many of whom are beginning to appreciate his noble qualities, and listen to his teachings. His name is gradually occupying that high place in American literature which of right belongs to his great genius. The book before us contains lectures on Franklin, Washington, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson. The lectures are a very valuable addition to our historical biographies, and will be fully appreciated by the readers of the JOURNAL, and by all who do not allow their bigoted religious prejudices to warp their judgment of the author.

The Journal of Speculative Philosophy, published quarterly at St. Louis, Mo., is intended as a vehicle for such translations, commentaries, and original articles as will best promote the interests of Speculative Philosophy in all its departments. The number for July is replete with solid matter that can feed the reflecting mind. Two dollars per annum. Wm. T. Harris, box 2296, St. Louis, Mo., Editor.

☞ We are in want of dues for the JOURNAL. When it is not convenient to pay all, let us have a part, as an earnest of a good will. Wake up! we are in earnest.

—Read "JESUS OF NAZARETH."

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

HARRISBURG, PA.

The Potts Family—Dr. Barr, Dr. Fahnestock and J. J. Reilly.

On the 15th and 16th of July, we lectured in the hall of our good brother, Dr. Barr. We are sorry to say that this indefatigable laborer was quite unwell, so that he could not be out in the evening. We had our young friend, J. Jefferson Reilly, a test medium, with us. On Saturday evening, a good and attentive audience assembled to hear us talk on the question, "What is Spiritualism?"

On this occasion we spoke for ourselves, claiming that all that related to man's spiritual nature in the past, the present, or the future, belongs rightfully to Spiritualism; that all that is good, and true, and valuable, in the religions that have existed in the world, is of this character; that Spiritualism is a great system of eclecticism, gathering all the good of the past systems, and adding something to these that is more comprehensive, universal, and far-reaching, than any system that has ever existed in the world, being not only adapted to the entire man, but to all conditions of humanity, and hence its great and unprecedented popularity. Meeting as it does the demands of humanity, we predicted that it was to be the religion of the world; that it would absorb the good of all forms of religion, and infuse such vitality into them, as to enable them to throw off all the husks and superficialities that have gathered around them.

At the close of our lecture, the spirit of John Pierpont spoke eloquently through our young friend, Reilly. Patrick Ocer also came and spoke a few words through his medium, Andrew Potts.

On Sunday morning, we visited the rooms of our excellent friend and brother, Joseph Potts, and were much interested in seeing the wonders there. We counted over twenty pictures of various sizes hung upon the walls of the room. Quite a number of friends came in, among them Dr. Fahnestock and Dr. Barr. These pictures are very unique and original, and as Mr. Potts remarked, "They show one thing, that spirits are no more perfect in their artistic skill than mortals."

Nearly all the pictures now there, have been produced entirely by spirits out of the form, without the aid of mortals, except to supply the paper on which they are drawn.

During the morning, we were invited, with Dr. Fahnestock and others, to an upper room, where the drawings are now made. On the bed we saw a large roll of paper about ten yards long. When this was opened, we discovered at the end that had been rolled in, three very curious and interesting pictures,—we think the best executed of any that we have seen. They had been drawn, apparently with the paper rolled up. There was another picture commenced at the outer end.

On returning to the lower room, we witnessed a number of experiments by Dr. Fahnestock upon the mediums present, and were ourselves subjected to these. We gave a communication from Dr. Hare, on the subject of the "Will," which he declared to be the nearest omnipotence of anything he had yet discovered. He stated that the power of the will depended in a great measure upon the number of faculties which co-operated in the action. A single faculty alone, produced an impulse, generally brief and inefficient; well arranged cooperation of the faculties, produced a powerful and continued action of the will.

He congratulated our friend, Dr. Fahnestock, upon the great work he was doing, of disabusing the beautiful science of Somnambulism of many of the crudities and superstitions which had been thrown around by ignorant and superstitious persons, and often fostered and encouraged by the more intelligent, who have attempted to explain its marvels to the world. We feel deeply indebted to the Doctor for his suggestion in our own case, having been suffering the greater part of the time for three and a half years with our poisoned hand, except when under the influence of spirits, and in a partially somnambulic state.

He assured us that we could throw off all the influence except in that hand, and leave it in a state of unconsciousness. We did this, and for more than a week have been exempt from pain, although the hand still remains swollen and inflamed. We shall have something more to say upon this subject in a review of the Doctor's book.

Patrick Ocer came, and gave some curious manifestations of his power to move physical bodies. On Saturday evening he said we would find something in our hat this morning. Buttons were flying around the room in a very singular manner; at least a dozen were found in different places. We found two in our hat. Four or five were placed in different parts of Mr. Reilly's clothing, sometimes in the seams of his coat, where there was no opening by which they could be taken out; two were brought home in that way. One was seen flying across the room, and then lodged under a metal plate that was screwed on to hold the cord of the window curtain. This was forced under here, so that it required considerable power with a knife to push it out. A ten cent note was found in the hat of a gentleman present.

We think our readers will be interested in the following

HISTORY OF THESE MEDIUMS;

William and Andrew Potts are twin sons of Joseph and Eliza Potts,—the latter deceased about four years ago. They were born in York County, Pennsylvania, in January, 1840. They were bright and healthy children. At the time they were about fourteen years old, the parents heard of Spiritualism, and very wisely did what every family should do, held circles at their house.

The boys were soon developed as mediums, first by tipping the table, and afterward in various other ways. Andrew was treated physically, and some very strange phenomena occurred about him. They held their circles regularly up to the time of the war, when they were suspended for a time. Since then, they have been held regularly.

William saw and predicted many events during the war. He saw printed letters which he could read. Neither of the boys have had much education.

About two years since, William's hand was moved to draw pictures with a pencil, and in August, 1870, the spirits commenced drawing in the house, without his presence or assistance. A large picture, which was presented to us in September last, was commenced by William's hand, and finished by the spirits. At this time they required pencils, and seemed to prefer having them sharpened for them. A paper was tacked upon the wall, or laid on a table or the floor, and the room was locked; and the father was requested to keep the key, and to enter the room several times a day. William and Andrew were working at their trade, that of carpenters.

Since about the first of October, 1870, the spirits have dispensed with pencils altogether, and now they make drawings, with four or five shades of color, and all that is necessary, is to place paper in the room. They say that they obtain the colors from the atmosphere. The pictures are not remarkably artistic; they are very peculiar, and when examined with a magnifying glass, appear to be done rather by dots than lines.

They have made a number of portraits of members of the family, and others, some of which have been recognized. The best portrait we saw, was that of Mr. Legrist, who is said to be the artist. There is considerable writing on some of the pictures, which is more euphonious than correct. One of the pictures was, by request, placed in a frame, and covered with a plate of glass, since which, it has been altered considerably, and improved.

Of late the directions have been to get a large roll of paper, and lay it upon a bed in the third story room. This is the roll we referred to above. Several pictures have been taken off of the original piece, which was twelve yards long. Fifty or more of these pictures have been drawn. They are of various sizes—some much more elaborate than others. There seems to be an improvement in the work as it progresses. Sometimes the spirits seem to be dissatisfied with the picture, and they have the power of removing it from the paper, either in part or entirely. Scarcely a day passes without something being done, though sometimes they work much more rapidly than at others.

Brother E. V. Wilson and F. B. Dowd have visited these rooms. We have a picture which we shall be glad to show to any of the friends. Andrew's mediumship is of entirely a different character. During the past two years he has been very much influenced by a spirit named Patrick Ocer, a genial and witty Irishman who was killed upon the railroad, near Harrisburg. We cannot detail many of the very remarkable phenomena, some of which Brother Doctor Barr has published from time to time in the local papers and in this journal, giving accounts of some of the startling occurrences that have taken place through this influence. An interesting volume might be made, and we trust the Doctor will prepare this for publication, as it will be a valuable addition to our literature, and furnish important facts in the history of this great movement.

Among the first startling phenomena, was the bringing of money, and dropping it upon the table in the circle at mother Hopkins's; since that the finding of many articles, that had been buried, by spirits, some of them a very long time. Andrew made a very brief, we might well say flying, visit to England and Ireland, while under the influence of this spirit. When under this influence, his voice and features are changed, and the power of moving physical bodies in the presence of this medium, is exhibited almost all the time.

The father, Joseph Potts, a niece Lucinda Potts, and these boys, live together in very plain style, and every one must be impressed with the candor and honesty of the whole family.

In the afternoon, we held a large public circle, at which Mr. Reilly was entranced, and after a short address on the general subject of Spiritualism, "Ocean" came and gave several tests. It was excessively warm, and the conditions were not very favorable. In the evening a violent storm reduced our audience, yet it was an attentive one. Dr. Hare took up the theme on which we had spoken on the previous evening, and gave some practical and valuable suggestions in regard to Spiritualism, and what it had done for him in this life, and in his present condition. He declared that it was of the highest importance for each one to ask themselves, what Spiritualism is doing for them? To know that every step they make in the unfoldment of their higher nature, would open to them still grander and more glorious fields of truth.

He stated that the value of Spiritualism was not realized, till they had entered the other life, and then when it was too late; there were often regrets for lost opportunities, and many were compelled to labor to finish up the work that had been left undone on earth.

We have not room here even for a synopsis of his able and eloquent appeal. We never felt more fully conscious of spirit influence, than upon this occasion; and we can speak as freely of this discourse, which we listened to with pleasure and profit, as though it had been given through another organism.

At the close of the lecture, Mr. Reilly was again entranced, and Father Pierpont uttered some very radical and wholesome truths, and then "Ocean" came and gave a benediction.

Four o'clock the next morning we were at home.

MRS. E. MANIFOLD,

Medical, Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium. Parties at a distance examined by lock of hair. Price, $1.00. Prescriptions, $1.00. Magnetic Remedies sent to all parts of the country. Address Mrs. E. C. Manifold, P. O. Box 1094, Rockford, Ill.
v10 n7 tf

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services. v9 n8 tf

CARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.

Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, with or without top. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used, and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

N. KINNEY.

v9 n26 6m.

JULIA DAKE CASTERLINE, M. D.,

TREATS SUCCESSFULLY CHRONIC AND ACUTE DISEASES. SPECIAL ATTENTION TO DISEASES OF WOMEN. 641 North 13th street, Philadelphia.
v10 n16 tf.

AGENTS! READ THIS!

WE WILL PAY AGENTS A SALARY OF $200 per week and expenses, or allow a large commission, to sell our new and wonderful inventions. Address M. WAGNER & Co., Marshall, Mich.
v9n20tm.

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large PROFITS to AGENTS. Send Stamp for Circulars. C. E. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 12, No. 181 Lasalle St.,
v10 n13 tf

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

Ohio State Association of Spiritualists.

This Association will hold its Fifth Annual Convention, on the first Saturday and Sunday of September next, in Roberts Hall, Milan, Ohio, commencing at 11 o'clock, A. M. Each local society, and children's progressive lyceum is entitled to four delegates and two additional for each fifty members or fraction over the first fifty.

Important business will come before the convention, and every society and lyceum in the State is earnestly requested to send a full delegation.

The well-known and tried hospitality of the Milan Society is extended to all delegates, who will be provided with homes as far as possible. Eminent speakers are expected, who will be duly announced, and a cordial invitation is extended to all speakers and mediums, to all Spiritualists and liberalists to meet and renew their strength at this annual reunion.

Milan is situated three miles from Norwalk, on the Lake Shore R. R., and all trains are met by the Milan hacks.

HUDSON TUTTLE, President.
GEO. W. WILSON, Rec. Secretary.
EMMA TUTTLE, Cor. Secretary.

Mason and Dixon's Line Camp Meeting.

There will be a Grand Camp Meeting of Spiritualists at Havre de Grace, Maryland, commencing at two o'clock, in the afternoon of Wednesday, August 23d, and continuing over Sunday.

It is designed to make this camp meeting the grandest convention of Spiritualists ever held in the world. Good speakers, test and physical mediums, will be in attendance and no pains will be spared to make this the most interesting, instructive, and harmonious gathering in the world.

On Friday, the third day of the meeting, there will be an exhibition of the Children's Progressive Lyceum, in all its workings. This exhibition will be participated in by several lyceums. Lyceums from every locality throughout the United States are invited to attend and take a part. The Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad Company, have agreed to carry passengers to and from the camp meeting at reduced rates.

Come one, come all, bring your tents, blankets, and provisions, and let us have a time long to be remembered.

For particulars address Moses Hull, or James Frish, Baltimore; A. P. McCombs, Havre de Grace; or H. T. Child, M. D., 634 Race St., Philadelphia.

Grove Meetings in Wisconsin.

At Geneva, Aug. 12th and 13th, Saturday and Sunday.
At Oakfield, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 19th and 20th.
At Baldsburg, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 2d and 3d.

J. O. Barrett, State missionary, and Mrs. Mattie Hulett Parry will be present at all these meetings.

Dr. E. G. Dunn will be present at the meetings in Oakfield and Beaver Dam.

Obituary.

IN MEMORIAM.

Passed on to spirit-life, Sunday evening, July 23d, Dr. R. W. Carpenter, of this city, in the 49th year of his age.

All Sabbath day as the church bells were tolling, he was slowly and surely crossing the Great River, on, on to the shining shore beyond; and as the last rays of the setting sun stole into the apartment, they rested like a glory on his noble brow—shrine from which the spirit had just departed.

It had fallen to his lot to suffer great pain and bodily anguish, and often during hours of distress has the agonizing prayer burst from his lips, "Oh, my Father, let this cup pass!"

Every pang was borne with patience and fortitude, cheered by a faith which points to a bright future after the struggles of earth-life.

Dr. Carpenter was an enthusiast in the cause of Music, and it was fitting the summons should come while listening to harmonious strains, that his soul might be borne in its upward flight on the wings of celestial melody. Every evening during his sickness, his heart was cheered by music, evoked by the rare powers of his beloved daughter Blanche, and as piece after piece was given, she always closed, by his request, by playing Beethoven's "Sonata Pathetique."

Whenever music is cherished, will his name be a household word, for he achieved more to make the Reed organ a success than any other man in the whole country. His inventions, the Vox Humana Tremulo, and La Campanella, are unsurpassed in beauty and expression, and have created a new era in the history of Reed organs. Henceforth all music will have for us a new significance, for we shall feel the highest and holiest emanate from him.

As his wife, I can bear willing testimony to his remarkable purity of character, his kind, loving regard and thoughtful solicitude, which I feel is not withdrawn by the change called death, but will ever be extended to us below.

Only recently a convert to the beautiful philosophy of Spiritualism, it was a source of infinite consolation to him during his hours of illness, and was a faith especially suited to his pure spiritual nature, and is now of inestimable value to his friends left here, who know his love shall never be altered—that still the protecting care will constantly be thrown around them.

It was his lot to pass away amid kind friends, at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. L. P. Dodge, of Chicago, surrounded by manifestations of affection and love. The soul of harmony and song were developed in him in a remarkable degree, and his improvisations on the Reed organ were at times wonderful, and haunted the memory. Never was performer more completely "en rapport" with instrument; and even now when the notes of his beloved organ is touched, we shall feel his spirit communing with us through the medium of his favorite instrument.

ORGAN VESPERS.

Soul of my soul—my joy—my tears!
I tune thy strings for mortal ears.
O breathe once more a solemn dirge
Through thy deep notes, O harp of mine!

Bending I list to music soft,
Sounds wafted from thy home aloft!
Not half their glories can my thoughts control;
When shall they hear the immortal anthems roll?

Afar from man, yet near to thee,
O God, the source of harmony!
O lift the veil that darkly lies,
Hiding their holies from these eyes!

E. R. C.

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS.

Madison Doherty, having severed his connection with A. D. Willis, at Chicago, has opened a Gallery, at Indianapolis, Indiana, where he will sit for spirit pictures.

Parties at a distance wishing these pictures can get the same result as if present, by inclosing a lock of hair, a picture, and the fee of three dollars, and post-office stamp, stating the day and hour they wish a trial. Money refunded if no result is obtained.

DOHERTY & PURSELL, PHOTOGRAPHERS,
Nos. 94 & 96 East Washington street,
Indianapolis Indiana.
v10 n17 3m

BELVIDERE SEMINARY,

FOR YOUTHS OF BOTH SEXES,

Belvidere New Jersey. Fall Term begins Wednesday, Sept. 13th. One of the most liberal institutions in the land, being strictly non-sectarian. It has the superior advantages of a beautiful and beautiful location, added to the comforts and genial influences of a pleasant home, with excellent opportunities for obtaining a practical education in any or all of its several departments, English, Classical, Literary, and Scientific. Pupils graduate in each department, also in Gymnastics.

For catalogues, address MILTON BUSH, Principals.
v10 n17 tf.

MEDIUMS.

J. G. W. ENTWISTLE,

CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN.

No. 194 South Clark Street, Room 3, Chicago.

He is prepared to treat any of the many forms of disease, and possesses a peculiar insight into the cause and character, and a controlling power over it which seems wonderful (even to himself). His medicines are purely vegetable. Invalids at any distance will be as thoroughly examined, and the means of cure (if curable) as definitely pointed out as if they were present, by sending a lock of hair, giving name, age, sex, and two leading symptoms of the disease, a penalty and fee not treated. Examination fee, by hair, $2.00.
v10 n5 tf

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex, occupation, temperament, (if not known, send photograph). Address P. O. Box 80, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.
v10 n5 tf

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, two dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for mediumistic development, one dollar. Address, TAUNTON, Mass.
v10 n10 tf

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,

Healing Medium,

Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. We rely entirely on the controlling influences. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance those that desire, and can afford the expense. Distinction and advice in a variety of ways. Emblems we give gratuitously to all our patients, when presented by our guides. Our forme custom has been to come en rapport with the applicant by the hand-writing or lock of hair; but to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write—if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to lumber up an advertisement with what we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $3; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $1 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 45, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis.
v10 n1 tf.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by Rhenom, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $1.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.
n1 v10 tf.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium

143 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the age, sex, leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognisance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

MRS. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controling her accomplish the same, is done as well when the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $2.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $5; answering Business Letters, $5. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

CLAIRVOYANCE.

DR. P. T. JOHNSON examines diseases by receiving lock of hair, name, and age, stating sex,—one dollar accompanying the order. He also prepares a sure antidote for Grove and Mosquito Fevers. Three months will cure the most inveterate case. Charges, six dollars per month. He also prepares a Sure Cure for Ague,—50 cents per bottle. Will be sent by express. Address Ann Ypsilanti, Mich.
v10 n17 tf

DR. SAMUEL MAXWELL,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN,

TREATS the sick by magnetic touch, and the use of appropriate magnetized remedies. Also makes clairvoyant examinations. Patients to be treated by letter should send age, sex, and leading symptoms. Board in private families if desired. Come to, or address,

SAMUEL MAXWELL, M. D.
72 SOUTH SIXTH ST., RICHMOND, IND.
10 n17

James Brooks,

The Great Developing Medium, will send printed instructions, which never fail to develop in full those who have any mediumistic powers. Send for them at once. Test your spiritual gifts. Inclose two dollars.

Address 926 S. Clark st, Chicago.
v10 n19 tf

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

HOUSES FOR GOD.

By Mrs. M. S. Kelso.

In this, as well as in other nations, we will not fail to see, in every city, town and village, at least one house for God, and often many more, according to the wealth and population of each particular locality, for be it remembered, that wealth is required to build a home for God. In a city of eight or ten thousand inhabitants, we see no less than eight or ten costly edifices whose spires tower high toward the heavens. These houses have been built for God to live in, and in which his peculiar and chosen people are to worship him. Our white cravatted clergymen and long robed priests collect thousands, and even millions of dollars into their coffers for the purpose of building and ornamenting these houses, which God does not need, and never will use. This money, if appropriated to charitable purposes, would accomplish untold good for humanity. Is it not a heathenish idea, a species of idolatry, to suppose that God, the great Author, not only of this little earth, but of worlds, and countless systems of worlds, would deign to come into one of these vain and aristocratic churches every Sabbath, and meet the pride and vanity which assemble there? Do the wealthy members of the different denominations contribute all the means by which these costly edifices are reared? Is not the poor man, who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow, called upon to contribute a portion of his hard earned means to the support of the gospel? Is not the widow taught that she must contribute her mite? It matters not how she may have to toil far into the small hours of the night to earn this mite, while her shepherd is comfortably ensconced between the soft cushions of the celestial city, to which he expects to go, or rather, of the gold with which its streets are said to be paved. Not only do they receive the widow's mite, but they receive cents from the grasping hand and from the lowest dens of crime and iniquity. Indeed, I believe in many instances, blood and murder are woven and interwoven into the walls of these houses.

Let us now see in what the gospel consists. Does it not too often consist of tea and coffee, wine and cigars, tobacco and whiskey, on the one side, and on the other, of fine laces, and silks and satins and jewelry, and false hair and trains and corsets, and, indeed, many other things which are not only unnecessary, but really injurious and demoralizing to themselves and the religion which they seem so sanctimoniously to embrace? Is the gospel of Mammon? The Sabbath is a day upon which the members of the different denominations appear upon dress parade, and the house of God is a grand saloon in which the latest fashions are exhibited, and of course, it is a glorious occasion! The gentlemen are out in their gayest and most fashionable attire. The ladies are perfect butterflies. Their heads—inside of which their brains are supposed to be—are covered with heavy braids, made of flax or hemp or bark, or human hair, often taken from the diseased bodies of the living, or the decayed bodies of the dead. Their waists are compressed to about one half their natural size by a corset, and their feet are encased in shoes far too small. And, by these restrictions, they prevent the free circulation of the blood in the extremities, and also its perfect aeration in the lungs. Hence, from the top of their heads to the soles of their feet, they soon become one complete bundle of disease, as well as of vanity folly and ignorance. Those who are convinced of the injury done to their health and happiness by the fashionable dress of to-day, have not the moral courage to strike from their bodies these fetters, which fashion binds upon them, and stand forth in their true womanhood, free! Oh, where there are, however, who, either wilfully or through ignorance, say, by their dress, "Mr. God, I know you are all-wise and all-powerful; I respect you very much, and have come here to worship you. But you made a great mistake when you formed me. You did not put hair enough on my head. You made my waist and feet too large, so that I am compelled, myself, to change these defects, and mold the offending parts to suit my more fastidious taste."

Thus it is. Thousands, and even millions of dollars are carried into these houses for God, every Sabbath, in the form of dress, and it is a glorious thing to be a wealthy Christian on that day. But where are the poor? As these Christians roll by in their costly carriages, where are the sick, the suffering, the broken hearted, the dying? Where are those who are kept away from the house of God, because, forsooth, they are poor; who, should they attend in the humble dress which they would be compelled to wear, would cause a great turning up of pious noses, and a general disappearing of scornful faces behind fans? Where are the hundreds of poor, ragged, half-starved children, who are found in the fashionable thoroughfares of our large cities? Where are the poor, misguided, fallen women, who are living lives of crime and shame? I ask, where are they, while their seducers, their destroyers, with heads erect, walk boldly into the house of God, take their seats as members in good standing, and engage in the mockery called worship of God? But their victims may not be seen there. These Christians—so-called—especially the female portion of them, would hold up their hands in holy horror should a fallen woman appear in the house of God. Religion is not for such as they. Hell is good enough for them. These Christians, who tell us that religion is free, and talk so much about the efficacy of the blood of Christ, say, by their actions, that only Christians can enter the city

Spiritual Works.

Anti-Spiritual Works.

PROF. WM. DENTON'S WORKS.

THE GREAT CURES
BY THE POSITIVE & NEGATIVE
POWDERS.

AGENTS WANTED.

NATURE'S HAIR RESTORATIVE.

FLORENCE SEWING MACHINES.

PARKER'S
SHOT GUN

ILLINOIS.

Historical.

The following interesting chapter in the history of our state, the just tribute to a grand old chief, from the well known pen of the Hon. Anson. Miller, is taken from the Lakeside Monthly for July. It is given in full, as its perusal will richly repay our readers. We wish Judge Miller would write the much-needed history of Illinois. His long residence in the state, thorough knowledge of its affairs and people, and his undoubted fidelity and ability, qualify him eminently for the work.

SHAUBANEE, THE INDIAN CHIEFTAIN.

Memorials for the worthy dead are among the most grateful offerings of the living. We have just witnessed a most beautiful and impressive illustration of this, in the sublime spectacle of national devotion on Decoration Day, when patriotic millions, through the breadth of a continent, garlanded the graves of their fallen heroes, and emblemized their love and admiration of the gallant dead, and the cause for which they yielded up their lives, by gifts of the season's choicest flowers. Such manifestations of gratitude and affection enshrine the spirit of patriotism in the public heart, perpetuate the memory of illustrious deeds, and excite to life and power the ennobling emulation of excellence.

The renowned chieftain, the subject of this article, was a generous and devoted benefactor to the frontier inhabitants of Illinois in times of danger and distress; and though born and bred in a region hostile to our country, and trained by an early life to war against it, he became a most reliable and efficient friend of the early settlers in the west.

Shaubanee* was a native of Canada, a Pottawatamie Indian, born and early settled in the American Revolution, probably before 1780. The Pottawatomies at that time had numerous bands and divisions, located in Canada, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and other states of the west. They were powerful men, above the ordinary size of Europeans, exceedingly athletic and muscular, courageous and formidable in war, and intelligent above the average of their savage neighbors.

The Pottawatomies, Menomonies, Sacs, Foxes, Chippewas, Ottawas, Kickapoos, Shawnees, and other tribes of the west, spoke dialects bearing a strong resemblance, and having a common origin in the old Algonquin tongue.

The Pottawatomies in Illinois, occupied the region around Lake Michigan, and on the Illinois and Fox rivers, and south of this as far as Peoria, and west as far as Rock River, that being the line between them and the Winnebagoes, who spoke the Sioux language. The Pottawatomies emigrated from Canada at an early day in the history of the northwestern territory, and their different tribes were controlled by local leaders. Big Thunder, a gigantic chief, lived on the Kishwaukee, and had his seat at what is now the beautiful town of Belvidere. Caldwell and Robinson, intelligent and judicious half-breeds, managed the affairs of the tribe at and around the old French post of Chicago, and on the Des Plaines River, and Shaubanee as peace chief, and Waubansee as war chief, exerted their influence generally over the different localities.

The Black Hawk disturbance became serious in 1831, but was easily quelled by force. The war broke out in earnest, however, in 1832. Black Hawk, whose Indian name was Mucata Mohicata, had been an associate of Shaubanee under the great Tecumseh in the Indian wars of the South, and that between the United States and Great Britain in 1812 He was an old warrior, nearly or quite seventy years of age at the time of which we write, the indomitable chief of the Sacs and Foxes, a band of lofty bearing and great force of character, who had been engaged in war from his youth. His chief town, a large one, had been located on the east bank of the Mississippi, on and near the present site of the city of Rock Island; his home had been burned, and he and his tribe driven west of the river,—his former home being claimed by the United States under treaty stipulations which Black Hawk declared were obtained by fraud and force.

In his contemplated raids against the whites east of the Mississippi, he had hoped for aid from the Pottawatomies and Winnebagoes, and had sent embassies to these tribes to enlist them in his enterprise. Earnest appeals were made to Shaubanee by his old companion in arms, but in vain. A grand council of Pattawatomies was held on the Des Plaines River, a few miles west of Chicago, and by the influence of the old chief, Shaubanee, Obazeet, who had been engaged in war from his youth, the chief town, a large one, had been located on the east bank of the Mississippi, on and near the present site of the city of Rock Island; his home had been burned, and he and his tribe driven west of the river,—his former home being claimed by the United States under treaty stipulations which Black Hawk declared were obtained by fraud and force.

In his contemplated raids against the whites east of the Mississippi, he had hoped for aid from the Pottawatomies and Winnebagoes, and had sent embassies to these tribes to enlist them in his enterprise. Earnest appeals were made to Shaubanee by his old companion in arms, but in vain. A grand council of Pattawatomies was held on the Des Plaines River, a few miles west of Chicago, and by the influence of the old chief, Shaubanee, who had been engaged in war from his youth, [illegible] friend, Captain George E. Walker, of Ottawa, was present. Here Shaubanee, Waubansee, Robinson, Caldwell, and Walker and others, denounced the murderous schemes of Black Hawk, declared themselves resolved to keep peace with the whites, and to aid them, should hostilities be commenced, and at the close of the council, one hundred braves, with Shaubunee at their head, volunteered to act under Captain Walker, should the occasion arise, to aid in the protection of the border settlements of northern Illinois. These went to Dixon with Captain Walker, and rendered important service during the war.

Previous to the breaking out of the war, Shaubanee crossed the Mississippi into Iowa, near the Des Moines River, where he had a long and serious interview with Black Hawk. He brought the chief to desist from his threatened invasion, and warned him of the certain destruction of his power in case of hostilities. He told him the Americans were a great and good people, as numerous as the leaves in the forest, and that they were invariably the rulers of in the whole country. But Black Hawk, burning with revenge and bitterly complaining of the injustice of the United States' agents, and of the bribery and corruption of Keokuk, his rival, whom he charged with stirring treachery, selling his lands and home for pay, where he had no authority, rejected all counsel, and reckless of consequences, announced his determination to recross the Mississippi and assault the whites with implacable resentment.

Shaubanee, thus finding Black Hawk and his braves eager for bloodshed, and the war inevitable, hastened back to Illinois to warn the frontier inhabitants of their approaching danger. He proclaimed to them that the determination of Black Hawk had determined to make a fearful slaughter of the defenseless, and that the only safety of the people was to leave their scattered homes, and to assemble in the forts where they could be protected by stockades, and other defenses. The old chief sent out his sons, and others of his family and tribe, and went himself, riding night and day, to give the alarm. Some heeded it; others were incredulous. It was spring time, and the people were ploughing and seeding, and unwilling to leave their fields. Shaubanee found the families of Hall, Davis and Pettigrew residing together in one house on Indian Creek, a tributary of Fox River, some fifteen miles from Ottawa, and in the vicinity of what is now Mansontown. There were between fifteen and twenty persons in these families. They were earnestly warned by the chief as he approached them on his panting horse. He told them to flee to Ottawa, where they could be protected; that no time was to be lost, as Black Hawk's warriors might attack them at any moment. But they could not realize their danger, and he left, beseeching them anxiously and with tears. Had the whites been the chief's own kindred, he would not have been more solicitous for their safety. Many lives were saved by these warnings.

Black Hawk re-crossed the Mississippi early in April, 1832, and he and his warriors were soon upon their track of desolation. As in all Indian warfare, no mercy was shown to age, sex or condition. After some fighting in the Rock River country, some seventy of these savages, in their course of havoc, descended on the little settlement at Indian Creek, so recently and earnestly warned of impending danger, and in the open day massacred the helpless inhabitants of the cabins of Hall, Davis and Pettigrew.: All the male, fifteen persons, men, women and children, were scalped, and their bodies mutilated and left exposed in the most shocking [illegible]ns present at the attack es[illegible] little son of Hall, sprang [illegible] creek, breaking his arm in [illegible] brush and flood wood, and [illegible]ing, reached Ottawa. The other [illegible] of Mr. Hall, aged fifteen and seventeen respectively, had fled to the chamber and concealed themselves in bed, where, after the destruction below had ended, they were discovered by two young Indians, who claimed the girls for wives, and to secure their prizes, hurried them up the Rock River into Wisconsin. Rewards for their rescue were offered by General Atkinson, and the girls, after a captivity of fearful experience, better imagined than described, and fortunately the fate of few, were found, purchased and returned by the chiefs of the Winnebagoes, employed by Colonel Gratiot, and ransomed by him with articles of finery and valuable property, for the ransom of the captives.

* This name has had a variety of spellings, as Shabonee, Shabbona, Shabbona, Shaboo, etc. The Indians pronounced the word as if spelled Shaw-baw-nee. The orthography adopted gives the true pronunciation, and it is the same, with the change of one letter in the last syllable, recommended in Prof. Hennessy of Illinois' song, which, and Sober History of De Kalb County, among other sources, facts herein have been obtained.

Soon after Stillman's defeat near Rock River, Shaubanee rode into camp at Dixon, then called Dixon's Ferry, the headquarters of the army, in company with the Indian agent, Pierre Menard, son of a well-known pioneer of the same name, the first Lieutenant Governor of Illinois. Some of the militia there, being excited by liquor, declared that they had come to the Rock River country to kill Indians, and that they would kill Shaubanee, and demanded of Menard why he brought an Indian into camp. He replied that the chief was one of the best and most active friends of the whites, and that he would defend him at the hazard of his life. Mr. John Dixon, the first white settler of the Rock River valley, whose house was headquarters, rushed quickly to the rescue of Shaubanee, and took him to his family room, closed him in, and guarded the door for his safety. Governor Reynolds made Dixon's house his headquarters, and there he and other leaders met Shaubanee.

It is worthy of remark, that when Black Hawk and his braves went up the Rock River Valley, before military operations had far advanced, they called at Dixon's, and the honest old man, Dixon, whom the Indians called Na-chu-sa, (white hair head) and conversed with him in the most friendly manner. That venerable gentleman, now nearly ninety years of age, recently informed the writer that among other officers at his house during the Black Hawk war, were two young lieutenants of the United States' Regulars; Robert Anderson, the hero of Fort Sumter, and Jefferson Davis, ex-president of the so called Confederate States. These brief associates, little dreaming of their future antagonism in a desolating civil war.*

After the capture of Black Hawk and his son Nanotah, and the prophet, Thomas (the prophet's bookkeeper (white Cloud), Naxope, brother of the prophet, and second in command to Black Hawk, Wisshick, a sort of chief adjutant, Pomshoe, a veteran brave, and Poweshiek, adopted son of the prophet, and a leading young warrior, who, with others, were taken as hostages to Washington and Fortress Monroe, and upon the close of the war, the national administration reserved from sale for the use of the Indians certain lands, the beautiful grove in De Kalb county, known as Shaubanee's Grove, his place of general residence for many years Here he had a fine spring, delightful woodlands, and here his family raised corn and made sugar, and he and his tribe rode over the adjoining country in pursuit of game. The government also gave him an annual pension of two hundred dollars which was continued till his death.

Subsequent to the treaty the Pottawatomies relinquished their lands in Illinois for an extensive land reservation in Kansas, then a wild, but now near the present capital of that state, and Shaubanee removed with his family and tribe. He could be found hostile Indian bands, with reservations near the Pottawatomie Reservation, which made his new home very unpleasant. One of his sons was killed in a difficulty with his inimical neighbors, and the young old chief in the fall returned to the grove with his family, consisting of his last wife, Pokanoka—his first wife being buried in the grove—his sons and daughters, his sons-in-law and daughters-in-law and grandchildren, numbering in all about thirty persons.

After a few years, Shaubanee, at the solicitation of his tribe, returned to Kansas, when it was reported at Washington by persons wishing his valuable grove, that he had abandoned it. The grove was then put into market and sold, and when Shaubanee returned to Illinois, he found, to his inexpressible sorrow, that his old home was gone, and he wept, saying, "All gone—Shaubanee got no home now!" He said that he loved this grove, that his first wife and some of his children were buried there, that he had lived there, and wished to die there and be buried with his dead; but that he had lost all, and was very poor. He then removed to the Illinois River, east of Ottawa, where the citizens of that town and vicinity raised money by subscription and purchased for him a tract of land in the timber on the river, and erected suitable buildings thereon for himself and family, where he ever after had a permanent home

Shaubanee, though nearly sixty years of age at the time of the war, "as then in the prime of vigorous manhood. He was a large and portly man, well built, both for strength and agility, courage and dignified in his manner and bearing, and truly one of Nature's noblemen. His broad and rugged face was energy expressive of kindness, sincerity, sound judgment, and that nobility of character which he ever exhibited in a remarkable degree. He was honest and honorable in his dealings, and a highly social and agreeable neighbor, His sons were much like him. Smoke, who would probably have succeeded him as chief, is described as "a magnificent fellow, tall and well proportioned," with fine and manly features, a model young brave—distinguished, like Uncas, of New England fame, for his laudable temperance in the rejection of all intoxicating drinks. This promising young man died in Iowa, where Shaubanee watched over him with all the solicitude of a loving father. The whites sympathized with the afflicted chief,—attended kindly upon the son in his sickness, and buried him with respectful funeral rites. The old chief often alluded to this with gratitude and tears. He said, "White man much good to Smoke, take care of him sick, and when dead put him in a box"—describing the coffin,—"then one white man bow down over Smoke and say, O God! O God! O God! White man much good."

Sometimes the old chief attended religious meetings with his family, and was always particularly careful that the young should be attentive, and behave with propriety.

Shaubanee had many anecdotes of his old leader, Tecumseh, whom he admired as a man of integrity and honor, and a warrior of consummate ability. He said that at a council on the Wabash, during a thunder storm, the lightning struck a tree near by and set it on fire. Tecumseh at once rose, approached the tree, and lit his pipe, assuring the wondering chiefs that the Great Spirit had sent them fire at his request, that they might light their pipes at the sacred flame. Having learned from the British officers near Detroit that there would be an eclipse of the sun on a certain day, Tecumseh told the Indians, some of whom had disobeyed him, the Great Spirit was displeased with their conduct, and on that day by hiding his face from them. When the day arrived and the sun began to be darkened, the disobedient Indians besought their chief's pardon and his intercession with the Great Spirit. He said light was soon graciously restored, and ever after Tecumseh commanded the most implicit obedience of his people. Such were some of the means through which this most gifted and powerful chief secured and maintained the marvellous control over the Indians from Canada to Florida, and combined them against the government of the United States.

Shaubanee's description of the memorable battle of the Thames, in which Tecumseh fell, leaves no doubt that the lion-hearted Shawnee chief was killed by Colonel Richard M. Johnson. Shaubanee acted as one of the aids of Tecumseh, and was standing near him at the time of his encounter with Johnson. Tecumseh sprang forward to cheer on officer riding a gray horse, and raised his tomahawk to kill him, when the officer drew a pistol and shot him. Shaubanee said that Tecumseh had been wounded in the battle a number of times before, but the officer on the gray horse killed him. Of this he was positive, and spoke from actual knowledge, and his statement agrees precisely with the account of Colonel Johnson, who said he rode a favorite gray which had been mortally wounded, and was killed at the time he drew his pistol from his holster and shot Tecumseh. After the fall of Tecumseh, all, as Shaubanee related, fled in dismay. "Indians and red coats all run, Shaubanee push a shoe" (Shaubanee ran too.) "He never more fight Mericans! Ugh, never, never!"

After a brief illness, Shaubanee closed his life of varied fortunes, at his home on the Illinois River, July 19th, 1859, aged more than fourscore years—one of the last famous chiefs of a race rapidly disappearing before the march of civilization, and traveling toward the setting sun. He was buried amid the tolling of bells, in the city of Morris, where a large concourse attended his funeral. When the tidings of his death were announced through the state, all acquainted with his early history felt the loss of one entitled to a grateful remembrance; a noble chief, worthy of a monument inscribed, "Sacred to the memory of Shaubanee—the friend of the whites."

We give place to the foregoing, as of general interest to all of our readers, but more especially to those residing in the northwestern states.

Judge Miller, of Rockford, our friend, is a ripe scholar. His amiable companion is a Spiritualist, of scholastic ability not inferior to her husband. She reads and admires the JOURNAL, as most clear-headed and right thinking people do.

Judge Miller is undoubtedly the right man, in the right place, at the right time to write up a creditable history of Illinois. Such a work is very much needed. It is, in fact, demanded.

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled THE SUNDAY QUESTION, and SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.

This work consists of 123 large, closely printed pages. It is an exhaustive review of the so-called Sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day; to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL to any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we we will send the same work and the JOURNAL for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the JOURNAL three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called Davis's Unfoldings, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the JOURNAL will avail him or herself of this generous offer, and thus secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote.

The most certain and perfectly harmless antidote for the poisonous effects, and remedy for the tobacco appetite, is known by the above name.

It is compounded by Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated medium of Chicago, while entranced by a celebrated chemist, long in spirit life. This antidote is warranted to break the habit of using tobacco by the inveterate lover of the weed, when the directions (on each box) are followed.

Agents for selling the same throughout the country are wanted. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office. Price $2.00 per box—sent by mail free of postage, on receipt of the money.

Bible in India and Hindoo New Testament.

We will send the above-named rare books free of postage, on receipt of $3.50.

To Western Master-Printers.

A lad sixteen years of age, who has been acquiring an education up to the present time, desires to learn the printing business in some establishment in New York State or further West. He is very intelligent and energetic, of good moral character, and bids fair to make an excellent practical printer—as he has a special desire to learn that trade. Master-printers of either a newspaper and job office, or book office, wishing an apprentice, will please address a line to Wm. White & Co., Banner of Light office, Boston, Mass.

v10 n30 tf.

DR. S. L. MCFADDEN AND WIFE, MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 348 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago,

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give news from spirit friends, and answer sealed letters. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law unto themselves, and to take their affairs out of the hands of doctors and preachers. All Mediums are invited to attend free of charge. The Contradictions of the Bible, Lying Spirits, and False communications, and the Science of Life, Love and Marriage, the examination of diseases, and private communications, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n12 13t

AN EYE-OPENER.

"CITATEUR PAR PIGAULT."

LE BRUN,

DOUBTS OF INFIDELS.

Embodying Thirty Important Questions to the Clergy; also Forty Close Questions to the Doctors of Divinity.

BY ZEPA.

☞ For sale at the office of this paper. Price, in cloth, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In paper, 50 cents; postage, 6 cents.

813 RACE ST.

E. E. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, can accommodate MEDIUMS visiting that city with fine rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.

v10n13 tf

ABSTRACT OF COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument Pentateuch is not historically true, and that by Moses, Jeremiah, and other prophets, &c. The substance of five volumes in 48 pages. Price 20 cents. AMERICAN NEWS Co., N. Y.

[illegible] and many other dents of the United States, Governors, Senators, and and Representatives State and National, Chief Justices and Judges of State and United States Courts, Commanders, and some of the most illustrious names of the century.

Prof. Spencer's Positive and Negative Powders, for sale at this office.

Address, S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

[THIRD EDITION, REVISED AND CORRECTED.]

JUST PUBLISHED!

A Complete and Truthful History of that Good Man and

PRINCE OF MEDIUMS,

Jesus of Nazareth

BY

PAUL AND JUDAS,

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most

REMARKABLE WORK

in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, PAUL and JUDAS, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, usurping all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains fifty closely-printed pages.

PRICE, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St. Chicago.

ATTRACTIVE NEW BOOKS.

ERNEST RENAN'S WORKS.

THE LIFE OF JESUS.—THE LIFE OF SAINT PAUL.—AND THE LIVES OF THE APOSTLES.

These three remarkable books, by the great French Philosopher, are attracting the earnest attention of all readers. "They are of great power and learning, earnestly and honestly written, beautiful in style, admirable in treatment, and filled with reverence, tenderness, and warmth of heart."—Post. Price $1.75 each; postage 20 cents.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA;

Or; the Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation. Translated from the French of Louis Jacolliot. A remarkable volume, which is making a great sensation in Europe, and exciting the profoundest attention of thinking people. * Price $2.00; postage 30 cents.

HABITS OF GOOD SOCIETY.

A hand-Book for Ladies and Gentlemen; with hints and anecdotes concerning nice points of taste, good manners, and the art of making one's self agreeable. The best and most entertaining book on the subject ever published.

* Price $1.75; postage 20 cents.

THE ART OF CONVERSATION,

With directions for Self-Culture. Teaching the art of conversing with ease and propriety, and setting forth the literary knowledge requisite to appear to advantage in good society. A book of real merit and intrinsic worth.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

THE ARTS OF WRITING, READING, AND SPEAKING.

A remarkably clever book that every one, whether educated or not, will find of immense advantage and profit. A capital companion for that ever popular work, THE ART OF CONVERSATION. * Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

☞ These books are all beautifully printed and handsomely bound in cloth covers, with gilt backs.

For sale wholesale and retail by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

HERMES MERCURIUS TRISMEGISTUS:

(Ter Maximus! King of Egypt! MELCHIZEDEC!)

HIS DIVINE PYMANDER.

His First Book; Pymander—The Spirit from the Far Heavens; The Holy Sermon; The Key; That God is not Manifest, and yet Most Manifest; God; The Song; Truth; The Crater; The Divine Mind.

This most ancient and glorious book ought to be in the house of every Christian, moral and religious person in the land—especially spiritualists. Also in the library of editors, ministers, infidels, and skeptics, for it contains what can nowhere else be found. This rare and superb volume also contains the world famous Asclepian Allegory—the experience and ascendancy belief and secret doctrines of the Rosicrucians, Alchemists, Hermetists and other illuminati. Also translations from the Vedas; Brahm; the Song of Brahm; and the Smaragdine Table.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

* For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE.

IT COSTS

Only about one-third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Handy Book-Binder. Sizes suited to any publication, from the smallest 12 months to the largest Encyclopedia. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both Wire and Binder. Size for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 18; price $1.20 and $1.50. Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph from lock of hair, readings of character; medical charges, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those intending marriage; directions for the management of children; hints to the inharmoniously married, etc.

TERMS—$2.00 for full DELINEATION; brief DELINEATION—$1.

A. B. SEVERANCE,

497 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

v7n13tf.

ROSICRUCIA!!!

THE ROAD TO POWER!! SEXUAL SCIENCE! F. B. Dowd's Private Lectures to Ladies and Gentlemen. A pamphlet of 80 pages, containing principles, laws, and advice beyond price. Ignorance is the curse of mankind. Price 50 cents. For sale by the author, F. B. Dowd, Davenport, Iowa.

v10 n18 tf.

THE VOICE OF PRAYER,

A Poem by W. S. Barlow, Author of "The Voices."

This little poem is fully equal to any of Mr. Barlow's best efforts, and should be read by everybody.

Printed on fine tinted paper with blue line border. Price 25 cents; postage 3 cents.

* For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Dico hominem eternum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN HELMONT.

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutatory, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Two or four packages mailed free for 25 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 73 I St., Washington, D. C.

v10 n11 tf

THE

HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF

M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,

AND WRITTEN BY

PROF. WM. F. LYON.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"This book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form fair opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner, but this we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the readers thinker, being confident that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"The central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of these chapters are devoted to substantiating, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface upon which the habitable world is a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture that may be found in the arctic regions, and open Polar seas, and opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from one surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail or steam either way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with one inner and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

* For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1785 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE

BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON.

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskreet, or ancient language of the Brahmins.

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity, dignity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

* For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS

OR THE

WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE

REVEALED TO MAN.

The Medium, in his address to the public says:

The Medium (David Corlees, of Huntley's Grove McHenry Co., Ill.,) through whom this work was given, has been a careful observer of the phenomena of "Modern Spiritualism" for over twenty years and during this time he has been the humble Medium through which hundreds of philosophical and scientific lectures have been given to attentive listeners. Of himself, he can only say he is unassuming learner, far advanced in years. He asks for this pamphlet a careful and attentive perusal.

The Introduction entitled "The Unveiling," treats of man as the grand objective ultimate of Life's Unfoldings;

He also stands at the pinnacle of all organized Life in the native purity of all things.

On page twenty-four, the author treats of "the way mediums paint likenesses, in the true order of the development of the arts and sciences.

In part second, under the grammatical head of mysteries Revealed, the author treats of "How Mankind Manifest their presence through Physical Bodies of Mediums. How the writing is done. How we influence Mediums to speak. The fullness of all kinds of language investigated. The ring feat and the carrying of Musical Instruments around the room explained."

This work is neatly got up and consists of seventy-three closely printed pages and we hesitate not to say that it contains more original thought upon important subjects, a few only of which we have enumerated, than any other work of equal size we have seen.

* Price 30 cents; postage, 3 cents. For sale wholesale and retail by the publishers, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

THE

Descent of Man,

AND

Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 400 pp. each, Price $2.00 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

* For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

EXPRESS!

THE "EXPRESS" and other Rubber Goods,

208

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send stamp for circulars. Address: "EXPRESS" Co.

207 Clark St., Room 19 Chicago.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR. CHICAGO, AUGUST 12, 1871. VOL. X.—NO. 21.

HURL THEM DOWN.

[The following lines are from a volume of poems by Prof. Wm. Denton, which he has just placed in the hands of the printer.]

When presidents heed not the popular will,
And senators care but their pockets to fill;
When law-makers are but blind partisan hacks,
Who care for a man but the sum of his tax,
Though nations may ring with their lordly renown,
Their villainies sentence them; hurl them down!

Though palaces rise if the king only wot,
And ignorant multitudes think him a God,
The time has come by for such fanfaronade,
Henceforth let him work at some man-blessing trade.
A king is but civilization's old clown—
A clog to humanity; hurl him down!

Proud priests of the "bloody faith," dealers in lies,
You've b'asted the green earth and darkened the skies,
Created the devil and made for us hell.
The people are rising, they're cast off your spell,
And Justice exclaims with an ominous frown,
Too long have you bowed to them; hurl them down!

Great God of the orthodox, cruel and grim,
The devil's an angel compared unto him;
The jailor of hell, as relentless as fate,
Eternity cannot his cruelty sate;
The Lord or Jehovah of Jewish renown,
Humanity rises and hurls them down.

AS TO A GHOST.

A Big Sensation at Germantown, Ohio.

A Reliable Ghost Story that beats Baron Munchausen.

Five Hundred People Visit the House.

S. S. JONES—DEAR SIR:—I herewith transmit you for reproduction in the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, the 5th page of the Cincinnati Commercial, containing a full and detailed account of a most remarkable and startling phenomena that occurred in this vicinity.

Germantown is situated South-west of this city, at about the same distance as it is from Dayton.

This occurrence has produced a profound sensation throughout this neighborhood, and the statements contained in the Commercial can be relied upon as being correctly reported, as they were furnished by Mr. W. M. Ampt, who resides in Cincinnati, and is the Prosecuting Attorney of Hamilton County.

Very respectfully,

A. D. SHIVELY.

Xenia, Ohio, July 28, 1871.

(Special Correspondence Cincinnati Commercial.)

I arrived in Germantown Tuesday evening last, late at night, to take up my summer quarters. Before the "bus" that conveyed me from the depot at Carlisle Station on the Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton Railroad, a distance of four miles from here, arrived, I overheard conversations among the other occupants of the vehicle, from which the inference was readily drawn that something highly sensational, if not real, had occurred in the vicinity of Germantown, and that the matter, whatever it was, had caused general excitement in the town and neighborhood.

But before telling you what I found to be the case upon arriving at my place of destination, will you hear something of the history of the town itself?

GERMANTOWN

Is a quiet, unassuming little town of, say, sixteen hundred inhabitants, situated in the southeastern part of Montgomery County, Ohio, twelve miles southeast of Dayton, and fourteen miles from the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad.

It lies in the Twin Valley, a sort of a sub valley to the Miami Valley, is surrounded on all sides by hills, from which you see the town almost at your feet, and from one of them your vision ranges a distance of five or six miles in front of you.

The town is one of the oldest in the valley, having been laid out as far back as 1819; and originally gave promise of some local importance as a place for business, but the new channel of commerce and trade, called the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad, which was built at a distance of four miles from it in 1853, left it high and dry, and since that time it has done little more than keep its own.

It is, however, a very pleasant place to live in. You can live long, well and cheaply here, and have the utmost assurance when you die of going straightway to heaven.

The town is regularly laid out, the streets are abundantly shaded with trees, the houses are mostly of brick, and almost every one has a fine yard of grass, trees and flowers.

Many are born here, and few, if any, die, so healthy is the place. It is, however, a good place for a boy to leave as soon as he is old enough to run away from his parents, which latter is the best thing for him to do if his parents insist upon holding on to him.

Arriving late at night, I heard of what seemed to be a great "sell," the nature of which is fully disclosed hereafter by the story of witnesses to the matter, and on the next morning found upon inquiry that the report was fully corroborated in town, and in fact that the subject was universally talked about. In a word, the report was that from Friday, July 21, to the Monday following, at noon, the house of a young farmer named Benjamin Stiver, had been visited by something invisible, incomprehensible, intangible, mysterious, which had everything its own way during that period, night and day, at intervals. Barrels were upset, crocks tumbled over, milk spilled, potatoes thrown about, rubbish in the cellar piled up in the milk-trough, heavy stones moved from their places, teakettles thrown from the stove, chairs thrown about the room, Bible thrown from the bureau, and when put back immediately thrown down again; guns moved on the floor or from their places, a feather bed thrown from the bed into the middle of the room, shoes thrown about, tables upset in their very tracks, quick as lightning, barrels rolled away, stoves knocked over, and lofty tumbling generally indulged in for several days.

There was no stopping on Sunday, as you will see from the sworn statement. Whether this was a violation of the law against "common labor" on Sunday, I leave for my friend, Mayor Davis, to decide.

A momentary consultation was had on Wednesday morning, and John Zehring, Esq., a merchant of this place, who had already satisfied himself of the facts, and myself, concluded to get the story from the eye-witnesses themselves, and then if it seemed proper furnish the Commercial a reliable account of the affair. Wednesday afternoon we took a horse and buggy and started for the scene of the fantastic tricks, which are quite graphically set forth in the statement of the eye-witnesses.

THE HOUSE,

A mile and a quarter north of Germantown, is a plain country farm house, built of wood. It fronts to the east—is two stories high and has a basement below. The declination of the ground is slight from the back part of the house downward toward the front.

The basement is on the east side of the house, and back of it on the west side are the spring-house and cellar proper, both being of small dimensions, the spring-house being in the northwest corner and the cellar proper in the southwest corner.

The first story has a sitting-room, kitchen and bed room. The porch on the front or east side of the house runs along in front of the kitchen, and in front of a hall leading to the sitting room.

The second story has a hall and several rooms.

There is but one stairway leading from the first to the second story, and but one from the first story down into the basement.

The basement may also be entered from the east side by a door under the porch. The house is thirty-five feet front.

THE STIVER FAMILY

Is one of the pioneer families of this valley, emigrating from Pennsylvania as long ago as 1806. They were all farmers, and their descendants have lived within five miles of their first settlement—occupying the original farms. They are thrify, industrious, and successful farmers, in good circumstances, and have the universal respect and confidence of the whole neighborhood for honesty and truthfulness. True, they have not seen as much of the world as your young America, but every one concedes that they fully understand how to take care of number one.

THE CAUSE

Of the mystery, whether celestial, human or infernal, no one understanding the facts in full pretends to solve.

Our local philosophers, of course, collect every evening in front of our dry goods stores, and sitting cross-legged on store boxes and benches whittling pine sticks and smoking bad cigars, try to explain the mystery.

They advance the theory that it was a connivance among the Stivers to get up some excuse for sending away the boy Pontius, whom they had taken to raise, and they are met by the statement of witnesses, whose veracity they can not impeach, and by the improbability of such an explanation, in view of the facts themselves.

They suggest the probability of some one wishing to buy the farm, and to get it at a low figure, seeking to injure its reputation as "haunted;" and the answer is, that the owner of the farm himself, Samuel Stiver, sr., is one of the eye-witnesses to the transactions detailed.

The statement of Benjamin Stiver, accompanying, was written down by myself, in the presence of the witnesses and John Zehring, Esq. Read the statement for yourself.

W. M. AMPT.

Benjamin Stiver says he lives in German Township, about one mile and a quarter north of Germantown, Montgomery County, Ohio. Have lived in the house I now occupy for over five years. Have lived in this township from my birth. Am twenty-nine years old. Am married.

Charles Pontius, a boy nine years old, has lived with me since February last, about six months. He lived with me up to last Monday, the 24th day of July, 1871.

On last Friday, the 21st of July, my wife and her sister went down cellar, and they observed that the top crust of two custard pies was removed. By the crust I mean the skin usually over that kind of pie. They were not disturbed otherwise. The pies then looked fresh—the crust or skin was missing and could not be found. There were also four apple pies sitting on the same board with the custard, and each contained marks which appeared to have been made by thrusting the thumb and fingers through the center. Ten or fifteen minutes after a tub full of potatoes were found scattered all over the cellar, appearing as though pitched about by some one, and the tub was tipped over. We found also a dish-rag and an old pot under a bench in the cellar, removed from their usual place of keeping. A loaf of bread placed on the same board with the pies appeared to have a piece bitten off. The pies and bread were all sound when placed there. The dish-rag, which was kept on the top of a hogshead, was found missing four different times in succession, and was picked up under brush where we first saw it. A few minutes afterward it was missing each time. The potatoes we picked up at least six times, and put them back into the tub, and when we came back into the cellar, upon hearing the noise, we found the potatoes scattered, as at first. There was no one in the cellar at the time who could have thrown them about.

We heard the noise in the cellar, being in the kitchen right over it, and the noise resembled the throwing of potatoes and the upsetting of a vessel. When we heard the noise we always went down to see what the matter was. The parties in the house then were myself, wife, her sister and the little boy Pontius.

The cellar is divided into three parts—the cellar proper, the basement and the spring-house. The basement, which is under the kitchen, is where the potatoes and pies were.

After supper a few minutes we found that eleven crocks of milk were upset, and the contents all spilled out. One only was left. These were in the milk trough. We also found a large crock of milk and a small tub of milk, which were sitting upon a platform about fifteen inches higher than this trough, upset and rolled down into the milk trough. The large crock and two of the milk crocks were broken.

There was nothing wrong at supper time with any of the crocks. The little boy Pontius was the first to inform us of this. The crock which had not been upset in the spring-house, was taken by my wife into the basement cellar and placed in the window, when she went out to milk, and when she came back she found it upset, also. This all took place before 8 or 9 o'clock, our bed time. We are sure that none of the family could have done any of the damage. We thought at first it was done by a muskrat, and did not suspect anybody.

On Saturday morning following, the milk of Friday evening's milking was placed in the spring-house. There were seven crocks, and they were put on the platform before referred to. About ten or fifteen minutes after I went down, and discovered one crock upset. This was before breakfast. Right after breakfast my wife went down, and saw two more of them upset. The remaining four she placed in a tub in the basement cellar, and they were upset one after the other by about 11 o'clock, as she found them when she went into the cellar; none of them were broken. She took the crocks all out, as she had found them upset, and placed them beside the tub; and afterward she found every one of them removed from the place where she had placed them.

The next time she went down cellar before dinner she found the tub upset and the milk spilled on the floor. There were four or five gallons of milk in it. The tub was a large washtub. In the morning she also took a six-gallon stone jar about fifteen inches high, weighing eighteen to twenty pounds, and put in a half bucketful of water, and put in her yeast crock, so as to cool the yeast, and she found it upset after dinner.

The Saturday morning's milk she put into crocks, and these were set into a tub of water in the basement cellar. Three of the crocks were carried up on the porch, and when they came for the fourth they found it upset. My wife was standing upon the front porch and saw a half barrel tub, which contained a bucket full of water, running near the house. This tub was standing under the water spout in the yard, and the tub in the spring-house which had, in the meantime, been carried to the door of the basement at its side, and a large crock, were also upset.

My wife next discovered, about 4 P. M., a fruit jar thrown from a mantel piece, six or seven feet above the floor, down on to the floor. This was in the basement. My wife heard the noise, being on the porch. She went down and saw what it was.

Right after this, there were two stones—one weighing twelve or fifteen pounds, and the other six or eight pounds,—thrown off the bread box in the basement. The bread box was on the floor. She and the boy Pontius were in the basement at the time, and saw them pitched off. One was lying on top of the other, and they were pitched about four feet. The lid of the box on which they were lying was about one foot and a half broad by three feet in length. They were both twelve or fourteen feet from the box when the stones were pitched off. They at once put them back, and she carried up some fruit jars, the boy having gone up stairs to take care of the child.

When she went back into the basement she was going to lift off the lid from the bread box, and just as she touched the lid, the stones, lid and all slid off on to the floor. Both stones are flat limestones about two inches thick, one about a foot square, and the other about eight inches square. There was nothing in the box except bread. The basement is so light that you can see a pin on the floor while standing up. There are two windows, and the door was open, and the window shutters were also open.

Saturday evening my wife being afraid, sent the little boy over to my brother's, a distance of three or four hundred yards, for me. The boy came back, and I staid to finish my work.

Before the boy was sent, and while he was gone, (which is about fifteen minutes), she heard all kinds of noises in the basement which seemed like the throwing of bricks, boards, tubs, boxes, lids, old pieces of iron and crocks—making a general racket and confusion. And this continued until 5:30 P. M., after the boy had returned.

I got back to the house at 6:30 P. M., went into the basement and found a lot of rubbish, split milk, old pieces of iron, potatoes and other things scattered around on the floor promiscuously. The bread-box was turned upside down; a keg of soap-grease was turned upside down also.

From the basement I went to the milk-house, and found rubbish boxes piled up in the milk trough three feet high—such as crock lids, boxes, kegs, brick-bats, broken crocks, boards, the old hat before referred to, and a small box of lime which had been for months in the basement part of the cellar on a bench. The latter was found in the milk-trough in the spring-house, lime and all. A box of plasterers' hair which was kept in the cellar proper was also in the milk-house. A crock of pickles which had been standing by the milk-trough was found in the milk-trough. I pitched everything out of the window of the mill-house. I carried the rubbish from the basement, and found one of my vinegar barrels leaking. I had five of them in the basement. I took enough vinegar out to fill up one of the other barrels, and bunged the leaking one up tight as I could, and set it up on end to prevent further leakage. This ended Saturday.

My wife on Sunday morning took six crocks of milk, her Saturday night's milk, and put them into the basement. A few minutes after I went down and found two of the crocks upset and the milk spilled. The boy Pontius had just got up and was in the kitchen when I went down. My wife was washing her dishes at the table. She was standing between the upright door that opens into the cellar, and the sink in the corner of the kitchen. These were ten feet apart. There was a crock standing in the sink and a lid on it. She was standing near the cellar door, in range with it and the sink, and she heard the lid on the crock fly over her head down into the basement cellar, and heard it land on the ground. A mouse-trap, which she a few minutes before had placed on a platform at the top of the cellar stairway was thrown down into the basement. The boy Pontius was sitting rocking the child near the sink at the time the lid flew down cellar. She went out of the kitchen and when out of doors heard a noise and rattle, and when she came back found two skillets which had been standing on the platform where the mouse-trap was, down in the cellar broken to pieces. After she came back she had hardly gone into an adjoining room when she heard a racket. She returned to the kitchen and found the crock in the sink which had been covered with a pie plate thrown on the floor and the milk spilled. She then sent the little boy to my brother Samuel, about 8 o'clock, to have him come over, as she was afraid to stay alone, I having gone to my father's. When my brother Samuel came, he heard some noise in the cellar, and went down, and found the lard can lying on the floor, flattened very much at the top. It was a new tin can, and was in good order before. He set up the can on the floor, and laid the lid on, and started up the stairway, and he had not got up before he heard the can fall over again. He went back and set it up again. The top part only was mashed; the bottom was all right. He started up the stairway, but did not get the cellar door closed before it fell a third time. My bull dog—a very large dog, and one of the best watch dogs in the country—was lying under the bench where the can stood in the first place, and did not take any notice of the falling. The boy Pontius was up stairs all the time.

In the cellar proper there was one empty barrel, and two lard firkins, filled. They were tumbled over, which was heard by my brother, my wife, and the little boy. These firkins and this barrel were several times set up, and they tumbled over each time again.

The little boy went to the cellar and saw the barrel tumble over, and the boy dodging back at the moment the door flew shut, no one having hold of it at the time, and there was no one in the cellar proper at the time. The cellar proper is ten by twelve feet, and in the southwest corner. By this time I got back myself from my father's, and found the mouse-trap at the bottom of the stairs as stated, and the lard can in the basement thrown over. I set it up and put on the lid, having straightened it as well as I could. I put the mouse-trap in its place at the head of the cellar stairs, and went into the cellar proper; found the lard firkins and barrel up-side-down; set them up and went up into the kitchen. My brother Samuel, wife, and my sister Sarah and the little boy were there talking over the affair. The boy went out with the child into the yard, and I heard a noise at the basement window, which appeared to be made by one tapping on the glass or sash. Went down and took the window out; saw no one, and sat down on the cellar steps half way up. These steps lead from the basement into the kitchen, and the cellar proper is on the opposite side of the basement from the stairs, and on the same level as the basement. While sitting there, heard a noise in the cellar proper. Went there and found the barrel upset, and I said, "What do you want? What are you hunting? What shall I do?" Received no answer; closed up and went up stairs. This was about 11 A. M.

After dinner, while I was picking berries, some distance from the house, the boy was at the spring at the northwest corner of the house, and when he was coming toward the east side of the house, the vinegar barrel, which I on Saturday had bunged tight and set up on end, was thrown over, the bung out, and the vinegar spilled.

My wife instantly called up the boy to the porch to take the child. He came and took the child and sat down on the porch, and while she was in the cellar a candlestick with candle and an egg on the sink in the kitchen fell off. She heard it, and coming up from the cellar, saw them on the floor.

The sink is right by the door that leads to the porch where the boy was sitting. My wife, after coming up out of the cellar, went to the porch where the boy was still sitting with the child, and came through the kitchen in so doing; and while she and the boy with the child were on the porch, she heard the coffee-pot and a crock fall from the cooking stove in the kitchen on to the floor. The crock was broken and the coffee spilled. There was no one in the kitchen at the time, and there was in fact no one about the house except she, the boy and the child. The door leading from the kitchen to the porch was wide open at the time. Right after this, while the boy was sitting on the porch, and she was cleaning up the rubbish in the kitchen, she heard a noise down in the cellar, and sent the boy down, and she went down also with the child in her arms and to the cellar proper, and there found a keg of pickles turned up-side-down. It was a half barrel keg and was half full of pickles. The pickles were scattered over the cellar, basement and milk or spring-house.

Nothing more occurred until toward sundown Sunday evening.

I was then at the barn, my wife in the barnyard milking, and the boy was on the porch holding the child.

He hallooed, "There goes the tea-kettle." My wife also heard the noise, and she came up to the house, and as she approached the house, she heard the boy say: "The baby got a lick," and had hardly said this when she said: "There, it got another one;" and when she got to the house she found the tea-kettle thrown on the floor, side of the stove. It had been sitting on the stove, nearly filled with hot water.

This was about sundown. Afterward the boy went to bed up stairs, in the southeast corner of the house. I and my wife were in the kitchen, and heard a noise, which appeared to be in the hall above the kitchen. This sound appeared to be made by the throwing of a shoe. Just about this time came my father, Samuel Stiver, sr., and my mother. Just as they came we heard a similar noise up stairs. I and my father started up found a boot and a powder horn out of their place, one of them several feet; went to the room where the boy was sleeping; there was a can and a large crock of molasses on the table and also two crocks of preserves. We put the preserves under the table, and took the can and large crock down and took them to the barn. Father went back fast to the house and he heard a noise again up stairs, much louder than the other one, so loud in fact as to shake the windows. He went up fast and mother followed; found the two preserve crocks rolled to the opposite side of the room, the sweet potato box turned upside down, four or six brooms thrown down. Mother said to the child Pontius, in father's presence, "Ain't you afraid to stay up here alone?" He replied "No." He had been in bed only about fifteen minutes. He was covered up head and ears. The boy got up, and father and mother and the boy all came down stairs the boy going first. When they got down into the hall below they heard another noise, and father ran up stairs and found another box turned upside down. Father came down again. We then sent the boy, my wife and the baby to my brother Samuel's house, and we then went to work to take out of the house everything in danger of being broken. We took out dishes and packed them in baskets, and while we were doing this my wife returned with brother Samuel, leaving the boy Pontius and the child at brother Samuel's house. While we were carrying the dishes to the barn the boy Pontius came back and said the child was sick, and my wife went to brother Samuel's, and the boy remained. Within a few minutes after his return there was a general tumble again, which continued, at intervals, for nearly an hour. A bench in the sitting-room, where the bread was placed, which had been brought up from the cellar when the bread was removed from the house, was turned completely up-side-down, on the very spot where it stood. Then a large rocking chair bounced from the side of the sitting room, toward the center of the room, up-side-down, a distance of five or six feet, father and mother and myself being within four feet of it at the time and no one else being in the room. There were two lights in the room at the time. Then the small rocking chair was turned over. The family Bible, which was on the bureau, fell on the floor, no one being within its reach at the time. Mother picked it up and laid it back, and it fell again immediately after she had removed her hand from it. The balance of the chairs, six or seven, commenced turning somersaults in the room, and the cradle turned over and father replaced it, when it turned up-side-down again without further notice. I went into the bed room and got my rifle and shot gun, and took them out and fired them off, so as to avoid danger, and when I got back I took out the clock from the bed room, and while on the porch heard the nicknacks, toys, etc, about fifty in number, swept from the mantle-piece to the floor, a number of which were broken.

No one was in the room at the time. When I was taking the nicknacks out, the light, which was on the dough-tray in the bedroom, was thrown off to the floor and put out. I took out the tray, and while gone the bench on which the tray was standing was turned upside down in its place.

While we were carrying the bureau and cupboard from the sitting-room to the yard, we heard a noise in the bed room; father went there, followed by mother and the boy, and father saw the quilt, which had been placed by me under a chest after they were discharged, moving away further under the chest. He saw them move eight or ten inches.

The shovel, which probably produced the noise, was moved a distance of three or four feet, and a crock which contained nails, was upset.

This was the last on Sunday night. About ten o'clock everything was again quiet, and continued so until Monday morning at eight o'clock.

[Concluded Next Week.]

—Read "JESUS OF NAZARETH."

The Rostrum.

PROGRESSION.

Lecture, Delivered By Mrs. J. Stillman Severance, at Rockford, Michigan, June 25th, 1871.

Long ages ago, our earth was a crude, unrefined mass of matter. No beautiful verdure covered its bosom, no animal life existed upon its surface, but the coarse, barren rocks were alone—everywhere.

By and by, the action inherent in matter, —constant motion among its particles—refined it to the extent that vegetation was produced, but so nearly allied to the earthy matter upon which it grew, as to be scarcely distinguishable therefrom. As this crude formation of vegetable life, by its action of growth and decay refined matter still farther, it fitted it to manifest itself in the formation of beautiful ferns, and various vegetative forms were produced,—each finer than the one preceding it, taking ages for matter to develop sufficiently to be capable of producing even the least perfected and simplest of animal life. But the law of progress was then, is now, and ever will be, action, action.

Little by little, step by step, up the ladder of progression Old Earth moved along. Poisonous vapors filled the air, poisonous weeds grew upon earth's surface, producing poisonous reptiles —all in harmony with each other—and each doing its work of refining the crude conditions of the planet, and each by its formation, growth, and death, giving birth to higher life and greater beauty, by constantly changing conditions and assuming new forms, as change is progression, until man is produced, which is the highest form of animal life capable of being grown upon this planet, embracing the elements of all below. He is truly said to be an epitome of the universe.

The first development of the genus homo, was not such as we behold to-day around us,—forms of symmetry and beauty, forms with faces lighted up with the clear brightness of cultivated spiritual natures; nor were they forms such as we have been taught to believe our first parents were, by the Eden story, but such as, could we see them to-day, would be transported through the world as an exhibition of the wonderful freaks of nature, or natural curiosities. They were crude, coarse, mammoth productions, corresponding in the human species, with the coarse flags and gigantic trees in the vegetable, and the huge leviathans and mastodons in the animal, creations. It is a law of nature, that coarse material is correspondingly slow in action.

The first forms of man being coarse in texture, were slow in process of change, hence did not become ripe for future life or higher forms of existence nearly as soon as now, and longevity was the general rule. Man's life was counted by centuries instead of years, as now.

The refinement of matter does not cease with the formation of man, even in his present high condition, but constantly every particle in the human being is in motion, and fine matter is formed, not visible to the coarse, material eye, which we call spirit matter. This is the next grade above the physical. Every portion developes a corresponding spirit matter, which at the separation of the spirit and body by death, is attracted together particle by particle, forming the spirit body, and the texture of the spirit bodies are as different as that of man in the form physical are different.

As action refines matter, it follows that the action of any organ or part, will eliminate more spirit matter from that organ or part than it will from an organ or part that is inactive; as for instance, a man works his front brain—his reasoning faculties—far more than any other portion of his brain or body, developing more spirit matter from those organs, so that when the spirit separates from the body, you will find the spirit body with a disproportionate development of frontal brain, while the least active portions of brain and body are very defective, making an inharmonious, unbalanced spirit. A man who lives on the animal plane, indulging only appetite and passion, with no aspiration above the sensuous gratifications, on entering spirit-life, will find himself with the base brain, little intellect or moral development, and has a very different formed head from that he possesses here, caused by the intense action at one point, developing spirit matter, while there was so little action at the other parts, that but little spirit matter was formed.

The same with the body. The spirit limbs and all its parts, are the outgrowth of the corresponding part in the physical, hence you see what change of form may be ours on entering spirit-life. A person with finely formed limbs here, by non use of them, may find himself almost a deformity there, hence the importance of the harmonious action of every organ and part of brain and body, in order to have a well-formed spirit.

These ideas may seem strange to some of you, but are they not reasonable? What better method have we of accounting for the birth of the spirit, except from the body. I have seen this process go on; have seen the spirit matter separate, particle by particle, from the body, standing as a vapor around the body, and then, by the law of attraction, every particle was attracted to particle, and formed the spirit body, and there it stood, a separate existence. The purity or impurity of the physical, also effects the spirit matter eliminated, so that with some very impure organizations, the spirit body is formed, and spirits are diseased when born; diseased hereditarily from the body that gave it birth, as a child is diseased from the condition of its mother, and must go through a process of purification there, analogous to disease here, which need never leave home, had the individual lived properly. You see the close connection, my friends, of the spirit and body, makes bodily health of the utmost importance, and physical and mental culture, a promoter of spiritualization and beauty in the blest hereafter.

Every grade of development of matter has an expression true to that degree of development. As matter becomes more developed and perfected, the form of expression is higher and more perfected, until voice is reached in the animal—the first, perhaps, a slight tone, but becomes better and higher.

The same species of birds sound the same notes, sing the same songs; the different members of the same species of animals, giving the same expressions, and varying in pitch, and, perhaps, volume, until we come to man. Here, we have in the earliest races, very imperfect language, little expression of countenance, because the earthy element in the ego predominated over the spiritual, but as the races became more advanced, more spiritualized, language became more perfect, emotion greater—and often more can be conveyed in a look, by one whose spirit controls the physical, than could be conveyed by words. But there is a deeper, fuller, sweeter language, where soul speaks to soul through the law of sympathy, and this is the most expressive language that can be used, and sound, would mar the harmony. Oh! the eloquence of silence, when soul communes with soul, with the dear invisibles who hover around us, invisible to gross mortal sight, but seen by the clear spiritual eyes of those who, although wearing the garb of mortality, may yet live more in the spiritual realms than earthly habitations.

Man having a religious nature as well as an intellectual and social, at all ages of his development, had religious ideas corresponding with his degree of unfoldment and his surroundings, and the growth of the human race may be likened to the growth of a child. The first instinct of childhood, is the idea of self-sustenance, peaceably, quietly, with no idea beyond, no robbery of its neighbor, or thought of accumulation for the future, and where this is obtained, satisfaction is the result. So with the early race,—simple, child-like, living upon the fruits of the earth, without utensil of husbandry, or implement of war, they lived—almost vegetated —simple-minded, harmless, ignorant.

The next organs developed in the child, are the selfish, acquisitive, destructive, faculties. The child observes something, it wants; tries to possess it, if it is withheld, will struggle to obtain it; becomes angry; screams, strikes, and will only be satisfied to obtain it, and then looks around for something more to acquire, and is devoid of aught but selfish feelings.

So with the early race in their development. The acquisitive, combative, and destructive faculties, are developed, and they make wars—often each other, pillage and plunder, and their Gods are Gods of war and peace, battle and conquest.

The child still grows, full of selfishness, passion, and its will power is developed. It is made to recognize the right of the parent to rule. Physical demonstration must teach it what obedience means, because it is incapable of perceiving anything higher. Parental authority, the rule of force, absolute control, enforced obedience, is necessary and right for the child, and it acts thus, and so, from the hope of reward and fear of punishment. It has not learned the laws of kindness yet, but is selfish, tyrannical, —will return blow for blow.

Thus it was at the time of the Mosaic dispensation. Selfishness, war, rapine, and murder, was the law of the land,—an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, blood for blood. At all periods of time, there is some one person, more advanced than the rest, more born in power, and at that time, Moses took the rule in his own hands, with the "Thus saith the Lord," for without thus appealing to their ignorance, he could not have controlled them, and he taught them that instead of many Gods, there was but one, and in him was embodied their highest ideas of perfection. They made a letter their own image, as every one who believed in a God, always embodied in him his highest ideas of goodness and power. Theirs was a God of war,—cruel, vindictive,—given to anger, unmerciful, unlovable in character,—selfish in caring for a special few, and hating the creation at large. Hence the terrible cutting rages, awful carnage, bestiality and crimes that were perpetrated by the direct command of their God,—who was only an incarnation of their own selfish natures,—by catalogue appalling to read, but shows us through what terrible conditions man has come through the ages to his present state.

As the child grows in years, his love of the beautiful, his reverence, his benevolence, is developed. He loves to listen to tales and parables, and by them, principles are illustrated, and adapted to his comprehension; and a teacher is necessary to feed his higher growth, and as every demand has a supply somewhere, a teacher is obtained. He is taught many beautiful lessons. He delights in kindly acts, has tender sympathies for the suffering, and will fight the one who causes it. He has all the lower faculties active, but these others awakened also, and expressing themselves. He goes to school, loves his teacher, and takes him for a model. He believes if he is good, and learns his lessons, he will have a prize when the term closes. His teacher tells him so, and he never questions his word; does not know why things are as he tells him, but enough that he says it, and when any question is raised on any subject, he closes with, "It is so, for the teacher says so."

As the races advanced, and the earth progressed, there came a demand for something higher and better than the Mosaic laws and rules, and to meet this demand, the spirit world set about them to bring a teacher before the people, that would teach a better doctrine, and from a humble maid, the Virgin Mary was prepared for the mission of maternity, having pure body and mind fitted for this great work, which was to usher in a new dispensation; and according to the laws of nature, from superior conditions a superior child was born—not perfect, nor devoid entirely of the failings of childhood. But the mother, being spiritually impressed, and filled with pure love, gave to her child a being of high order, and of a beautiful nature. With his sensitive, spiritual organization, it was no difficult matter for the higher intelligences to speak through him, and enunciate in parables and beautiful figures, sublime truths to the people. He taught doctrines opposed to the "Thus saith the Lord," and the old cry was heard,

"Ye have heard it said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth; but I say unto you, love your enemies, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you."

His life in the darkness of that age, was like a ray of light in a darkened room—brilliant, beautiful. He had the power of adapting his teachings to the child-condition of his hearers, but he was so far in advance of them, that few could appreciate him, and fewer still live up to the doctrines he taught, and he was maligned, scorned, shunned, and treated shamefully, accused of being a wine bibber, seducer, and finally, of making the Son of God, while humanly he told them he was the son of man,—worshipped him in sorrow at his loss. In the negative condition they were in mourning for his death; his spirit was able to manifest itself to them, and he met with them at various times and places, appearing to them and then vanishing out of sight, thus proving the spirit and immortality day by day; but I need not go on with this tale of glorious martyrdom, for you are all familiar with it, but skip over a space of years until the despised and crucified was adored as a God. The Catholic Church was inaugurated, claiming to be based upon his teachings, where he and his followers were worshipped, and the church had a creed—a measure that all must come within, and the right of private judgment was denied the common people, the priests being the ones capable of understanding and rightly interpreting the word of God.

They believed in salvation through the blood of Christ, and looked to be his followers, but they had not advanced far enough to appreciate the loving spirit and higher teachings of the Nazarene. But their creeds and measures could not stop the growth of now and then a soul who would see new light—would perceive a new truth—and put forth that thought, and through persecution and death, mark another mile-stone on the road of progress.

From Catholicism Protestantism was born,—a step in advance, to be sure. Protestantism maintains strongly the right to private judgment in matters of religious faith,—providing you think just as I do,—denies the power of the priest to forgive sins, and expects salvation through repentance and the merit of the blood of Christ.

In the Protestant church we have sects innumerable almost,—founded on some slight interpretation of light, some little growth beyond the previous measure, for, mind you, just so soon as any person perceives a truth in advance, if only a step, of the creed enunciated, he is scouted as a heretic and branded as mad, but by his persistent efforts and advocacy, by perhaps sealing it with his blood, one step is taken in the advancing position.

Each sect, believing they had all of truth, set stakes and said to the spirit of progress, "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther;" and after heart-rending persecution and torture, perhaps the rack and gibbet, in consequence of defending a certain newly-found truth, as soon as that was established and generally recognized, they treat in the same manner any person advocating ideas in advance of them. They would, amid trials and great suffering, flee their country, to escape tyrannical persecution for conscience's sake, and then established the same tyranny there over others differing from them. They would sing psalms to Christ, and live the law of Moses and Christ on the brain, but Moses in the heart.

It is soul-sickening to trace the progress of truth through the ages, and note the religious wars, bloodshed and carnage of the churches, fighting under the banner of Christ, who said: "Put up thy sword." "Love thine enemy." "If a man smite thee on the right cheek, turn to him the left also, etc." But in all these expressions of character, the condition of the people was manifested—their degree of growth exhibited; each acted true to their organization, and could not receive a truth beyond their comprehension; their selfish natures were still predominant, and their intellectual, hence they could only assimilate ideas corresponding to their own growth—must have some person, some book, as authority, and "thus saith the Lord" determined all questions.

As the child grows to manhood, his reasoning faculties are developed—the last of the faculties to reach its full growth and strength. He must then, when he is told a thing, know the reason for it—the why and wherefore; must have it proved by actual demonstration; can not take father, mother, or the teacher, as authority longer, on any subject, but must know himself—must have demonstrations that he can see, feel, hear, smell, or taste, as it is only through one of these senses that we can receive any positive knowledge, and from facts form theories and conclusions.

The same with mankind, as they advance from one step to another,—from one belief to another,—finally coming to the manhood of the race, the era where the demands of reason must be met—proved, and immortality must be established before the test of reason all the theories of the churches faded like mists before the morning sun.

They found in these sacred oracles the most contradictory statements, absurd conclusions, immoral teachings, and obscene language, ignorance and superstition made knowledge strangely commingled, but nowhere proof of immortality even, much less light on the conditions of the future state; found that from this same book—said to contain all mien ever need know—were taught different and contradictory doctrines of the duties of life, rules of moral ethics, etc; found that the salvation of the world was based upon the birth and death of Christ, who was said to have been conceived without a father, sent by the Lord of heaven and earth to be slain to appease his own wrath, and pacify him in his anger against the creatures of his own hand. These seemed to the reasoning mind like child stories—absurd notions—opposed to natural laws and scientific facts, and the enlightened world was fast running into materialism. The greatest minds of the world were, for lack of proof to the contrary, denying the facts of immortality, and adopting the belief that all there was of life was this brief existence on the earth, and that man, like the flower of the field, was cut down and returned to the elements that formed him. The intellect was untempered by the spiritual nature, and lacking intuitive feeling, was cold, calculating, devoid the religious element.

To meet this demand for proof came Spiritualism with its positive demonstrations. Those who had reached the manhood plain were ready to receive in its broadest philosophical sense, because it could be proved. Spirits came to us—could be seen, heard, and handled. They brought to us proof of immortal existence, and oh, the joy it brought to the weary, waiting heart! How the mother rejoiced to know that the dear jewel, the household treasure, that she had consigned to the dark, cold earth, but in hopeless despair, was not there in the clay tenement, but that her child had only laid off its earthly existence,—its outer garment, the shell, the chrysalis,—and was clothed in spirit form of beauty and grace, and was still hovering around, clasping her neck, caressing her, pressing the indescribable kiss upon lips and brow, and although, perhaps, unseen, yet seeing and felt, loving and beloved, watching over the dear mother, nestling beside her when at rest, in the still hours of the night, and waiting to enjoy her presence forever, when she shall have donned her better garments, and taken the little boat-ride across the bright river. What a reversal the mother's joy as she feels the patting of little hands upon her cheek and brow, hear the patter of little feet upon the floor, and perhaps listens to whispers of love from the dear ones not gone but changed.

Then the rejoicing of our spirit friends over the success of this not trans-Atlantic cable of their line from that land to this! They who had been watching with interest and anxiety every effort of humanity to creep, to stand alone and walk, and the suggested struggles and uncertain steps,—how they rejoiced that a few even could receive the proof of immortal existence; that they could reach the manhood of man, call of the future life, comfort the mourner, and inaugurate a new era in religious faith,—or rather substitute knowledge for faith,—that they could through their chosen mediums heal the sick by the laying on of hands, give sight to the blind, make the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak. But how was this new dispensation, this advance step received by the people generally? With the same spirit manifested all through the ages towards the new; the same spirit manifested toward Christ when he was upon earth, and the cry went up "Behold he hath a devil; he is insane; he talketh with familiar spirits; crucify him, crucify him!" The world had grown beyond the rack and similar tortures, but to the keener perceptions of the spiritually-minded there are equal methods of torture; the fiery tongue, the tossing of the head, the averted face, the turning aside, as though fearing contamination,—is there not torture in all this?

[illegible] the first to appreciate the [illegible] mediumistic [illegible], the first to follow his [illegible] the sign following them that [illegible] those that believe; for he said his followers should do all the things that he did, and even greater things. Where are the persons in the church that heal the sick by laying on of hands, open the eyes of the blind, make the lame to walk and the deaf to hear? Where are the believers? Verily, only among the Spiritualists; and were Christ to come upon earth at the present time, on the most unpopular centuries ago, he would be called a Spiritualist medium, crazy, fanatic, a free-lover, and every other opprobrious epithet the Christian church knows so well how to use, and the church doors would be shut against him; and if he spoke to the people, it would either be from the Spiritualistic rostrum, or beneath the free, blue canopy of heaven. But why is Spiritualism so obnoxious to the world,—to the churches? For just the same reason that every advanced belief or idea has always been—because it is beyond the growth or comprehension of the people who oppose it. It is not their fault, but misfortune. They judge from their own point of observation, and if not very elevated, the scope of their vision is not great. They are not to blame because they cannot receive a quart in a pint measure. The child must have garments adapted to its size; the garments of manhood illy fit the growth of childhood, but must be fitted larger and larger as the child grows in stature; while adult must not forget that there are others who must go through the same process of growth, and not condemn their clothing because he has outgrown it.

Different beliefs are the outgrowth of the different degrees of development of man, and belongs to him at that stage of growth; and persons who will now condemn others for their belief, however childish it may appear to them, any more than a baby for wearing the garb of infancy; only be sure and have a garment ready for him when he has outgrown the one he now wears. We can also promote his growth by healthy action, by presenting proper food, that his spirit can assimilate as soon as it is capable of doing.

But what better is the world for Spiritualism? What better, you may ask, for any truth,—for any great light that has ever burst upon it? What has it done?

It has saved the world from materialism; it has comforted the mourner; it has bridged the dark gulf between the seen and the next, and lighted the dark passage. It has taught the glorious doctrine of eternal progression, shown us the condition of those who have passed beyond the portal, and proved the doctrine that is destined to free from crime, to a great extent, the inhabitants of earth,—that there is no escape from the penalties of violated law, as in the physical or moral law, that Christ's or any other man's death cannot change the result of our actions, but for every transgression suffering follows, not as a punishment, but as the result of a natural cause, and through that suffering we learn lessons of wisdom and progression, and are taught a purer, higher life. It not only doctrine that throws all the responsibility upon the individual, better calculated to make man strive to learn his relations to his fellow man, and to the surrounding universe, than the doctrine of vicarious atonement—the belief that although we have spent a life of wickedness and shame, of debauchery and crime, that we can, by just a prayer of faith, be absolved from all consequences, and be in just as high and happy a condition as though we had lived a moral, upright life, and labored unceasingly for the welfare of our human brotherhood?

What has Spiritualism done? Ask the hearts of motherless children that have been made glad, and whose feet have been directed in wisdom's ways by the counsel of their spirit mother,—who have been staid from entering the path of shame, whose end is ruin, by the interposition of her loving presence, counsel. Ask the husband, when he lays in the grave the form of his loved wife, what he would take in exchange for the comfort of knowing she still lives and watches over him—that he can get from her counsel and direction in the uncertain path of life, and feel her interest in him is the same as before. Fathers have been reclaimed by their spirit children. Case after case might be related to show the blessings coming from the kindly interposition of our blessed spirit friends.

What done? The Spiritualist was the first society, first organization, that recognized woman's equality with man in its deliberations upon the rostrum, as first to call her to the responsibilities, and claimed the same compensation, for its speaker. The cause of woman's enfranchisement, which is a popular theme to-day, has only reached its present status through the untiring energy of the Spiritualists; and now as with temperance, anti-slavery, and kindred reforms that the churches opposed till they saw they were marching along and could not be stopped, then, to save themselves from being crushed beneath the wheels of the car of progress, they pushed aboard, with a "Hurrah! how we temperance men, or we anti-slavery men have triumphed!"

To-day some of the churches which are farseeing enough to know that woman's suffrage must come as a natural result of the era of progress in which we live, are trying to father the cause, and would ignore all Spiritualist efforts in that direction.

What has Spiritualism done? Look at the Progressive Lyceums scattered here and there over the land, our first institutions where the moral, intellectual, and physical natures are harmoniously developed, and the child's mind grows untrammeled by sectarian views, and unfettered by creeds and dogmas. If every Spiritualist parent's children could have the advantage of this school for growth and free investigation, how long, think you, would the orthodox church hold sway over the people? how long before the glorious light of the Harmonial Philosophy would dispel the dark clouds of old theology, and illume with its brighter beams the darkened minds of the people? Then let us appreciate and work for the Lyceum. Let us sustain, by every effort in our power, this school for our blessed little ones, and the rising generation will bless our memories for saving them from the blighting influences of orthodox teachings. They will look back to the pleasant hours spent in answering questions, reciting beautiful sayings, and singing sweet songs. Angels ever bless the Lyceum!

What done? It has advocated free speech and a free platform. Having no creed, code, or measure by which it can limit man's growth in any direction, we find great diversity of views and opinions. As no two persons look precisely alike, so no two have the same organization, if left unrammeled no two will think alike, and this diversity of opinion and freedom of expression stimulates thought, arouses intellect, and develops truth.

Our free platform is our glory, and I had the honor of attending the first convention where the problem of offering a free platform to the world,—where any person, if they will, can express their thought,—was tried, and it has proved a glorious success, and to-day it is our boast that we will hear patiently and respectfully the honest views of any man, be he Pagan, Catholic, Protestant, Mormon, or Infidel; and we even invite them to join with us in the solution of all great moral questions, and our march for greater light and more truth. No church can boast of this. They dare not thus open their doors to the free investigation of any question, and it would prove their overthrow, for in free combat the more advanced ideas always come out in the ascendancy, for the action of matter, be it mineral, vegetable, animal, or spiritual always refines, develops, and causes progress.

But the greatest of all. Spiritualism has taught us charity; that every soul sees true to its organization and condition, and hence deserves no condemnation. It teaches us when we see the poor outcast, that it is our sister or brother, especially claiming our sympathy because of their misfortunes. As a sick child will be more tenderly cared for by its parents, so the poor unfortunate needs sympathy, kindness, and the helping hand and loving heart. Heeding Christ's injunction, "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone," would keep us and all others from condemnation; for who of us are faultless,—who without sin? It teaches us to respect all churches, all institutions, as useful and right,—not for us, but for those who have not outgrown them,—and that it would not be wise were it possible, for us to overthrow them, but rather do the work of prophets of old, point to the people that they will cease to be of use to them. As the chicken cannot remain in the shell after incubation, neither can a person remain in the churches after he has outgrown them. Then, educate the people; teach them the highest truth; lay before their minds the most advanced doctrines, and the prophecy of the future, and above all the most exemplary, useful, and beautiful lives, and know that as soon as they are sufficiently grown they will receive these doctrines, and every mistake they make, every fault they commit, will serve as a monitor to teach them the better way, and through the suffering it will bring, will develop them to higher conditions.

Let us remember the watchword of progress is action—moral action, mental action, physical action, and, above all, harmonious action. What we most need is courage—true moral bravery that will stand for the right though the heavens fall, for I tell you, friends, that the hour is coming that will try men's souls.

The time is coming when the great contest between radicalism and conservatism, Spiritualism and Catholicism, will leave no neutrals any where. The conservative, unprogressed in the churches, will go with the Catholics; the liberal element will join with us, and then will come the final struggle between the powers of darkness and slavery, and woman will then come in with her saving power, and forever after hold her place in the government.

Then let us labor diligently to strengthen the forces of freedom, for many of us now living will have to take part in this great conflict.

Spiritualism has taught us the use of animal magnetism in healing the sick, and above us the laws of its operation; has explained the philosophy of many well-known facts, and enabled us to regulate, to some extent, and use for the benefit of mankind, this unseen power in nature, as well as electricity, and offered another element of science in the hygiene practitioner. It has explained to us the laws by which psychometrist can read the character and spiritual conditions of those with whom he comes in rapport; can open the sealed book of the past, and read the impressed events have made upon the individual; see their adaptation to surrounding forces and objects, and direct them in their efforts at self-culture and improvement. This power alone is destined to do more to elevate and improve the human family than all the preaching in the orthodox churches. It saves us from inharmonious unions, by teaching us the laws of adaptation, and in the present confused and inharmonious conditions in social life, every where, is the hope for the world. Its is knowledge of the greatest importance. It also enables us to find our proper sphere of labor, and protects us from imposition, fraud, and deception, by being able to know the character of those we come in contact with.

Letter from I. T. Maulsby.

* * * * If Mr. Babcock on the Brinkley College affair, will bear close scrutiny (as we hope it may,) we intend ordering quite a number of copies for gratuitous distribution amongst the benighted and unfortunate votaries of Orthodoxy in our own far off Western Territory. Ours is a most glorious philosophy, and the Journal is one of which we are proud. I take a number of papers, but when mail day comes, I look most anxiously for the Journal, and when my eye catches a glimpse of it, I can scarcely restrain myself from its perusal until I have read business letters. I always read it before any other newspaper,—thus you may understand by my appreciation of it, we have not much phenomenal Spiritualism here, yet many of the best minds, and persons of the first respectability (very many of them) accept our philosophy. Thank all the benign powers for the glorious truths of Spiritualism! Col. Reuben Riggs, Hon. S. W. Brown, Receiver of the U. S. Land Office here, myself and others, intend making up a sum of money and sending for a quantity of reading matter to distribute among the people. In this city G. T. McConnell, Esq., Clerk of the United States District Court, and his most excellent lady, are earnest Spiritualists (particularly Mrs. McConnell). Judge Lancaster, formerly member of Congress from this Territory, and at one time Judge of the District Court in one of the Western States accepts and rejoices in our Angelic Religion. He stands No. 1 at the bar here, and in the city of Portland, Oregon, Col. Riggs, one of our most esteemed and substantial citizens pecuniarly and otherwise, is an ardent Spiritualist. Hon. Samuel W. Brown, Receiver of the Land Office here, and one of our most estimable, amiable, and excellent citizens, as well as Mrs. Brown, his loved and loving wife, sympathize strongly with us. Mrs. Brown is one of the most Christian, motherly, and sisterly women I ever knew. May the good angels ever be with her. There are numerous good Spiritualists here, and in a short time we shall have a place of meeting at our command, and then we shall worship under our own vine and fig tree, having none to molest or make us afraid. I have stood here almost alone, but daylight is at length showing itself, the recruits are arriving, the ranks are filling up, and in a few years time we shall present an unbroken and formidable front. Of one thing I am certain, no church organization in this city or Portland presents in proportion to its numbers so much learning, wealth and intelligence as the Spiritualists do. God favor the right! Our Orthodox friends seriously err in this, that each rejects the good with the evil of the other. We should keep our prejudices in abeyance, accept the good and eschew the evil everywhere.

I. T. Maulsby.

Vancouver, W. T., July 13th, 1871.

Letter from Orson Gibbs.

Bro. Jones:—Inclosed you will find five dollars, to pay on my arrearages; it will not pay up, but please be patient with me, for I am poor, and I will send you the balance as soon as I can, for we are lost without the Journal. You will find fifty cents in this for a new subscriber.

Napoleon, Michigan, June 30, 1871.

All right my brother. We are quite well satisfied when our friends do the best they can, by paying a portion of what is justly due, and express an intention to pay the balance as soon as practicable. A part of a loaf is better than no bread.—[Ed. Journal.]

WITCHCRAFT IN MODERN EGYPT.

Communication from D. White, M.D.

BROTHER JONES: You will see by the inclosed slip from yesterday's Du Quoin Republican, that some of the inhabitants of Franklin County are but little, if any, in advance of their Asiatic ancestors eighteen hundred years ago. The same spirit that mobbed and murdered Jesus Christ, and other reformers, exists in that community at the present day, and I doubt not that if that good man should appear in their midst but that they would murder him as before, because the doctrine he preached is not in harmony with their low, ignorant, animal organizations. His was a mission of love, —theirs of vengeance. They claim the name, but deny the spirit of his teachings. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

While New York City has recently witnessed the same intolerant spirit in the Roman Catholic Heroclans; southern Illinois, the Egypt of America, is going through the same ordeal, led on and upheld by Protestants whose pious zeal is altogether ahead of their knowledge. The days of superstition and ignorance, that disgraced this country in the time of the Salem witchcraft, so called, are about to be introduced by these modern Egyptians, under the auspices of the professed followers of the "humble Nazarene."

While the orthodox churches are sending missionaries among the heathen in foreign lands, I hope and pray that the light of modern Spiritualism may be shed abroad among these native heathen, and obliterate the darkness that surrounds them.

Yours truly,
DANIEL WHITE, M.D.

Du Quoin, July 23d, 1871.

ARTICLE REFERRED TO.

Dr. Malloy, from Frankfort, reports great excitement in that county, about eight miles from that place. It seems that the cause was primarily the affliction of the Misses Williams. The belief has gained abroad, and is now general, that the girls' derangement was the evil result of their attendance at Spiritual sittings, and, this being the case, a desire to break up these sittings has been growing for some time. One night recently, a number of the inhabitants of that section congregated into a mob, and made descent upon a house at which one of the meetings was held. The meeting was broken up very summarily, without serious damage to any one. It seems that the mob were intent upon scouring one or two particular individuals, but in this they were to a large extent foiled. This act, of course, caused a very great deal of excitement, and steps were taken to arrest the raiding party. Some of them were caught, tried, and bound over to the court.

The Doctor states that although there has, as yet, been no serious injury done to any one, the prospects are that a disturbance will soon occur which will result somewhat differently. The friends of both sides are generally prepared for rough work, and a slight offense set on the part of either is all that is necessary to cause a collision. It is to be hoped that the law will be enforced, and all parties quieted before anything of this nature occurs. As is the case with nearly all mobs, there is no justification whatever for a crowd of men to break in upon and rudely disperse a peaceable assemblage of fellow men, and the participators in the act should, if found out, be dealt with harshly.

In regard to the Misses Williams, the Doctor states that they are now well. He says that the reason given by Mr. Williams for allowing his daughters to make such public exhibitions of their affliction was, that he was perfectly convinced that the girls were bewitched; and that he permitted their exposure simply to convince the people that such was the case, in order that the person who put the spell upon them might sooner be detected. He states also that Mr. Williams was supported in that belief by a very large number of people who witnessed the girl's actions.

REMARKS.—Poor old Williams is consistent with the religion taught him. His "large number of people" who back him in that belief, must be near the same kingdom—of ignorance. The mob in New York was composed of Christians—the Catholic branch; they would have none of the Orangeman's religion celebrated. The mob referred to in southern Illinois were Christians also; they would have no Spiritual manifestations—naught but Protestant Christianity would do for that pious community.

A PROPOSITION.

Letter from Fisher Doherty.

ED. JOURNAL.—Will you please give this an insertion in your widely circulated and valuable paper, and thereby serve the cause of truth.

Having been very much annoyed for some time, by artists in different parts of the country making imitations of spirit pictures and then offering to bet from one to five thousand dollars that they can detect the trick and explain how it is done, in order to forever settle this controversy, and to prove whether they mean what they say, I submit the following propositions to any and all photograph artists and men of science, and also to the Photograph Association of the United States:

I will deposit in the hands of a committee or back from one to five thousand dollars, for the benefit of the widows and orphans of our city, they putting up a like amount, and if they do not say trick or humbug, they will be entitled to the money, to be used for the above purpose by the committee chosen.

I will, in addition, deposit in the hands of the committee one hundred dollars, to pay the expense of any artist that they may select, to be paid if he is successful in detecting any trick.

The following rules shall govern the investigation:

The test shall be made at Nos. 94 and 96 East Washington street, Indianapolis, Ind.

The artist must be selected and endorsed as a competent man, and I will select an artist, not a Spiritualist, to follow the investigation, to see that no result is destroyed. Their duties shall furnish the plate, prepare the same, and do all the work. The spirit artist will do nothing connected with his hand upon the camera while the exposure of the plate is being made.

Time will be given to make a thorough examination of everything in the room, and all persons will be excluded except the artists and the mediums.

The test shall not consume over half a day.

Will the Photographic Journal, Scientific American, and the secular press in general, please copy.

The Most Interesting Relic and Curiosity in the Christian World ever Discovered.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED

BY

THE AMERICAN ENGRAVING CO.,

40 & 42 Main St.,

BRIDGEWATER, CONN.

Price, $2.50.

A finely-executed Engraving,

THE ONLY TRUE LIKENESS

OF

Our Savior.

TAKEN

From one cut in an Emerald by command of Tiberius Cæsar and which was given from the Treasury of Constantinople, by the Emperor of the Turks to Pope Innocent VIII for the Redemption of his Brother, then a Captive to the Christians.

The following Extract in proof of the Authenticity of the above Portrait, is translated from the Latin contemporary Historians of the period:

"News to the Senate of Rome concerning Jesus Christ, to the days of Tiberius Cæsar the Emperour, as the governours of sundry provinces under the Senate and people of Rome used to advertise the Senate of such news as chanced in diverse countries.

"Publius Lentulus, being at that time president in Judea, wrote an epistle to the senate and people of Rome, the words whereof were these:

"There appeared in these our days a man of great virtue, named Jesus Christ, who yet living amongst us, and of the Gentiles is accepted for a Prophet of truth, but his own disciples called him the Son of God. He raiseth the dead and cureth all manner of diseases. A man of stature somewhat tall and comely, with a very reverend countenance, such as the beholders may both love and fear; his hair of the colour of palmtree full ripe, and plain almost down to his ears; but from the ears downward somewhat curled, and more orient of colour, waving on his shoulders. In the midst of his head goeth a seam, or parting of his hair, after the manner of the Nazarites; his forehead very plain and smooth; his face without spot or wrinkle, beautified with a comely red; his nose and mouth so formed as nothing can be reprehended; his beard somewhat thick, agreeable in colour to the hair of his head, not of any great length, in the midst of an innocent and mature look; his eyes grey, clear, and quick. In reproving, he is terrible; in admonishing, courteous and fair spoken; pleasant in speech, mixed with gravity. It cannot be remembered that any have seen him laugh, but many have seen him weep. In person of body well shaped and straight; his hands and arms right and delectable to behold; in speaking, very temperate, modest, and wise. A man for singular beauty surpassing the children of men."

v10 n21 13t

New Books.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.

WITH

Criticisms on its Opposers,

AND A REVIEW OF HUMBUGS AND HUMBUGGERS, WITH PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXPERIMENTS IN THE SCIENCE—FULL DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT AS A REMEDY IN DISEASE—HOW TO AVOID ALL DANGER,

THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;

How to develop a good Clairvoyant

THE PHILOSOPHY OF

SEEING WITHOUT EYES.

THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND, BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.

BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D.,

LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.

Price $1.25. Postage 12 Cents. The Trade supplied.

Address S. S. Jones, Chicago, Ill.

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

By Hudson Tuttle.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. Price $2.00; Postage 24c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to new hopes and aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.

 Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE BIBLE IN THE BALANCE,

A Book for the Age and the Times,

and one that should be in the hands of every liberal man and woman in the land.

You want it for your own instruction, that you may be furnished with acknowledged authority to meet the arguments of the theologian, historian, chronologist and scientific man with his own weapons.

It discusses the matter of Bible canons, Versions translations and revisions with ability, citing none but authors in the highest repute, and those that are above criticism.

The book is printed in excellent style, 12 mo., on new type and fine paper, with beautiful illustrations of the mounds and mound-relics of the Mississippi Valley. It is substantially bound in cloth and contains three hundred and twenty pages.

The interest felt in the work is so great that orders were received for nearly the whole of the first edition before it was published, one party alone having received orders for over three hundred copies.

Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address: RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE 187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

v9 n26 tf.

THE

Science of Evil;

OR

FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.

BY JOEL MOODY.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the PROBLEM, and unveils the MYSTERY of Evil, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be THE LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo., of 342 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 20 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

MEDIUM'S DIRECTORY.

[PUBLISHED EVERY OTHER WEEK.]

The Religio-Philosophical Journal desiring an especial friend for all true mediums, will hereafter publish a complete Directory, giving the place of all professional mediums so far as advised upon the subject. This will afford better facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time that we may keep their place of residence correctly registered.

☞ It is lamentable to fact that some mediums so far forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not unfrequently even of those who are in their secrets. The names of such persons will be dropped from this Medium's List as soon as we have evidence sufficient of their indulging in such malpractices.

It should be borne in mind that mediums visiting medium cities for the purpose of speaking—as to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control the medium visited; he or she that uses medium gifts as a field to cultivate personal ambition, and build up to themselves a home and profit, is unworthy.

CHICAGO.

Bangs children, 227 S. Morgan St. ‡
Mrs. Alice Brown, 108 W. Washington St.
Dr. W. Cleveland 511 Wabash Avenue.
Mrs. L. Chandler, 179 W. Lake St.*
Mrs S. E Coles, rear of 521 State st. on Victoria Ave. ‡
Mrs. De Wolf, 165 West Madison St. ‡
Dr. S. Dwyer, 455 west Madison st. Chicago.
Dr. L. P. Griggs, 249 W Madison street, cor. Peoria.*
Mrs. Hopkins, Parlors 24 and 26 Hooper Block ‡
Mrs. M. Jenks, 176 W. Van Buren street.*
Mrs. J. T. Lewis and wife, 79 Lake ave.*
Dr. J. V. Mansfield, Parlors 24 and 26 Hooper Block ‡
Mrs. C. Moody, 106 12th street. * ‡
Mrs. Phebe Orvis Norwood, 63 No. Halsted st. * ‡
Mrs. A. C. Somers, 1145 Wabash Avenue.* ‡
Madame Stiles, 501 S. Clark St. ‡
Mrs. st. Suttle, 141 n. Union st *
Dr. Sutphen, 71 Third Ave.*
Dr. M. L. Sherman and Wife, 306 South Clark St.*†
Dr Sam ue Unde hill, 189 S. Clark street.*
Mrs. S. T. Viner, 652 Indiana Ave.*
Dr. J. Wilbur, 260 W. Randolph st *
A. D. Willis, bet. Clark & Dearborn st. ‡
Mrs. M. J. Works, Room 23 Larned Block, Chicago.

BOSTON.

Dr. H. B. Storer,*†
Mrs. Julia M. Friend, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. S. J. Stickney, 332 Tremont St.
Dr. Main, 226 Harrison Ave.*
Mrs. A. C. Putnam, 304 Washington St.
Freeman Hatch, 8 Beaver Place.
Mrs. L. W. Leach, 97 Salisbury St. †
Mrs. Mendenhall, 39 Hudson St.
W. H. Munker, 170 W. Dedham st. ‡
Mrs. A. S. Eldridge, 1 Oak st ‡
Mrs. M. M. Harry, 139 W. Concord St ‡
Samuel Grover, 25 Dix Place.
Mrs. F. O. Dexter, 321 Tremont St. ‡
S. C. Hewitt, 36 Hanson street, Boston, Mass.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mrs. Sarah A. Anthony, S. W. cor. 7th & Catharine st. ‡
Miss E. M. Balmer, 1213 S. 10th st. ‡
Mrs A. Reynolds Stankle, 1429 No. 5th st. ‡
Peter Behel, 229 No. 12th st. *
H. F. Baker, 518 So. 10th st. ‡
Mrs Sarah M. Huckwalter, 1027 Mt. Vernon st. *
David S. Cadwallader, 1005 Race st. * ‡
Miss Emma Clerk, 328 Race st. ‡
Mrs. E. Fay, 1106 Buttonwood st. ‡
Mrs. Glanding, 1713 Warnock st. ‡
Miss Lizzie N. Goodell, 1516 Chestnut st. ‡
Mrs. Annie Goosefoot, 411 Enterprise st. ‡
Mrs. Gleisinger, 1230 Catharine st. ‡
De Witt Clinton Hough 518 Race st. ‡
Edward Keene, Marlboro' below Girard. ‡
Mrs. Mary Lamb, rear of 1317 No. Front st. ‡
Mrs. Lawrence, 1328 So. 6th st. *
Mrs. Mills, 717 Arch st.
Mrs. L. V. Man, 249 No. 13th st. ‡
Mrs. Marks McLaughlin, 1009 Federal st. ‡
Mrs. E McNeil, 1018 Richmond st. ‡
Miss Mitchell, 254 Spruce st. ‡
Mrs. C. A. Marshall, Rooms above 11th. ‡
Mrs. Mock, 512 No. 10th st. ‡
Mrs. Jennie Martin, 1315 No. 16th st. ‡
Mrs. Murr, 1532 Cherry st. ‡
Miss Anna Murr, 1532 Cherry st ‡
Mrs. Mary Millard, S. W. cor 7th & Catharine st. ‡
Mrs Mary Parker, 1450 No. 11th st. *
Jacob L. Paxson, 1027 Mt. Vernon st. *
Mrs. Powell, 427 Spruce st. ‡
Samuel Patel, Hanover below Girard st. ‡
J. Jefferson Reilly, 919 Cross st. ‡
S. P. Richards, 633 No. 13th st. ‡
Mrs Kezie R. Robinson, 2123 Brandywine st. ‡
Prof. J. B. Rogers, 234 so. 7th st. ‡
Mrs. H. Stoddard, 518 Race st. ‡
Isaac Taylor, 105 Laurel st. * ‡
Mrs. Taylor, 105 Laurel st.
Mrs. Xavier, 1220 Fulton st. *

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Danforth, 84 Lexington Ave.†
Miss Blanch Foley, 634 Third Ave.
Mrs. H. Seymour, 140 Bleeker St.
Mrs. W. C. Bowland, 518 Race st. ‡
J. William Van Namee, 420 Fourth Ave.*†‡

AURORA, ILL.

Mrs. A. C. Smith, Aurora, Ill. ‡
Mrs. A. Swift, Aurora, Ill. * ‡

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Mrs. Helen Stover.
Mrs. M. E. Gotchell, 413 N. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lewis, Bloomington, Ill.‡

BYRONIC CITY, N. J.

Mrs. E. Wallis.

GREEN GARDEN ILL

Mrs. Calkins.*‡

GENESEE, WIS.

Mrs. E. W. Bloom. *‡
Mrs. F. A. Logan.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

A. W. Severance and Mrs. J. H. n. severance. M. D. 407 Milwaukee street Milwaukee Wis.*‡
W. W. Herring, 131 Spring street Milwaukee, Wis. *
Mrs. Carrie J. Wright, 440 East Water st. ‡

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, Box 1231, Rockford, Ill. *
Mrs. M. J. Olson S. Rockford, Ill. ‡

RICHMOND IND,

Francis S. Haswell; 26 N. Marion street.
Dr. Samuel Maxwell. 73 s. 6th street.

Health by Good Living.

BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,

Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."

This book is to show how high health can be maintained and common diseases cured by "good living," which means eating with a relish the best food, prepared in the best manner.

The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game, fruits, and the grains which make bread.

The best cookery preserves the natural tastes and juices.

As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get this great blessing without money and without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down town:" What shall a man do? What shall fat men eat? How to get fat: Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Spring diseases: Children's eating: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' eating: Cold feet and headache: Biliousness: A lazy liver: Mischievous toxics: The out-door air: Why are we dyspeptic? Discomfort after eating: Odic stew: Certain cure of neuralgia: Nervous debility: Air and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

It tells

How to cure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure biliousness: How to cure nervousness: How to cure exhaustion: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean, How to get good sleep: How to maintain high health, How to avoid disease: And all these without medicine: without money: without home influences partly.

It tells about

Luncheons and how to take them: Late dinners and how to take them: How drunkards are made at eating-houses: How girls are spoiled at boarding-schools: How health is lost: How health is found: How nerves are strengthened: How love of dress is mastified: How young men are talked about: How bad matches are made: How good wives are made at home: How home influences purify.

Price $1.50 Postage 16 cents For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

DR. E. P. MILLER'S WORKS.

The Cause of Exhausted Vitality, or Abuses of the Sexual Function. Cloth $1,00, Postage, 12cts.

Every Young Man and every Young Woman, every Married Man and every Married Woman, Should read it.

A vast amount of suffering, as well as physical, mental and moral ruin would be prevented, if all were acquainted with the facts contained in this work and followed its excellent advice.

Vital Force, How wasted and How Preserved. Cloth $1,00, Postage 12cts; Paper Cover, 50cts, Postage, 4cts.

Mrs. Francis Dana Gage says; "I earnestly wish that it could be read by every mother in the country."

It is an invaluable work and should have a place in every family library.

How to Bathe, a Family Guide for the Use of Water in Preserving Health and Treating Disease.

Paper Cover. Price 40cts. Postage, 4cts

Important Truths, By Mrs. E. P. Miller, M. D.

Price, 20cts, Postage, 2cts.

This little work is written in a style adapted to children's Minds, and no parent need fear to place it in their children's [illegible] as an opening to conversation and advice on points upon which their future health, happiness, and even life, largely depend.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

THE CAREER

OF THE

CHRIST-IDEA IN HISTORY.

A COMPANION VOLUME TO

"THE CAREER OF THE GOD-IDEA."

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

CONTENTS.

I Introductory; II Career of the Christ-Idea in Hindostan and among other Races; III Prevalence of the Advent of Jesus; IV Conception and Genealogy; V Birth of Jesus; VI John the Baptist—his relation to Jesus; VII The sermon on the Mount; VIII Miracles; IX sending forth the Apostles; X The fatal journey; X Burial and Resurrection; XII The Descent into Hell XIII The Gospels; XIV Resume of the Life and Character of Jesus; XV Causes of the Extension of Christianity; XVI The ultimate of the Christ-Idea.

Price $1.25. Postage 16 cents.

The demand for these new works of Hudson Tuttle both in this country and Europe, is unprecedented.

For sale at the Religio-Philosophical Journal Office.

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF

Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the venerable soil of India, wastrammeled and stifled by the altar that substituted for intellectual life a semi-brute existence of dreaming impotence.....

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost west has, in unfading testimony of our origin, bequeathed us the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.....

To religious despotism, imposing, speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....

.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I yet shrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

 PRICE $2.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

A REVELATION!!!

of the

EXTRAORDINARY VISITATION

of

DEPARTED SPIRITS!

Of Distinguished Men and Women of all Nations, as Manifested through the

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. S. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
J. R. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1—4 mo.

☞Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Order, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN cents, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names ENTERED on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the ensuing year, with or without further reminder from this office

1. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

2. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Upon the margin of each paper, or upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 16th, 1870, it will be marked, "Smith J.—16 Dec.—0." The 0 means 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 16th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—16 Dec.—9, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞In forwarding money to this office for the JOURNAL, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, AUGUST 12, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER LI.

CAN GOD POSSESS AN ATTRIBUTE COMMON TO HUMANITY, IN AN INFINITE DEGREE?

The avenues we have traveled during the discussion of this subject, have been numerous, still there remains many points to critically and carefully examine. To-day it is no less true than a thousand years ago, the people are not willing to relinquish their pet theories, or eradicate from their minds ideas that have been transmitted to them by their ancestors. The child of to-day has deep and vivid impressions made upon his plastic mind through the instrumentality of a mother, or some kind, sincere, ardent friend, and it is difficult in the future to eradicate the false or pernicious ones that may have been made upon it. It is often said that that or this idea is too iconoclastic or radical in its nature, which may mean, perhaps, that somebody's pet theory is going to be overthrown thereby. The various Christian churches have presented to the world their codes of doctrine through the instrumentality of the Bible,—on that they have planted their standard of belief, founded churches, established missions and reformatory schools, and now have in active and efficient labor, 61,000 ministers of the gospel. The liberalists discard nearly all the cardinal points of the Christian religion. The various churches, however, sincere and ardent in their belief, still cling to the traditional statements as recorded in the Bible; yet they are willing to give the declarations it makes a very liberal interpretation, and now the account of the Creation is regarded as a myth; Adam and Eve as the characters in a romance; that has no foundation in fact; the tree with its forbidden fruit to dazzle the eyes of God's children, no sensible person, to-day, entertains the idea that it ever had an existence. All these are readily discarded by those who look calmly and rationally at the statements made in the Bible, and then compare them with the revelations of science or the dictates of common sense. All have vanished! passed away, and the sensible, reflecting mind, or careful observer, regards them as myths.

The world is making rapid strides, when it is liberal enough to admit there is no personal devil. A century ago, it would have been terribly shocked, a sensation would have been created, and persecutions at once commenced against him who would have been bold enough to declare that no personal devil with a cloven foot, horns, and a caudal appendage, commonly designated a tail, existed. Had we been publishing the JOURNAL then, advocating liberal sentiments and advanced ideas, and taking the position that no personal devil existed, what a storm of hisses would have been raised! and how much indignation manifested, and we presume there would have been many that would have immediately discontinued taking this paper. "A devil—why, no devil!—that is contrary to all preconceived notions—such ideas are horrible, and well calculated to injure the morals of the people." On all sides we would have been denounced.

This devil is an orthodox institution. It has had an existence for a long period of time in the church, and to-day, it exists there, possessing vitality enough to cause all the evil there is. Not only is the devil an orthodox institution, [illegible], and a caudal appendage, [illegible] also a mechanism of the [illegible] liberalists of the land reject [illegible] of them cling with remarka[illegible] e latter. They have injected a being whom they have been taught to fear, and admire and love his opposite—God. All our ideas of the Creation, the devil, and God, originated from the churches. The account of the Creation has been improved by geology so it bears no more comparison to the original narrative as given through the instrumentality of that indefatigable lawgiver, Moses, than an ox team does to a train of cars! The Devil has been critically examined by common sense, thoroughly tried in the crucible of reason, and is now regarded as a myth. No improvement has been attempted on him. Why did not the liberalists improve his nature, and make a devil out of him that would be well received by humanity, instead of banishing the poor fellow forever? But there was an account of Creation! Creation was a fixed fact, but the account has been wonderfully improved, and many dates changed. There was an account, also, of the creation of the devil, but his creation was not a fixed fact, hence no one could improve upon it. But here was God; not like the earth or the devil, he steps in and is put down in the list as the Creator. But the account of him as given in Genesis, has been radically improved, and his personality has been banished by many, and in place thereof, the attributes of humanity have been enlarged to an infinite degree, and a God made therefrom! This improvement has been of slow growth. First recognized as a person, possessing omnipotence and omniscience, and talking with humanity, he gradually faded away into a principle, pervading the whole universe, and animating all things in existence. This, indeed, was a rapid stride. Although improved, modified, changed in nature and character, he still is the same mysterious personage, whom humanity desire to worship. Standing now alone in the universe, monarch of all he surveys, with no Satan to constantly embarrass him, we wonder if he do n't feel quite differently from what he did when he placed the happy pair in the Garden of Eden, where wooing birds, murmuring springs, sweet scented flowers, and balmy breezes, were theirs to enjoy! Well, the account of Creation improved, the devil banished, and now God presents no such appearance as he did when perambulating the Garden of Eden! Why, many churches for years have worshiped a Personal God! If no such exists, are they not idolaters? Please tell us, will you, if the Chinaman bowing down to his Josh is not an idolater? You would regard him as such. If we should worship the Egyptian Sphinx, the Golden Calf, Josh, or some carved image, you would regard us as a heathen in the strictest sense of the term. With our eyes closed, our attitude presenting a venerable appearance, and our voice sounding as sanctimonious as when a Catholic priest pardons the sins of the erring, we would be regarded as a heathen when prostrated before an image, engaged in religious devotion! Yes, a heathen! What are those who to-day are worshiping a Personal God? Are they any the less heathens, idolaters, and unchristian in every sense of the word? The only difference between them and the Chinaman, one presents his God in tangible shape, while with the other, it is only a picture of the imagination. Is it safe, then, to worship any God? Why not worship? Why not bow down in humble adoration, and pray? Oh, prayer, the outgushing of the soul; the aspiration of the mind going out in silvery streams of love toward what the mind knoweth not, you serve a specific purpose! There is solemnity in prayer. Under its influence, the whole nature at times alters. The countenance changes, and becomes grandly illuminated, the eyes burn with a lustre that seems to have been kindled by charity and love, and the voice goes forth in tremulous emotion!

We never deride prayer. To some souls it is a necessity. Whether bowing to a carved image, the orthodox God, Father God, or Mother Nature, or to any of the various gods that have been created in the imaginations of men, the effects are the same,—the appearance of those engaged in such devotional exercises are precisely alike. But are not all idolaters? You say, "I worship the Divine Architect of this earth, hence I am no idolater." But we declare that spirits—personal beings—are the builders, and our theory has been beautifully endorsed by Mrs. Emma Hardinge in an address lately delivered in England, which is as follows:

"If I have been permitted, then, this night to open up before you but a few pages of this glorious gospel, let me close with a narration of a very brief picture that was presented to me, to show you and me why it only comes to us to-day. It was given to me some years ago, to remark why so much of penury, sorrow, poverty, hunger and want crowded upon the unfortunate inhabitants of the cities,—why such distress and sorrow was theirs, when the islands and continents in the far-off realms even of this earth, full of beauty, full of food, had room for all, harvest grounds for all, wealth for all? I murmured because the providence of the All-Father had not better, as I deemed it, disposed of his treasures, and given the very more of wealth, and room, and food, and land to all his starving creatures. And then it was given me to behold the curtains of four centuries rolled back, and perceive the vast continent of the New World, then unknown. I beheld the glorious forests, the primeval woods laden with fruit, and well stored with food for man, beast, and bird; I beheld the gigantic rivers, a thousand miles long, teeming with the grand fisheries, the magnificent hunting-grounds untrodden by the foot of man, the beautiful bowers, the blossoms, the gorgeous sky above, the silent stars, the only watchers of the vast continent, and none to possess it but the wild beast of the forest or the wilder savage of the woods. And again I murmured, and again I compared the wealth and luxuriance of this wonderful New World with the suffering of the overcrowded cities of the Old, and yet another picture was open before me. I beheld the interior of this New World—the spiritual world which permeated it; and there I saw how busy were spiritual beings toiling to cultivate this land, how carefully they guarded and tended and disposed of the forms of nature to irrigate the ground. They were the ministers—the unseen, viewless, but constant ministers—who administered the machinery of creation, and were the engineers that were working the grand car of progress. They had been ministering to this fashion century after century—thousands of years before people's lives had stirred, and cultured, and planted that land." In an address delivered in this city she said: 'Worlds shall bow to the nod of man."

Will you now worship the Creator of this earth because you are not wise enough to comprehend its origin? Will you worship the [illegible] of spirits which she, with us, declares administers the machinery of creation, so far as this earth is concerned? If you do, are you not an idolater in the same sense that the Chinaman is? But you may say, "I do not endorse the theory of the spirit that has such complete and masterly control of the organism of Mr. Francis, nor those that sustain him through the mediumship of Emma Hardinge. I have a theory of my own, do my own thinking, pray when I desire, and worship in a manner that suits my own mind." Glad you do! If you traverse the various avenues of the earth, penetrate it from center to circumference, and then travel among the spheres, you will when you reach the seventh, find those who can control the movements of this earth with the same ease that a child can a top. We have heretofore fully elaborated on this point, and our readers perfectly understand our position.

A spirit says to us, "I will pray to my guardian angels, to my spirit friends, to those whose loving kindness is always extended over me,—but never to that which only exists in the imagination, and of which I have not a particle of knowledge."

The Banner of Light contains the following characteristic and sensible prayer:

"Most holy angels! O ye great, and good, and beautiful souls, who have made earth the heaven it is fast becoming, hear our prayers. Unable to comprehend an Infinite Mind, we offer our supplications to you. Great souls that have blessed the world, condescend to bless us. Martyrs, heroes, patriots—ye who have inspired in all times the hearts of men, give us your sympathy, your love, your wisdom in this hour. Mighty ones of years gone by—Pythagoras, Zoroaster, Confucius, Buddha—all ye who have gone before us, understanding the experiences of the life in which we live, and the richer, riper wisdom of the life beyond, be unto us the angels of the Father whom we cannot comprehend, and bestow upon us your inspiration. From the deep ocean of your spiritual life, let flow upon us the waters of a celestial baptism. Reach down from the heaven above us the white hand of angel inspiration, and guide us through the scenes of earth-life to a haven of restful labor evermore. Come to us, Socrates, Plato, Jesus, Mahomet, Ann Lee, Washington, Channing, Elizabeth Browning, Theodore Parker,—all who have lived, all who have suffered, all who have inherited angelic life and passed into the inner court of the temple of the Infinite. Come to us, and bring to-day the holy shew-bread of the sanctuary, and break it upon the curb-stone to feed the multitude of the present age. Hear us as we ask for strength and wisdom, and give, in answer to our practical prayer for help, that assistance which you well know is our necessity. Amen."

In the formation of a God, then, we must so crystalize him that he is an object suitable to worship, and when engaged in prayer a representation or image thereof must exist within the mind. What is the difference whether the image is within the mind or has assumed tangible shape and is present before you? Really, seeing but little, if any, difference between the worship of the Hindoo or Chinaman and the Christian, we propose to leave that part of the subject and branch off in another direction.

In the formation of a God, as we have said before, human attributes must be used, the only thing required being to extend them to an infinite degree, and the job is complete, and you can kneel down and successfully worship! But what of such a God? The world to-day recognizes such a being, worships him, pays him constant homage, and has erected thousands of churches dedicated to his praise. But, as we have said before, if you assign him one quality common to humanity, you must all. There is no half-way ground in this grand crystalizing process you have so boldly inaugurated. Be true to yourself, to common sense and sound reason, and when in a period of your investigation, you see fit to apply one attribute to God that is common to humanity, you must all; or will you, like the confectioner who takes just such colors as suit him to adorn his candy, select from the human family just such traits of character as suit you in making a being to worship?

Wherein are the attributes of man like God? Only in those that are termed good. You enlarge your own good traits of character, and make a God therefrom—an Infinite Being! Would it not be just as reasonable for me to enlarge the evil propensities of mankind, and make a God therefrom. You say that God is infinitely merciful, good, kind, generous, omnipotent; and if so, his omnipotence, so far as his tender attributes are concerned, can only work in that direction. But we see more evil than good on the face of the earth. No one is without sin. All live in glass houses. Take the preponderance, and you can draw this conclusion therefrom: God is infinitely revengeful, is evil in nature, unkind and ungenerous to all his children. Why do we come to this conclusion? We judge from humanity. The acts of life show it. The lies that you have told, slanders that you have uttered, deceit that you have practiced, and meanness that you have been guilty of, plainly establish the fact if you attribute your existence to him. He who declares that God is infinitely merciful, can not sustain his position any easier than he who declares that he is infinitely bad.

To define God by applying human attributes to him, is to make no God at all. They say he is unchangeable. Not a man in all Christendom possesses that quality. That would destroy God's omnipotence at once; you limit him—his power. No being can possess all power, and still be compelled to remain unchangeable. If unchangeable his power is limited. The two definitions contradict each other. There is a man before us. We will declare that he possesses all power, and is unchangeable. Do not these two terms contradict each other? How could he possess all power, and still not have enough strength to move? pray tell me.

One says God is good; another says he is bad. One says he is merciful; another says he is revengeful. One says he is true; another says he is a liar. One judges of him from a benevolent standpoint; one from the other. The army from which the latter judges is the largest, and is it not entitled to equal credit? In making a [illegible] are constantly [illegible] humanity.

Cabinet Seance.

Mrs. Maud Lord held a cabinet seance at Mrs. A. H. Robinson's, 148 Fourth Avenue, on Wednesday evening, August 2nd, which was attended by many of the best citizens of Chicago. A committee of skeptics securely tied Mrs. Lord, with her hands so fastened behind her that she could not move them from their confined position. No sooner was the door of the cabinet closed, than hands were thrust out through an opening in the door of the cabinet, which opening was screened by a black curtain, to exclude the light from the inside of the cabinet, it being light in the double parlors occupied by the audience.

Hands of various sizes were thrust out of the aforesaid opening, and faces of spirits of different ages and sizes, were shown as visible as if yet in mortal form; one face with closely shaven beard excepting a moustache, others with full beard, others of youthful appearance, others of females—one venerable spirit, with long gray beard, strongly resembling that of a certain member of congress, whose beard, not long since, was the subject of criticism by General Ben. Butler. We trust, however, that none of our readers will imagine that it was the spirit of General John F. Farnsworth, the gray-bearded M. C. referred to. He would not be there if he were in spirit-life—not he—besides, he is in the flesh, and not likely to be very spiritual for some time. We only say that the venerable spirit's beard was very like the General's.

The very instant that these faces and hands were thus shown, the door of the cabinet would be thrown open, when the medium would be found tied exactly as the committee of skeptics left her. Musical instruments were played, bells rung, and many things done common to this class of seances.

The seance continued about two hours, to the delight of believers in spirit communion, and to the astonishment of skeptics, who without a dissenting voice, conceded that the medium was honest, and that the manifestations were genuine, and free from all suspicions of fraud and collusion.

The Spiritual Analyist and Andrew Jackson Davis.

The last number of the Analyst comes to hand laden with criticisms from the pen of E. S. Wheeler, on the writings of the Poughkeepsie Seer.

That's right; cut right and left, Brother Wheeler; let the world know that you live! But what a pity it is that you have not been the author of as many grand productions as Brother Davis; then some critic could get a hit at you. But as long as you will persist in a masterly inactivity, so far as any literary production is concerned, you are safe—perfectly so. Write a book, Brother Wheeler, and give some critical pen a chance to stab you. Several, no doubt, are waiting for the opportunity.

We wonder what Brother Davis thinks of these troublesome critics—Wheeler, Toohey, Powell, and others. We wonder if he ever says "Shoo fly," or does his knows itch when he reads their fulminations as if an Illinois ox-fly was around.

We have always admired Brother Davis, and have sometimes somewhat envied him in his happiness, but since the critics have been buzzing around his ear like a June bug around a potato vine, we feel that he is pestered enough.

Brother Davis, we leave you with the calm satisfaction that you still live, and that our shelves are adorned with all your publications; and if you should ever wish to brush off your critics, as a milkmaid would a troublesome fly, the columns of the JOURNAL are open to you; but if you persist in letting them bite you, they will, like a Chicago Muzquito, become more bold and more troublesome, and in order to appear learned many will criticise you.

We hope the Analyst will be able to withstand the shock of this criticism. Its predecessor was killed thereby, and its editor badly injured, and was compelled to go to Europe to recuperate. Some kinds of criticism are poisonous, and nothing but a bath in the Thames, or the genial air of Italy can thoroughly eradicate it from the system.

Testimonial to Bell A. Chamberlain.

The Spiritualists of Des Moines, Iowa, held a picnic on the 26th ult., adjacent to the city, which was well attended, and passed very pleasantly, young and old enjoying themselves in swinging, games of croquet, and listening to a brief address from Mrs. Bell A. Chamberlain. At the close of the meeting the following expression was unanimously adopted as their estimate of Mrs. Chamberlain's labor whilst amongst us:

Resolved, That the lectures delivered by Mrs. Chamberlain in our hall, during the past four weeks have met and now meet our warmest approval, both as to matter and manner, and as a lecturer we cheerfully commend her as an able exponent of our philosophy, and a lady worthy the confidence of those among whom she may be called to labor. Not the least attractive phase of her efforts is her success in clairvoyantly, describing the spirit friends of persons in the audience. That our regrets at parting with her are modified by the assurance that she is in the hands of those guardian spirits who have been her guides in the past, and who are pledged to be her "rod and her staff" in the future—to their care we entrust her, regretfully reciprocating herkind farewell.

Resolved, That this our expression be published in the daily Register, RELIGIO PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, and Banner of Light.

E. M. DAVIS, President.

July 26th, 1871.

THOSE WHO WISH to have this paper discontinued when the time is up to which it is paid for, should notify us of that wish two weeks before such time expires, as it takes that time to get it out of the mailing machine. When an order is given by those in arrears, [illegible] made to square up in full,

Albert F. Crowell

Is the son of our late esteemed friend and brother, Charles H. Crowell, deceased, formerly a member of the firm of William White & Co., of the Banner of Light, and nephew of Mrs. Conant, so widely known among Spiritualists.

Albert is now sixteen years of age,—a bright, intelligent young man, of fair education, and a very good penman.

He writes and desires a situation with some good man that has a good business, who will give him a situation that will qualify him to become a useful business man.

Albert reminds us of a conversation he had with us in the presence of his now deceased father, some four years since, of his then childish desire to go West with us, etc.

The appeal is so frank, and so forcibly reminds us of that father's friendship, that we feel impelled to request such men as we have before referred to, with whom he may be useful, and who in turn will be kind and fatherly to him, to write in regard to giving the orphaned son of Bro. Crowell a situation. He desires to make himself useful at such business as requires talent and activity.

We have no doubt but what hundreds of our readers are in want of the services of such a young man—of Albert especially, under the circumstances.

Address Albert F. Crowell, care Banner of Light, 158 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Widow's and Orphan's Fund.

Mrs. Stone, a widow lady, donates fifty cents to aid in sending this paper to poor widows and orphans. Thanks! the "widow's mite" goes forth in such cases to comfort and bless, and like "bread cast upon the waters will return after many days." Blessed are they who feed famishing souls!

Dr. Perkins, of Kansas City, sends twenty-five cents to aid in the free circulation of the JOURNAL.

W. F. RHOADS, of Mount Pleasant, Mo., donates one dollar to the Widow's and Orphan's Fund, to aid in circulating this paper free to that worthy class. He will receive the blessings of their guardian angels, as well as the thanks of those who read the JOURNAL at the expense of that fund.

Letter from W. W. Hathaway.

BROTHER JONES:—I did not fully realize how much I prized the JOURNAL until I missed it yesterday,—Sunday. It did not come last week. Possibly my orthodox friends at the post office did not get through with it. Please send a number in its place, and oblige.

Respectfully yours,
W. W. HATHAWAY.

Davenport, Iowa, Aug. 1, 1871.

REMARKS.—Your loss, Brother, will be their gain—so you see there is good in all things. The thief gained Paradise because, forsooth, he was a thief, and as such, was crucified along with Christ. The thief although very pious, may be saved from the ignorance he has inherited from pious parents, through his theft in stealing and reading the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. "Great is the mystery of godliness" It is with pleasure we send extra numbers in all such cases.—[ED. JOURNAL.

Spirit Likenesses.

The ambrotype likeness referred to below, is a very distinct likeness. We know Bro. Doherty, and rejoice that he and his partner are having good success.

BROTHER JONES:—I herewith send you a recognized spirit picture, which was obtained this day by Messrs. Doherty & Powell, of this city. I forward this result, with the understanding that it shall be returned to the above-named artists.

I would also state that I also went through the dark room with Mr. Doherty, and saw the picture developed.

Feeling an interest in the success of these gentlemen, I would be glad if you would give them the praise they so richly deserve, through the columns of your excellent JOURNAL.

Yours truly,
B. MELVILLE BONHAM.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 25, 1871.

A Card.

Joseph Baker presents his thanks to A. Green, Rock street, Lowell, Mass., not only for his kind note, but also for his generous bequest of two dollars in money, to aid me in my suffering condition, which came duly to hand by mail.

Banner of Light please copy.

Janesville, Wis., July 23d.

We hope other generous souls will be disposed to aid Brother Baker in the hour of his great suffering.—ED. JOURNAL.

Missing Numbers.

Any one failing to get their paper on time, should write us within ten days for them, or we may not be able to supply them.

LITERARY.

The Federal Government; Its Officers and their Duties. By Ransom H. Gillett. Walworth, Alsworth & Co., 51, 53, and 55 John street, N. Y., and 111 State street, Chicago, Publishers.

The author, an ex-member of Congress, recently Register and Solicitor of the United States Treasury Department, Solicitor for the United States in the Court of Claims, has, from a long and intimate connection with the affairs of the general government, become perfectly familiar with all the details of the working of the gove[illegible] a knowledge only to be gained [illegible] varying application under very [illegible] and multiplied duties, [illegible] the rising generation to understand our government, what officers are [illegible] practical operation and their [illegible] written a work which, though not competent to give minute information to office holders, will be highly useful to all, and should be in the library of every American citizen, and frequently referred to.

☞We are in want of dues for the JOURNAL. When it is not convenient to pay all, let us have a part, as an earnest of a good will. Wake up! we are in earnest.

READ the advertisement of that most wonderful work, JESUS OF NAZARETH.

Personal and Local.

—Dr. Kayner, the justly celebrated clairvoyant physician and surgeon of St. Charles, Ill., can for the present be consulted as follows, after the first Monday in each month: Julien House, Belvidere, the 1st and 3d Tuesdays and Wednesdays; Waverly House, Elgin, the Thursday following; Fitch House, Aurora, the 2nd and 4th Tuesdays and Wednesdays; Revere House, Batavia, the Thursday following—commencing at Belvidere, August 8th and 9th, and at Aurora, August 15th and 16th, the remainder of each week at his residence in St. Charles.

—The Shaker, a monthly journal, fifty cents per annum. G. A. Lomas, Shakers, Albany Co. New York. In our previous issue we had the state wrong—New Jersey.

—D. W. Hull speaks at Literville, Crawford Co., Penn., August 4—13; at Edmiston, N. Y., August 20; at West Winfield, N. Y., August 27. Would be glad to make engagements in New York for September 3 and 10. Address as above, or at Hobart, Ind.

—Dr. C. C. Brackett commences his labors in the field of reform about the first of August.

—Our thanks are especially due to Mr. F. W. Calkins, of Peotone, Ill., for sending us several new subscribers. Those who even send us one, secure not only our thanks therefor, but do a service to the angel world.

—Isaac Paden commends in very high terms, Dr. Paul Castor, of Ottumwa, Iowa, as a healing medium. During the first ten days of June, he operated upon 275 patients, receiving therefor $700.

—Brother O. J. White writes that P. R. Lawrence has been lecturing at Jefferson, Iowa. He treated the sick there with great success.

—Mr. Neal Godman, of Hillsboro, N. H., is a physical medium just brought forth to the public. His manifestations are in part of the Read character, which they equal in every respect. He uses no cabinet, but is securely bound, handcuffed, etc. His coat has been taken off while he has had hold of it trying to keep it on. A finger-ring is put in a chair near by, and a handkerchief on a table. The handkerchief is drawn through the ring, twisted and tied up in knots to the ends, and thrown ten feet across the room. He is tied up with a rope. The rope is taken off, made into a ball, and thrown at some one's feet.

—Mrs. A. P. Brown, of St. Johnsbury Centre, Vt., will speak in Lawrence, Mass., August 20 and 27; in Stoneham, Mass., September 3, 10, 17, and 24. Would like to make engagements for October.

—Levi Dinkelspiel, the young and eloquent advocate of our cause, can be addressed at Decatur, box 299.

—A. E. Carpenter is lecturing in Maine. He spoke in Portland Sunday, July 15.

—Miss Lottie Fowler is still at the Mansion House, Baltimore.

—The Rev. A. Kidder, of Eau Claire, has been sued for slander by L. D. Buell, a school-teacher. Damages are laid at $5,000.

—Brother Lorin Miller, of Crawfordsville, Indiana, would like to have some good test medium visit that town.

—Try it: Fasten a nail or key to a string and suspend it to your thumb and finger, and the nail will oscillate like a pendulum. Let some one place his open hand under the nail, and it will change to a circular motion. Then let a third person place his hand upon your shoulder, and the nail becomes in a moment stationary.

—The New York Times, in a leading article discussing an assumption of some of the Roman Catholic priesthood, remarks: "When a church denies that government belongs to the people, and claims it for itself, the people can only reply by refusing to trust the government to the members of the church."

—Thanks to those who have forwarded us papers containing items and particulars.

—Brother Albert Bovee writes that Mrs. F. A. Logan has been lecturing with marked success at Ragio, Wis. Her address for the present is Geneseo, Wis.

—Dr. J. K. Bailey spoke at Farmington, Michigan, July 30.

—Lana Moore writes that a Spiritual lecturer would do well to visit Dakota Territory.

—Prof. Wm. Denton writes: "The JOURNAL comes to me regularly, freighted with good things, for which I return you many thanks."

—A brother, writing from Joliet, Ill., speaks in high terms of Dr. Benjamin Davis as a healer. He has cured many chronic diseases that have baffled the skill of the old school physicians. He cured one man who had been confined to his bed for 24 years.

—Emma Hardinge sailed from Liverpool on the 10th in the steamer Liberia, for the United States.

—Eli F. Brown's address is now Richmond, Ind.

—Brother J. O. Barrett, who is laboring efficiently for Spiritualism in the West, gave us a call last week. He is doing a good work. We were also favored with a visit from D. W. Hull, whose knowledge of the Bible and the ways of orthodoxy makes him feared by all Christian ministers.

—Dr. J. M. Farland, of Clinton, Ill., is represented as a most excellent medium and healer, by J. R. McIrwin.

—Mrs. Malissa Bartin, of Linden, Montgomery Co., Ind., is represented as a good medium by Brother Wm. G. Thomas, of Crawfordsville, Ind. She gives tests and sees and describes spirits. He speaks flatteringly of the good works of Mr. Doherty.

—Solomon W. Jewett, the healer, and John Murray Spear, the psychometrist, are located at San Jose, California. They propose to come East the 1st of October.

—The Spiritual and Liberal friends along the Eastern border counties of Kansas, will do well to correspond with Dr. E. B. Wheelock, now located at Pleasanton, Linn County, Kansas, provided they should desire lectures or medical advice. His wife is one of the best medical clairvoyants now in the field. His lectures are considered bold, fearless logical and interesting. He has been many years in the field.

—Will skeptics and scientific men carefully read the proposition of Editor Doherty.

—M. D. Bradway, of Maquoketa, Ill., writes as follows: "Brother Wilson's address is Maquoketa, Iowa; about five miles northwest of Maquoketa is only our post office address."

—Dr. E. D. Goodwin, of St. Louis, Mo. has opened a healing institute in that city, where he proposes to treat all classes of disease. He is a progressive man, an ardent Spiritualist, and we hope he will meet with success.

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 614 Race street, Philadelphia.

"In My Father's House are Many Mansions."

This impressive declaration embraces some of the most profound philosophical truths in regard to life. Another declaration of the same gentle and loving preacher is, "Ye are the temples of the living God." Our Heavenly Father's house is not merely in the after-life, but everywhere, and in all conditions in which His children are to be found, whether it is in the highest heaven or the lowest sphere, or in any of the multifarious conditions between these, including all the varied states of earth-life, and of the spheres. These mansions are the immediate surroundings of each individual spirit, the atmosphere around these, made up of the emanations naturally outflowing from the spirit, and mingling with the conditions around it, and by the combinations outflowing from the elements within man. Each human being, whether a spirit or mortal, is called for all are spirits, carries with them wherever they go, this mansion, this surrounding.

Mankind are learning to comprehend something of these external spheres or mansions of individuals, and many of persons perceive these even before they do the material form. It is a very common experience of humanity to feel the presence of an individual just as they are approaching, and the coming individual, as well as coming events, cast their shadows before them, and we are learning this much better. Not that the fact exists any more to-day than it did in past times, but the power to perceive it increases as human nature becomes unfolded.

We have said these mansions are in part the result of emanations from the spirit, modified by the voluntary actions. That which flows out spontaneously is rather a negative character, but we are using our wills, we are acting continually, and the result of all these actions is written out plainly upon the walls of our mansions. We sometimes see in the cells of prisons those which are very repulsive and unpleasant, others which we are compelled to admire, as they are not only neat and clean, but often beautifully adorned, considering the materials to the inmate has to work with. We may illustrate this idea further. Being clairvoyantly intromitted into the presence of one of the old philosophers, we saw, first, his beautiful form, tall and erect, with a rosy tint upon the cheeks, and his flowing mildly and beautifully from his eyes, with long white locks flowing gracefully, and giving beauty to a form at once dignified and attractive by its proportions and its movements. As we looked with admiration for a few moments upon this pleasant vision, our attention was drawn to his surroundings. A radiant halo was around not only his head, but the whole body, and in this beautiful fleecy and golden mist were myriads of panoramic pictures, passing one after another like dissolving views. This grand old philosopher had become familiar with the forms of Nature and her wonderful operations in our own and other globes where he had visited. First in the panorama, we saw the primitive condition of our Mother Earth, as a rolling ball of fire mist. Having realized this fact by observations in other worlds, of a more recent date, the idea became fixed in his mind and was reflected as what we could see it.

Another picture presented to us its appearance when its surface had cooled somewhat, and the primal force that expressed itself in motion had also given out the modifications of heat and light. A bleak and barren view was this he had gathered however, in the same manner as the former and reflected to us.

Another picture on the same scroll, gave us a view of the beginning of life. The earth was covered with its wild and weird forests, in which huge animals roamed.

So we gazed upon the wonderful changes of the past. Earth's pictures were painted in glorious panoramic life upon the walls of the mansion of this noble old philosopher. Every thought was daguerreotyped there; every truth that he had gleaned in the great harvest field of earth was written out there in indelible characters on the walls of that magnificent mansion. What a school was this! Such schools are all around us to-day, even in this life, if we could only gain admission to them, and all that is needed is that we shall rise to the same plane on which these blessed ones dwell.

We felt that these pictures were his by a divine right, and if we would have such upon the walls of our mansion, we too, must dig them out of the earth, or draw them down from their position, and by earnest and faithful efforts make them our own.

On the earth and in the eternal world God builds for himself houses, and these are types of the mansions which he is building in the interior. They may be graceful and attractive, or otherwise; they may be plain and rude, or they may be ornamented with magnificent pictures and works of art, but they are always emblems of the mansions referred to by Christ. And so, to, while in the earthly form, we are building mansions invisible to the external eye, but yet perceptible to the spiritually unfolded vision of humanity. Our thoughts and actions are all hung upon the walls of our mansions, be they dark and sinister, or pure and beautiful, or, as is too often the case, careless and indifferent. We have only to make them, or express them in our actions, and a power over which we have no control will hang them there, and they will be carried by us whithersoever we may go. If they have marks of character which are better moments we do not desire to retain there, we must work and suffer long and painful experiences before we can take them down and substitute in the place of the dark and unlovely ones those which are beautiful and grand.

To-day, then, we are at work on these mansions in the Father's house, and if we are placing unlovely pictures on the walls; if like writing upon the walls of our palaces is, "Thou hast been weighed in the balance and found wanting," now is the time for us to erase it and substitute in its place more beautiful pictures.

If we have wronged a brother or sister, let us seek to give them restitution, and to do justice to them. Let us go out into the fields of Nature, of science and art and philosophy, and gather up the facts there that will be of use to us, and bring them in to adorn our mansions. Every new truth thus garnered, every loving act, every kindly thought brings a picture with which to beautify our mansions.

How many there are who are not satisfied with the mansions they are building; who know they are not what they should be; and yet, through carelessness and indifference they are losing the opportunities which are ever around them, by which they may change the conditions and appearance of their mansions.

How important it is that mankind should realize these facts! That they should be wise, and know that each day is adding something to their mansions, either valuable or otherwise, and that there will never be a time in this life or in all the coming future when they can so easily and so effectively begin the necessary change in their mansions, so that they may indeed become beautiful as a garden filled with all that is lovely and desirable, rich in all that embodies truly beauty, and adorn all that is strong in those endearing and eternal virtues which shall shine brighter and brighter unto the perfect day.

Would you have such a mansion? Only desire it properly, and the angels will ever be near you, leading you along so that you may accomplish all that is for you. We say lead you—that is all they can do. You must do the work, or it will not be yours. But if you do it earnestly and faithfully, the light of your souls will shine out through the beautiful walls of the glorious mansion which you have in the built, and it will be as a lamp to the feet and a light to the path of your fellow men in their journey through life. We shall no longer need to ask, "who shall roll us away the stone from the mouth of the sepulchre" in which we have been entombed; but entering at once upon the labor, angel hands shall ever be ready to aid us in uncovering all that has been buried, and removing all that is unprofitable, and bringing out treasures of truth and soul by that which will only make us truly happy by bringing blessings to ourselves and to humanity, but to the angel world and to God, who is over all, in all and through all, blessed forever.

The lives of mankind on earth present something of the character of the mansions they are building for the soul. The houses they construct for themselves, and all the surroundings that they bring around them, speak of the character of the interior. As mankind are very much disposed to imitate each other in the constructing and arraying their outer dwellings, so in the soul they are seeking to bring forth and arrange mansions that shall correspond with each other, and thus make them more attractive and profitable.

The order and cleanliness with which these outer dwellings are kept gives an index of the interior. We know that many are compelled to struggle with unfavorable circumstances, and find themselves quite unable to have such houses and surroundings in the outward as their aspirations and desires would prompt them to have in the interior. They are likewise struggling against obstacles which seem insurmountable, but which are not, for there is nothing that the soul can not overcome, if there be a real desire. All the beautiful ideals that rise up before it will be realized at some time in the future, when it shall have grown strong enough to build its mansion as it desires, and gather for itself those beautiful surroundings which are adapted to its highest wants.

The lesson of the hour to all God's children is, delay not till to-morrow, but look at your mansion and see what is its condition, and having learned this, fearlessly to enter earnestly and faithfully upon the work of improving it just as fast and as far as you may have the capacity to do this.

The line of progress is first to know and then to do, and with every unfolding stage of knowledge to continue to do through all eternity. Let us, then, lose no time in vain regrets for the past or fears for the future, but entering at once upon the work, with fearful to enter earnestly and faithfully upon the development of our own mansions, and our reward shall be sure, not only now, but henceforth and forevermore.

The American Association.

From present indications, there will be a large gathering at Troy in September. The friends of the Association in various parts of the country are appointing delegates, and under the present arrangement all societies may be represented:

We have been frequently asked what the Association will do. Heretofore it has had much more to fear from its pretended friends than those who honestly doubted its utility. We believe in organization, and feel that when the honest Spiritualists meet each other face to face in these conventions and in our state societies, good always results. If political schemers and tricksters seek such opportunities to advance their own selfish aims, no good can result from such meetings. The subject of education, and especially the interests of the children's Progressive Lyceum, will be among the prominent subjects for consideration at Troy.

We trust our friends in different sections will make the best arrangements with the railroad companies for a reduction in the fare for the delegates, and where this can be obtained, send word to the papers.

A Communication Given Through the "Ray Squaw."

Witnessing the beautiful ceremony of strewing the resting places where the mortal remains of our fallen comrades repose, with sweet spring flowers, and as the solemn, dirge like music floats out upon the air from trumpet and drum, I am led to think how emblematic of life is this ceremony. A few flowers, a light tread, a solemn dirge of sorrow and then, quiet, rest and peace.

Oh, my sister, whenever you gaze upon this beautiful and impressive ceremony, think of the great lesson it teaches. Those soldiers fell fighting the great battle of right against injustice and a dangerous foe that was threatening to destroy our fair republic. So do you soldiers in the great battle of life fall day by day fighting the fearful battle of knowledge against ignorance, bigotry and superstition, and as they fall, angel hands take them lovingly up to their beautiful homes, there to strew their weary spirits with flowers of immortal freshness and beauty. So, my sister, garner up these beautiful ceremonies in your thoughts, and go cheerfully forth from one grave of sorrow to another, and endeavor to raise the hopeless slumberer to a hope in the blissful knowledge that there are flowers for all of God's children, the lame, the halt, and the spiritually blind, and almost lost in helpless ignorance.

Spiritual Camp Meeting.

Our friends in Baltimore, Wilmington and this city, and other places, have been awakened by the prospect of having a few days' camp meeting at Havre de Grace on Mason and Dixon's Line, commencing on the 23rd of August. Extensive preparations have been made and we doubt not a large number of persons will be gathered to this "feast of the tabernacles." A number of prominent speakers are expected.

—Among the marvels of the age is the fact that the ticking of the clock at Cambridge, Mass., can be heard at San Francisco. This result is produced by connecting the pendulum in some manner to the telegraph wire, which conveys the sound.

—Peace is a principle engendered in the human soul, that will grow if it be permitted, but it is our duty not only to do this, but to foster and culture it, especially in the young.

—How sweet with the breath of kindness and love may we make not only our own lives, but those of our friends.

—Two Irishmen were very much annoyed by mosquitoes, and a friend suggested that they had better not take a light up stairs with them. Soon after going up, they saw the lightning bugs coming. Says one, "Pat, it's no use. They are coming and bringing their lanterns with 'em."

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

Eighth National Convention.

The American Association of Spiritualists.—The Eighth National Convention will meet at Troy, New York, on Tuesday, the 19th of September, at 10 o'clock in the morning, and continue a session three days.

Each active State or Territorial organization of Spiritualists, within the limits of the United States of America, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members of such organization, and of each working local society, and each Progressive Lyceum within the boundaries of such State or Territory, provided that only one general organization shall be entitled to representation from any State or Territory. Each Province of the American Continent shall be entitled to one delegate for each working association within its limits, and the District of Columbia shall be entitled to two delegates.

Each active local Society, and each Progressive Lyceum of any State, Territory, or Province which has no General Association, shall be entitled to one delegate for each fractional fifty members.

These Associations are respectfully invited to appoint delegates to attend this meeting and participate in the proceedings.

HANNAH F. M. BROWN (Cleveland, O.).
HENRY T. CHILD, M. D. (614 Race St. Phil.), Sec.

New York State Spiritualist Association.

The Fourth Annual Convention of the New York Spiritualist Association will be held at Starr or Central Hall, Lockport, N. Y., on Saturday, Sept. 2d, at 2 o'clock P. M., for the election of officers for the ensuing year, and such business as may properly come before the Convention.

Mediums' and Speakers' Convention.

A Quarterly Convention of Mediums, Speakers and others, will be held at Starr or Central Hall, Le Roy, N. Y., on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 2d and 3d, commencing at 10 o'clock each day.

The New York State Spiritualist Association holds its annual session on Saturday at 2 P. M., in connection with this convention.

Let there be a general attendance from all parts of Western New York. The halls are commodious, the facilities for arriving by railway ample, and the rich experiences of past conventions furnish sufficient guarantee for the success of the present. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

Committee { J. W. FRAVEN, GEO. W. TAYLOR, A. T. TILDEN.

Ohio State Association of Spiritualists.

This Association will hold its Fifth Annual Convention, on the first Saturday and Sunday of September next, in Roberts Hall, Milan, Ohio, commencing at 11 o'clock, A. M. Each local society, and children's progressive lyceum is entitled to four delegates and two additional for each fifty members or fraction over the first fifty.

Important business will come before the convention, and every society and lyceum in the State is earnestly requested to send a full delegation.

The well-known and tried hospitality of the Milan Society is extended to all delegates, who will be provided with homes as far as possible. Eminent speakers are expected, who will be duly announced, and a cordial invitation is extended to all speakers and mediums, to all Spiritualists and liberalists to meet and renew their strength at this annual reunion.

Milan is situated three miles from Norwalk, on the Lake Shore R. R., and all trains are met by the Milan backs.

HUDSON TUTTLE, President.
GEO. W. WILSON, Rec. Secretary.
EMMA TUTTLE, Cor. Secretary.

Pennsylvania State Society of Spiritualists.

The Fifth Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania State Society of Spiritualists will be held at Washington Hall, S. W. corner of Eighth and Spring Garden Sts., in the city of Philadelphia, on Wednesday, the 16th of August, at 3 and 8 P. M.
CLEMENTINA G. JOHN, President.
HENRY T. CHILD, M. D., Secretary.

Grand Union Picnic at Galesburg.

All true Spiritualists, all Christian people, and all friends of truth and humanity everywhere, are cordially invited to a Grand Union Picnic, to be held at Spring Lake Grove, in Galesburg, Ill., Thursday, Aug. 31st, 1871. Good speakers will be present. All will be free to participate in the exercises—bring their own refreshments. Those attending from a distance will be "refreshed" from some brother's basket in the Grove. Pleasant grounds and boat-riding will add to the pleasures of the occasion.

The C. B. & Q. R. R. has generously offered to return free on all its lines all those paying full fare in going. If the weather proves unfavorable, the splendid Concordia Hall in the city can be had.

Let there be a glorious meeting that shall tend to open up a wider field of thought, of sympathy and action that shall bless mankind—akin to that introduced by the Pilgrim Fathers.

Committee { A. H. HAMMOND, Galesburg. C. L. ROBERTS, Yates City. CHAS. LAND, Oneida.

Two Days Meeting at Winnebago.

There will be a two days meeting at Winnebago Co., Ill., commencing Saturday morning, Aug. 5th, at 10 o'clock, and continuing until Sunday night. Spiritualists of surrounding counties, remember. Let all come and have a feast of good things. Levi Dinkelspiel (a converted Israelite), Dr. Underhill, Dr. E. C. Dunn, and perhaps others, will be present.

Obituary.

Passed to the higher life from Danielsville, Mo., on the 26th day of June, 1871, Laurie, only daughter of George and Nancy J. Bates, aged one year, two months and thirteen days.

Too pure for earth-land.
She hastened to the spirit band;
The parents know full well
That their babe near them does dwell.
It is through spirit communion
They are conversed of a reunion.
Her time on earth soon was spent,
And to the angel hosts she went.

DAN. T. EDWARDS

Passed to the higher life, from the residence of a son, in the city of Marshall, Mich., Sunday morning, July 23d, 1871, Mrs. Hannah Waterouse, the loving mother of Dr. Henry T. Waterouse, of Athens, Mich.

This noble woman had attained the ripe age of seventy-five years. Long a true Spiritualist, she was a devoted wife, mother, sister, friend, and her declining years were full of that wit, cheerfulness, love, charity, and true philanthropy in her generous nature. The funeral services took place on the 24th inst., in accordance with her oft expressed wish, under Spiritualistic auspices, at her son's residence in Marshall, at which she undersigned officiated.

J. K. BAILEY.

Banner of Light please copy.

Born into the higher life, from Ribe, N. Y., on the 27th inst., our highly respected, but deeply afflicted, brother, John A. Sleeper, aged 66 years. For about two years that most fatal and painful disease, cancer, had been gnawing upon his system, rendering his body an unfit temple for his unfolding spirit longer to dwell in. He calmly beheld the approach of the King of Terrors, but thanks to our beautiful spiritual gospel, it had no terrors for him. Having deliberately made all arrangements for his new birth, he gladly welcomed the propitious hour which relieved him from his physical sufferings.

By his request the funeral services were conducted by the writer, at his late pleasant rural home, in the presence of a large circle of relatives and friends.

J. W. SEAVER.

Died, July 20th, 1871, at West Chester, Ind., M. Brown, aged seven years, nine months, and three days. His death was caused by inhaling a piece of timothy-head into the lung, which was tested by post mortem examination.

A. S. BROWN.

MATRIMONIAL.

A GENTLEMAN 30 YEARS OLD—A SPIRITUALIST, of good habits and fair education, medium stature, light complexion, blue eyes and brown hair, desires to correspond with ladies for the purpose of a better acquaintance, and marriage. To one who feel favorably impressed by this notice, and wish to correspond, may rest assured that their letters will be received in confidence and treated with honor. Address GEORGE HARDCASTLE, Quincy, Ill. v10 n31 4t

ECLECTIC MEDICAL COLLEGE.—LECTURES COMMENCE Oct. 2d, 1871. Fees for the course, $30; to others or express. Send for announcement. JOS. SIZER, M.D., DEAN, 614 Pine street, Philadelphia, Penn. v10 n31 4t

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS.

Madison Doherty, having severed his connection with A. D. Wilde, at Chicago, has opened a Gallery, at Indianapolis, Indiana, where he will do her spirit pictures.

Parties at a distance wishing these pictures can get the same result as if present, by inclosing a lock of hair, a picture, and the fee of three dollars, and post office stamp, stating the day and hour they wish a trial. Money refunded if no result is obtained.

DOHERTY & FURSELL, Photographers,
Nos. 96 & 98 East Washington street,
Indianapolis, Indiana.
v10 n31 3m

MEDIUMS.

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,
ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex, occupation, temperament, (if not known, send photograph). Address P. O. Box 80, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL. v10 n8 tf

MRS. C. H. LELAND,
Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, two dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for mediumistic development, one dollar. Address, Taunton, Mass. v10 n10 tf

MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD,
Healing Medium,
Has been before the public as a successful Healer the past fifteen years. We rely entirely on the controlling influences. We diagnose and give prescriptions by letter. Distance no objection. Will visit in person a reasonable distance those that desire, and can afford the expense. Deliberation and advice in a variety of ways. Emblems we give gratuitously to all our patients, when presented by our guides. Our forme system has been to come en rapport with the applicant by the hand-writing or lock of hair; but to save time, and the unpleasant sensation of taking on the symptoms of the disease, we require the applicant to give age and sex, with one or two leading symptoms of the disease, written by the patient, if able to write—if not, send lock of hair. As the giving of tests is not the object which we seek, but to restore the patient to health by Nature's own hand, in the shortest time possible, we do not deem it necessary here to lumber up an advertisement with what we have done or what we can do, but prefer to be known by our fruits.

Terms, for diagnosis and prescription, $3; Diagnosis without prescription, $1; all subsequent prescriptions, $1 each. All letters should be accompanied with the fee, and addressed to MRS. LODEMA ATWOOD, Box 45, Lake Mills, Jefferson Co., Wis. v10 n1 tf.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.
BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS
WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM,
Can diagnose disease by Stamps, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.
Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.
Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $3.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00. al v10 tf.

MRS. A. M. ROBINSON,
Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium
148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.
MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.
Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate, and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed.
In [illegible] takes cognizance of.
On [illegible] is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time entering any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.
Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. She thereby with which she spiritually controling her accomplish the same, is done as well who the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.
Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $1.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $3; Answering Business Letters, $2. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

CLAIRVOYANCE.
Dr. F. T. Johnson examines diseases by receiving lock of hair, name, and age, stating sex.—one dollar accompanying the order. He also prepares a sure antidote for OPIUM AND MORPHINE EATERS; three months will cure the most inveterate case. Charges, six dollars per month. He also prepares a Cure for Catarrh—50 cents per bottle. Will be sent by express. Address him Ypsilanti, Mich. v10 n17 tf

DR. SAMUEL MAXWELL,
MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN.
TREATS the sick by [illegible] and the use of appropriate [illegible]
10 v31 f

James Brooks,
The Great Developing Medium, will send printed instructions, which never fail to develop in full those who have any mediumistic powers. Send for them at once. Ten per spiritual gifts. Inclose one dollar.
Address 826 S. Clark st., Chicago.
v30 n18 tf

A. B. Severance,
The Well-Known [illegible]
Will [illegible]

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

ROMAN CATHOLICS.

Father Hecker—Spiritualism—Riots—etc.

BY MRS. M. J. WILCOXSON.

Where is Father Hecker? We wish to hear from him. We have not forgotten how "diabolical" he attempted to make Spiritualism last winter in his Chicago speech—or rather, we might say, in that same speech which has become stereotyped by public delivery for the last few years, with only occasional modifications to suit the place. We wish Father Hecker to answer a few straightforward, plain questions. Is the recent New York riot to be taken by us as a sample of what Catholicism results in? If you say, "No," then will you please tell us what is the especial cause thereof? Again, why is it that these Irish Catholics, who have been owned body and soul by the Romish Church for long generations, are among the most turbulent and lawless people of Christendom, as well as the most vindictive and blood-thirsty in their treatment of their own kin, who happen to honestly differ with them? When you tell us that "Republicanism is a failure"—and Spiritualism "diabolical and devilish," unless tempered and restrained by the Roman Catholic Church—for of course you own no other Church—we wish to know how much of the "failure" Spiritualism as you plead for, in view of the results of Catholicism in these riots, could ever commend itself to any sane mind? Granted, it makes little difference whether a man is sane or insane, when he is forbidden the exercise of his reason—and thus it is, we cannot possibly see how people can be held responsible for any degree of lawlessness they may indulge in, when educated after the pattern of the Catholic creed. It is all very easy for Bishop McCloskey, Father Hecker, and a hundred others, to declare they did not sanction the riot, that on the contrary they deplored and condemned it. O, yes, when it came to "bloody murder," and a whole city, aye, a whole nation became roused to their senses, enough were still left to it a government of its own, and plenty of bullets and patriotism, what could the priests all do, but denounce it? But, does not all the world know—the educated world at least—that every subject of the Catholic Church has this same spirit of murder instilled into his very life from the moment the Church gets possession of him? Is he not taught to fear, obey, hate, and curse every "heretic" as too damnable for the Church or its members to fellowship with? Look at the long string of curses uttered by the the "Infallible" upon the head of Victor Immanuel! Look at the horrid execrations and anathemas, which are kept bottled up in this Holy Catholic Church ready to pour out on the head of any important dissenter! It may be easy for the priests to prate now of loyalty and innocence, but when we hear these poor, deluded slaves of Catholicism consigned to the criminal list, as the only sinners and offenders against the law, we cannot but feel that the inciting cause lies back of them, and at the door of the Church, which has for long generations sown in their lives the most inveterate hate of Protestants and thinkers, that ever cursed the human race!

Does Father Hecker arrogantly assume perfection, purity, loyalty, humanity, for a Church whose bitter fruits have been the bloody harvest of the long dark ages, and at last comes down to us in this outbreak upon American soil? and in the face of all this, does he assume that the American people are such fools as to listen to his claims for the Catholic Church, and his denunciations of Spiritualism? True, he does defend "the ministry of angels" in his own faith, and claims that to the Church alone is lawfully delegated the secret revelation of Spiritualism—but what would, what has Spiritualism, or the "ministry of angels" been or is in the hands of the Church? Nothing short of the most tyrannical despotism—based upon a "Thus saith the Lord," or thus saith the Church, which is all the same with them and their poor, blind followers—and engrafted upon the Mosaic rule, dealing anathemas and death upon all unbelievers. This it is which led to the recent riot; a fury-hatred of Protestantism, which has been fanned and kept alive, and ready to break forth in the most relentless cruelty, upon every fancied occasion, ever since the days of Martin Luther, and even before that. When the Catholic Church rolls off this hydra-headed spirit of Anti-Christ, and shows us in its fruits, as well as its professions, that the true Christ is with them—when it wipes out those abominable curses, which are an insult in the face of Christendom and humanity to-day—when it teaches mercy and freedom, in place of anathema and misrule—when it gives us with fifteen hundred years of monopoly, a well-bred, loyal, humane and tolerant family of subjects, as orderly, patriotic, and peaceful a class of people as the Spiritualists of this century, it may be justified in its attempts to enlarge the bounds of the Church by absorbing Spiritualism. But with the glaring facts which are here presented in the frequent outbreaks of its blinded and bigoted subjects, every American, every lover of peace and patriotism should beware how they make compromise with it. In a very eloquent speech made in this city not a month since, one of the priests of Rome took occasion to recommend the severest military discipline against "the lawless, riotous mob"—at the same time that he exonerated the Catholic Priests and Church from all blame. That man was either blind or afraid to do his duty. To us, it is a wicked, abominable policy, which keeps the Irish Catholic, with his naturally impulsive nature, ever ready to fall into the deepest hatred toward the Protestant, as "a cursed heretic," and then gives him the hot powder and shell, where the terrible reality thus comes to him only in the hour of mutilation or death. And we think it is time that these poor, infatuated, blinded and bigoted criminals should open their eyes, and see what keeps goats too far from them, retrieve, as they do up in their empty professions of neutrality and innocence, when the battle day comes, and leaving these miserable dupes and pimps of theirs to take the penalty! With all the mistakes of the Irish Catholics, we have a great heart of pity for them, seeing there is no delusion so deadly, no rule or government so exacting or tyrannical as that of this wealthy autocracy of Rome, and never does it cease to drag its victims with its maddening hatred of dissenters, while as to-day, it blandly tells the world—"these quarrels are not the result of any religious difference!" "It is a political feud." "The Church has nothing to do with it." Aye, that may go down some throats,—but here in America, they are of the Puritan Catholics. Why, here upon American soil, Democracy of America has been tried and established by Protestant genius, by these representatives of the Roman Established Church" rule can in addition to the crushing tax We think, when one is all.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

NATURE AND GOD.

By G. B. Hickox.

Being one of that class of people who try to do their own thinking, and having followed Brother Francis through his labyrinthian search through the universe after God, I have been led into some knotty difficulties by trying to bring my own thoughts into harmony with his. It occurred to me, that if I should state some of them, perhaps he would be able to help me out. And then I thought there might be others of the same class, equally entangled with similar difficulties, who would like the illuminations of Brother Francis' pen, so I concluded to ask you to lend a column in the JOURNAL for the benefit of all concerned.

In accordance with the above heading, my thoughts, although contravening Brother Francis' salient propositions, run substantially as follows:

Nature—all that can be seen or felt—all that can be known. Man is a manifestation of Nature, his physical representing the physical domain, his spiritual the domain of spirit.

The existence of the spiritual domain is as evident to the effect reason as the physical domain is to the physical eye. These two domains stand in the relation of positive and negative to each other, and are co-existent and co-eternal. They are each and separately necessary to the existence and action of each other, and together make up the completeness and entirety of Nature or the universe.

The negative or physical domain possesses no inherent power of action. If its possessed forces, they are latent, and require the action of the positive domain for their liberation. Nor could the positive domain act without something to act upon. Hence if the domain of matter is boundless, so must the domain of spirit be boundless.

If the domain of matter is independent of any one individualized, physical man, it must be independent of all physical men, both in the past, present and future; for all physical men can be a matter of any one man, as such, can also be affirmed of all men, for all time. If the physical domain be independent of the physical man, so may the spiritual domain be independent of the spiritual man. Now here we have the two great domains of Nature, the one inherently negative and passive, and its forces latent; the other inherently positive, active, and its forces in play, liberating the forces of the negative domain, the result of which is the evolution of worlds, of systems of worlds, of the mineral, vegetable and animal kingdoms, and of man.

If the physical domain is negative, lifeless and inactive, until it is fed by the active forces of the spiritual domain, it follows that, but for this vivification, neither man, animal, vegetable, mineral, nor worlds nor systems of worlds could ever have been developed. The spiritual domain must be co-pervasive with that of the physical; and wherever action of the physical domain must remain negative, inactive and useless. To say that dead matter possesses laws for the development of itself into form and order—into life and consciousness—into sentience—is to deny all necessity for spiritual forces and spiritual existence, and if true, Spiritualism, with all its cosmo citants and fascinating theories, is the veriest humbug. The spiritual and physical domains of Nature must, then, in their combined action, be the prime cause of all effects. This is no less a necessity from the fact of our inability to conceive a time when effects did not exist. If the cause is eternal, the fact of its eternity proves the eternity of effects; for a cause is not a cause until it produces or accomplishes something; but if the cause did not exist, the effect could not.

No finite mind can determine boundaries to this primal cause. But each effect, in its turn, becomes a cause. Not a blade of grass, nor leaf of the forest, nor grain of sand, nor atom that floats in space, but is itself a cause. But it could not be so but for its connection with the primal cause.

Shall we assert that these effects are not, and can not become causes for the reason that a boundless cause leaves no room for finite causes? Or, shall we look up this boundless cause, whose very nature and essence necessitates action, in a box of exact dimensions to fit, and then defy it to move? Or, shall we not, rather, accept the more reasonable proposition that the boundless cause operates through an endless chain of causes, interchangably recognized by finite minds, as causes and effects, although we are able to discover only separate, or but a few connected links in the chain?

To conceive of the boundless cause, as one solid, cemented mass, encased within its own boundless dimensions, incapable of internal motion and active projection to manifest itself. If these effects, or secondary causes in the physical domain are produced by, or are dependent on the primal cause for their existence and activity, why not those in the spiritual domain?

If the eternal perpetuity of the individualized human spirit depends on the eternity or self-existence of an individualized spirit germ, are we therefore to conclude that the whole floral and animal kingdoms are immortal? for the same reason that they are germs manufactured to order in these kingdoms, and if so, by whom? If the physical domain, by its own inherent forces evolves all vegetable and animal germs, why not the spiritual domain produce all spiritual germs? If inherent law rules in the one, why not in the other?

Vegetable germs seem to have the power of reproduction. A vast oak forest may be produced from one acorn contained in a single germ. This forest will produce annually millions of other germs, each as potent as the primal germ. Are spirit germs less potent, or do they reproduce themselves? If so, is the individualization eternal?

Knowledge is the impression which material and spiritual substances, together with their relations and laws of motion and activity make on our consciousness. Are latent spirit germs conscious, and do they possess knowledge? If so, by what possibility can it be proved? If knowledge does not exist in latent spirit germs, from what source does it originate? Does water exist higher than its fountain? Does the effect exceed its cause? Let us see in physical man, as an effect, we find life, sensation, consciousness, reason and intelligence. Do these all severally exist in latent spirit germs? If not, the effect must exceed its cause, or otherwise, the spirit germs are but effects dependent on some more primal cause. Will it be said that the power to know is equivalent to knowledge; that this power resides in the germ? Power is inherent capability, energy—is not knowledge the sequence of susceptibility rather than the effect of power? The problems of knowledge are already worked out in the laboratory of Nature before they can be impressed on the human consciousness. The power to know, then, consists more in placing one's self in the way of impressions than in inherent capability or energy.

Who or what works out these problems that constitute the sum of human knowledge? Who vivifies the dead, inert matter of worlds, planting the germs of the grasses, the flowers and the stately forests which unfold into such order and beauty? Who fills the broad heavens with suns and constellations and systems of worlds? Who measures their distances and fixes their relative positions with such mathematical precision? Who peoples all these worlds and systems of worlds with intelligent human beings? Is it reasonable to attribute all these things and a thousand others to individualized man, when he is the only and exclusive source of all his knowledge?

Had we not better conclude with the heading of our piece, and attribute them to Nature and God—to Mother Nature and Father God?

Baxter Springs, Kansas.

—Have you learned the happiness there is in contentment? If not, go to school.

—An ounce of praise will usually carry man or child farther in the path of virtue, than a whole ton of censure. Try it.

To W. Lowe, Esq., Shanghae, China.

BROTHER JONES:—I have been requested by W. Lowe, Esq., French Board, at Shanghae, China, to give my views in regard to the use of chloroform, nitrous oxide, hasheesh, etc., as agents, to aid persons in entering the somnambulic condition, and as he has requested me to do so through the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, with your permission I will.

I have, for some years held the opinion that some persons upon whom surgical operations are performed, feel pain while under the influence of chloroform and nitrous oxide, although they may know nothing about it when the effect has passed off. This was very evident in the case of my own daughter who underwent a surgical operation about fifteen years ago, and I have witnessed it in many other cases, where teeth were extracted while under the influence of nitrous oxide—and believe, that in all cases where signs of pain are exhibited while under the influence of either of these agents, that the subjects really do suffer—although they may know nothing about it when the influence passes off.

But I wish to be distinctly understood, that I do not say that all feel pain while under the influence of anæsthetics, for some, I am satisfied do not.

My experience in this seems to agree with Mr. Lowe, who thus expresses himself in his letter to me: "I shrank from the knife, saying, that I felt the pain—but after awaking had no recollection of it. Judging from this," he continues, "would it not be possible for a person already in the clairvoyant state, to superintend and guide the initiation of a novice under narcotic influence, and thus make a certainty of each case the first trial?"

I answer, that it is not necessary for the person who guides the novice, to be in a clairvoyant condition—and I take pleasure in stating, that when in Cincinnati some years ago, being present when the gas (nitrous oxide) was administered, I spoke to the subject during the inhalation,—and who, when partially under the influence, became clairvoyant, and was, of course, then in a somnambulic condition. The experiment has not been repeated since that time, in consequence of not having an opportunity,—but there can be no doubt, that if those who will be inhaling either of these anæsthetic agents be spoken to, or, just before the effect passes off, their mind be directed to distant places etc., at the same time that they are told not to rouse out of the state—that clairvoyance will be induced, and the condition perfectly entered. They will then, if properly instructed, be able to enter the state at any future time without the aid of these agents.

I should have stated these facts long since, but was anxious to repeat the experiment before I did, and hope to be able to do so, when I visit Cincinnati next winter, where I will have free access to the gas.

While on this subject, I will refer to a brief article in the April No. of the "Chicago Medical Times" vol. III, No. 2, page 93, upon somnambulism artificially produced, which reads thus: "Dr. Russel says (Medical Times, and Gazette, and Boston Medical and Surgical Journal). Somnambulism may be produced artificially. Dr. Richardson has recorded some interesting observations in the report of the British Association, 1865, p. 274 showing that a state analogous to somnambulism sometimes follows the inhalation of amyline. A patient was entirely senseless, and in this condition underwent a severe surgical operation, yet she talked with considerable correctness upon the topics of the day, seizing objects with precision.

We experienced proof that we had produced the same condition in his own person, though quite unconscious of his acts; and he quotes a like instance witnessed by Dr. Snow, in which a child played with a ball, throwing it into the air, catching it with precision, talking and laughing all the time, yet to all appearances perfectly unconscious."

Upon trying to obtain the amyline, I was told by a celebrated chemist, that the English were wild upon the subject of anæsthetics, and that the use of the amyline was exceedingly dangerous, and not to be depended upon.

From what I have seen, I would much prefer the nitrous oxide to all others, except perhaps sulphuric ether, and believe that if the mind be properly directed during the inhalation or immediately before the effect passes off, that the end in view can be safely attained.

To those who call themselves "poor sensitives or healing mediums," I have but to say, that in less prosperous days, when weak, sick and faint, they were glad to rest beneath my roof, and to partake of the best I could afford. Now, perhaps, under better circumstances—petted and praised beyond their ability to bear meekly,—would feign, tear down the temple that I for years have been trying to raise for them. I have withheld nothing, and endeavored to teach the truth without money and without price, and although they have made misstatements, and mistaken the motives of my friends, who told them a few plain truths, perhaps, too harshly, but, I bear them no ill will, and only hope that the time is not far distant when they will see and embrace the truth, that education and prejudice has shrouded from their view, and which, cloak it as they may, will prove to be the only way to promote their own usefulness, and as true healers to increase the sum of human happiness.

Fraternally,

WM. B. FAHNESTOCK.

Lancaster, July 25th, 1871.

Letter from Horace G. Griffin.

BROTHER JONES:—Inclosed you will find seventy-five cents, as a small payment upon your most valuable sheet. I shall hereafter endeavor to be more prompt. I thank you sincerely for your kindness in sending your most noble paper without payment in advance. I have been an attentive reader of your paper for about a year, and I can say to you, Brother Jones, that I am a better man for it, and I might add, that others are, too. I hand the paper to those that will read it, for I know it will do them good. Odd orthodoxy has a strong hold, but their poor devil does them a great deal of injury occasionally. The shepherd of the flock of the M. E. Church, lately left here for parts unknown. I shall leave the particulars are long, and will send you an account of the same.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, July 19, 1871.

The Hollow Globe.

Friend Sherman:—Your work entitled "The Hollow Globe," was duly received. I have not had time to give it that careful examination necessary to forming a correct opinion of its merits. It seems to be based on a principle I have advocated for years,—the reciprocal relations of all things, instead of the hereditary aristocracy of spirit over matter that has so long held the world in subject sway. As far as your deductions are in harmony with this rule, you may safely challenge the criticisms of the world, as the position is impregnable.

Yours truly,

J. TEMPEST.

Westfield, N. Y.

Voices from the People.

YPSILANTI, MICH.—P. Dreyer writes.—Inclosed please find post-office order for three dollars for a renewal of my subscription, which expired July 1st, 1871. I think the JOURNAL continues to increase in interest. I like it for its bold and fearless search after truth and denouncement of error. The "Search after God" continues to increase in interest. The JOURNAL has become a fixture with myself and wife.

ANGOLA, IND.—Dr. Moore writes.—I like the JOURNAL better every additional number. I very much like its radical position. May it never be less radical.

GENESEE, WIS.—Martha P. Champlin writes. Whoever is the author of the subject "Search after God," I believe to be on terribly dangerous ground. I never heard of any orthodox Christian that did not believe in the existence of a devil, or evil influences from the lower army. We believe also in the eternal existence of God, and woe to those who deny it. Now I claim to be a Christian Spiritualist, that is, I believe in the manifestations of spirits, good and bad, or evil, undeveloped spirits. Now, how do they know but what it is possible that evil spirits would have him believe that there is no God, and that they exert an influence to prevent the unfolding of divine truth? For the evil spirit was a liar from the beginning. So woe will come upon whom God will send a strong delusion, that they may believe a lie, that they may be condemned? Are not evil spirits manifested as an angel of light, to deceive, if possible, the true Christian? "How ridiculous we should be to discern between good and evil," to "try the spirits, whether they are of God or not"—1st John, 4. God has promised to send his "angels as ministering spirits to minister unto the heirs of salvation," "heirs of salvation," and perhaps they are the converters which Jesus Christ sent as the Holy Ghost when he said that "Whosoever should call on the name of the Lord should be saved." I do not say that I am a spiritualist man, but let us not give up the precious Bible, for the fulfillment of prophecy plainly indicates its truth. The ancient Jews being scattered among all nations are living proof—as we believe in a resurrection body, yet brought into the kingdom, according to the prophets. The Bible is a spiritual book, thus reads the fourteenth through to the seventeenth of John, also the thirteenth and fourteenth of 1st Cor. 15th chapter. I believe that the word from God would have been destroyed long ago, if God had not prevented it, when the decree went forth to burn all the Bibles. But from the mouldering ruins of ashes the Bible has come forth teaching of the resurrection of the Son of God hath life, and whosoever believeth not the Son, hath not life, but the wrath of God abideth on him. I have the reading of the JOURNAL, and like the best of it. I like it much. I would be perfectly wretched if I could not pray to God. I design, in future, to send for some of your publications. I have been for thirty years a member of the Congregational Church. The past five, I have withdrawn from that creed.

TISKILWA, ILL.—J. Gage writes.—Permit a few lines from an old friend. "We do not make our thoughts—they grow in us like grains of wood." In reading the JOURNAL, thoughts are born that might have lain dormant. Seeing such a variety of views in your columns, I feel morally call me one of them out, however feeble. As to Mr. Francis' "Search after God," no personal God can be found outside of the human heart. There, I believe, it will be found. I am sure it will, and I shall ever see only by his manifestation; all that any ever will or can see or approach unto.

STANWOOD, IOWA.—A. Dodge writes.—I intend, now, to be a life subscriber to the JOURNAL. Spiritualism in this section is steadily progressing. Do send us some good speakers, where persons shall be convinced to the most skeptical, that this beautiful philosophy may be spread far and wide among us, for truly it is the grandest religion the earth has ever yet seen.

ALBION, IOWA.—C. Allen writes.—I shall continue to take the JOURNAL as long as I have health and strength to obtain the means to pay for it. My wife and I are about all the Spiritualists that are willing to openly avow themselves in this vicinity, and we have to bear a great deal of derision. But all will come out right in the end.

GENOA, ILL.—A. Hollenbach writes.—Enclosed is a money order for three dollars, as a renewal of my subscription to the JOURNAL, which I am well pleased. I do not endorse the atheistical actions of Mr. Francis in his "Search after God."

OWATONNA, MINN.—O. Hill writes.—I can not do without the JOURNAL. It is the best paper published, and ought to be in every family.

DIXON, CAL.—Mason Allen writes.—We feel the want of something here to set people to thinking. Those who have read Paine's "Age of Reason," that have not had an opportunity of seeing much of Spiritualism, only the dark side, as shown by the churches. Speakers in this country visit towns and cities, and leave but few converts to add to the cold. If we had an E. V. Wilson, or any other test medium to go into district school houses, there would be a great deal accomplished in a short time toward getting thought started in the right direction. It is a sorry dry season with us in many parts of the state, notwithstanding the prayers of Christians for a little more rain, and people have heard it so often that their faith in Christianity is getting very weak, and it would seem that many minds were ready to receive the new philosophy if it could be presented to them. I send you four new subscribers to the JOURNAL, with the money inclosed, and hope I shall be able to make an addition to it soon.

REDFIELD, ILL.—W. H. H. Brown writes.—Please find inclosed 75 cents for one new subscriber and "The Sunday Question," according to your new proposition. I have read the "Bible in the Balance," "Jesus of Nazareth," and "Strange Visitors," and it is something more of the order of the lassing from the glorious old JOURNAL office—the best paper ever published. Tell Brother Francis to go on with his "Search," and I will try to keep up with him if I can. It is worth all that the paper costs.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.—M. Carruthers writes.—I tell you again that I like your paper, "it is the best" I have yet read to arouse the reasoning faculties, because it contains such a variety of opinions on subjects of the most vital importance to man. If all the different pieces contained in your paper harmonized exactly with my views it would be the same thing over again, and would become stale. It is in this variety of opinions, and free discussion, this encouragement to thinkers, opening the prison doors and saying to the prisoner, "Go free!" This liberty, given to writers in the columns of your paper, occasionally, is the life and essential part of its value. Having said more than I at first intended upon this subject, I beg leave to offer a few remarks upon some subjects treated upon in the JOURNAL, which have given rise to considerable comment and speculation. I refer to the announcement of a "Hollow Globe," "individualized intelligences," "World-builders," and "Search for God." in relation to the first: As we have never been at the center of our planet, we could not, of our own knowledge, positively say. It would be speculating, on our part, but if we reason from scientific results, and from what we ourselves actually do know of the laws of formation, in the stratification of the crust, the laws of forces, such as the upheaval of mountains, we find obstacles to the conclusion that we could neither get over, under, nor round about. But as we have not heard the writer's arguments in support of his theory, we would be very sorry to condemn it, or say it was not true. If true, it knocks all our notions of earth into a "cocked hat." In relation to the second: Worlds are, as we believe, manufactured by the inherent laws surrounding, or universal space. Man never was, and never could be, an individualized human intelligence until the period of the eternal, immutable, and unchangeable law of progression. He developed through a natural series of conditions, up to animal life. Now if this doctrine be true that worlds must exist before man, animals or vegetables, it is a very pertinent question, from what do worlds receive their life? Is it from gravity, a forming power in nature, acting absolutely, and independent of individualized intelligence.

HAMILTON, NEVADA.—L. B. Wade writes.—Good for the "Search after God!" I think that he is sound. A spirit told me in 1858 that they had of no intelligence above them, and I guess the spirit was right, at least I would take their word before that of mortals.

Price-List Of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books desired, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies,	.75	16
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Fahnestock,	1.50	20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers,	.25	02
Alice Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker,	1.25	16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase,	.50	02
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Device,	1.50	20
Apocryphal New Testament,	1.25	16
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbot. Paper,	.50	02
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth,	.50	02
A Lecture in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. F. A. Logan,	.15
Arcana of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child,	.25	02
Arabula, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis,	1.75	20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph, Cloth,	1.00	08
	1.50	20
Approaches to Christ,	.15	02
Apostles, [translated from the French] by Renan,	1.75	20
A Stellar Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis,	1.00	16
Astro-Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor,	2.00	24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. C. Wright, small edition	.50	12
Large do	1.50	12
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Toulmin, M. D.,	.50	8
An Eye Opener, by Zepa. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper,	.50	.04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story,	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster,	.15	.02
Analogy Between the Facts of the Bible and the Facts of other Religions, by T. G. Forster,	.15	.02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle,	2.00	.24
Biography of Satan, By E. Graves. Price 35 Cents		06
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child,	1.00	12
Book of the Cosmos, (A Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle,	1.25	16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen,	2.00	.24
Book of Poems, by J. Wm. Van Namee. Cloth,	.75	8
Branches of Palm, by Mrs. J. S. Adams, a book for every Spiritualist,	1.25	16
Bethesdaff, by Professor W. Denton,	.10	2
Bhagvat-Geeta, or Krishna Nee Z. stament,	1.25	.16
Biological Science applied to the Laws of Life and Health, by A. E. Gardner, A. M. M. D. Paper,	.50	.04
Cloth,	1.00	16
Combes' Constitution of Man,	1.75	16
Common Sense Thoughts on the Bible, by William Denton,	.10	02
Cosmology, by G. W. Ramsey, M. D.,	1.50	20
Common Sense, by Thomas Paine,	.10	02
Christ Idea in History, H. Tuttle,	1.25	16
Shaster Family, or the Curse of the Drunkard's Apostate, by Julia M. Friend, with an Introduction by H. C. Wright,	1.00	12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M.D.,	1.25	16
Christianity No Reality or Spiritualism Superior to Christianity, —Wm. Denton,	.10	02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by M. R. Cravens,	1.00	.16
Descent of man, by Darwin Two Vols. ($2.00 per Vol),	4.00	.48
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Interesting History,	1.50	20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the Sixth edition of 1715,	1.00	12
Devil's Pulpit, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life,	2.00	20
Dawn, A novel of intense interest to progressive people,	1.75	24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph,	.75	12
Death and the other Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 4, cloth,	.75	12
Errors of the Bible. Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature. By Henry C. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth,	.50	8
Easter Hill, a Theological Romance,	.50	06
Errors of the Bible, or, over the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright paper,	.50	04
Cloth,	.75	12
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen,	1.75	24
Free Thoughts Concerning Religion, or Nature vs Theology, by A. J. Davis,	.20	2
Fugitive Wife, by Warren Chase, Paper,	.25	2
Festival Night, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Medium,		2
Gamaliel, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle,	1.25	16
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase,	.50	04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis, 5 vols, viz: Vol. 1 The Physician; Vol. 2. The Teacher; Vol. 3. The Seer; Vol. 4. The Reformer; Vol. 5. The Thinker. Each,	1.50	20
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students,	1.50	2
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	16
God Dealing with Slavery, by Theodore Richmond. Cloth, $1 50; postage, 12 cents. Paper,	.75	08
Habits of Good Society,	1.75	.20
Hierophant, or Gleanings from the Past, by G. C. Stewart,	1.50	.20
Health by good Living W. W. Hall M. D.,	1.50	20
Harbinger of Health, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Immortal Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper,	.50	4
Cloth,	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper,	.50	8
Cloth,	.75	12
Hayward's Book of all Religions; including Spiritualism,	2.00	24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. C. Wright,	.25	06
How and What to Observe, by Mrs. J. W. Mott,	.50	08
Helen Harlow's Vow, by L. Waisbrooker,	1.50	20
How to Bathe, by R. T. Miller, M. D., paper,	.50	4
Cloth,	.75	12
Hedged In, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates Ajar,	1.50	16
Hollow Globe,	2.00	.20
Hints and Misdemeanors of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy compared,	1.25	16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe by J. W. Draper, M. D., L. L. D., 2 vols,	4.00	60
Human Physiology, Statistical and Dynamical, or the Conditions and Course of the Life of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D., L. L. D., 466 page, cloth 2.50 cheap	4.00	60
History of the supernatural, (2 Vols.) 640 pages each,	3.00	.48
Hit, by Dr. Mary H. Wakeman,	1.50	.16
Intuition, by Mrs. F. Kingsman,	1.25	16
Important Truths, a book for every child,	.25	2
Is the Bible Divine? by S. J. Finney, paper,	.25	2
Cloth,	.50	12
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con,	.25	2
Inquirer's Text Book. by Robert Cooper,	1.25	16
Interesting Communications from Spirit Land, Mrs. M. B. Park, Medium,	1.25	16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds,	1.25	16
Jehoel, or Inquirer's Text Book by Robert Cooper,	1.25	16
Is it the Despair of Science? by W. D. Gunning,	.15	02
Jesus of Nazareth, by Alexander Smyth,	1.50	20
Johnson's Key to the Character of the Jewish Deity Delineated,	.25	4
Jesus of Arc—A Biography, translated from the French, by Sarah M. Grimke,	1.00	12
Kidder's Secrets of Sea Bathing. Price, paper bound 50 cents. Board bound	.75	08
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale's version. 770 pages, Medium size,	1.50	.60
Koran, with Life of Mohammed, Translated by George Sale, Gent. 12 mo., 475 pages.	1.50	.24
Little Lame Girl and her Guardian Angel. Price, paper bound 50 cents. Board bound	.75	08
Lyons, with explanatory notes, by George Sale's version. 770 pages, Medium size,	1.50	.60
Lyons, with Life of Mohammed, Translated by George Sale, Gent. 12 mo., 475 pages.	1.50	.24
Little Lame Girl and her Guardian Angel. Price, paper bound 50 cents. Board bound	.75	08
Life of Thomas Paine, with notes and comments,	.50	8
Observations of his writings, by H. C. Wright,	1.00	12
Life of Jesus, by Ernest Renan,	1.75	20
Love and its Wisdom History, by F. B. Randolph,	1.50	.16
Spirit of the Golden Age, by F. L. Harris,	1.00	08
Legalism, or Parent Position, or Marriage as it is, and as it Should Be, by C. S. Woodruff, M. D.,	1.00	16
Life and Moral Axioms of Confucius, by H. H. Wright,	.25	.02
Letters to Rebel Miles Grant, by Rev. Moses Hull,	.25	.02
Living Present, Dead Past. H. C. Wright. Cloth,	.75	.08
Paper,	.50	.04
Lyceum Guide. Cloth cover,	1.50	.16
Boards .75, 16	Paper cover,	.50	.04
My Love and I, by by Abby M. Laflin Barrow,	.25	2
Magic Staff, an Auto-Biography of A. J. Davis, Melenda, by Message to Mediumship,
Mental Alchemy,
Miracles and Modern Spiritualism,
Morning Lectures,
Mediumship,
Nature's Divine Revelations, by Andrew Jackson Davis,	3.50	48
New Testament Miracles and Modern Miracles, by J. H. Fowler,	.10	4
Night Side of Nature, by Crowe	1.50	.20
Ordeal of Life Through Dr. J. C. Grimes', Medium,	.25	04
Orthodoxy False, since Spiritualism is True, by Wm. Denton,	.10	02
Our Planet, Geology by Denton,	1.50	20
Optimism, The Lesson of Ages,	.75	12
Origin of Species by Darwin	2.00	.24
Origin of Species and Primitive Condition of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock,	2.00	.24
One Religion, Many Creeds, by Rev. Wilkes,	1.50	.20
Ordeal of Life Through Dr. J. C. Grimes', Medium,	.25	04
Orthodoxy False, since Spiritualism is True, by Wm. Denton,	.10	02
Our Planet, Geology by Denton,	1.50	20
Optimism, The Lesson of Ages,	.75	12
Origin of Species by Darwin	2.00	.24
Origin of Species and Primitive Condition of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock,	2.00	.24
One Religion, Many Creeds, by Rev. Wilkes,	1.50	.20
Outlines of Sermons, with Notes and Reviewers by G. F. Kittredge,	.10	.02
Poems and Events, by A. J. Davis,	$1.50	20
Pre-Adamite Man, by Randolph,	1.50	20
Physiology of Woman, by C. Morril, M. D.,	1.50	20
Planchette—The despair of Science, by Epes Sargent,	1.25	16
Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. A. J. Davis. Paper 60 cts; postage 8 cts. Cloth,	1.00	16
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M. King,	1.75	24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lizzie Doten,	1.50	16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Mrs. Wood, Medium. Cloth,	.20	06
Paper,	.10	.04
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Miss Maria M. King,	.20	06
Rules for forming Spiritual Circles, by Hon. Richard Hildreth,	1.00	16
Sexual Physiology, by R. T. Trall, M. D.,	.75	8
Strange Visitors, Dictated through a clairvoyant,	1.50	20
Spiritual Harp,	2.00	24
Abridged Edition	1.00	16
Sequel to The Love Life, by the Spirit of Dr. R. K. Rane,	.50	8
Spiritual Precepts by Judge Edmonds,	.20	2
Self Abnegationist; or the true King and Queen, by H. C. Wright, Paper,	.50	4
Cloth,	.75	12
Spiritualism, or Directions in Development, by A. M. Ladin Ferree,	.20	2
Sour Apples, by A. B. Child, M. D.,	.20	02
Sociology as the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. H. O. Willard,	.50	.06
Silk Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Emma Hardinge, Paper,	.75
Cloth,	1.00
Soul of Things, or Psychometric and Kindred Phenomena, by Wm. and Elizabeth Denton,	1.50	20
Spirit Manifestations, by Adin Ballou,	.75	12
Spirit Mysteries Explained, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Supremacy of Reason, Moses Hull,	.10	.02
Seeds of Strife by Mrs. M. M. King,	.50
Spiritual Philosophy versus Disbelief, by Mrs. M. M. King,	.25
Scenes and Romance, S. M. Landis, M. D.,	1.50	20
Songs of Life, —S. W. Tucker,	.20	02
Spiritual Songs. S. W. Tucker,	.15	02
Spirit Life of Theodore Parker, through the Mediumship of Miss R. Ramsdell,	.40	02
Seven Hour System of Grammar, by Prof. D. P. Howe,	1.00	.08
Paper,	.50	.04
Satan as of Evil, by Joel Moody,	1.75	.20
See ship, R-odolph,	1.00	.20
Spiritual Manifestations by J. S. R. Mc	.10	.02
Sunday Question and self contradictions of the Bible,	.50	.00
Syntagma	1.00	.12
The Fountain; by A. J. Davis,	1.00	12
The Errozo ca ble Records, or Sounds and Geology, by Wm. Denton,	.25	.04
Cloth,	.40	.05
The Bible in India,	2.00	.20
The Faithful Guardian, an Inspirational Story, by J. William Van Namee,	1.25	16
The Bible in the Balance,	1.50	16
That Terrible Question, by Moses Hull,	.10	.02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. B. Davis,	.5	.02
The Dynamic Cure, by Leroy Sunderland,	$1.50	12
Tale of A Pagadian, by A. J. Davis,	$1.50	16
The Present Life, by Mrs. A. M. Middlebrook,	1.00	12
The Question Settled, by Moses Hull,	1.50	16
The Gates Wide Open, by George Wood,	1.50	20
The Gates Ajar, by Mrs. E. Phelps,	1.50	16
The Orphan's Struggle, by Mrs. H. N. Green,	.15
The Pearl Diver by Dr. G. W. Kirby	.15
The Gospel of God and Evil, by Silver,	1.50
The Trance, by Leroy Sunderland,	1.50	16
The Great South-West, by W. Nicolay,	1.00	14
The Merits of Jesus Christ as the Merits of Thomas Paine as a substitute for merits in others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright	.25	2
The Philosophical Theory of Voltaire. Price, American Edition, 676 octavo pages, two steel plates, Largest and most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $10 00	2.00	80
The Disputa, by Rev Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for Blasphemy. This work is a history of the origin, evidences and early history of Christianity,	2.00	20
The Inner Mystery, an Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten,	.20	02
The Deluge, William Denton,	.10	2
The Voices, by Warren Sumner Barlow,	1.25	16
The Ignorant Philosopher, Voltaire,	.25	2
The Woman who Dared, by Epes Sargent,	1.50	20
Theological and Miscellaneous Writings of Thomas Paine,	2.00	.24
Thomas Paine's Pilgrimage in the Spirit World,	.75	.06
The System of Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D' Holbach,	3.00	24
The Psalms of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover,	.50	08
Board cover,	.75	12
Cloth,	.50	16
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D.	.10	02
The Penetralia, by A. J. Davis,	1.75	20
The Yah o, a Satirical Rhapsody.	.10	.06
The Restoration Dream Book, compiled from all languages, by P. B. Randolph,	.50	.04
The art of Conversation,	1.50	.16
The Arts of Writing, Reading, and Speaking,	1.50	1.16
Underhill on Mesmerism, Post-paid,	1.50
Unhappy Marriages, by A. B. Child,	.25	2
Unwelcome Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper,	.50	4
Cloth,	.75	12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow,	.75	.06
Voyages of Creation,
Vital Force, how wasted and how preserved, by R. T. Miller, M. D. Paper, 50 cts; Cloth,	1.00	12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Volney,	1.00	12
What is Right, William Denton,	.10	2
What is spiritualism, and shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? by Mrs. M. King,	.25
Whatever is, is Right, A. B. Child, M.D.,	1.00	16
Writings of Gaskell,	.10	02
Wolf in sheep's clothing, or God in the Constitution, Moses Hull,	.10	.02
Your Book of Spiritualism. Cloth,	1.25	20
Paper,	1.00	16

WE HAVE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO PROCURE Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular rates, and, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as may be desired. If sent by mail, one fifth more than the regular cost of the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. In making remittances for books, buy postal orders when practicable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

H. SNOW,

819 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, Cotton's Anti-Tobacco Preparation; Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & co.'s Golden Pens, Planchettes, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. Communications in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HERMAN SNOW, P. O. Box 117, San Francisco, Cal.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,

No. 601 NORTH FIFTH ST, ST. LOUIS, MO.,

KEEP constantly on hand all the publications of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular liberal literature, including RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL and BANNER OF LIGHT, Magnetism, Photographs, Parlor Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

New York Office, 27 BEEKMAN ST.

THE MAGNETIC THERMOMETER. SEND TEN CENTS TO DR. ANDREW STONE, TROY N. Y., and obtain a large, highly illustrated book on the science of thrilling treasure, &c.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railroad—Council Bluffs and Omaha Line—Depot North Wells street

Ticket Office, south-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Cedar Rapids Passenger	8:30 a. m.	6:50 p. m.
Pacific Past Line	*10:45 a. m.	3:55 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.30 a. m.	*3:30 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	11:00 p. m.	7:05 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	10:00 p. m.	7:00 a. m.
Dixon Passenger	*4:00 p. m.	*11:10 a. m.

Prospect Line.

Prospect and Dunleith Pass	*9:00 a. m.	*7:15 a. m.
Prospect and Dunleith Pass	*6:45 p. m.	*2:00 p. m.
Rockford, Rigin, Fox River and State Line	*4:00 p. m.	*11:10 a. m.
St. Charles and Elgin Passenger	6:10 p. m.	*9:45 a. m.
	8:30 p. m.	8:30 a. m.

Line of Canal and Kinzie street.

	*8:30 a. m.	*10:10 a. m.
	*9.45 a. m.	*4:0 p. m.
	*1:00 a. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Rose land Park	1.00 p. m.	3.40 p. m.
Evanston Express	9:00 a. m.	*7:45 p. m.
Kenosha Pass	*4:10 p m.	*9:10 a m.
Waukegan Passenger	*6:30 p m.	*8:35 a. m.
Waukegan Express	9:00 a. m.	*7:45 p. m.
Milwaukee do	11:00 p. m.	8:0 a.m

Kenosha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street Depot.

Kinzie street

		8:0 p. m
		*10:10 a. m.
		7:45 a. m.

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.
H. P. STANWOOD, General Ticket Agent

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road,

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. Ticket Office 56 South Clark street.

Mail	*9:30 a. m.	*7:50 p m
Special N Y Express	*9:30 a. m.	*4:00 p m
Richardt Accommodation	*4:30 p m	*10:30 a. m
Atlantic Express (daily)	5:15 p. m.	7:20 a. m
Night Express	*12:00 p. m.	*6:30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Line.

Day Express	*7:30 a. m.	*7:50 p. m.
Night " "	*12:00 p. m.	*6:30 a. m.

F. B. MORAN, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 56 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Railroad—Union Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office Lake st., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

Mail Train	*9:30 a. m.	*9:05 p. m.
Fast New York Express	*9:00 a. m.	*4:30 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	10:15 p. m.	7:00 a. m.
Night Express	*12:00 p. m.	*6:35 a. m.
Kalamazoo Accommodation	*4:15 p. m.	*12:00 n.

Cincinnati and Louisville Trains

Day Express	*9:00 a. m.	*9:30 p. m.
Through Express	*12:00 p. m.	*6:30 a. m.

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	*9:30 a. m.	*11:30 a. m
Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*5.05 p. m

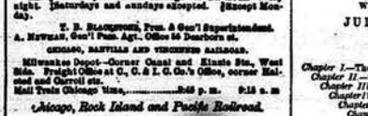
HENRY C. WENTWORTH, General Passenger Agent.

H. B. RAMSEY, Gen'l Superint'endent, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Hinsdale Accommodation	*7:05 a. m.	*6:15 p. m
Mail and Express	7:30 a. m.	5:40 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10:45 a. m.	*4:15 p m
Hinsdale Accommodation	*7:05 p. m.	*6:30 p. m.
Hinsdale Passenger	*4:15 p. m.	*9:45 a. m.
Evening Express	*8:00 p. m.	*7:30 a m
Aurora Passenger	*6:30 p. m.	*9:30 a. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*9:15 p. m.	*8:50 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	10:00 p. m.	7:30 a. m.



ROSWELL HANSON, Superintendent.

SAMUEL POWELL, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office in Gt. Cent. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	*9:30 a. m.	*7:45 p. m
Cairo Express	*6:15 p. m.	*7:30 a. m
Kankee Day Passenger	*9:30 a. m.	*7:45 p. m.
Kankee Night Passenger	*6:30 p. m.	*7:00 a. m.

On Saturdays this train will

Illinois and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Madison and Canal Streets.

Mail	*9:30 a. m.	6:10 p. m.
Day Express	*9:00 a. m.	6:00 a. m.
Atlantic Express	5:10 p. m.	6:30 a. m.
New York Express	5:00 p. m.	5:00 a. m.
Valparaiso Accommodation	*4:30 p. m.	7:30 a. m.

W. G. OGLESBY, Gen. West'n Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st.

Chicago and St. Louis—Depot, corner Madison and Canal sts

Express Mail	*9:15 a. m.	6:10 p. m.
Joliet Accommodation	*4:50 p. m.	*9:55 a. m.
Night Express	*8:30 p. m.	*6:00 a. m.
Alton Express	8:00 p. m.	*8:35 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and sundays excepted. §Sundays excepted.

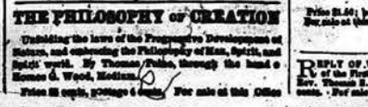
E. S. BRADFORD, Pass. & Gen'l Superintendent.
A. NEWMAN, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Office 55 Dearborn st.

CHICAGO, DANVILLE AND VINCENNES RAILROAD.

Milwaukee Depot—Corner Canal and Kinzie Sts., West Side. Freight Office at C., C. & I. C. R'y Office, corner Madison and Canal streets.

Mail Train Chicago time, ... 8:45 p. m. 9:15 a. m.

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad.
or Van Buren and L



Pacific day Express ..... a. m.
Fa. ..... a. m.

parlor sleeping car is attached to the 10 a. m. train through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

A. E. SEARS, Gen'l Passenger Agent.
R. ST. JOHN, Gen'l Ticket Clerk.

P. A. HALE, Asst'n Gen. Passenger Agent.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

	a. m.	8:30 a. m
		8:30 p. m.

For Grand Haven and Muskegon Express daily at 7.00 p. m. For St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, daily at 10 a. m. Green Bay Train, Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 p. m.

*Sundays excepted. †Mondays excepted. ‡Saturdays excepted.

CHRISTIANITY

ITS ORIGIN, NATURE AND TENDENCY considered in the light of Astro-Theology.

By D. W. Hull.

THIS book is, so far as it goes, a thorough review of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plagiarized from ancient heathens. Being unlike almost any other work ever written on the subject, it cannot fail to be deeply interesting to all. Its explanations of Scripture are bold, and as self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.

, For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office.

Price at retail, 35 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and Spirit World. By Thomas Paine, through the hand of Emma C. Wood, Medium.

Price 35 cents, postage 4 cents. For sale at this Office

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR PSYCHOMETRIC RESEARCHES AND DISCOVERIES By William and Elizabeth M. F. Denton.

This valuable and highly interesting work has become part of the standard literature of the country.

Price, $1.50cts, Postage, 20cts.

LECTURES ON GEOLOGY, THE PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR PLANET. A valuable scientific work.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

COMMON SENSE THOUGHTS ON THE BIBLE. For Common Sense people. Twelfth thousand, revised and enlarged.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

THE DELUGE, IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

WHAT IS RIGHT. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

BE THYSELF. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

For sale at THE RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL Office.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW WORKS BY PROF. DENTON.

"ORTHODOXY FALSE,

Since Spiritualism is True."

Price, 10 cents: postage, 2 cents.

THE IRRECONCILABLE RECORDS, OR GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

200 pages. Price: paper, 35 cents, postage, 4 cts cloth, 60 cents, postage 8 cts.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

A BOOK FOR WOMEN;

TALKS TO MY PATIENTS,

BY

MRS R. B GLEASON, M.D.

A book by a woman, for women, on the diseases of the sex. The LIBERAL CHRISTIAN, speaking of the book says:

"After reading the whole of this book, we pronounce it the most admirable and exc-llent that we have ever had of its class. It is written for women; it is full of wise counsels and suggestions regarding the very things in which so many people most need assistance. It is a safe book for young people to read, for any body indeed, and this can be said of very few books on these subjects. There is not a sentence in it that can be perverted or misused, so as to do any harm. We wish the book could be read in every household in our country."

Harper's Magazine says:

"We wish the chapter 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every Mother in the land."

Mrs. Dr. Sales says:

"I would rather have written that book than been queen of the greatest empire on this small globe of ours!"

Godey's Lady's Book says:

"This book treats in a thorough yet delicate manner of all the troubles, cares, and diseases of women. We do not hesitate to say that it is the best book of its class we have yet seen."

Price, $1 50; postage, 18 cents. Address RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

CONJUGAL SINS

AGAINST THE

LAWS OF LIFE AND HEALTH,

AND

THEIR EFFECT ON THE FATHER MOTHER AND CHILD.

BY AUGUSTUS K. GARDNER, A. M., M. D.

Late Professor of Diseases of Females and Chemical Medical Midwifery in the New York Medical College.

CONTENTS.

I. The Modern Women's Physical Deterioration. II. Local disease in children and its cause. III. At what age should one Marry. IV. Is Continence physically injurious. V. Sexual Relations. VI. Conjugal relations during the period of Menstration. X. Conjugal relations between the old XI Marriage between Old Men and Young Girls XII What may be done With Health in View, and the fearof God before us. Appendix.

Price in cloth, $1.50. postage 16 cents; in paper, $1.00, Postage 8 cents. The Trade Supplied.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 and 189 So. Clark St., Chicago Ill.

THE FUTURE LIFE

As Described and Portrayed by Spirits.

Through Mrs. Elizabeth Sweet.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY

JUDGE J. W. EDMONDS.

CONTENTS.

Chapter I—The Holy City.
Chapter II—Spiritual Message.
Chapter III—The Spir t Echo.
Chapter IV—Nature and responsibilities of Mind
Chapter V—Communication from a Spirit.
Chapter VI. Spirit-life.
Chapter VII—A picture of the Future.
Chapter VIII—Margaret Fuller.
Chapter IX—Reasonable Words.
Chapter X—Interview with Pollock.
Chapter XI—New Desires.
Chapter XII—John C. Calhoun.
Chapter XIII—Interview with Webster.
Chapter XIV. A Second Visit.
Chapter XV—Another Interview.
Chapter XVI—Reformation.
Chapter XVII—The path of Progression.
Chapter XVIII—Valley of the Shadow of Death.
Chapter XIX—The Mirror.
Chapter XX—The Book of Life.
Chapter XXI—A Beautiful Lesson.
Chapter XXII—Retrospection.
Chapter XXIII—The Mechanic.
Chapter XXIV—The Preacher.
Chapter XXV—Realities of Spiritualism.
Chapter XXVI—The Drunkard.
Chapter XXVII—The Organ Boy
Chapter XXVIII—The Man of Ease and Fashion.
Chapter XXIX—The Self Satisfied.
Chapter XXX—Natural Development of the Soul.
Chapter XXXI—Voltaire and Wolsey.
Chapter XXXII—The Oracle.
Chapter XXXIII—The Second Birth.
Chapter XXXIV—The Rivers.
Chapter XXXV—The Queen.
Chapter XXXVI—A Scene in Spirit-Land.
Chapter XXXVII—The Muse.

Chapter XLIV—Capabilities of the soul.
Chapter XLV—The skeptic.
Chapter XLVI—Realities of Spirit-Life.
Chapter XLVII—The Contest.
Chapter XLVIII—The Soul's Ascension.

Chapter XLIX—Glimpses of a Higher Life.
Chapter L—Conclusion of Voltaire.
Chapter LI—A Word from Voltaire.
Chapter LVIII—Home of Unhappy Spirits.
Chapter LIX—Mansion of Voltaire.
Appendix.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.
For sale at this office.

REPLY OF WASH. A. DANSKIN, ESQ., PRESIDENT of the First Spiritualistic Congregation of Baltimore, to Rev. Thomas H. Hood, D. D. Price, 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale at the office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

39,308 CURES

BY THE

POSITIVE & NEGATIVE POWDERS.

IN the following list, the total number of cures of different diseases, which have been performed by the Great Spiritual Remedy, PROF. SPENCE'S POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE POWDERS, is indicated by the figures which follow the name of the disease. The kind of Powders which should be used in each disease is indicated by the letters "P" or "N" in the P's and N's which follow the name of the disease; "P" standing for Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

Settled Speakers Once More.

This question is assuming an important feature in the history of Spiritualism, and has its advocates, pro and con. We believe the first "article" came from Brother H. H. Marsh, of Chicago, an able writer, and, at one time together with his good lady, earnest workers in our cause. The article was signed "Chicago," and appeared in 1866, or -7. We were at this time laboring in Ohio. Bro. Moses Hull, was at the time settled in Milwaukee, Wis., and wrote an article in approval of "Chicago," in which he attacked the itinerate system, in a very bitter manner, terming it a tread-mill system, in which speakers followed each other, repeating over and over the same old story,—full of stale platitudes and adjectives, without connection or conclusions.

To this communication we replied at the instigation of J. M. Peebles, and our article was corrected in part by him, recopied by a young man then living in Cincinnatti, and when it appeared in the Spiritual papers of the day, created a flutter, amongst those who favored settled speakers. Bro. Moses Hull, standing back on his dignity, replied, "We shall not stoop to answer this article, we deem it unworthy a notice, etc." Not so, however, with Bro. Willis, who wrote a sharp, pungent article reviewing us sharply, denying that his ministration of several years in Cold Water, Mich, had proved a failure, and at the same time demanding the real author's name.

To this demand, we promptly replied,—giving our name and reasons for the article, as well as sustaining our position in the former article. How unlike J. M. Peebles. The course these Brothers pursue,—they handle their own chestnuts, be they never so hot. Not so, J. M. Peebles,—he wishes others to burn their fingers through pulling his chestnuts out of the fire. Several short communications subsequently appeared from both sides of the subject, and then there was a lull.

In the Fall and Winter of 1868-9, Bro. J. M. Peebles was called on (?) to preside over "nice society," in Detroit, Mich., and while thus presiding, wrote his famous allocution to the public, entitled, "A nice Society," which appeared in the Banner of Light, March 27th, 1869, and wound up with the following string of adjectives. "Balancing the testimony of our experience, we have generally found that the only blatant, angular, tangential, egotistic, formualists were opposed to the right use of forms, or methods, as means to secure the ends of discipline, education and spiritual unfoldmeht. Heaven spare us from an irreligious, unscientific, self important, bigoted, godless, nothingarianism,—some times seeking to pass itself for Spiritualism." What think you, my good brothers and sisters, of this bundle of epithets, discribing us, who are in favor of scattering the word of God bread-cast over the land, as "blatant, egotistic, irreligious, unscientific, self-important, bigoted, godless, nothingarianism, sometimes seeking to pass (ourselves) for Spiritualists." Gentle words, Bro. Peebles, coming from "The St. John of Spiritualism"—"Does it become a settled speaker,"—an editor, to write thus of his brothers, co-workers. Wilson is "blatant;" Colby, "bigoted:" Hull, "unscientific;" Whiting, "egotistic;" Keyner "Tangential;" Hardinge, "Godless;" Howe "self-important;" Child, "a nothingarian;" "sometimes seeking to pass (themselves) for Spiritualists." Does this language "comport" with the dignity of a settled speaker or reformed minister and teacher, to call all speakers and mediums, a "blatant, godless, egotistic, bigoted, nothingarians."

We reviewed his allocution sharply, showing it up in such a manner that the whole spiritual world laughed at "A nice society," as well as the ten commandments received on top of Pike's Peak by Bro. Peebles. To this article there came a response until after Bro. Peebles' appointment, as Consul to the unimportant City of Trebizond, which by the way, was an insult to Spiritualism, for the reason that it was a place of no importance whatever, where there was nothing to do, and for this reason the post or office had not been filled for years,—no one foolish enough to accept, save "The St. John, of Modern Spiritualism." A short time before Bro. Peebles sailed for Europe, the Religio-Philosophical Journal received a letter of inquiry from Detroit, written by Judge Mc Cracken, asking the cause and wherefore of Bro. Wilsons article on "A nice society." We happened to be in the office of the Religio-Philosophical Journal at the time the letter was handed us. Instantly a voice said to us, "Do not publish this letter yet." As is our rule, we obeyed the voice; the letter lay over three or four numbers. In the mean time we received letters from Detroit, (uncalled for by us) fully sustaining every point we had made against "A nice society." Later Bro. Peebles wrote to S. S. Jones, of the Religio-Philosophical Journal, petulantly demanding, "why the communication from the Detroit friends had not been published,—or will you publish one side of the question, and not the other." This was just what we wanted. The enemy's fire was uncovered, and we knew the actual mover, if not original writer of the McCracken letter, and then the correspondence was given to the world. In good time we replied to these letters, and were at once invited to Detroit, speaking there the four Sundays in October, 1869. While there we gathered up some precious facts about the polished "St. John, of Modern Spiritualism," —Bro. Peebles, the settled speaker, which did him no good, and yet we feel towards him kindly and brotherly. "He must and will act in accordance with his organization."

When at sea, Bro. Peebles wrote an article on sea experiences, in which he confesses that he "Played Peter," declining to hold religious services, then criticised the Episcopal System some what sharply, adding, "How much better it would have been had there been readings from the harp or silver chainings,—the gentle Wilson, pardon us, to the contrary notwithstanding."

The first intimation we had of this gentle insinuation was a letter directed as follows: "To the gentle Wilson (E. V.) pardon us;" containing the article clipped from the Universe. We accepted it as a good joke, and wrote a rejoinder in which we baptised our Bro. "The Bishop of Trebizond." This was very vulgar coming from us, and all the friends of the Bishop took umbrage; but, dear readers, we cannot rise above our "organization." A lady writer responded, defending our Brother in the Banner of Light from this low and vulgar insinuation, to which we made no reply.

Things went on smoothly, until our New Years Greeting, which appeared on the 1st of [illegible] which we held out the Olive [illegible] the right hand of fellowship [illegible]

Brother E. S. Wheeler took exception to the bitter philippic accusing us of [illegible] foe.

Wheeler's articles. In answer to these, Brother Wheeler replied as follows:

"Brother Wilson is able to defend himself, and the columns of every Spiritual paper in the country are open to him. When he finds fault, then it will be time for our readers to complain," or words to that effect.

We met Brother Wheeler early in Feb., 1870, in Philadelphia, and we laughed over the matter, shook hands, and parted friends as ever.

The next step in this matter was taken by the Present Age, shortly after the meeting of rumps at Richmond, Ind., under the name of The American Association of Spiritualists. The article referred to organization, settled speakers, and their triumphs (?) when contrasted with the itinerant system, referring to the fact that societies were already moving in this matter, and then there was a eulogy on the action of the late rump convention,—and, by the way, Richmond, Ind., like all other places where this would-be American Association of Spiritualists has held its sessions, is virtually a dead letter, so far as Spiritual meetings are concerned. Rochester, Buffalo, N. Y., and Richmond, Ind., are dead—dead of settled speakers and The American Association of Spiritualists.

In this article the writer insults every writer, seer, speaker, or other medium, in the following words: "Now, what we want is to get rid of all such as give tests in public, or take a fee at the door, etc." We answered this editorial, and as on all former occasions, silenced the battery. Shortly after our answer appeared, Brother Wheeler took up his pen and blazed away at us in ink, quoting extensively from our article. Well, we found no fault with this, nor did we think for a moment of appealing to the Washington, Philadelphia, or Cleveland societies, to relieve us from the skinning Brother Wheeler put us through, or come to our help, and we fully believe there is not another man or woman in our ranks who would think for a moment of drawing a society into a defense of their position save J. M. Peebles; certainly not Brothers Wheeler, Hull, or Foster.

Well, well, brother, go on with your work. We find no fault, for the reason that we frequently lend brain thoughts to settled speakers; in fact, we are the resurrection of societies who are or have been afflicted with the spider element of settled speakers. Well knowing that Mr. Wheeler was very billious, we concluded to let the matter drop and pay no attention to his spiteful condition.

In February last we met Brother Wheeler in Vineland, N. J., and extended to him the hand of friendship. It was taken coldly. We were treated coldly. We parted; he in coldness; we in the sunshine of a practical Spiritualism. The next evening we received the letter that appeared in No. 12 of the Religio-Philosophical Journal, June 10th, 1871. Next, there appeared in "Western Locals" of the Banner of Light, No. 3, Vol. XXIX, an article in which a statement is made utterly at variance with the truth. To this we replied in an article headed "Settled Speakers once more," showing Brother Lynn's puff of J. M. Peebles to be untrue, as we shall prove by documentary evidence hereafter. One word right here. When we wrote that article we had no more thought of finding fault with the Cleveland Society and its very excellent board of managers than we have of finding fault with our Maker. And the gentlemen (all of whom are our personal friends), who signed that article dictated by J. M. Peebles, never dreamed of an insult to their society until J. M. Peebles called their attention to it.

On the 23d of July, in No. 18, Vol. X of the Religio-Philosophical Journal, there appears an article signed by Gen. Rose, D. U. Pratt, J. King, M. C. Parker, Joseph Gillson, as officers of the Cleveland Society (?) not in defense of settled speakers or the interests of their society, but in defense of J. M. Peebles, the would-be leader and head of the great spiritual movement of the age, but lacking brains, he will accessarily find his level, and that is as a worker in the ranks with the rest of us; unless, like Finney, Loveland, and Wadsworth, he sloughs off, and sinks to rise no more; we trust he will do better.

Accompanying this defense of J. M. Peebles, comes a letter, which reads as follows:

Brother Jones:—You find within an article prepared by the officers and committee of the Cleveland Society, in reply to that of Bro. Wm. V. Wilson, in your issue of June 17th, "Settled Speakers Once More." I need not tell you that the Society, with hardly an exception, felt indignant upon reading it. It certainly has done Brother Wilson no good, and yet I feel toward him kindly and brotherly. He must and will write in accordance with his organization. Mr. Rose, and Dr. Parker furnished the facts for the communications, Bro. Murray serving as their scribe. I hope you will give it an early insertion in the Frontier Department. If the publication is declined, return to Dr. M. C. Parker 144 Seneca Street.

Most truly yours,

J. M. Peebles.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 25, 1871.

This letter fully reveals the originator of the reply, and the following correspondence fastens a false statement upon Bro. J. M. Peebles, who states, "Mr. Rose and Dr. Parker furnished the facts for the communication."

Dr. M. C. Parker:—Will you favor me with the amounts received at each collection of Bro. J. M. Peebles' meetings for October, December, and January, 1870-1; also at the collections of my engagements for November, 1870; also for March, 1871. You will understand the object of this; it is to meet J. M. Peebles' rejoinder to "Settled Speakers Once More." You favored them with statistics; please grant me the same favor. I have not attacked your Society or its management, and if you will read me and note carefully, you will find that you have been misled in this matter by Bro. Peebles.

Now, Bro. Parker, it is due me, that you send an exact statement. I asked it once before. You declined. You have now committed yourself by espousing Bro. Peebles—be just to me. If you are at any expense, send the amount, and I will pay it.

Truly yours,

E. V. Wilson.

Carthage, Mo., July 3, 1871.

To this he replies as follows; It speaks for itself:

Bro. E. V. Wilson:—Yours of the 3rd inst. is received to-day. In reply, I will state that Mr. Joseph Gillson furnished the figures for Mr. Peebles. I, of course, agreed to it, and can state that it was correct. I still decline to furnish food for this unjust controversy. Perhaps Mr. Gillson may do it.

Yours truly,

M. C. Parker.

Cleveland, July 6, 1871.

On receipt of this, we wrote at once to Joseph Gillson, Esq., as follows:

Joseph Gillson, Esq.—Dear Sir and Brother;—I write you to-day, asking if the article sent up by J. M. Peebles, in answer to "Settled Speakers Once More," originated with the gentlemen who signed it, or did it originate with J. M. Peebles, and by him brought to Messrs. Rose, Pratt, Parker, King, and yourself, for your indorsement. Will you frankly answer in writing the following questions, with the understanding that I am to use it in my reply:

1st, Who originated the article in reply to "Settled Speakers Once More," signed by the officers of the Cleveland Society of Spiritualists?

2nd, Did J. M. Peebles ask you and the others to sign the article, or did you and the others write it out, take it to Bro. Peebles, and ask him to send it up for publication? Please answer so I may know to whom to address my reply. I am in receipt of the advanced proof-sheet of the article, and shall reply soon.

Accept regards of your friend,

E. V. Wilson.

Carthage, Mo., July 6, 1871.

(To be continued.)

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled The Sunday Question, and Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

This work consists of 123 large, closely printed pages. It is an exhaustive review of the so-called Sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the Religio-Philosophical Journal to any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we we will send the same work and the Journal for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the Journal three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called Life's Unfoldings, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the Journal will avail him or herself of this generous offer, and thus secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the Journal.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote.

The most certain and perfectly harmless antidote for the poisonous effects, and remedy for the tobacco appetite, is known by the above name.

It is compounded by Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated medium of Chicago, while entranced by a celebrated chemist, long in spirit life. This antidote is warranted to break the habit of using tobacco by the inveterate lover of the weed, when the directions (on each box) are followed.

Agents for selling the same throughout the country are wanted. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office. Price $2.00 per box—sent by mail free of postage, on receipt of the money.

MRS. E. MANIFOLD,

Medical, Clairvoyant, and Healing Medium.—Parties at a distance examined by look of hair. Price, $1.00. Prescriptions, $1.00. Magnetic Remedies sent to all parts of the country. Address Mrs. E. C. Manifold, P. O. Box 1098, Rockford, Ill.

v10 n7 tf

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services. v9 n8 tf

AGENTS! READ THIS!

WE WILL PAY AGENTS A SALARY OF $30 per week and expenses, or allow a large commission, to sell our new and wonderful inventions. Address M. WAGNER & Co., Marshall, Mich.

v9n25tm.

CARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.

Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, with or without top. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used, and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

N. KINNEY.

v9 n25 6m.

NEW EDITION—REVISED AND CORRECTED.

THE VOICES

Three Poems.

VOICE OF SUPERSTITION.
VOICE OF NATURE.
VOICE OF A PEBBLE.

By Warren S[illegible]

THIS volume is sti[illegible] and is [illegible] Men Meets than any [illegible] The Voice of Super[illegible] and proves by numerous passages [illegible] God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary!

The Voice of Nature represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes. While others have too often only described, this author has erected a beautiful Temple in the mind of the reader to contain the object and most gifted didactic poets of the age."

The Voice of a Pebble delineates the individuality in matter and Mind, fraternity and Charity and Love.

The book is a repository of original thought, awaking noble conceptions of God and man, forcible and pleasing in style, and is one of the few works that will grow with its

[illegible]

JEWS! JEWS! JEWS! JEWS! JEWS!

A New Book by Andrew Jackson Davis, ENTITLED,

"THE FOUNTAIN,

WITH JETS OF NEW MEANINGS."

ILLUSTRATED WITH ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-TWO ENGRAVINGS.

Beautiful Paper, Fine Presswork, Superior Binding.

Price only $1.00; postage 16 cents.

This Book is Freighted with Thoughts for Men and Pictures for Children.

For sale by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 Clark Street, Chicago.

Spectacles Positive and Negative Powders, for sale this office.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

[Third Edition, Revised and Corrected.]

JUST PUBLISHED!

A Complete and Truthful History of that Good Man and

PRINCE OF MEDIUMS,

Jesus of Nazareth

BY

PAUL AND JUDAS,

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most

REMARKABLE WORK

in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, Paul and Judas, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, usurping all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely-printed pages.

Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St. Chicago.

HERMES MERCURIUS TRISMEGISTUS:

(Ter Maximus! King of Egypt! Melchizedec!)

HIS DIVINE PYMANDER.

His First Book; Pymander—The Spirit from the Far Heavens; The Holy Sermon; The Key; That God is not Manifest, and yet Most Manifest; God; The Song; Truth; The Crater; The Divine Mind.

This most ancient and glorious book ought to be in the hands of Christian, moral and religious persons in the land—especially ministers. Also in those of scoffers, doubters, infidels, and skeptics, for it contains what can nowhere else be found. This rare and superb volume also contains the world-famous Asiatic Mystery—the singular and astounding belief and sacred doctrines of the Rosicrucian, Alchemists, Hermetists and other Illuminati. Also translations from the Vedas; Brahm; the Song of Brahm; and the Smaragdine Table.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

IT COSTS

Only about one-third Bookbinders' prices (to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Ready Book-Binder. Sizes suited to any publication, from the smallest Monthly to the largest Weekly. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both File and Binder. Also for the Religio-Philosophical Journal, No. 18; price $1.20 and $1.50. Address, Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ROSICRUCIA!!!

THE ROAD TO POWER!! Sexual Science! F. B. Dowd's Private Lectures to Ladies and Gentlemen. A pamphlet of 60 pages, containing principles, ideas, and advice beyond price. Ignorance is the curse of mankind. Price 50 cents. For sale by the author, F. B. Dowd, Davenport, Iowa.

v10 n15 tf.

DR. S. L. McFADDEN AND WIFE, Magnetic Physician, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 348 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago,

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give news from absent and deceased friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law unto themselves, and be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors and preachers. All Mediums are invited to attend free of charge. The Contradictions of the Bible, Lying Spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of diseases, and private communications, from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n12 12t

AN EYE-OPENER.

"CITATEUR PAR PIGAULT."

LE BRUN,

DOUBTS OF INFIDELS.

Embodying Thirty Important Questions to the Clergy; also, Forty Close Questions to the Doctors of Divinity.

BY REV. [illegible]

☞ For sale at the office of this paper.

Price, in cloth, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In paper, 50 cents; postage, 4 cents.

813 RACE ST.

M. E. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, can accommodate MEDIUMS visiting that city with fine rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.

v10n13 tf

ABSTRACT OF COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was composed by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets, from 1150 to 624 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 48 pages. Price 25 cents. American News Co., N. Y.

v10 n5 6m

BELVIDERE SEMINARY,

FOR YOUTHS OF BOTH SEXES,

Belvidere New Jersey. Fall Term begins Wednesday, Sept. 13th. One of the most liberal institutions in the land, being strictly non-sectarian. It has the superior advantages of a healthful and beautiful location, added to the comforts and genial influences of a pleasant home, with excellent opportunities for obtaining a practical education in any or all of the several departments, English, Classical, Literary, and Scientific. Pupils graduate in each department in Gymnastics.

For catalogues, address Miss Bush, Principals.

v10 n17 9t.

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large PROFITS to AGENTS. Send Stamp for Circulars. C. K. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 19, No. 151 Lasalle St., Chicago.

v10 n13 tf

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

[illegible]

☞ "Deo hominem æternum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—Van Helmont.

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutatory, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Test or trial packages mailed free for 25 cents.

Address, M. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 721 St., Washington, D. C.

v10 n11 tf

THE

HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

Presented through the Organism of M. L. Sherman, M.D., And Written by Prof. Wm. F. Lyon.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"This book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth.

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable; than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"The central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of these chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty or forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible to all those intelligences and spirits of former states that may be found in the unexplored open Polar Sea, and this opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from one surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail or steam either way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. Facts have been endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12 mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

☞ For sale by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1783 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE

BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON.

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskrit, or ancient language of the Brahmins.

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS

OR THE

WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE

REVEALED TO MAN.

The Medium, in his address to the public says:

The Medium (David Coriess, of Huntley's Grove McHenry Co., Ill.,) through whom this work was given, has been a careful observer of the phenomena of "Modern Spiritualism" for over twenty years and during that time he has been the humble Medium through which hundreds of philosophical and scientific lectures have been given to attentive listeners. Of himself, he can only say he is an unlearned farmer, far advanced in years. He asks for this pamphlet a careful and attentive perusal.

The Introduction entitled "The Unveiling," treats of man as the grand objective ultimate of Life's Unfoldings.

He also stands at the pinnacle of all organized Life in the native purity of all things.

On page twenty-four, the author treats of "the way mediums paint likenesses, in the true order of the development of the arts and sciences.

On part second, under the general head of mysteries Revealed, the author treats of "How Mankind Manifest their presence through Physical Bodies of Mediums. How the writing is done. How we Influence Mediums to speak. The fullness of all kinds of language investigated. The ring feat and the carrying of Musical Instruments around the room explained."

This work is neatly got up and consists of seventy-three closely printed pages and we hesitate not to say that it contains more original thought upon important subjects, a few only of which we have enumerated, than any other work of equal size we have seen.

☞ Price 30 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale wholesale and retail by the publishers, the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

THE

Descent of Man,

AND

Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 400 pp. each. Price $2.00 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

☞ For sale by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

EMPRESS!

THE "EMPRESS" and other Rubber Goods, FOR

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send stamp for circular. Address: "EMPRESS," P. O. Box 2259 Clark St., Room 23 Chicago.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY. ARTS AND SCIENCES, LITERATURE, ROMANCE AND GENERAL REFORM.

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause: she only asks a hearing. [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.

CHICAGO, AUGUST 19, 1871. VOL. X.—NO. 22.

AS TO A GHOST.

A Big Sensation at Germantown, Ohio.

A Reliable Ghost Story that beats Baron M[illhausen].

Five Hundred People Visit the [Spot].

(CONCLUDED.)

Sunday night, I, my brother William, who lives with my father, and Leander Case, one of the farm hands of my brother Samuel, slept in the house, my wife and child and the boy Pontius having a bed all night at my brother Samuel's; father and mother went home between 10 and 11 at night; brother William came about half-past 10, having been in town; we heard him singing on the road, and called him in; Case came shortly after William; we all three examined the house before retiring, and found everything quiet; slept soundly; heard no disturbance whatever during the night. I got up about 5 o'clock in the morning, and the rest about the same time. We found everything as left when we went to bed. My wife arrived at the house from my brother's about the time we got up. Brother William and Case went home. We did our morning's work, carrying the horses and milking the cows, and took the milk to our brother Samuel's milk-house, and then got breakfast at the same place—my whole family, including the boy Pontius. After breakfast brother Samuel, Case and myself went back to my barn to haul oats. After we left my wife and brother Samuel's wife went to the spring-house of brother Samuel, about forty rods from the house, and when they got back to the kitchen they found a bucket full of water which was standing on a bench two feet high, upset, the bucket on the floor, and the water split. They asked the boy what caused it to fall, and he said it had fallen down, declaring positively that he had not touched it at all. My wife then started up stairs to make the bed, and as she got out of the kitchen into the hall she heard a noise in the kitchen and going in she saw a pie plate containing coriander seed which was standing on the sink in the kitchen, lying on the floor broken, and the seed scattered, and a milk crock which had been standing on the bench pulled away a distance of two feet. The only persons in the kitchen at the time were the boy Pontius, and the two babies, hers and her sister's. The noise occurred so soon after she left the kitchen that she is satisfied the boy could not have done it. My wife then sent the boy over to my barn where I and brother Samuel were to tell my brother to come home, that the racket was going on over there. Brother Samuel went over and the boy remained at my barn. Afterward I also went over to brother's home, found nothing more going on and then came back to my house, and, with the boy Pontius, I went into the house; and Case, who came with us from my barn, went round to the spring at the northwest corner of the house to get a drink; the boy and I went to the bed-room, and found the feather bed, quilt, sheets, pillows and bolster lying in front of the bed on the floor, the chaff tick alone remaining on the bed; at this moment we heard a noise up stairs, and we both went up, the boy going first, and we found a nail keg which was half full of sugar turned upside down, and not a single crumb of sugar was lying near or around the keg. I set it up again and a little was spilt in doing so. We went down stairs then, found Case sitting on the porch, and I took my team to the field for a load of oats, leaving the boy Pontius and Case at the house.

This was the last I know of the affair of my personal knowledge. There is but one pair of stairs leading from the first floor of the house to the second story. But while I was gone over to my brother's house, Case says that two crocks of milk, which were left standing on the porch, were upset and the milk spilt. Case is nineteen years of age, is a farm hand, and has been living with brother Samuel for some nine months. Case and the boy were standing in the front of the house near the basement, and the boy remarking that he heard a noise in the cellar, they both went into the basement, and found a crock lying on the floor, which had been standing in the window. The boy picked it up and put it back in the window, and they both were going out, and just as the boy put his hand on the door to pull it toward him, the door opened inwardly. Case saw the crock fly from the window into the basement about three feet, as though some one pushed from the outside. Neither of them was within reach of the crock at the time. The crock was broken. As the door was about half closed Case saw an empty fruit jar also fly from the same window, breaking all to pieces. There was no one about the house but Case and the boy at the time. They went out of the basement, and while leaning up against a hogshead in front of the house, about fifteen minutes after, they heard another noise in the basement. They went back into the basement, and saw an empty oyster can, and a tin cup half full of sealing-wax, which were standing in the same window where they were in unison, lying on the floor, about three feet from the window. The window on the north side of the house. Case says no wind was blowing at the time. They then went to the porch, which is over part of the basement, and then my sister Mary came. This was about 7 or 8 o'clock Monday morning. Case told her about what they and the boy had seen, and she felt skeptical about the whole matter, so they proposed the experimenting for the purpose of satisfying her. My sister lives with my father, less than a half a mile off. She is a young lady, twenty-one years of age. She heard her father tell what he and mother had seen on Sunday, and so she came to satisfy her own curiosity.

Mary, my sister, went to the sitting room and set up four chairs which were lying down in the sitting room. Case and the boy were with her all the time. From the sitting room she went through the kitchen into the bed-room, and there they found the bed clothing lying on the floor in front of the bed, and my sister put it all back on the back part of the bed. They then went out down into the basement so as to show my sister what had been going on there. My sister there found the cup with sealing-wax lying on the floor, and two pieces of soap. She picked up the soap and put it back in the window, and the boy picked up the cup of sealing-wax, and it was knocked out of his hand a distance of three feet. No one was within three feet of him at the time. He was standing at the time about five feet from the window. At the same time that the cup flew from his hand, the soap which my sister had placed in the window flew into the basement, three feet. No one was within five feet of the soap at the time. There were only the three persons in the basement—sister, Case, and the boy—and the air was perfectly calm. My sister did not look outside to see if anybody was around, as her skepticism and the subject was given away.

All three then went up out of the cellar basement into the hall, and were there joined by father, who had just come over from his house. They all four then went up into the second story, which is the upper story next to the roof. Sister, and the boy Pontius went into the boys sleeping-room, and father and Case remained in the hall. Sister noticed a store-box, about three feet long, and two feet high, and two feet wide, used for packing sweet potatoes in, turned upside down, in the boys' room. The box was on the floor, and as we have passed out into the hall, and the boy was pulling the door to, after him, the door opening inwardly, and it was about half closed, they heard a noise, and upon looking into the bed-room they found the box upside down again.

All four, sister, father, Case and the boy, heard this noise, and saw the box upside down. All went down stairs, to the porch, except the boy Pontius, and when down a few moments they again heard a racket up stairs, and all three went up and found the boy in the hall, and father went into the room on the north side of the house, the door leading thereto from the hall being closed when he approached, and found the clothes chest, which is a good deal larger than the box just described, tipped over. There was clothing in it at the time, and some pillows, a feather bed, and a piece of linsey, which had been lying on top of the chest, was found lying on the floor.

Father also found a twenty-gallon keg of whisky, which contained probably two or three gallons of whisky, about two or three feet from its place, still rolling, and Case, himself, caught it while still on the go. The barrel had been lying lengthwise against the wall, and was chunocked on the outside by a piece of board. Toes—father and Case—came out into the hall, found sister there, and the boy on his way down stairs, half-way down. While yet in the hall, they heard a noise in the sitting room, down stairs, and the boy was at the time on the stairs. The stairs lead down into the hall to the door, on the east side of the sitting-room. They found, on getting there, the stove turned over. It was sitting against the wall on the north side of the room, half-way between the east and west side, about ten or twelve feet from the door leading to the hall. One leg of the stove was broken, and the top-plate, also. It was a parlor box-stove. There were a lot of newspapers lying on the book-case, and they saw the papers moving off the case, and the little boy, Pontius, remarked: "The papers are falling off," and he caught them and shoved them back against the wall.

All four then went into the kitchen, and, the door leading from the kitchen into the bed-room being open, they saw the bed-clothing, feather bed, quilt and all, strewed on the chaff tick, on the floor again, and at the same time heard a noise in the sitting-room, and on trying to open the door leading from the kitchen to the sitting-room, found they could not do it. They then went around through the porch and hall, and entered the sitting room from the east door, and found the book-case tumbled against the door leading to kitchen from the sitting room. It was about two and a half feet high and of the same length. When the noise was heard all four were in the kitchen. This was all between 8 and 9 o'clock. Father then having gone to a neighbor's house, Case, Mary, my sister and the boy Pontius were on the porch, all standing at the south end of the porch. The porch is thirty-five feet long. While thus standing a gallon and a half-earthen crock, which was empty, and was standing near the center of the porch, was seen by all three to rise straight up about one foot in height, and fly over a distance of at least four feet and break all to pieces. No one else was on the porch at the time. The largest piece of the broken crock was no larger than one's hand. Case and Mary then went around to the spring at the northwest corner of the house, leaving the boy standing at the south end of the porch. They got a drink, and as they got to the spring they heard a noise, and when they came back saw milk running down the porch, and found that three crocks had been upset, the boy still standing at the south end. Case says they left him. The crocks were at the north end of the porch. Case then went to the barn, leaving sister and the boy at the house alone. Sister then went to the south end of the porch to clean up the spilt milk, and the boy went with her also, and while both were there they heard a noise, and the boy, turning around, said: "There goes the ax." Sister turned around also, and saw an ax already lying on the floor, and another in the act of falling. Both axes had handles. One of them was lying length-wise on a large box on the porch, about the center of the box. The box is the one already described as being on the porch. The other ax was standing upright against the wall, handle upward. The box was standing a little beyond the center of the porch, a distance of twelve to fifteen feet off. The ax[es] were noticed previous to their falling by my sister, as being in the position described. The bottom of the ax which was standing upright was about the center of the box, about a foot from the wall.

They next heard, while Mary was still cleaning up the milk, a noise, and the boy remarking: "There goes the corn sack," turned round, went to the sack, which was also on the box, and replaced it in its proper position. He then returned to where my sister was, and said in a moment after: "There goes the sack again." Sister replied: "Well, let it go, the corn will not run out," and just then she heard the corn rattle, and turning round saw the corn running out. Weed'she looked round the first time she noticed the end of the box where the corn sack was, had moved a distance of about a foot toward the center of the porch from the wall.

There was more than a bushel of shelled corn in the sack, and the sack before was well tied.

Sister, then said to the boy: "Everything was turning upside-down, and said he should go to the end of the porch and sit down and see if the thing would not settle down."

He went to the south side of the porch and sat down; just as he sat down he said, "There goes the crock," and by that time she also got to the south end of the porch. She saw a crock which had been standing on the dog kennel in the yard, at the corner of the porch, moving into the yard and fall a distance of five feet from the kennel, breaking all to pieces, and at the same time the boy remarked, "There, it is now lifting me up also," and sister saw him raised a distance of at least a foot up ward from the floor, the boy preserving the position in which he was when sitting, and was instantly let down. Then the boy said, "There goes the flower-pot," and as sister turned around to see, she saw two of them which were standing five feet from the porch, tipped over. There were five or six of the pots standing in a row, and my sister says she passed and repassed them at least twenty times that morning, and that she is positive that three minutes before they were all right. All this took place in much less time than it takes to tell it.

Father then came back, and my sister told him what had taken place in his absence, and father then, suspecting the boy of [illegible] the trouble, sent him across [illegible] to watch some bars which [illegible] which we had been hauling [illegible] excuse to get the boy away. [illegible] to the barn and told me what had [illegible] I approved of his sending the boy away as he did. I and brother William, Case, my mother, brother Samuel, and brother John went to the house then and ate our 9 o'clock lunch in the yard. The boy did not get back to the house until dinner time, and everything was quiet in his absence.

When the dinner bell rang at brother Samuel's for our dinner, my team was at the barn, and brother William was looking out to make room for my team. We unhitched our horses, fed and watered them, and then started to brother Samuel's for our dinner. The boy in the meantime having come up also to go to dinner with us, found us already gone, and he went to my house to get a drink, and while there saw, as he told us when he came over to brother Samuel's house for his dinner, and reported that a dozen or fifteen crocks had fallen from a bench near the back-room; a crock of grease, a swill-bucket, a crock of soft soap, and a small coal oil can, were all upset, and also that four flower-pots were upset, and the plants pulled out. Nothing happened at Samuel's house while we were at dinner. After dinner we started back to my house—that is, I, brother William, and John and the boy—to see whether the boy had reported the truth. We got there and found his statement correct. I replanted the plants in the four flower-pots, and while doing this brother Samuel and Case came also. I then started to the barn, leaving the rest at the house. Brother William, who had heard of all that had happened, and had been taken about the house in a disordered condition, still had a doubt as to the truthfulness of the reports he had heard. William and Case laid down on the porch "waiting for something to turn up." The boy Pontius and brother John were also on the porch. While we were there the little boy said: "Let us go down in the yard and see how many crocks were broken." All four went down, and while they were there, which was at the north end of the porch, the boy said: "Listen; there is something at the flower crocks again," and started up to where they were. They were at the south end of the porch, out of our sight. William and the rest followed. William watching the boy all the time to see what he did not play a trick on them. When they got there William saw a pot upset and the plant pulled out. William planted it again and set it up.

They all then laid down on the porch again. In a few seconds after the boy said: "Listen; do you hear that." Neither of us heard anything. The boy started round to the north end of the porch, they having been at the south end. William and the rest following after. As the boy got to the north end of the porch, William, who was standing where he could see the boy all the time, saw a keg of vinegar, which was set on trestles, rolling off. The boy was trying to stop it, but it fell and rolled away. Afterward we found one of the flower-pots upset again.

My brother William is twenty-seven years of age, and brother John fifteen years of age. John saw the same that William saw. The boy Pontius, being supposed the cause of the trouble, was again sent away to watch the bars, and I finally took him home to his mother's, living a mile and a quarter off. One the way he said probably a dozen times: "If only this thing don't follow me to uncle Michael's." His mother lives at his uncle Michael's.

The boy was a very good boy, obedient and of good sense; in fact, smarter than the average of boys. I took the boy, at the request of his mother, last February, as she was too poor to raise him. I was to keep him until he was eighteen years old, and was to board and clothe him, send him to school, and when eighteen years old was to give him a full suit of clothes, horse, saddle and bridle. The contract was verbal between me and his mother, who is a widow. I should like very much to have kept him, but under the circumstances would not like to take the risk of taking him back.

I am satisfied in my own mind that the trouble was not caused by any living person, nor by any contrivance with the boy. All the family liked the boy very much. There has been no less than five hundred persons here to see my premises within the last two days, men, women and children.

The above statements are true in every particular.

BENJAMIN M. STIVER.

Witnesses: W. M. AMPT, JNO. ZEHRING.

We, the undersigned, Samuel Stiver, sr., and Catherine Stiver, the father and mother of Benjamin Stiver above named; Samuel Stiver, jr., William Stiver and John Stiver, brother of said Benjamin; Christina Stiver, wife of said Benjamin; Mary Stiver, sister of said Benjamin, and Leander Case, having heard the statement above given by the said Benjamin Stiver, say that so far as it refers to us, indivdually, the same is in every respect true,—we having personally witnessed the matters which in his statement he represents us to have seen and heard, and, therefore, certify to the correctness of the said statement.

SAMUEL STIVER,
her
CATHERINE X STIVER,
mark.
SAMUEL S. STIVER,
WILLIAM STIVER,
his
JOHN X. STIVER, mark,
her
CHRISTINA X. STIVER,
mark.
MARY STIVER.
LEANDER CASE,

Witnesses—W. M. AMPT, JOHN ZEHRING.

THE STATE OF OHIO, }
MONTGOMERY COUNTY, ss. }

Personally came before me, a Justice of the Peace in and for said county, Benjamin Stiver, Samuel Stiver, sr., Catherine Stiver, Samuel Stiver jr., William Stiver, John Stiver, Mary Stiver, Christina Stiver, and Leander Case, to me for many years well-known, and whose statements are entitled to full faith and credit, who, being by me duly sworn, acknowledged the signing of the foregoing statement, and declare and say the same is true as stated in every particular. And I hereby certify that said statement was made and signed by them in my presence.

JOHN ZEHRING, J. P.

GERMANTOWN, OHIO, July 27th, 1871.

MORE OF THE GHOST STORY.

The Boy Pontius Interviewed.

The reporter of the Cincinnati Commercial interviews Pontius, the hero of the communication that appears on the first page of our paper. The result is as follows:

I regretted, while in the "ghost" business, the other day, that I was unable to send you the statement of the boy Pontius. He lived with his uncle, some distance from Stiver's, which made it impossible for me to complete the examination in time for Friday's Commercial. Fearing that the omission might lead some to suppose that his statement was intentionally suppressed for fear of spoiling a sensation, and to satisfy my own curiosity, I have just concluded an interview of Pontius.

Your theory, or rather explanation, that the boy Pontius may have been at the bottom of all the mystery, while it is an easy way of disposing of the testimony is not satisfactory, is not supported by the sworn statement, nor countenanced by those who have seen the boy.

The witnesses say he could not have done the business without their knowledge—in fact, they say he did not do it. The boy had no motive for such conduct, did not have the physical power to do a great many things described, as he is a boy only nine years of age. He had not the wit or ingenuity to concoct such a thing as a joke or a sell, or the sense to approciate it. One intending to play a trick would hardly have persisted in his efforts from Friday until Monday noon, though it must have been a flattering reward for his enterprise. The boy is a good, obedient, boy, and is not mischievous or malicious.

Notice the printed testimony, and you will see half a dozen or more occurrences which took place when the boy was not where he could have had any connection with them, even if he had desired.

It can not be said that there was an optical illusion, because there were eight persons who were eye-witnesses at different times and in different groups and at different parts of the house. The eyes of all were certainly not dazzled.

THE BOY PONTIUS.

is a boy nine years old last June, bashful and quiet, and does not seem to have intelligence enough to give an explanation of anything he did see.

He does not know the month he was born in. In our interview, which was conducted by Dr. J. R. Donnellan, of Germantown, and myself, we found it quite difficult to get any answers from him, though we rewarded him with all the small change concealed about our respective persons. Samuel Stiver, Esq., was also present, and contributed his quota in aid of our laudable efforts. His non-responsiveness we attributed to his bashfulness, and to the fact that he had repeated his story until he had got sick of telling it. His mother was also present. He was not sworn, because he does not know the nature of an oath.

We squeezed the following out of him:

That he saw a "thing," that is, only its head, which was white and black spotted. It disappeared in the milk-trough; it was a muskrat, saw keg of potatoes in the cellar fall over while he was standing on steps; from his description of distance he must have been seven or eight feet off. Saturday afternoon he was hit three times by potatoes thrown at his head. Sunday afternoon the baby he was rocking in the porch, was hit with a clod thrown from the kitchen, no one being there at the time. Saturday afternoon he saw the two stones fall or slip off while lying on bread-board, from his description given to twelve to fifteen feet off. Sunday evening saw the two guns move about twelve inches, he was about eight feet off. Also Sunday evening, while in bed, saw the sweet potato-box in his room turn upside down; it was half dark in the room; also heard the brooms fall, and a shoe, and felt the bed moving, slipped out and the bed fell over on one side; nothing fell out; he set it up again by propping himself and then pushing it over; he did not go down stairs then for fear of a scolding.

This was when Samuel Stiver, jr., and his wife came into his room, on Sunday night.

At Samuel Silver's house he saw the bucket of water fall, pie-dish and crock.

His mother says he has always told the same story.

The boy's interview was not satisfactory by any means, so far as getting any additional light, and from the fact that what was said by him, was obtained in the nature of a cross examination. Yet enough is shown, I think, to prove that "the boy Pontius" is not the voluntary doer of the wonderful things described.

Your correspondent has only sought to furnish you the facts as nearly as he can, with some necessary description of the people and the locality. He, of course, has no theory on the subject as yet. He will let others speculate, reserving the privilege of criticising their theories in the light of facts. This is good business in hot weather, in a quiet town, when a fellow has n't anything else to do. W. M. A.

A Christian Fire.

The beautiful Spiritualist Hall at Ashley, Ohio, built about two years ago, being among the results of our "missionary labors," has been burnt to the ground. Enough has been discovered to convince our friends there that the foul deed was caused by CHRISTIAN HATE AND MALICE AGAINST SPIRITUALISM. It was set on fire about one o'clock at night, and their Lyceum Equipments, Library and an Organ loaned to the Society by Bro. W. Granger, Conductor, were all destroyed.

Spiritualists of Ohio and the world! This is not a blow at the Spiritualists of Ashley alone. IT IS A BLOW AT SPIRITUALISM! Let us meet it as such. The building was insured for enough to pay the debt on it and save the LOT. It is desired to put another Hall (of brick) upon the same site—at once. The Spiritualists of Ashley are not numerous, but they are faithful and full of courage. They have $600 pledged already, to build another Hall. We ask Spiritualists to aid them. If every Spiritualist in Ohio would contribute TEN CENTS EACH, it would BUILD THE HALL.

Send in your contributions at once and let the Hall be built before snow falls again. Any contributions for this purpose sent to W. Granger, Ashley, Ohio, or to A. Wheelock, care of AMERICAN SPIRITUALIST, will be promptly acknowledged and the amount and names of the contributors published in this journal. No matter how great or small the amount—the widow's mite is needed. Send it on at once.

A. A. WHEELOCK.

The Twin Suffragists.

The Golden Age for July 1st, under the title of "A Legend of Good Women," gives short sketches of some of the advocates of woman's rights. The following paragraph will doubtless be relished by our readers:

"Elizabeth Cady Stanton, or, as she is sometimes called, Susan B. Anthony, is a celebrated lady with snow-white and auburn hair, plump and slender figure, Grecian and Roman nose, and lives simultaneously in two houses—one at Tenafly, N. J., and the other at Rochester, N. Y. Indeed, Mrs. Stanton, or, to call by her maiden name, Miss Anthony, is a ubiquitous personage, and not only attends all the woman's meetings wherever they are held, but also has been known on certain occasions to be writing the resolutions, and at the self same moment to be delivering the speech, in their support. It has been sometimes suspected that Mrs. Stanton and Miss Anthony are two distinct persons, united by a cartilage like the Siamese twins, but in the absence of any medical or other scientific proof of this hypothesis, I remain of the opinion that, like Liberty and Union, they are one and inseparable."

The Rostrum.

SACRIFICES.

Lecture Delivered by Samuel Underhill, M. D., at the Franklin Grove Meeting, held June 24 h and 25th.

[Reported expressly for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.]

Friends and Fellow Citizens: The subj ct on which I am led to address you is one practiced by most nations, if not all, as a method of atoning for sin, and securing the favor of God—to wit: the offering of burnt offerings and sacrifices. It will offend some of you, and I expect it will make some of you leave the house. Yet I desire you to lay aside your prejudices and candidly hear me.

Let us consider the whole duty of man in a nutshell. What does the Lord thy G d require of man but to do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with God? "In every nation (s Peter said at the house of Cornelius) they that fear G d and work righteousness are accepted with him." Had he been more enlightened, he would have said love instead of fear. Belief is not subject to the control of the will, and we are not judged by it; we are judged by our works.

"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." "For I was hungry and ye fed me, naked and ye clothed me, a stranger and ye took me in, sick and in prison, and ye visited me."

Such deeds, no matter of what nation, creed, or belief, are accepted of God. Peter was astonished when he perceived it, and nearly all sectarians seem to think certain beliefs are essential to salvation. Wrong belief is a great misfortune, but never a crime. And the most injurious and unfortunate belief is to believe that most of the human race will be damned for wrong belief, or for not believing certain writings or to the story of certain persons.

With these preliminary remarks I will call your attention to my subject, "Burnt Offerings." Bible history informs us that Cain and Abel, Abraham and Moses, the Jews, until the destruction of Jerusalem, and the Catholics even now, offered and offer sacrifices to atone for sin, to appease the wrath, and win the favor and protection of God. Protestants mostly offer some and prayers as sacrifices and depend upon them for salvation. I recognize the whole system entirely a matter of human invention and revelation never required or commanded by God.

Now let me call your attention to the book by which all their secular and religious movements ought to be regulated.

Jeremiah 7: 21 22 23. 21st verse: "Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the G d of Israel, Put your burnt offerings to your sacrifices and eat flesh." 23d verse: "For I spake not unto your fathers, nor commanded them, in the day I brought them out of the land of Egypt concerning burnt offerings or sacrifices." 23d: "But this one thing I said, Obey my voice, and I will be w ur God and ye shall be my people."

Does not this look reasonable? See the 1st chapter of Isaiah, how he, the mouth of the prophets he heeds at their sacrifices, and tells them to bring no more vain oblations. And then he tells them what to do to make themselves acceptable to him: Cease to do evil, learn to do well, plead for the fatherless, judge the widow, relieve the oppressed, put away the evil of your doings.

"Though your sins be as scarlet they shall be white as wool; though they be as crimson, they shall be as snow." How rational this seems! No wonder he prefaces this with, "Come, let us reason together."

See the 40 h Psalm, by which I understand that God never had any pleasure in sacrifices, but that he has given every one a body in which to do the will of G d. Some refer all this to Christ, but it seems plain that it means everybody else as well as Jesus. Paul had been brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, and deeply imbued with the traditions of Moses; and he acted upon the murder of Jesus as a culmination of the law and the end of animal sacrifices.

Turn back your attention with me to the early history of sacrifices. How did they begin? As God, it seems, never commanded them, let us see if we cannot get at their origin. When the weak and poor sought aid from the rich and mighty, it was found that after dinner was the best time to go, as they appeared to be in the best humor at that time. It was policy, then, to send something nice to make a dinner of—one kid or a lamb,—the nicer the better,—without spot or blemish. Now, when they thought of a God, it was probably believed that it was the sun, and as we will not be able to put the lamb in his kitchen, let us send up a smoke from the fat mixed with myrrh, cinnamon, and other fragrant aromas, into his nostrils, and thus please him. If G d had only preferred Cain's fruits to a butchered lamb, it would have been better for the human race; but the writers make G d prefer the murdered lamb, and the result was the first murder on record.

If G d is believed to like best a spotless lamb would not he like one of my children better? And thus began human sacrifices.

Did Jesus ever assert that men were to escape the consequences of their wrong doing because his death was a atone for their ill deeds? Did he ever set forth that any course short of ceasing to d evil and learning to do well, would insure future or present happiness. Truly, the Christ-ry wisdom or holy unction, or truth and right unites, alone can make us happy. The word "Christ" was no surname. It was the same as our word "annointed;" Jesus the annointed,—inpointed to preach the gospel. It means Spiritual influence. Paul called it the wisdom of G d and power of God. In this sense, out of Christ there is no salvation. The Jews could see Jesus, but they could not see Christ. Hear Jesus to his disciples: "The world knoweth me not and seeth me not, but ye see me and know me." The spirit only can reveal the savior to us; hence Paul says: "No man can say Jesus is the Christ but by the Holy Spirit,"—or Ghost, which is the same thing. We call Jesus our elder brother. If Jesus is a God, then his example is no example for Gods —not for men. If he is part God and part man, he is only an example for similar beings—not for pure humans. If he was a man, then he was a glorious example; but to reign with him, we must walk in his footsteps. What are his footsteps? We must follow him in the regeneration or unfolding of the spiritual life if we would reign with him. We must become Christ's, as he prayed that we might be one with him; as Paul says, "heirs to God and joint heirs with Jesus—the anointed." All truly anointed teachers come to turn you from your sins, and not to save you in your sins. Listen to a parable.

A mercantile firm named Justice, Mercy, & Love, found all their customers without money, and owing to debt a thousand dollars; plenty of goods on hand, but not a customer. Now a person of great influence had led these poor customers into habits of extravagance, through which they had spent all their money, and got them deeply in debt. He (this powerful person) was a great accountant in this firm, and knowing that the law and the creditors must either pay their debts or go to jail forever, he gloated over them, and made decision of the firm, more especially as these poor creditors were the children of this firm. The firm was powerful—had plenty of money—did not like to be laughed at; but Justice saw no way of relief. All wanted to let the poor debtors off if it could be done without disgracing the firm. Mercy says to Justice, "Suppose we take this course and show Mr. Sin—, the powerful antagonist, that we can get out of this fix that he has got us in. Scrape the creditors, make the demand, and I will take the key of our safe and unlock our boundless treasury, and draw out funds and pay the debt of each one and Love shall have a bag of coin, and freely give each one a handfull of money to begin trade with, and thus we will outwit our enemy, and raise an army to put him down. Thus the matter was arranged, and the creditors made scrape and scrape the praises of the firm. But there arose certain Spiritualists, and said, "Why all this ceremony? Is it unjust to forgive? We can with pleasure forgive persons who have done us wrong if they sincerely repent of the wrong and make restitution to the extent of their power. It is the devil's who can't forgive, but must have blood."

Here the demands of Justice is satisfied by having money to hand out of his own pocket and paid to him. Mercy has done a fine thing and Love has gone further. How beautiful, how lovely, how ridiculous! Are we better than God? for we can forgive and not disgrace ourselves. Hear another parable.

A father had twelve sons whom he loved, and moved by love, he gave them rules of conduct by which if obeyed would make them healthy in body and happy in mind, and secure the father's blessing. They go forth; but these seducing spirits get control, and of the whole twelve eleven violate these laws, and in so doing injure their health. Now these laws ordain that after a series of years these sons should come before their father to be interviewed, and if they had violated the laws, each should take fifty lashes with the cat-of-nine-tails. But on their coming, he perceives that they cannot bear the lashes. But he must lay them on somebody. What shall he do? Well, there is one who has kept the laws; of course has good vigorous health. To him he had promised favors and smiles, but in this difficult case he accepts the tender of this good one to take all the lashes, and who accepts the offer and does this faithful one, and now he lets the guilty go free. Query: among the eleven guilty ones, is there a meaner one than the father?

These parables illustrate and explode the doctrine of sacrifices, of vicarious atonement. What a G d it would be, who, after having all the demands fully paid, is so hard hearted, that his own servant, equal, most, after paying our debt, sit at his right hand pleading cruelly to have him forgive us. One thing is clear to me, if a man or woman, though they may fear, never can love such a God. I worship no such God. The God I worship is kind to the unthankful and the evil, and sends his rain and sunshine on the just and unjust. Spiritualism wipes away the foul blots upon the character of the All-Father, who has no pleasure in burnt offerings or sacrifices. The sun scorches vegetables that are in poor soil and uncultivated, and the spiritual sun does the same to minds in bad organizations. What gives vigor to one, gives pain to another condition, and the tendency of life is to rouse the sluggish spirit to action. God is love, and they that dwell in pure love, dwell in God and God in them. "If a man says that he loves God, and at the same time hates his brother, he is a liar."

Now in conclusion, I defy you to find in the Bible, where God has commanded sacrifices. I do not know that you can not find it, but I think you can not. But if you find it, you will be in a pretty fix for you have to believe that you have found a lie or have proved Jeremiah a liar and false prophet. It is a dilemma with two horns—choose which you will, if you find such a command.

I admit that they were extensively practiced; that the Jews considered that G d had instituted them—I admit that. Paul, the disciple of Gamaliel, who made himself all things to all men in feeding babes milk, as he called it, built on these practices, but as he said of water baptism, "He was not sent to immerse or baptize"—did it without being commissioned to do it, but only as he circumcised Timothy—although he said that if a man be circumcised, desire shall profit him nothing at all.

Paul tells us that he will leave various matters to which he refers, and come to revelations or visions experienced by himself, by which he implies, as being beyond all his other experiences, and now he relates how he was entranced, and carried into the third heaven, and heard things that he was not permitted to relate. Well, Paul, such trances are with Spiritualists in this day, and so we believe the statement you make.

And, now, my friends, hear this word of advice. Live pure lives, labor for the advancement of your fellow-beings, seek daily for the bread of life, and burn no incense to orthodoxy; offer no offering to God but willing hearts, consecrated to the service, and for the advancement of your fellow-beings.

We believe that inspired men wrote in ancient times, because we know many that do now. Orthodoxy believes it possible, because their grandmothers say so. We believe that the early Christians healed by laying on of hands, because we Spiritualists do now.

Among the astounding spiritual manifestations, that which Spiritualists believe, and the orthodoxy don't, is the following:

A Mr. Stone, out eastward from here, had been about healing, and preaching Spiritualism. Some bigots or Pharisees had him arrested, as many would like to have me imprisoned. They were afraid of him, and put him in irons. Well, his friends went and in a circle, praying for his release, and in the night, spirit influence came upon the jail, and took off his chains, and threw open the door, and set him into the street. He went to the house where the circle was, and they were astonished.

Now you don't believe this do you, Mr. Meisters, Mr. Orthodox Methodist, Mr. Presbyterian? Well, I guessed you would not believe it. His name was Cephas Stone, I think. The place was Jerusalem, and sometimes they called him PETER. Now, you believe, do you? Well, you don't, though you may think you do. You reject hundreds of cases, when you might witness them, or when stated by others, you might cross-examine the witnesses, and here you think you believe, when you don't know who wrote the story, and can not cross-examine the testimony. Do you believe that after Philip baptized the Ethiopian eunuch, that the spirits took him up and carried him through the air to Azotus? You don't believe it, but Spiritualists look upon it as probable,—believe it possible, being in harmony with what has been experienced by them.

When you are filled with spirit influence, and feel love to all sentient beings, and desire that all may be happy, dare to trust that spirit—it is from above. If some of our bitter opponents keep full of bitterness toward us after they leave this body, and come back to us with ill will, it will be easily recognized by them as the deadly, sour influences they will produce in us. We shall regret them, and drive them away. May they repent soon. Let spirits visit and comfort you.

—As a being endowed with the capacity to love, enjoy and suffer immortality, man is preeminently great; as an object of worship, contemptibly small.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

A Sermon delivered at the Hope Church, April 15th, 1871, By Rev. J. H. Barnes, of Snowville, Va.

The world has denounced and condemned man as a great sinner against God. It is true there have been liars, thieves, robbers and murderers, in all ages, all over the world. The cause has been traced back to an old devil or satan, otherwise, a supernatural power, invisible to human eyes; Milton's fallen angel, etc.

I propose to show to you to-day, in the gospel sermon I am about to deliver, the true, literal, and tangible cause of sin,—why man is a sinner, how long he will remain a sinner, and what can be done that he may rise superior to all sin and impurity.

My text shall be on this occasion. "Howbeit, that was not spiritual which was first, but that which was natural afterwards, that which was spiritual."

In studying nature, we find everything to have come by a law of development and unfolding, from a lower, to a higher state of existence. Examine the writings of all authors upon geology; they will show the gradual operation of this law of development, from chaotic condition, up to life, in all her various modes of existence. The life, and we always find her in the lower forms first, gradually working onward, and upward to higher, and yet higher forms of existence. I care not where you begin, in vegetable, animal, or human life, it is still the same; the same law of development is there, doing the same work of unfolding and progressing. Now, for my bible proofs: The Levitical law was addressed to man, as an animal being, nothing more; every reward, and every curse, was here, in this life to the physical body alone;—corn and wine, milk and honey, to gratify the senses; sword, famine, pestilence, and Egyptian plagues for the body in case of disobedience.

On, on, age after age, the people learn a little that does them good. The people to improve, and rise in their conceptions of God and humanity. Take Isaiah; compare him and his God together with the religion, which was one of justice, goodness, etc; compare them, I say to Moses, his God, and his religion, and mark Isaiah's sharp rebuke to the extortioners and cruel worshippers of Moses' God.—Then tell me, was not Isaiah far more developed and improved than Moses?

Ezekiel was a clairvoyant; he saw the inside of things; a wheel within a wheel, and saw visions beyond the body, and its five senses. Daniel was a regular Spiritualist of our date; he read strange writing upon the wall, that no one else could read; he told the king his dream, and the interpretation thereof, that none except spiritual mediums can do.

Follow on, age after age, to Jesus, and compare his preaching of the old; follow yet along, age after age, to the present day, and have we not sufficient proof of the law of development that God has written everywhere? The infant, at first, has nothing but instinct; then animal passions, observation, affection or love; lastly intellect and spiritual unfoldings.

Man has forty-two elements of mind, or in phrenological language, forty-two organs on his head; they are all good of themselves, every one of them, and when rightly used, confer happiness upon himself and good to his fellows. The animal, which is first developed, inspire him with energy, and give force to character, to take up and carry out the business of life; without the combative and destructive element, nothing could or would be done; nothing whatever; a lazy set of shiftless drones; no doing business; no making money, no building houses, no agriculture, no commerce; nothing whatever; a perfect blank.

Next, intellect, to calculate, guide and direct, what would life be? Gross animal, sensual barbarism, nothing more. Without the social and affectional elements to love, bring together and make the family, the community, the state and government, what should be our condition? Again, without the religious element, or the organs of benevolence, veneration, conscientiousness, hope and spirituality, we should not be religious beings. The bible cannot make any one religious, kind-hearted, just or prayerful; all this grows out of the use of the moral faculties of our nature; and all these faculties acting together in harmony one with another, will make us holy, just and pure saints upon the earth, and prepare us for the higher and purer spiritual spheres above and beyond.

Now, for sin, and the cause of sin. It was not old Adams, nor old Eves, that made us sinners, neither was it an old suffocked, rob illious Israel that crucified Jesus, but it is you; every one of you, who has ever perverted or abused your own nature. Asking God to bless the food on your table, then get mad, and dispute, is a sin; or in any case to allow your temper to get the mastery over you, either by word or deed is a sin. Eating to excess, as hundreds do, is a sin, because it destroys the tone of the stomach, and induces disease. The chewing of tobacco or smoking, is a sin, because nature does not demand nor causes the dirty weed, anymore than she craves the poisonous cups;—all these are and from the abuse of nature. Whatever perverts and abuses nature is sinful. Now think of yourselves, and calculate on your own sins and the cause of them; depend upon it, you will be a sinner just as long as you pervert nature.

Believe in Jesus Christ will not save you, neither will the only ordinances of baptism effect your salvation. Partaking of the broken body, and the shed blood (bread and wine) as an ordinance, makes the matter no better at all.

Live true to yourself your God, and all humanity, this, and this alone will save you. Amen.

Letter from J. W. Kellogg.

Bro. Jones:—Thinking, perhaps you would like to know something of Spiritualism in this locality, I have deemed it proper to send you a few lines relative thereto.

There is a liberal element springing up here, that neither heeds the groans, sneers, or maledictions of gouty old orthodoxy, or trembles at his phantoms, but insists that reason, that most precious gift of Nature, is not given them as a snare, but for their utility and development.

About eighty Spiritualists met near Mt. Moriah, on the Fourth of July last, at the residence of Judge Carpenter,—a whole-souled, wide-awake man, and a firm believer in the "everlasting gospel,—and celebrated the day in a social and friendly manner.

Mr. Dickerson, of Bethany, became entranced, and gave us a couple of lectures, that elicited much thought, and were well worth heeding.

I was requested by those present to give notice through the JOURNAL that there will be a three day's meeting of Spiritualists held at Bethany, in this County, commencing on the 29th of September, and closing on Sunday, October 1st. Good speakers are expected to be present. Any speakers however, that could conveniently, and would make this meeting a point, would confer a favor on the Spiritualists here, and perhaps in the end, some others.

Mt. Moriah, Mo., July 17, 1871.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

THE NEW FORCE—NERVE ATMOSPHERE.

By Wm. B. Fahnestock.

It is rather amusing to see the miserable shifts that celebrated scientists and theologians resort to—to avoid the truth, and it would seem that any other theory than the true, and only common sense one, is adopted by them, rather than they would admit that disembodied spirits have power through the finite matter escaping from mediums (being in a somnambulic condition) to produce the various phenomena that are daily exhibited through them.

Mr. Crooks, and Mr. Sergeant Cox seem to think that the experiments made through the mediumship of Mr. Home, prove that there is a peculiar force which they call "psychic" proceeding directly from the nervous system of specially constituted persons, or is the "nerve atmosphere" supposed to have been discovered by Dr. Richardson.

They all seem to be in a quandary, and cannot decide whether the cause of the phenomena which were exhibited ought to be ascribed to the organism of the medium, the power of the will, nervous sensibility or to a "nerve atmosphere," which some one has supposed surrounds the earth, and which vibrates with the shock of mind, as the air does with sound. These are simply ideas advanced without proof, explanation or demonstration, and are worth no more than idle words, so far as the truth is concerned.

Spirit power solves many of these knotty questions, and as darkness, matter and space do not bar it, there can be no spirit impressions, or the powers of the somnambulist, all the mysterious problems occuring are easily solved.

But scientists and bigoted minds ask, how is this effected? I answer, that the supposed "nerve atmosphere" is simply the finite matter eliminated from, and peculiar in all persons, as well as in mediums.

This finite substance, being physical matter, spirits convert into semi-physical hands, etc., which can be seen by clairvoyants, and are used by spirits to move physical bodies, depress levers or to support and play musical instruments etc. But still further to explain, I must add, that to produce these effects, the medium or certain portions of his body must be in a somnambulic, trance or statuvolic condition, all being the same state, differing only in name or degree.

It must be remembered also, that when mediums are in this peculiar condition, and not under spirit control, that their powers of sight, hearing, taste, smell and feeling etc., are more sensitive, powerful and far reaching, than when in a normal condition, and that it is then possible for them to see and know (by the inherent power of their faculties) things that may be transpiring at a distance, as well as near by,—and that their power to do this supersedes the necessity of a "nerve atmosphere," a sympathy, or magnetic current of any kind, and being his own master, is master of his own will.

It is, therefore, evident, that the phenomena exhibited through the mediumship of Mr. Home, were the result of spirit power, and that premonition, and foreknowledge etc., are often the result of the subject power as well as of spirit impression.

It is, therefore, folly to ascribe these results to anything outside of these powers, which can only be exercised by spirits, and subjects, when subjects are in a somnambulic or statuvolic condition.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

E. V. Wilson in Southwest Missouri.

We, the Spiritualists of Southwest Missouri, have been highly entertained by a series of lectures from our noble and indefatigable worker in the field of reform, Brother E. V. Wilson. We had the pleasure of hearing his lectures, both in Springfield and in this place, and we feel assured he has given the cause quite an impetus in the forward march for freedom and truth. Many of the friends came from surrounding towns, to attend the whole course of lectures, and both friends and skeptics were deeply interested in his lectures and tests. A few, however, I understand, came with the express intention of denying every test or communication given them, whether true or false, and it seems they keep their word, as some did deny statements that were afterward proven to be true. Others who dared not deny what was given them, very magnanimously accused the Spiritualists of "acting the spy," and keeping Wilson posted, that he might deal out the scores of correct communications he gave to them, second-handed. Such statements speak for themselves, and prove the narrow, contractedness of those who made them.

The challenge was given by Wilson, for any clergyman to meet him in open discussion before the people. One presented himself when he knew that it would be too late to accept; then did exactly what we anticipated he would do, reported, and challenged Wilson for a discussion, and that he refused; then, after he had gone, very cowardly came out in an abusive and slanderous lecture against Wilson, Spiritualism and its advocates, styling them "children of the Devil," "Free-lovelites," etc. No doubt he vainly imagines he has destroyed and buried Wilson and Spiritualism in this place by one full scoop of his mighty arm, but it seems we "still live," and I am of the humble opinion that if he attempts to bury the Spiritualists of this, or any other place, he will find, to his great dismay, that he has very lively corpses to deal with.

The same ungallant course was resorted to in Springfield, as well as here, in the absence of both Wilson and Fishback; and almost invariably will you find this the case wherever you go; the clergy dare not come out in open discussion with such brave advocates of the cause of truth.

One of the elect of Springfield, after publicly abusing Spiritualists, and classing all the female portion of them among the lowest of degraded human beings, very wisely considered "discretion the better part of valor," and made it convenient to leave the city just before Wilson arrived there, thinking, no doubt, it were best to "run away," that he might "live to fight another day."

It is quite evident, that the clergy, as well as many of their people, are becoming quite alarmed at the rapid increase of Spiritualism in their midst, and are using every means in their power, even to circulating the basest of falsehoods, to attempt to crush out this growing power which threatens the final destruction of ignorance and error.

Truth is mighty and will prevail," and the more you oppose and falsely accuse us, Mr. Clergy, the more certain will be your own destruction, and the final success of the "poor deluded sinners" you vainly hope to crush out of existence.

Send us more Wilsons and Fishbacks, and may truth in the good cause continue to spread in the future, as in the past.

Yours for the truth,

JULIA A. H. COLBY.

Marshfield, Mo.

Letter from Eliza M. Hobart.

Brother Jones:—Please find three dollars, for the JOURNAL for one year, to Eliza M Hobart. I like the JOURNAL more and more; can not tell you how much. To illustrate, I will relate an incident:

One day I wanted a clean paper to do something up, to lay by through the summer, but finding nothing, thought I would take an old JOURNAL. Went to the closet where I keep all I have not given away or sent off, and began to look one over before I would use it; found so much good in that one, could n't think of using it. Tried another, with same result. Finally, after lo king over five, I abandoned the idea, and took some old cloth to make my bag of.

This also reminds me of an incident which occurred more than twenty years ago, at Clinton, Massachusetts.

A gentleman was walking in his garden one fine, bright morning in summer. A bob-o-link on one of the trees poured forth his gushing song. A little boy, five or six years old, was also out. His ear and eye soon discovered the bird's presence. He stooped, picked up a stone, whirled his arm around, when suddenly his arm stopped and hung apparently powerless by his side—the little fingers relaxed their hold, the stone slipped from his fingers, and B was safe. The gentleman, unobserved hitherto by the boy, now spoke.

"Boy, why didn't you stone him?"

"Could n't, cos he sung so," was the child's reply.

I have often thought of that answer. To me it speaks much of the spirit of the child,—the power of harmony. The boy, I know not what became of him. Perhaps he 's dwelt in our late war. I only hope that sweet influence never died out within him.

Well, if "time is money," I am using too much of yours, and will soon find a stopping place.

I often see notes from poor delinquents, asking for time to meet their dues. So many have I read, that I am reminded of two words, "The poor ye have always have with ye." Now I think if every subscriber, when sending their dues to you, would add a little, to help you meet the demands which must be met, and let the poor have the gospel, it would ease you much, and comfort more, to say nothing of the "Well done" in their own souls. I inclose fifty cents for that purpose.

East Pepperell, Mass., July 26, 1871.

THE QUESTION.

By J. O. Barrett.

"To be or not to be?"—Shakespeare.

On the green earth I lie, so soft, so still. I am in a great deep of thought.

Whisper to me, sweet grass! Sing to me, babbling brooks! Kiss me, clustering vine, hugging the rock's solid breast! Fill the care-rifts on my brow with golden dust, oh, sun ray!

Delay not, for you bless me only for an hour, and are gone!

The water dries up, the mountain crumbles, the sea recedes—and I?

Nature clothes herself so beautiful, then dies—and I?

Never the same stream flows, nor the same flower or blossoms, nor the same wave undulates on the lake. Thus come, then that; then what?

I am living in a vast sepulchre—on the decay of buried cities, once populous, now silent; walking with death that ever lives to die! And what is my fate?

I was an infant once, a youth of age now, and growing old! Will thou approach nearer, oh, Death, that I may know these better?

I slay death every day, but every conquest hardens the shield of this body to fasten the easier.

Is there no spot outside this ruin where I may stand—the master?

Who owns me to divide me so—this inheritance of self?

O unseen world, you seem to love me best! Ye weave me up, and unweave!

The summer fades, the star sets, the pearly dew vanishes; is this my destiny to be understood?

Let me change places with this broken rock; is not this the order? A thousand years old, a million; an eternity? Then why not I? Am I not your equal?

But why a past or future where I can know nothing? Why confine me to the last half of the nineteenth century? Where is thy justice, O Divine justice, in instituting a blank where I never was, or can be?

Waking this morning I was conscious of yesterday, and hence another yesterday, and so on, days, weeks, months, years; and is there any end to the life-circle?

The form of my friend is dead—cold—pulseless! The eye is glazed, the brain is still, and a sweet smile plays on the pale face!

"I came down from heaven," says Jesus. So did a sunbeam. And why not my friend, why not I; and ascend in the upward arc of life? We brothers, Jesus, the sunbeam, and I?

Letter from Geo. C. Armstrong.

Bro Jones:—The JOURNAL is liked here by all who are free enough to read and think for themselves, and it is doing a good work among such.

Let Spiritualists everywhere scatter among the people, the spiritual literature, for each crumb serves to satisfy the soul's hungering for the bread of life, which cannot be found in the popular religions of the day, by those who are sufficiently developed mentally, to be guided by reason rather than prejudice, or public opinion.

Spiritualism is slowly but surely progressing here, though our orthodox friends, who have been born of the "spirit," and endowed with the "Holy Ghost," are constantly raving, trying to prove that spiritualism is all "trickery," or "electricity," or "animal magnetism," or the "devil," or something else—anything but spirits—it can't be spirits; and some of those who are thus engaged, trying to rob man of his only hope of immortality, and who, I suppose, speak as they are "moved by the Holy Ghost," looking into the future, think they see the downfall of Spiritualism within ten years.

How little they know of the extent and magnitude of Modern Spiritualism; of the many minds, among whom are great divines, who are daily leaving the dark, cold prison houses of old theology, and coming out to bask in the bright sunlight of Spiritualism. Neither do they know of the increasing development of new mediums, and new phases of mediumship, bringing the angel world nearer each day, and if Spiritualism progresses for the next ten years as it has in the last, these revered prophets will have much more to do than they have now, to keep it from undermining their religion.

Milford, Ill., Aug. 1, 1870.

—"The best government is that which governs least"—compatible with the public order.

—All the world's a school, with infinite gradations among the lear ners.

—He who asks nature to become his teacher, must, if he would learn anything worth the while, go to her in the spirit of a little child.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

POETICALS.

Communication by J. O. Barrett.

The following poetry set to music was sent me by the author, not with wishes for publication, but with a plea in her sweet soul for encouragement. It is really pretty, and the music charming as the notes of a lark. I think you will like to publish it.

MAKE HOME HAPPY.

What if the outside sea of life
Sh-uld sometimes toss and boil and foam,
And t-em with angry tempests rise,
There should be peace at home.
Toiling, boiling, rushing, crushing,
Let the great world toss;
But keep the strife of outside life
Away from heart and home.

CHORUS—Make home happy, make home happy,
Brothers, sisters dear;
Make home happy, make home happy,
Make a heaven here.

What if Mo her Grundy frowns?
We do n't belong to her;
I was not made to be her slave,
Nor y-t her baking car;
And let them say waste of they may,
And the great world toss;
But keep the strife of social life
Away from heart and home.

What if a brother poor and weak
Should stumble in the path,—
Why you are there to help him,
A word of sorrow calm.
Oh, don't speak rough, you've love enough,
And you shall word to give
T that poor child of sorrow wild,
And you will rejoice love.

Oh, there are times to every heart
When all looks dark and drear,
But if you use no more to us
With words of hope and cheer,
Oh, how the light break through the night,
As from he heaven it comes;
Now to the st ife of outside life
Can mar the peace at home.

—Miss Nettie Hazeltine.

THE SOUL'S LONGING.

Oh, the wild tempestuous struggle
Of the soul to see the light,
Oh, the strong, the speechless longing
To understand and do the right!
And still I mused and sat in darkness
In this darkest dismal maze,—
Sit here like a blighted wild rose
That has never known but daylight.

Oh, this reaching after something,—
What, the spirit cannot tell:
Something good and great and noble,
That would calm my pulse so still.
Then I seem to hear sweet music,
In a great inspiring swell,
And my soul is wafted upward
To the land whose angels dwell.

Ibid.

Back Creek, Wis.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

SPIRIT PICTURES.

A Brief Statement of what I did, and Saw as an Artist.

Wishing to satisfy myself in regard to the so-called spirit pictures, I called in Mr D herty's Photographic Rooms, and after making five or six sittings, Mr. B nam being the subject, an image—quite plain, appeared on the plate. Mr. D herty did nothing except stand by the camera and place his hands upon it while the exposure was being made. He did not even go into the dark room with me at any time while the work was being done. I did the work myself and alone. Before doing anything, I made a thorough examination of plates and chemicals, and everything used in the business, and am satisfied that no deception in any way had been used to obtain the effect as above stated.

GEORGE WILSON.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 15th, 1871.

From the Indianapolis Sentinel.

There is considerable excitement among the photographers of the city over the result of the test made at D herty's gallery last week in the "spirit picture" business. For several weeks past he has been getting such pictures, many of which are recognized by the sitters. Entire strangers come from other States and get pictures of some of their dead relatives, and generally go away satisfied. One wishing such a picture has nothing to do but sit as for any ordinary photograph, and the artist apparently manipulates as in taking an ordinary picture, except that during the exposure of the plate to the light he holds his open hand over the camera. Artists from other places have done all the work themselves—D herty holding his hand over the camera—with results as above indicated. Some gentlemen recently, objecting on the subject, selected Mr. George Wilson, artist at 38½ East Washington street, to test this matter for them. Mr. Wilson, being experienced in the photographic business in all departments, except spiritual, his known character for honesty, and his outspoken opposition to Spiritualism, were some of the reasons why he was selected to make the test.

He made a thorough examination of the rooms—camera, tablets, plates, bath fluids, etc, and was entirely satisfied that there was nothing in or about them different from ordinary photographic rooms and instruments. He then excluded Mr D. from the dark room and allowed him to touch nothing connected with the operation during the entire test.

Mr. W. then seated the sitter, focused the camera, took new plates from the box just as they came from Crapo's—the furnisher of such goods—prepared them alone in the dark room, put them in the tablet, then into the camera and made the exposure, and then developed the same, and after a few trials was astonished to find a so-called "spirit picture" on the last plate. He went through the entire formula himself, and is as much at a loss to account for the result as any one.

Here is an opportunity for some scientists of the convention that meets here this month to distinguish themselves and give a true solution of these mysteries. Professor Crookes, the chemist, and Dr. Huggins, the astronomer, members of the Royal Society of London, are investigating the so-called spiritual phenomena, as exhibited by Daniel D. Home, in England, and have announced over the ocean cable that they have discovered a "new force;" a "nerve atmosphere of more or less density" surrounding almost every person, and mediums particularly, and that the phenomena are worthy of a scientific investigation. We await the result of their examinations, fully assured that some light will at last be let into this whole subject, and a correct explanation, based upon entirely natural causes, be given to the various phases of Spiritualism so called.

From the Covenant (O.) Chief.

ANOTHER "SPIRIT PICTURE" ON GLASS.

One of the most singular occurrences we have heard of, is reported of a man upon a widow pane on the north side of a house at Ashtabula Harbor, occupied at present by Mr. Charles Lynn. D B. Geary visited the place on Tuesday, for the purpose of gratifying his curiosity, and reports as follows: "The outlines of this strange picture were first noticed some six weeks ago, gradually being developed itself, on the pane of glass of his visit, the profile was perfect, and the expression of the eye particularly sharp and clear. Mr. Geary states that while looking at it, there seems to be no escape from the stare; get in what position you will, the eye seems to rest upon you with piercing sharpness. The profile represents a man of middle age, very heavy, full beard, with turn-down collar. Some days ago Mr. Lynn sold the sash containing this profile to a gentleman for the sum of $35. Upon being removed from its position in the house no trace of the strange picture could be seen, but upon being replaced, it was as plain to the eye as before. This marvel is attracting people by hundreds, the road to and from the house being constantly thronged with visitors anxious to witness the sight. The Hon B F. Wade and lady are among those who have visited the place. Mr. Geary states that all attempts to wash it off have been without the least effect, although the strongest acids have been applied. The coloring, which is just enough to give character to the image, is of a vari gated smoke, slightly tinged with blue. Here seems to be a nut for naturalists to crack, which, if scientifically done, will relieve great curiosity and much superstition.

A STRANGE PREDICTION.

Letter from L. Stubbel, M. D.

Being a zealous Spiritualist and an ardent admirer of your JOURNAL, I have frequently thought of contributing my mite. I am personally familiar with the facts of the following case, although I was not a Spiritualist for many years after, and hence I now write from my memory only such parts of the story as were the most vividly stamped on my mind. The scene of the occurrence took place in the small town of Bethel, about thirty miles east from Cincinnati, about twenty years ago, or about the time the generality of the slave states passed such a law requiring the free colored population to choose either voluntary slavery by making choice of a master for life, or remove from the confines of slave bounds.

The emigration to Southern Ohio became immense. Among the emigrants who landed in the town of Bethel, were the husband and wife who form the subject of my story. He was a stalwart robust man, although coarse and rough exteriorly, yet possessed of a loving, generous disposition, ever ready to administer to her varied necessities with alacrity and cheerfulness. She was a frail, tender, sensitive, plant; a beautiful blond brunette, highly gifted and accomplished with a good education. Novelty or curiosity, perhaps, soon attracted to her house a large number as visitors, to see what the busy eye could discern. Several months passed away, and this lady evidently seemed to be passing away too, growing thinner and more frail, day by day, although realizing a beauty and loveliness of expression, remarked by all who called to see her. About this time the development of several mediums took place in the town, which made another occasion for the busy tongues of gossips. One of them became the clearest test writing medium, it has ever been my luck to know.

An unusual number of ladies of the town, happening to be paying a visit to the colored woman's house, was requested to be announced to the company present that in two weeks from that day, between the hours of two and three o'clock, P. M., she would die, and she wished them to be present then to witness her final departure from earth and friends. While some made light of her prediction, all regarded everything marvelous, and more the doings and sayings of a spirit than an earthly woman. Doors were attracted by the matter, and were unable to detect the least trace of disease. The day came at last for her prophetic demise; the house was thronged with the curious and novel seekers to witness her prediction. Dinner having been despatched and the house put in order, she selected her waiters to assist her in dressing her body for her departure, giving some brief orders for her interment and ceremonies. After being duly dressed for the occasion, with her own hands she arranged the plaits of her dress, then she folded her hands across her breast. It being then a little past two, P. M., she requested the company to all join in singing a favorite hymn of her own selection. While the solemnize was being performed, her spirit left its earthly tenement to join the angel choir. Probably never before nor since has that town been so dosed with the marvelous as on that day and at that death-bed scene. Her last expression of acute ance showed no sam beat.he look as in life. Thus closed the earth-life of an angel bud. The only wish of every good person would be, May our last be like hers. As some future time I would be pleased to relate another death in the same place, whose last hours and moments were tormented by the horrors of an orthodox hell.

Ollilicothe, Ohio, July 19, 1871.

—The people merely close the splie on election-day, while the politicians cool y stand by and draw from the public barrel through the bung-hole of the nominating convention. Foolish people—sagacious politicians.

THE PSALMS OF LIFE,

A COMPILATION OF

PSALMS
HYMNS, ANTHEMS,
CHANTS,
ETC.,

Embodying the Spiritual, Progressive, and Reformatory Sentiment of the Present Age. By John S. Adams.

This work has been prepared with special reference to the large and increasing demand for a volume expressing the sentiments and views of the advanced minds of the present time and meeting the requirements of every species of Reform. It is entirely free of Sectarianism, of all the theological dogmas of the past and fully recognizes the presence and ministration of Spirit, in every condition of life on earth.

The book contains five hundred and twenty-two choice Selections of Poetry, with suitable music on each page from

Handel, Hadyn, Mozart and Other Distinguished Composers,

It combines the advantage of "Hymn" and "Tune" Book. It is prefaced with a Classification of Subjects, and Complete Indexes of First Lines, Tunes and Metres; and being of convenient size, is generally accepted as the Standard Music Book of Spiritualism, Radicalism and General Reform.

alike desirable for the LECTURE-ROOM and the HOMES OF THE PEOPLE.

"I think there is in the book a greater proportion—so I think I ought to say a greater number—of beautiful and truly spiritual poetry than in any other collection I have seen, whatever the size of the volume."

Rev. John Pierpont.

PRICE:—Paper cover, 50 cents; Postage, 6 cts. Board cover, 75 cents; Postage, 12 cts. Cloth-bound, 90 cents, Postage, 16 cents.

For Sale at the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL BOOK STORE,

187 and 189 South Clark St.,
Chicago, Ill.

v6n19 tf.

ABRIDGED EDITION
OF THE
SPIRITUAL HARP.

PRICE—$2.00. Postage 16 cents. For sale at the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE,

187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

New Books.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.
WITH
Criticisms on its Opposers
AND A REVIEW OF HUMBUGS AND HUMBUGGERS, WITH PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXPERIMENTS IN THE SCIENCE—FULL DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT AS A REMEDY IN DISEASE—HOW TO AVOID ALL DANGER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;

How to develop a good Clairvoyant
THE PHILOSOPHY OF
SEEING WITHOUT EYES.

THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND, BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.

BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D.,
LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.

Price $1.50. Postage 12 cents. The Trade supplied. Address S. S. Jones, Chicago, Ill.

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF
SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY
By Hudson Tuttle.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. PRICE $2.00; Postage 24c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to new hopes and aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.

 Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE BIBLE IN THE BALANCE,

A Book for the Age and the Times,

and one that should be in the hands of every liberal man and woman in the land.

You want it for your own instruction, that you may be furnished with acknowledged authority to meet the arguments of the theologian, historian, chronologist and scientific man with his own weapons.

It discusses the matter of Bible canons, versions, translations and revisions with ability, citing none but authors in the highest repute, and those that are above criticism.

The book is printed in excellent style, 12 mo., on new type and fine paper with beautiful illustrations of the mounds and mound-builders of the Mississippi Valley.

It is substantially bound in cloth and contains three hundred and twenty pages.

The interest felt in the work is so great that orders were received for nearly the whole of the first edition before it was published, one party alone having received orders for over three hundred copies.

Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address: RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE
187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

v6 n26 tf.

THE Science of Evil;
OR
FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.
BY JOEL MOODY.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the PROBLEM, and unveils the MYSTERY of Evil, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be THE LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo., of 349 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 20 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

The Great
MAGNETIC CURE.

DR. E. S. SMITH, NORMAL.

Criticism on the
THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY;

Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.

LIST OF LECTURERS.

[PUBLISHED EVERY OTHER WEEK.]

HEREAFTER we shall keep a standing register of such speakers as are furnished to us at the earliest interests with a pledge on their part that they will keep us correct in regard to changes; and in addition to that, REPAIRS indicate a willingness to add to the circulation of the JOURNAL, by such work as they can.

Let us hear promptly from all who accept this proposition and we will do our part faithfully.

J. Madison Allen, Ancora, N. J.
C. Fannie Allyn, Stoneham, Mass †
Addie L. Ballou Address Chicago, care of RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. *†
B. A. Bailey, 94 Williams, N. Y.†
Dr. J. E. Bailey, box 294 Laporte Ind *‡
Rev. J. O. Barrett, Glen Beulah, Wisconsin.
Mrs. A. P. Brown, Fort Gratiot, Mich.
Dr. J. V. Mansfield, Address Chicago†
Eli F. Brown, Richmond, Ind. ‡
Miss Nettie Maria Pease, Washington St., Chicago.†
Rev. Jabez Brooks, Spring Valley, N. Y.
W. H. Bancroft, Madison, Wis. *
Mrs. S. Bowman, Medford, Minnesota.†
Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Baldwin, Green Bay, Wis.†‡
H. T. Child, M. D., 634 Race St. Philadelphia, Pa.*
Mrs. A. H. Conger Winchester Randolph Co., Ind.†
F. B. Dowd Rockcastle Davenport, Iowa.*
Lewis Cummings Address care of the Journal.*
John Dorsett, Five Corners, N. Y.†
Andrew Jackson Davis, Orange, N. J.
Levi Dickerspiel, Box 229 Decatur, Ill. †
Dan H. Edwards, Outer Creek, Wis. ‡ ⊙
Mrs. M. A. Hills, Indianapolis, Ind. *
Thomas Gales Forster, care Banner of Light, Boston. ⊙
J. M. Peebles, Wyoming, N. Y.†
I. H. Harmon, Richland, Iowa.
Mrs. E. E. Gibson, 12 Burroughs Place, Boston, Mass. ⊙
A. Wilcox, Rockford, Ill.*
Miss Helen Grant, Bloomington, Ill.
Mrs. M. Hayes, Waterloo, Wis.†
Lyman B. Howes, Prescott, Wis. *
Joseph F. Hamilton, Centreville, Iowa.
Thomas Harding, box 301, Sturgeon, Mich.
Samuel S. Haldeman, Goshen, Ind.
U. C. Hamilton, Mount, Wis.*
W. H. Jones, Grand Valley, Wis.⊙
O. H. Johnson, Menomonie, Wis. ⊙
H. H. Haughton, Stowe, Vt. ⊙
L. J. Hay, Ada
Mrs. P. O. Hyzer, Baltimore, M. D.
S. S. Jones, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago. ⊙
Dr. F. F. Johnson Ypsilanti, Mich. *⊙
H. P. Kenney, M. D. Sparta, Wis. ‡
Mrs. M. M. King, Hammonton, N. J.*
L. Lewis, Vergennes Vt.
P. M. Lawrence, Ottumwa, Iowa *⊙
Geo. W. Love Kewaunee, Mich.*
Wm. F. Lyon 208 S. Clark St., Chicago.⊙
O. S. Lent, Pine Island, Minn. ⊙
Mrs. F. A. Logan, Ontwear, Wis.
J. Mansfield, Sweet, Ohio.*‡
J. G. Mack, Waterloo, Wis. ‡
Joel Moody, Mound City, Kansas.
J. S. Mantony Esq., Vancouver, Washington Territory.
Mrs. L. A. Pearsall, Plano, Mich.*
Mrs. L. H. Parkins Kansas City, Mo. ††
Dr. G. Perkins Elmira City, Mo
Harriet E. Pope, Menomonie, Minn.*
Isaac Paden, Woodhull, Ill. ⊙
Thos. S. A. Pope, Mound City, Kansas. ⊙
J. G. Rose Whitewater, Wis. ‡
J. S. Rouse, Casey, Ill.
Mrs. F. A. Rogers, Address in care of A. J. Grover, Rock Island, Ill.*
Samuel Scarlett, Oxford Ill.*
Warren Smith, Alexandria, Madison Co., Ind.
Josiah Sturges, Fairport N. Y.
Mrs. Mary Lamson Strong, Washington, D. C. ⊙
Mrs. J. H. Stillman, Terre Haute, Ind. *†‡
Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith, care of this office, Chicago.†
E. W. Sturdevant, Grand Ledge, Mich. *
W. L. Sherman, Mt. Morris, Ill. *⊙
Mrs. L. A. F. Swain, Union Lakes, Rice Co., Minn.
Mrs. Reynolds, Lawrence, Kansas.†
Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon
Mrs. Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon.*
Mrs. Sarah M. Thompson, Orwell, Ohio. *
M. M. Tuttle, Lake Mills
Mrs. S. A. T. Trego, Oil City, Pa.††
J. B. Tuttle, Jamestown, N. Y.†
Hudson Tuttle, Berlin Heights. *†
Dr. Samuel Underhill, Tonica, Ill.*
J. Willis Van Namee, Kirtland, N. Y.†
Mrs. M. J. W Iverson, Care of Journal, Chicago, Ill.*
J. O. Wetherbee, Jr. Toledo, Ohio. *†‡
R. V. Wilson, Lombard, Ill.†
A. B. Whiting, Albion, Mich.†
Elijah Woodworth, Leslie, Mich.
Dr. E. Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas.

* Inspirational.
† Trance.
‡ Giving tests.
⊙ Locating Missing Friends.
Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

"MODERN AMERICAN SPIRITUALISM,"

A TWENTY YEARS' RECORD
OF THE COMMUNION BETWEEN
EARTH and the WORLD of SPIRITS.

ONE VOLUME, LARGE OCTAVO, SIX HUNDRED PAGES, ENGLISH MUSLIN, BEVELED EDGES, SUPERBLY AND PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED WITH PORTRAITS, Etc., ON STEEL, WOOD IN TINT, LITHOGRAPHY, Etc., Etc.

BY EMMA HARDINGE.

This work has been prepared by the author

Under the Direct Supervision and Guidance of the Spirits, who have inaugurated the movement.

It contains excerpts from rare pamphlets, private journals periodicals now out of print, and various other sources attainable only to the author.

The collection of these records has cost many years of research and labor, and altogether it forms one of the

MOST COMPLETE, ASTOUNDING AND THRILLING HISTORIES, that has ever issued from the press.

The first cost of the work will considerably exceed the sale price which has been fixed by the author, with a view of rendering it attainable to all classes of readers,

SUBSCRIBERS AND THE TRADE SUPPLIED

at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

Address, S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

PRICE $3.75 POSTAGE 44 CENTS.—$4.19

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY.

A SCIENTIFIC AND POPULAR EXPOSITION OF THE FUNDAMENTAL PROBLEMS IN SOCIOLOGY.

BY R. T. TRALL, M.D.

The great interest now being felt in all subject relating to Human Development, will make the book of interest to every one. Besides the information obtained by its perusal, the clearing of the various [illegible] treated in improving and giving a higher direction and value to human life can not be over-estimated.

This work contains the latest and most important discoveries in the Anatomy and Physiology of the Sexes; explains the origin of Human Life; How and when Monstrosities, impregnation and Conception occur; giving the laws by which the number and sex of offspring are controlled; and valuable information in regard to the begetting and rearing of beautiful and healthy children. It is high-toned and should be read by every

This work has rapidly [illegible] demand is constantly [illegible] and valuable Work has ever before been [illegible] press. Price $2, Postage 20c. For sale by the Religio-Philosophical Journal Office, 187, and 189 So. Clark St., Chicago.

HESPERIA:

AN EPIC OF THE PAST AND FUTURE OF AMERICA.

By Mrs. Cora L. V. Tappan.

 PRICE: $1.75; postage, 20 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Health by Good Living.

BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,

Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."

This book is to show how high health can be maintained and common diseases cured by "good living," which means eating with a relish the best food, prepared in the best manner.

The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game fruits, and the genius who makes such good bread.

The best cookery preserves the natural tastes and juices. As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get this great blessing without money and without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down town:" What shall a man do? What shall fat men eat? How to get fat: Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Spring diseases: Children's eating: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' eating: Cold feet and headache: Biliousness: A lazy liver: Mischievous tonics: The out-door air: Why are we dyspeptic? Discomfort after eating: Cold slaw: Certain cure of neuralgia: Nervous debility: Air and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

It tells

How to cure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure biliousness: How to cure nervousness: How to cure exhaustion: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean, How to get good sleep: How to maintain high health, How to avoid disease: And all these without medicine; without money; without price.

It tells about

Luncheons and how to take them: Late dinners and how to take them: How drunkards are made at eating-houses: How girls are spoiled at boarding-schools: How health is lost: How home love is driven away: How restless readers are made: How love of dress is instilled: How young men are talked about: How bad matches are made: How good wives are made at home: How boys rise to influence.

Price $1.50 Postage 16 cents For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Bible in India.
HINDOO ORIGIN OF
Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY L. JUS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the venerable soil of India, was trammeled and stifled by the altar that constituted for intellectual life a semi-truth existence of dreaming impotence.....

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost west has, in unfading testimony of our origin, bequeathed us the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.....

To religious despotism, imposing, speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....

.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I yet shrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

 PRICE $2.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

A REVELATION!!!

of the

EXTRAORDINARY VISITATION
of
DEPARTED SPIRITS!

Of Distinguished Men and Women of all Nations, as Manifested through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers."

The Spirits of WASHINGTON, FRANKLIN PENN, GIRARD, ST. PATRICK, NAPOLEON, JOHN WESLEY, BYRON, GEO. FOX

and Hosts of Celebrated Characters of the Past, who take Possession of and Discourse through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers," of New York, giving Wonderful Information respecting the Create of their Lifetime, and their Opinions of Present Criticisms concerning those Events, as well as their Immediate Condition in the World of Spirits.

PRICE:—65 cts; postage, 2 cts. Liberal discount to the trade.

ADDRESS:—RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE. 187 an 189 S Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—[Democrat's Mankind, New York.

"Convincingly illustrative of the errors of Theology."—[Investigator, Boston.

"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—[Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.

Price, 60 cents. Postage, 4 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

THE
VOICE OF PRAYER,

A Poem by W. S. Barlow, Author of "The Voices."

This little poem is fully equal to any of Mr. Barlow's best efforts, and should be read by everybody

Printed on fine tinted paper with bine line border. Price 25 cents; postage 2 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Exeter Hall!
Exeter Hall!

HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL

THE following are extracts from a few of the notices of "Exeter Hall, the Puritan's Romance:—

"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—[Public Opinion, London, England.

"It is indeed a wonderful book."—[New York Mail.

"We commend it to the widest popular approval."—[Banner of Light, Boston.

"We have no hesitation in declaring this a great work."—[Universe, New York.

"The book is well and powerfully written. * * * The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason.'"—[Liberal, Chicago.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,

BY C. L. JAMES.

An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce legislation. For sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo. Post paid for 25 cents.

v6 n18-tf.

WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE contains in every number one complete prize story valued at $100. Forty pages of other matter. Yearly, $1. Sold by news-dealers at 10 cents per copy. Specimen—minions, $200 cash to be awarded for prizes. Specimen copy free. Address S. R. WOOD, Newburgh, New York.

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. S. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
J. R. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞ All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE
Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1—4 mo.
☞ Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Order, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN cents, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against loss by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names entered on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the ensuing year, with or without further reminder from this office.

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office—whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it, until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the

3. The co papers and periodicals and leaving them uncl us.

Upon the margin of each paper, or wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 10th, 1871, it will be marked "Smith J.—10 Dec. '71." The 9 means 1871. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—10 Dec.—9, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞ Those sending money to this office for the Journal, should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, AUGUST 19 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER LII.

IF A DESIGN CONNECTED WITH OUR CREATION IS NOT THE DESIGNER RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL OUR ACTS?

Is your patience exhausted in following us in our intricate Search, in endeavoring to unveil the Divine Architect of the universe, and demonstrate the true nature of existence? What a charm for us, our "voyage of discovery" has had. At times in the Spirit World, listening to the enrapturing music of the river as it winds its way amid the valleys and the flower-adorned embankments—ah! who can listen to the enchanting music there, behold the constant activity manifested, without having his pulse beat quicker, and a vein of joy start forth in bubbling accents in his soul? Carried along like a child, held, as it were, in the arms of one long in spirit-life, we feel dependent upon him,—receive nourishment from his reservoir of thought and feel that we are made better thereby. Occupying a prominent position in the Spirit world where he can discern the workings of forces unseen by us, it is natural for him to desire to explain to humanity the true philosophy of their action. Animated with high hopes, he resolved to present to the world his views of an Overruling Providence, believing that great good would be accomplished thereby. Amidst, then, the grandeur of his spirit home, surrounded with all the heart could wish or imagination desire, he looks upon the children of earth as feeding their minds upon error, and he pities them, and is striving to inculcate those views that will give them a more correct and comprehensive idea of their destiny. The minds of the people are constantly agitated on this question, and they desire to see a practical solution of it. Are they worshiping a myth, an image of the brain alone, a mere shadow, as it were and do they expect to realize any good there from? The world has been deprived of Adam and Eve, the Serpent, the account of Creation, the Devil, and now, to lose its God,—would it not be a calamity, a heart-rending spectacle, a sad affair? Why, what an iconoclastic age! What bold utterances! Will the people indorse them? Some will; others will not. The family altar!—we have seen the aged father, the good old mother, with their children and grandchildren around it, and as we heard the petition of the venerable gray-haired veteran, uttered in tremulous accents, when all was quiet and serene with those on bended knees,—would we have dared venture therein and destroy that altar—dash it into a thousand fragments, and beat back the sublime prayer that was being uttered? Yes! who would dare do this? A family at prayer—morning and evening devotions—each on bended knees—who would invade the "Holy of holies"— the sacred sanctuary,—and with ruthless hands, spread terror and dismay around? Have we done it? A thousand voices say yes! If your God is a reality, a living conscious entity, will our ideas destroy him? Why, then, so afraid that the dissemination of such views will do harm? We are seeking for the truth. If a being whom humanity should worship, we have as yet failed to find him.

The whole field has not yet, however, been surveyed,—there are many things yet that require our attention, and in their investigation, we propose to so present them to the world, that it will breathe free!

The minds of some in discussing this subject, are often confused, for they do not clearly understand the proper course to pursue in its investigation, in order to arrive at a specified result. In forming conceptions of a God, he should bear a resemblance to something in existence, or no correct idea can be formed of him. In discussing this question, we are necessarily compelled to reason from that which is real, which has a living, tangible reality, and the moment we step aside from that, the night is impenetrably dark and hideous, and we are lost!

The clock implies a clockmaker, and the presence of the earth, a world-maker. But can we form an estimate of man from the clock? Yes: because we know that man made it. But can we suppose that because man made the clock, that God made man? If so, proceed a little further and ask, if man made the clock, and God made man, who made God? But here you are cornered! That method of reasoning will not answer at all. You lose yourself at once. If you say that man was absolutely created by God, we might declare that God was absolutely created by somebody else.

The watch exhibits evidence of a design, hence must have a designer—man. The universe, the motion of the planets, etc., exhibit greater evidence of a design, hence were devised by God, you may declare.

Design is a ladder with only a few rounds in it. We can prove the existence of a God through its instrumentality in a twinkling—can we? Here is the engine; it exhibits evidence of a designer—man. Here is the universe,—it exhibits still greater evidence of a design, hence, must have a larger, more extensive designer—God. Here is matter, eternal,—it is indestructible; it exhibits still greater evidence of design than the watch or the mechanism of the universe, hence it must have been absolutely created. But the absolute creation of matter is an impossibility. How fallacious such a method of reasoning! We can't find God by any such system of logic. He who thinks he can discover him through evidences of a design in the universe, is very much mistaken. We have seen engines made, hence can form an idea of the mechanic. But the engine itself conveys no evidence that God exists. The fact that man can make an engine is no proof that it would require an infinite man to make a world. But one man don't make an engine—he is powerless alone,—it requires men. Why, then, should we infer that one infinite man—God—alone made the earth? If we reason from analogy, why not say many men made it?

What is the source of our knowledge? The universe is. Can you form the conception of an animal from the hole it digs? Here is the universe; here are plants, animals, men. God is not like a plant—not like an animal; hence, he must be like man! But in what respect? In form? No. In capacity? No. Does he think? Can he plan?

For anyone to execute any work implies an original design or plan; a design or plan indicates thought; and thought indicates a thinker, hence, we might say God is an infinite thinker, just as you say he is omniscience or possesses all power. Again, if God thinks, plans, or designs, then executes, we make an infinite laborer of him. Being an infinite laborer, infinite thinker, omniscient, omnipresent, possessing all power, he can make no mistake. His details and arrangements would be perfect, and no failure could ensue. Would not man, in fact all his children, carry out his designs in all their acts the same as the planets do his designs in all their motions? If he leaves man a free moral agent, has he any design in reference to him? You may say he designed man to be free—to pursue any course in life he chooses! Then tell me, if he designed him to do that,—to pursue any course in life his own judgment dictates,—how can he do otherwise? for God designed it! If he steals, his own judgment prompted it in accordance with that design, and God is simply responsible— is he?

If God made man, he had a design connected therewith. Will this design ever terminate? God designed this when he made each one: "I will make man; I will construct him so he can think, plan, and execute his purposes. In his thoughts, plans, and the execution of his purposes, he shall be independent of me!"

Would that be a possibility? Can God's design terminate with the creation of man? Emphatically, no! The very fact that he designed him to be independent, carries with it an effect, a responsibility. "I will man to be a free moral agent," saith God. Is he not responsible for his acts just as much as if he willed him to be a machine—not a free moral agent? If you acknowledge God as your Creator, you must charge him with all the licentiousness in the world.

Please tell me, scientist, what is the difference between the following:

God says: I will or design man to be a free moral agent—to do as he pleases; or, God says: I will or design man to be a machine—to do this or that.

Would not God be responsible for man's acts in the latter case? and if in the latter case, would he not be in the former also? God, then, if an Infinite Designer, is certainly responsible for all of man's acts; in no case is man responsible for them if a design be connected with his existence. If man bears with him evidences of a design, and we reason therefrom that a designer exists, man at that moment becomes a subject to the design. It cannot be otherwise. If omniscience designs, all power would render those designs inflexible, and would not what he created be subject to them and be nothing but a machine? It will not do to say that God created man with the design that he should be a free moral agent, for there is a design as inflexible there as otherwise.

Now, if God is an Infinite Designer, you could not say that his design ceased with the creation of man. It must extend throughout all eternity, or he would cease to exist. Is it not reasonable to suppose that God would design that man should not in any respect be antagonistic to him? If so, then we charge all the crimes of the universe on him.

God's tender care would be needed, especially after the creation! He would force you into the world, and then design you to do as you please. A design for you to do as you please, does not relieve God of responsibility for a bad creation—such as criminals are supposed to be. A design for you to do as you desire, is just as important, and in every sense of the word shapes your acts in life just as much as a design for you to do this or that. Admitting, then, that God is your Creator, possessing attributes to an infinite degree common to humanity, and that he has designs connected with all created objects, then you make him responsible for all the acts of life.

(To be continued.)

THE BOOK ROBBERIES AT ST. PETERSBURG.

Trial and Conviction of Pichler and Wimmer.

St. Petersburg [July 16] Correspondence of the London Standard.

In the month of March I gave an account of an extraordinary case of book stealing from the public library of St. Petersburgh by a German Doctor of Divinity. Pichler has now been brought to trial, and he has met with the punishment he has so well deserved. In the indictment he is described as a Bavarian subject, 37 years of age, and he is accused of having stolen upward of 4,000 books from the Imperial Library; and Cresence Wimmer, his cousin, who acted as his servant, is charged with having effaced the library marks from the books, and substituted Pichler's cipher, with the intention of concealing the crime. Pichler is a man of remarkable capacity and great erudition. He completed his studies at the University of Munich, where he distinguished himself by his proficiency in theology, and attained the degree of Doctor of Divinity. He was subsequently ordained. He was a pupil and follower of Dollinger, and he pretends to have been a friend of that celebrated man. While leading a modest and studious life at Munich, he was fortunate enough to attract the attention of a Russian gentleman of distinction—M. Dellaneff, who had been struck by the merits of Pichler's work on "The Division of the Eastern and Western Churches." This gentleman, who is Secretary of State, and actual Minister of Public Instruction, invited Pichler to come to St. Petersburgh, where he was very kindly received and introduced to the most distinguished literary men in the metropolis. After going back to Munich to arrange his affairs, he finally came to Russia, in May, 1869, apparently with a view of settling in the country, and he was engaged in the ministry of the Home Department at a salary of about £400 a year. At the same time, in order to give him facilities for pursuing the theological studies in which he was engaged, Mr. Dellaneff conferred upon him the honorary appointment of Imperial Librarian. This position was invaluable to a man like Pichler, as it enabled him to make free use of the library, a privilege which is very rarely granted.

He began to frequent the library at a time which must have been very favorable for the object he had in view, as there are greater facilities for taking books during the summer than at any other time, most of the employes being absent on leave, and the library being almost deserted. But in August, when readers began to resume their researches, books that were asked for were not to be found, and it became evident that there was something wrong. From the very first some of the librarians had little confidence in Pichler. His furtive look and stealthy ways his peculiar coat, made apparently to serve the purpose of a carpet-bag and an upper garment at the same time, excited suspicion. It was remarked, moreover, that he never sat down to read seriously; that he always left the library in a hurried manner, and often returned two or three times in the course of the day. In consequence of these suspicious circumstances, he was closely watched, and was at length stopped by the porter, who found a large folio concealed in a bag ingeniously stitched inside the back of his coat. His lodgings were searched, and the books were found, most of them picked up in cases ready to be sent away. Not content with stealing books, he had cut a great many engravings out of so e valuable works, and had spoiled others by abstracting portions of them which he carried home for his own use. Most of the stolen books had reference to Pichler's peculiar studies, but he had appropriated a few others, of trifling value, totally unconnected with his branch of study, such as Le Manuel du Tailleur, Manuel de la Dance, etc., which he is supposed to have done to divert suspicion. In his defence Pichler stated that he had only taken the books home for the purpose of reference, which, he considered he had a perfect right to do, and it is true that the librarians have this privilege, provided they leave a written acknowledgment for the works they take away. But he had never observed this formality, and the proofs of his intention were too conclusive to admit of the slightest doubt of his culpability. Both the prisoners were found guilty. Pichler was condemned to banishment to Siberia, and Wimmer to four months' imprisonment in the house of correction, at the expiration of which time she is to be sent out of the country.

As Pichler is a foreigner, and a man holding a high position in literary circles, this trial has excited unusual interest. The most implicit confidence had been placed in him by the government, and so high were his merits appreciate, that he had been rewarded with the cross of St. Stanislas, of the second class.

REMARKS.—We give place to the above,—not that we delight in showing the dark shades of human nature—like other people, we love sunshine. We love to look at a bright, beautiful picture, especially a life picture of an immortal soul.

But the world must be educated in a true system of philosophy—in the Philosophy of Life. Our paper, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, is devoted to that subject. The religious world teaches a doctrine—a false doctrine—of "regeneration" by the sprinkling of water upon infants, or by the observance of some other form or ceremony, ordained by a council of ecclesiastics.

To the sensible, thinking, man, that fallacy is self-obvious; to those who do not think for themselves—no matter how high they may stand in popular society—facts must be presented. To that end, we show the shortcomings of the so-called sanctified, regenerated leaders of the various theological institutions of this and past ages. Indeed, it is a fact susceptible of proof, that the priesthood, considering their numbers, affords a larger proportion of errant knaves and villains, than any other class of educated men. Coolly and deliberately they set themselves at work to accomplish an object, corrupt and debauch to good morals, and condemned by all correct thinkers.

The case above-mentioned, shows the usual duplicity resorted to by that class of men, and the persistency with which the object is pursued until the end is accomplished, or justice overtakes and exposes the culprit. The columns of the secular papers tee n with reports of crimes by this class of men; wife murderers, mistress murderers, child murderers, abortionists, seducers of young girls and married women, forgers, horse-thieves, counterfeiters, and villains of every conceivable phase of crime known to the criminal calendar.

Thus far we have been speaking of the clergy, —the teachers of moral ethics,—of those clothed in the garbs of evangelical sanctity—of the long-faced, hypocritical gentry, who are constantly harping against the moral character of Spiritualists. But now let us turn our attention to the devotees of old theology—to those who believe in, and follow such leaders.

Visit the prisons—jails and penitentiaries—and who do we find for inmates—not one in fifty that does not devoutly believe in the doctrines of old theology, in some of its multiform phases, in the "atoning blood of Christ," and that ere they die, when they have their fill of sin, they will turn their attention to the "savior," get converted, and go home to glory.

The legitimate fruits of such a faith is to encourage men in crime, believing that by and by, by a single ejaculation of "God have mercy on my soul," the books will be balanced, and the culprit can go home to glory, a pure white-winged angel.

Contrast such a doctrine with the Philosophy of Life, as taught by Spiritualism. All mankind, from infancy onward, are day by day unfolding by exercise, faculties which play their part in the drama of life.

The excessive activity of propensities necessary for propagating, developing, and protecting life, is always at the expense of the higher or crowning elements of man's nature. These excesses result in crime, such as we have above referred to, and until the crowning faculties of the mind are educated and brought into action so as to control and hold in check the propensities, crime is a necessary result, and the grace of God will present no better result with the common religious devotee, than it does with the priesthood, as above shown. The cunning, secretive priest may disguise his true nature to a great extent while in this life, and elude the penalty of the law, as Smith, the wife drowner, and thousands of others like him have done, but to the spiritual eye their true character is apparent, and to the spiritual law, there is no escape, "Those who sow to the wind will reap the whirlwind."

Indeed, the Philosophy of Life teaches that every soul is painting his or her life picture, which is as endurable as the soul itself, and will not only be open to self inspection in all coming ages of eternity, but subject to the inspection of the clairvoyant spiritual eyes of all other spirits.

Such is life in the spheres. Every touch of life's brush, be it a daub from the passions for unholy purposes, or a finer touch of our highest nature, is permanent and ever enduring, but with this consolation, that even the grossest touch may be amended and made useful in a life picture, by the more delicate and beautiful colors issuing from the refined touches of man's intellectual and moral faculties. Hence the inducement for every soul to act his part well in the drama of life.

Get out of the purlieus of vice; come at once to live in the upper chambers of life; use those beautiful tinted colors only, which shall give beauty to your inner-life pictures.

Such are the lessons taught by Spiritualism. How will it contrast with the doctrine of a vicarious atonement?

The Daily Witness.

New York finally has a daily religious paper —The Witness. Its first number was issued July 1st. Its editor, John Dugall, claims to have conducted a similar paper in Montreal for eleven years, with great and constantly increasing success; and he is confident of success in his New York enterprise, because he feels a special call to it, and because he places his reliance on the "blessing of God."

No doubt the "blessing of God" will carry him successfully along, if he has got plenty of "filthy lucre," or what is commonly designated as the "root of all evil." Without its assistance, he will be as powerless to carry along his enterprise, as a Chicago rat would be to speculate in stocks, or understand the difference between tweedledum and tweedledee. This paper is published in the interest of His Serene Majesty, the "Lord Jesus Christ," and judging from its tone, its allegiance is in no way doubtful. But why does its pious sin observer give so many accounts of murder, licentiousness, cases of wife-stabbing, etc.—do these incidents come under the head of "pure and elevating literature?" No doubt the Lord Jesus Christ feels exultant in the fact that John Dugall has started a paper in his interest, to advocate the merits of his blood, and sustain his claims as the Son of God. But if he is not a better financier in heaven than he was in earth, he will not shower the spondulicks freely down upon Mr. Dugall, to aid him in his enterprise. Papers are now published in the interest of Chase, Grant, Colfax, etc., and lastly, in the interest of Jesus. Good! Glad the Savior is so highly favored, and we ardently hope to see his blood quoted as above par among the bulls and bears, and bear-*ess*es (Mrs. Woodhull and Miss Claflin), of Wall Street, New York. We presume that Col. Jim Fisk, Jun., who will need several barrels of his blood when he takes his exit to the Spirit World, is a large stockholder in Mr. Dugall's paper.

A paper published in the interest of a spirit,—is no new undertaking. Swedenborg has his organ, God has his, while the lesser lights are left in the dark. Poor Adam; he should be represented by a daily newspaper; so should Mother Eve. The Apostles ought to be heard. They prevaricate in the Bible, do n't talk straight. The fishermen should have an organ—a periodical. Will not some evangelical society publish one in their behalf? Then there is Sampson, he needs a paper. It is generally believed that he never slew a thousand Philistines with the "jaw bone of an ass." This is an important issue—did he, or did he not? Asses live only on thistles—especially those in the Holy Land. No thistles grew within five hundred miles from the place where Sampson resided; hence it would have been utterly impossible for an ass to live there. Such being the case, we are inclined to the opinion that it might have been the jaw bone of a horse, or an ox, which Sampson used to slay the Philistines. Job also requires a paper, like Swedenborg and Jesus. A paper for him should be issued morning and evening. It is a great question now, whether the Devil actually afflicted Job or not. We are inclined to think that his blood was out of order, and that he was dyspeptical.—A paper devoted to his interest, should discuss this question, and determine the character of his boils. A learned physiologist declares they were carbuncles, and bore no resemblance to boils. This question is important, and should be settled. A paper such as John Dugall is publishing as the organ of Jesus, could throw a flood of light on this subject.

The Rev. Dr. Fowler of this city, a Methodist clergyman, should have charge of an organ of that character. He believes in everybody in the Bible, from Genesis to Revelation, and can tell you what caused Job to boil, as easily as he could what prompted Jeremiah to lament.

Perhaps, however, no spirit of the departed feels the necessity of a newspaper to any greater extent than Jonah. He desires to impart to the world the true character of his aquatic excursion, tell what he saw, heard, and felt in the briny deep, when in the stomach of the leviathan. He obtained during his aqueous submersion, much valuable information in relation to sperm oil, and also discovered a passage to the North pole, and actually saw the hole to the interior of the earth as laid down by Prof. Lyon, fully confirming all he has said. Jonah, like Jesus, should have a newspaper, and it should be devoted exclusively to Salt Water, Whales, and Sperm Oil, showing the wonderful dispensations of providence in those directions.

We wish John Dugall success in his undertaking, hoping that all the luminaries of the Bible may soon have an organ.

Doings of Mediums in Chicago.

Seances are being held in various parts of the city every evening.

At Dr. McFadden, 343 West Madison street, several mediums are usually in attendance—the Doctor always.

Dr. T. J. Lewis and wife, at No. 76 Third Avenue, are good mediums, and have a healing institute, baths, etc. It is a good place for people to go and get healed.

Dr. J. Wilbur, 460 West Randolph street, is a good healer, and does good business. For many years he has been known to the public as an excellent healing medium.

Mrs. A. H. Robinson, 148 Fourth Ave., continues to treat the sick in all parts of the country with most remarkable success, under spirit control, upon the positive and negative principles.

By reference to her advertisement in another column, the requisites to be complied with will be readily understood.

She treats by letter, diagnosing diseases by holding a lock of the sick person's hair in her hand, and thus at once comes en rapport with the sick patient, and invariably prescribes a curative remedy, which (by the aid of her band of healing spirits who attend upon such patients magnetically until fully cured) in all curable cases, never fails. The presence of such spirits has been fully realized in numerous cases, and attested to by those who have been thus cured. Mrs. Robinson is unquestionably one of the most remarkable mediums of the age.

Mrs. Maud Lord on Wednesday evening, held another of her cabinet seances at Mrs. A. H. Robinson's residence, to a crowded house of investigators, among whom were many professional and other gentlemen, and ladies of the highest ranks of Chicago.

Many spirits who were fully recognized by friends, showed their faces and hands on the occasion.

Her seances are of a first-class order and worth going hundreds of miles to witness.

Dr. Sherman and Prof. Lyon, 306 Clark street, are engaged on a new book of a similar Spiritual origin, but even superior to that most valuable work, "The Hollow Globe."

Mrs Sherman, the psychometrist, continues to delineate character to the entire satisfaction of her patrons.

James Brooks, the developing medium, 306 Clark street, is one of the very best developing mediums of the age. See his advertisement.

Chicago is certainly blessed with good mediums, and is wide awake upon the subject of spirit-communion.

Warren Chase & Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Owing to the large increase in the business of this firm, they have been obliged to give up their fine rooms, and procure a still larger and more convenient and commodious place for their rapidly growing trade. They have therefore leased the store, No. 614 North Fifth Street where we have no doubt their prosperity will increase, and hope it will far surpass their expectations.

Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote.

The most certain and perfectly harmless antidote for the poisonous effects, and remedy for the tobacco appetite, is known by the above name.

It is compounded by Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated medium of Chicago, while entranced by a celebrated chemist, long in spirit life. This antidote is warranted to break the habit of using tobacco by the inveterate lover of the weed, when the directions (on each box) are followed.

Agents for selling the same throughout the country are wanted. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office. Price $2.00 per box—sent by mail free of postage, on receipt of the money.

Personal and Local.

[Mrs. Annie Curran Torrey has been holding seances at Galveston, Texas, instead of Memphis, Tenn.

—Levi Dinkelspiel writes as follows from Rockford, Ill: "After having delivered some lectures at and near Waukegan, I have arrived here and will stay a short time—how long I can not tell. I have met some good, warm, earnest souls here, and on last Sunday, in Bartlett's Hall, a hall built for lectures on our philosophy, by one man, I delivered two lectures to large and appreciative audiences. I will speak again next Sunday. It seems as though every step I take in one more nail driven into the platform upon which I have placed myself, and I feel more than ever the need that I, as a reformer, should come forward and let the world know, and especially my own people, that all are embraced in the teaching of glad tidings of great joy, and that we want them all, Jew and Gentile, black and white, church or no church, to be with us."

—The letter in a previous number of the JOURNAL accredited to H. G. Parker, should have been under the signature of John R. Kelso—its author.

—Brother Bliss writes as follows from Warren, Ohio: "In justice to S. L. McFadden and wife, I wish to state that I have been under their treatment for several days, and received much benefit. I consider their mode of treatment highly beneficial to all suffering from general debility, or disease of whatever nature. I cheerfully recommend them to the patronage of the public. All those wishing to have their mediumistic gifts unfolded, or to have tests given, to prove that the soul is immortal, and that their loved ones can and do return, should not fail to visit them."

—Mrs. Sada Bailey writes: "I have just returned from a trip to Pisno, Ill., where I gave a lecture in the Latter Day Saints' Church. The kindness, toleration and accommodating spirit manifested by the people of this persuasion, is noble and commendable to all. They are indeed an intelligent, virtuous and prosperous people, many of whose views are akin to spiritualistic ideas. The very walls of the church seem magnetized with harmonizing influences, and the little handfull of good Spiritualists in Plano were delighted with the peaceful meeting we held in their quiet and genial temple of devotion. We are thankful for the good accomplished in promulgating the truths of our heaven born religion. I return to Plano in a few days, with my blessed little ones, where the good spirits is and out of the form, tell me I shall be in our glorious cause employed, sustained and appreciated."

—Mrs. Olive E. Colburn, writing, says: "Believe me, I wish very much to read the dear JOURNAL, and as soon as I can raise the money, will send."

Remarks:—All right, dear sister. Your word is good, without a voucher, but it required, Sister Bell A. Chamberlain, to whom you refer, would be deemed ample. The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, with a loving and smiling countenance, will make you weekly visits, promptly and on time.

—E. V. Wilson's address is Lombard, Du Page County, Ill. Address him there, and if he is away from home, his wife will forward the letters to him wherever he may be.

—E. Sorter sends us five dollars, but no post office nor state. Can any one enlighten us as to his whereabouts?

—M. E. Taylor, of Leslie, Michigan, has entered the lecture field. We hope success will accompany him.

—Brother E. G. Bartlett, writing from Lacera, Iowa, speaks in high terms of the lectures and tests of Mrs. Bell A. Chamberlain. She has done a good work there, and will be long remembered by those who have listened to her eloquent ministrations. She is now in Charlton, Iowa.

—Three pulpits, one in Edinburgh, one in Ireland and a third in London, have adopted the practice of reading Sunday lessons from various oriental bibles, other than that of the Hebrews; and it is the opinion of some eminent thinkers that England's conquest of India may end with a reaction upon herself that may revolutionize her religion. It must not, however, be understood that all of this influence comes from India alone. India has opened the door, but the best Mohammedan and Parsee scriptures and poems are entering by the same way. The translators have as much as they can do, and it is worth a good deal to a man now to understand the Sanscrit, Zend, Hindostanee, Arabic or Persian languages.

—Samuel Clegg, of Dodgeville, Iowa, writes that his son is an excellent medium, but that the orthodox play mischief whenever he attempts to hold a seance.

—Dr. Lusk, of Eaton Rapids, Michigan, writes; "I attribute to you and the JOURNAL, the merit of saving our state from the clutches of a bill to prohibit mediums from healing."

—E. V. Wilson will lecture at Argate school house five miles northwest of Muquoketa, Iowa, on the evenings of Friday, Saturday, Sunday; also Sunday morning at ten o'clock and forty-five minutes, August 18 19 and 20—four lectures. We will give a matinee on Monday afternoon, August 21, at half past two o'clock, and lecture in the evening, according to our letter to George A. Gray, Esq., in Maquoketa, Iowa, if desired by the friends of that place.

—Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson will speak in Des Moines, Iowa, during September and October, or in the vicinity; then in St. Joseph and vicinity, till the middle of December; then in Springfield, Mo, and vicinity till March, 1872. For September and October, direct to care of E. M. Davis, Des Moines, Iowa, box 685.

—Brother J. T. Rouse writes: "The Spiritualists and Liberalists of Clark and Cumberland Counties will hold a grove meeting at Greenup, commencing at two in the afternoon, Saturday August 26, and continuing over Sunday. Brother Sharp, of Clinton County, will assist me in the conduct of the meeting. I am ready to make engagements with liberal societies and communities, to dispense the gospel of Spiritualism. I may be addressed until October, Jonesville, Ill."

☞ We are in want of dues for the JOURNAL. When it is not convenient to pay all, let us have a part, as an earnest of a good-will. Wake up! we are in earnest.

READ the advertisement of that most wonderful work, JESUS OF NAZARETH.

THOSE WHO WISH to have this paper discontinued when the time is up to which it is paid for, should notify us of that wish two weeks before such time expires, as it takes that time to get it off of the mailing machine. When an order to discontinue is given by those in arrears, remittances should be made to square up in full, including the two weeks which the paper will be mailed the subscriber after such notice is given.

—The Shaker, a monthly journal, fifty cents per annum. G. A. Lomas, Shakers, Albany Co. New York. In our previous issue we had the state wrong—New Jersey.

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

Soul Life, Past, Present and Future.

When we speak of the past life of the soul, we must depend upon those who have advanced beyond the conditions of earth for the most clear and explicit expressions of it. God is man's highest ideal. Our idea is of a great positive mind, the central source and combination of all the powers of the universe, which is of itself but an external expression of this grand, all-pervading principle or power.

That this Central Soul has a consciousness of the existence of all things we have no doubt,—just as we, as spirits, are conscious of the existence of these physical bodies. If this is pantheism, put us down there—we are not scared at words. We know of no God outside of matter, and of no matter outside of God.

God exists, then, as a whole—as the centre of force and being and matter. This force expresses itself fragmentarily in millions of forms in the material world. Its highest and most perfect expression is man, being the ultimate on the external plane, and therefore the result of higher spiritual conditions than any other form of life—the nearest approach to God. Man is a God in the smallest portion of all His attributes that can outwork all these, and hence it is true to say man is made in the image of God. These atoms or sparks of Divinity are just as immortal as God, having always existed, and being destined to live forever with the consciousness of continued identity.

To an immortal principle time is nothing. The succession of events on a sensational plane alone marks time, and in proportion as man's immortal nature is unfolded, he loses the consciousness of time. Hence as we move down the vale of earthly years the passage of time seems much more rapid, and whenever spirits speak to mortals of future events, they frequently say they will soon take place.

The soul in its ante-earth-life conscious existence, has its labor and enjoyments. The fact that human beings are not conscious of this, simply proves what every observer knows to be true, that there are different and distinct shades of consciousness, as in sleep, trance, etc.; and this consciousness of the soul prior to its imprisonment in the body may not be clearly revealed to it until after it has passed through certain conditions in spirit life, when it is but a dream, and afterwards as a reality—this is revealed to the conscious perception of the soul. We know that nothing was ever created without an object or design.

We may not be able to arrive at any very precise ideas of the labor and enjoyments of the soul in the past. The fact of its existence is the most important event in connection with it, and this will enable us to comprehend its conditions sooner and better after entering the inner life.

The soul having associated with and enjoyed its kindred souls in the past, and having exercised an influence upon the conditions around it peculiar to itself, finds the germ of a human, physical being in proper conditions for it to associate with, and act upon. In this attraction it is moved by the parental influences of both sexes; hence, there is something in the character of the parents which not only gives peculiarities to the physical, but also has an influence in the selection of the soul for the child, which thus enters within the domain of the physical. A new consciousness comes to the soul now, and it struggles hard to express itself upon this new plane, and where conditions are favorable it does this beautifully.

Every one must have noticed and admired the expressions of the soul in early childhood. The first grand effort is to stamp a consciousness of its existence on the mental, and through that upon the physical, and where it fails to do this, and man lives without any consciousness, or even a very imperfect and doubtful one, of even the existence of the soul within him, it is crippled and cramped in its energies and the body becomes a gloomy prison house to it. The more we can awaken mankind

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.
NEW YORK.

Letter from John Corwin.

S. S. Jones—Dear Sir: A week or two ago I wrote you, inclosing five dollars to renew my subscription to the Religio-Philosophical Journal, at the same time promising you some account of the manifestations now transpiring in this region.

These manifestations are occurring at the dwelling of Albert Slocum, near Lansingville, and Alfred Brooks, and Horatio Brown, and in some other families of North Lansing. These families are some of the most trusty and influential people in town. The principal mediums are pure and honest little girls, from twelve to fourteen years of age. M. Jennie Benson, the medium at Mr. Slocum's, belonged to a very poor but industrious family, who were taken up last fall as vagrants. The mother and children, excepting Jennie and a brother younger, were kept in the county-house through the winter. The two last, through the sympathy of Mr and Mrs. Slocum, (bless their kind hearts!) were taken into their family. Jennie turns out to be a medium through whom the audible presence the spirits of departed ones are demonstrating to the living, in ways wonderfully convincing, the great truth of life and immortality in the hereafter.

At Brooks' and Brown's the mediums are their own honest little daughters. The manifestations in the two last named families are very similar, consisting of raps louder than I have heard elsewhere; a sounding of musical instruments and passing them about the room from one person to another at the request of those present; speaking in an audible voice through the mediums, and sometimes without the horn, and yet without using the vocal organs of the medium; patting with hands on the face, the head, and other parts of the body, taking hold of and shaking the hand of nearly every person attending the circle. One amusing incident is the touching of noses.

The seances are in dark rooms. At one sitting a lady asked, 'If I will put my handkerchief on the stand will you take it and wipe my face?' (the room being extremely warm.) "Yes," answered the spirit. Almost immediately the lady exclaimed:

"They are wiping my face."

"Will you wipe Mrs. A's face?"

Mrs. A. responded, "They are wiping my face."

"Will you wipe Mr. B's face?"

Mr B—They are wiping my face.

"Will you wipe the face of Mrs. C.?"

Mrs C—They are wiping my cheek and taking hold of my nose with the handkerchief.

One of the circle here remarked, "Touching noses is a very nice operation; will you touch our noses?"

In quick succession several individuals responded:

"They have put the end of one finger square on the end of my nose!" This, of course, was followed with a hearty laugh on the part of all present.

"Clay Ellis," a spirit, when in earth-life was a violinist, and seems now to delight in dancing. He will often request some person present to while he or play a lively tune on some instrument; he will dance,—the sound of dancing will be heard in some vacant spot on the floor, as natural as life; and by request he will keep perfect time, by loud rapping on the floor or stand, also by ringing of tea-bells at the same time.

At the house of Mr. Slocum the writer has been present when four persons, not of the family,—the writer and Dr. Wm. Davis being of the number,—but who had gone in to witness the strange performances by request, were sitting each with one hand on the stand, the violin lying on the stand, just at our fingers end, but not touching, the bow on the floor, the medium, Jennie sitting apart, not touching either,—the strings of the violin were then struck by a skilful hand, and the instrument played clearly and distinctly 'Yankee Doodle."

Other modes of manifestation are produced, such as loud clapping of hands, combing the hair of persons present, and sometimes showing their hands.

But the demonstrations are multiplied, and so varied that I cannot undertake to relate to you all of the positive facts now transpiring. Suffice it to say the people hereabout are "going it with a rush" to witness them. At some one of the above-named places from half a dozen to thirty persons have gathered nearly every night for several weeks past, notwithstanding it is now harvest-time and the shortest evenings in the year.

It is rather a hard tax on these families, who are farmers and have hard labor to perform, and whose rest is very much broken by the amount of company they are having. But they seem to endure thus far with a good degree of patience and good feeling, willing to do all they can to satisfy the believer and convince the skeptic, very many of which last class are "caving in" and acknowledging the great wonder and truth of Spiritualism.

I have lectured by invitation at the dwelling-house of Mr. Slocum, on the 2d, and again on the 16 h of the present month, to a good number of earnest listeners. The meeting on the 16th was particularly felicitous. The speaker seemed to be in the best of spirits, and under a very strong inspirational influence. The audience were interested and enthusiastic. The speaker dwelt at some length on the true nature of Spiritualism, and its adaptation to the present needs of humanity; showing by very clearly what great light it is to the world, and not ever as now in any past period of the world's history. The race of human beings far back in the past were gross and ignorant. Animality and sensuality predominated. But here and there a man or a woman were spiritual enough and tried by long fasting and prayer, or other means of preparation, to recognize spirit presence and bring intelligence out of it. But in our day man has advanced until the spiritual predominates in his organism and growth; hence, the commonality of the race are now holding correspondence and communion with the inhabitants of the better land.

At the close of the lecture the speaker said he recognized the presence of a spirit—that of a young man—a stranger to him, who gave his name as "Clay Ellis." The speaker gave a minute description of his form, his age, his features, and somewhat of his character in life, which was afterward said by those who had known Clay, to be entirely correct. Clay was manifesting himself only to show that he still lived, but to make himself of some of the effects of his earth-life.

The speaker here sat down, remaining under control, and the audience to put questions if they desired information on any point. S. W. Pratt, a Methodist. Clergyman being present, whose wife is a Spiritualist, and something of a medium, asked:

"Does not the character of the manifestations depend as much, or more, on the organization of the medium as on the inspiration?"

Speaker.—Yes, very much so.

Then pointing out seven or eight sitting in a conspicuous line, commencing with Mr. P., he gave a brief delineation of the permanent and organization of each one, stating what kind of manifestation would be produced, and how varied in character it might then, were they to become mediums. The man of blood would get inspirations favorable to fighting; the man of peace, for peace.

Speaker.—Mr. Pratt, make such remarks as you feel inclined to.

Pratt—I have, through my religious experience and culture, been in the habit of thinking that the New Testament contains whatever is sufficient for the salvation and education of every body if they were to heed it. And while I believe in that book as enough to carry a man almost to heaven, I am conscious that so far it seems to be a failure; it has not saved all; it has not saved me. There is something wrong in the world—whether it is real sins, or ignorance as the speaker has said—that has not yet been reached; and if there is anything in Spiritualism better than our religion based on the Testament, I would like to know it.

Speaker—Do you not admit that it is the inspiration lying back of, and on which the Testament and your religion is intended to be based, and that only, that most of all benefits humanity?

Pratt—Yes.

Speaker—Then why has the inspiration of the past been cut off from the present? And why has humanity, progressive in every department, even in religious thought and experience, been held back under the yoke of the old, and not rather left free to accept and receive the full benefits of present inspiration?

Pratt—But the manifestations now are so low and foolish. What good can come out of them?

Speaker—We have reason to know the manifestations of the past were as low and senseless or even more so, than those of to-day. They were given under the administration of the priesthood. What the priests could not control, and use for their own purpose, they stigmatized as witchcraft, sorcery, and demonology; giving such the go by, intending to hand down to posterity only the best of their day. Now, the lowest positive demonstrations of the present time, are doing more to convince the world of immortality, than are the best manifestations of the past. Would it not be better at such minds of intelligence and culture as we have amongst us, instead of turning up and boxing about those manifestations coming from, and through the more ignorant grades of undeveloped humanity from either world, would seize hold of the higher and purer inspirations now beaming with effulgence all about us, from the deepest fountain of spirit life, and be benefited thereby.

Our poor, hungry, starved souls, who in their ignorance of manifestation, passed their mundane existence in sensuality, having entered spirit-life realizing the effect of their earth condition, are now tapping at our doors, and crying to us to aid and help them upward. Will you give to such, a sympathizing heart, and kindly greeting?

Five Corners, N. Y., July 24, 1871.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.
ITEMS OF INTEREST.

By George Macdonald.

Dear Journal:—I was to employ my time for a few moments in presenting a few thoughts and extracts which you may deem worthy. I wish to say something about "sisters." Among the rest is "Dr Walker's California Vinegar Bitters." The doctor says, "it is no vile, fancy drink," etc., and I quite agree with him as to its not being "vile." Five doses from a bottle costing a dollar satisfied me. However, be the merit of it what it may, there is sent with each bottle a circular, selections from which, I make, with remarks, viz:

"Health has a beauty of its own. No eruptions, sores or disfigurations, disfigure or annoy the man or woman whose stomach liver and bowels do their duty thoroughly. To compel them to do their work, to render it impossible for them to do it in a grossly imperfect way, it is only necessary to take a few doses of Dr Walker's Vinegar Bitters. This potent vegetable specific renovates every wasted organ, and controls every disordered function."

I should say "to compel them to do their work," etc, it is only necessary for one to be harmoniously related, circumstanced; and one of the greatest requirements is, speaking figuratively, to earn our bread by the sweat of our brow. Which is surely the only noble mendicie one can be proud to take. The many choose to take doses from the silver spoon while the few manage to bestir themselves by one kind of physical exercise or an other sufficiently to give healthy play to the stomach, liver and bowels."

The Use of Tobacco.

"The habit of using tobacco seems to be gaining ground; although it may be only because the most cultivated look on it with more abhorence than formerly, and thus magnify its present proportions. Certain it is, however, that the users of it are more audacious than formerly. Once the presence of it was sufficient reason for leaving the cars regretted, but now, in the name of marriage they have exposed to inhale full fuliginous puffs from the front seat, and gentlemen escorting them on a walk, take out their cigar-cases, as though a gracious permission was a matter of course. They may consider and be ask if smoking would be objectionable, but their tone and manner admit of but one reply. Until ladies cease to be hypocrites, and do not speak one sentiment with their lips and another with their hearts, the practice will be indulged in. Speaking of woman's prejudice against tobacco, a lady declares it is because of their filthiness she loves material purity; more than half her labors are voluntarily efforts to keep her surroundings, her house and her clothing daintily sweet and clean. And this practice in those about her not only leads to the pollution of the air and the defilement of floors and carpets more than this, it forces them to render repulsive the appearance of those she loves. She may suspect that inveterate smoking is gradually robbing their characters of energy and enterprise, hunting the keen alertness of their sense, and subjecting the whole being to a process of slow deterioration; but she knows, every time her eye lights upon their features, that it is dispelling them of all attractive charm. Realized, yellow teeth, lips brown and pasted, hair, beard and clothing steeped in stale odors and disagreeable to approach, these certainly are not recommendations to the favor of one who rates cleanliness next to godliness. To smoke is bad enough, but to chew is utterly vile and disgusting. In New England, where they are so limited in their causes of gentleman friends, and so dependent for attention upon the few they possess they still can choose to tell them that their habits are disgusting, and that, considering the morality they profess and the tastes they indulge, they can only regard them as unable brutes to be tolerated merely because of low range of thought and action to hold respectable among men. Many who use the weed are heartily ashamed of themselves for doing so, and would break themselves of it if they had courage to live short time with the mortified desire, or could brook the laughter of their companions. Do they continue; are the boys think it manly, and contract the habit, only to regret it, and almost despise themselves, years after toward."

Woman's Virtue.

"It is a prevailing vice among men—of doubting the virtue of women. To us it looks like not only an outrage to good taste, but also betokens a want of intellect. Besides this, it betokens a boastful nature, and pushes that would disgrace a beast. The idea of dragging women down to man's level, in point of virtue, is so repugnant to the feelings, so utterly at variance with the truth, that the utterer ought not to have a place in civilized society. We would wish to impress on those who cast this slur upon the character of the women of our land, that if what they charge were true, this fair world of ours would be a perfect hell. The women of our land are as far above those who cast these aspersions as the heavens are above the earth. Our women are the highest types of purity and virtue; and any cravon who would drive them from this high estate, deserves the execration of all good men."

Who is there of the readers of the Journal who does not feel the truth embodied in the extract,—"Woman's Virtue," and what an everlasting punishment offenders in and outside of the churches merit. If we accept eternal justice, we can not decide other than that offenders will for all time to come, comparatively speaking, feel the weight, to a greater or less degree, of this, one of the meanest and most vile.

The extract, "The Use of Tobacco," I endorse in full and only hope that every reader who is "hit," especially if you are a Spiritualist, will take heed, for the benefit of this, and generations to follow.

I close these selections with "Marriage Maxims," the first of which, rightly organized men know to be true, and a rightly informed will act as the last inculcates, that is, if they "do do," as I myself hope to have the opportunity of doing one of these days.

Marriage Maxims

A good wife is the greatest earthly blessing.
A man is what his wife makes him.
It is the mother who moulds the character and destiny of the child.
Never make a remark at the expense of the oth er; it is meanness.
Never part without loving words to think of during your absence. Besides, it may be that you will not meet again in life.

How gently glides the marriage life away,
When one who rules still seems but to obey!

Never both manifest anger at once.
Never speak loud to one another, unless the house is on fire.
Never reflect on a past action which was done with a good motive and with the best judgment at the time
Let each one strive to yield oftenest to the wishes of the other, which is the mutual cultivation of an absolute unselfishness.
Never find fault, unless it is perfectly certain that a fault has been committed; and even then, preside it with a kiss, and lovingly.
Never allow a request to be repeated. "I forgot" is never an acceptable excuse.
Marry into a different blood and temperament from your own.

The Old and The New.

Your paper being freely opened for the candid expression of all sorts of opinions on religious subjects, will you permit one to offer a few thoughts in favor of the "good book" we have all been taught to love and reverence in our childhood,—the book our dear mothers loved, and which still holds its place in the affections of millions of the best and wisest of earth's inhabitants? I am well aware that the terrible systems of bigotry and intolerance, falsely called Christian, is the darkest, most horrible page of human history, and fully deserves all the execrations heaped upon it. But the pure spiritual teachings of Jesus and his devoted Apostles, should not be held responsible for systems of fraud utterly opposed to every principle taught by them, as the record itself fully proves. If Spiritualists could lay aside the prejudices of education, forget what they have suffered from false teachings, and read that record as they do the Bhagvat-Geeta, or the teachings of Confucius, they would find in it the highest standard of morals, the purest principles of spiritual religious knowledge and power ever revealed and embodied in human language. In the teachings of Jesus and his Apostles there is nothing which the most highly developed, refined, and intellectual Spiritualist of this age, could reject. Jesus himself taught all the principles of spiritual knowledge and power now known among Spiritualists. All that distinguishes them from other sects and parties, was taught and practiced by them, and these facts can be proved by the Record so plainly that it cannot be doubted by any who acknowledge its authority. The new truths of this age are exactly in accordance with these old truths which all Christendom acknowledges. Now, instead of fighting the churches, and arousing a spirit of bitter antagonism among the thousands of clergymen whose influence over the people is very great, would it not be wiser and better to show them in a spirit of love and liberality, that he in whom they trust and believe has said: "He that believeth in me the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father." Show them that the promise is to them and their children, and to all believers every where in all ages. Teach them that the great spiritual outpouring of these last days was foretold by the ancient prophets, and repeated by the Apostles.

"It shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, that I will pour out of my spirit upon all flesh; your sons and your daughters shall prophecy, your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams." (Acts chap 2 vers 17.) Teach them that the spiritual power so universally manifested among all classes, ages and conditions in these days, comes not from the Devil, but is the literal fulfilment of the above prophecy and promise of the God they believe in. All the spiritual gifts now claimed by Spiritualists, they taught were designed for all people, and to continue through all ages, such as ministering spirits, communion of saints (the departed), inspiration for all, wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing the sick, casting out evil spirits, visions, trances, prophecy, divers kinds of tongues, interpretations, discerning of spirits, etc.

It has been the object of the Roman Catholic church to confine these spiritual manifestations entirely to the Priesthood, while Protestants have generally rejected them altogether. But God has not been without witness, for in all ages and nations, spiritual manifestations have been common; and what is remarkable, the testimony of all ages corresponds in principle, and all essential particulars, with those of the present age. Prove to the churches, by their own sacred books, that these spiritual gifts are the very same as taught and practiced by Jesus and his disciples; that they were not, as clergymen teach, miraculous gifts, designed to establish their mission, but were the natural fruits of the gospel, the "good tidings" of spiritual knowledge and power, brought to light by the ministry of Christ, the "anointed," the one chosen by the higher spiritual powers to do this work because better qualified for it than any other; just as persons are now chosen because they are mediums; persons who stand between the two worlds; connecting the material and spiritual, the human and the divine. This divine spiritual knowledge and power received by direct inspiration, with the whole sum and substance of the gospel, was the "glad tidings" they were sent to proclaim. "Heal the sick, bind up the broken hearted, do good to all; love God with all your heart and soul, and your neighbor as yourself." This is the gospel of Jesus. Why should Spiritualists fight against it? To this creed, [illegible] subscribe without a dissenting vote. [illegible] stead of antagonism, there would be a [illegible] nd of union between Christians and Spiritualists.

M. L. S.

"BUNCOMBE"

Letter from A. B. C. Orr.

Brother Jones:—I noticed an article in your issue of July 29 h, headed "Buncombe," in which the writer has by a species of argumentation peculiar to herself entirely annihilated the theory of artificial somnambulism, as advanced by Dr. Wm. B. Fahnestock, as well as completely demolished your very humble servant, myself. Were it not for a series of gross misstatements embodied in said article, injurious to Dr. F., I would feel disposed to pass it in silence.

Permit me now, Mr. Editor, to notice and correct some of the misstatements to which I have referred.

1st.—I never was a "medium for Dr. F.," or any one else. I have been, for the last thirty-five years a Bible Spiritualist, with the occasional power of entering at will, the clairvoyant condition and seeing spirits since my earliest recollection, but I have never made mediumship a business, either "secretly," or openly.

2d.—It is simply untrue that the theory of Dr. F. on artificial somnambulism, or any part of it, was ever given through me. Dr. F.'s work, or at least a large portion of it, was in manuscript before I had the honor of his acquaintance.

3 d.—It is equally false that I ever "secretly threw aside the clerical vestments to don the somnambulic state." The unequivocal avowal of my sentiments and convictions, both publicly and privately, has been the practice of my entire life, and I stand to-day, in both church and state, where I have ever stood.

I trust I will be pardoned for this seeming ego tism. Like Paul on one occasion, I have been compelled to do it.

But suppose that it is literary curiosity had all been true, would it have established the existence of animal magnetism, or have disproved the theory of Dr. F? Certainly not. As it is the only objects attained seems to be, forcing on the public a conviction that the opinion once expressed by a reverend doctor was not without foundation.

In conclusion, Mr Editor permit me to say that with your concurrence, I offer your correspondents the following proposition, viz:

If the considers herself capable—of which I have no doubt—of discussing the existence of animal magnetism philosophically, and things she can observe and appreciate ordinary courtesies usually govern in gentlemanly circumstances, I shall be very happy to give her the opportunity of "spreading" to her heart's content.

Harrisburg, Penn., July 1871.

Letter from R. B. Hall.

Brother Jones:—The good people on the golden shores of the Pacific are in much need of a medium for physical manifestations, and upon this subject I have been solicited to address you, believing you would give us the required information.

Mrs. Foye, the celebrated rapping medium, has retired from public life, and has not given seances for over two years. It is believed by those best posted, that the time has come for a No. 1 medium, who is honest truthful, and whose God shall not be money. Such a medium as described, who will make a permanent home in San Francisco, at least for four or five years, can no doubt make a perfect, satisfactory living, and a constant and paying income. The time for such demonstration as the Davenports,' is now ripe for a rich harvest, in more ways than one. There never were so many inquiries as now, for physical manifestations. Our leading citizens are becoming interested, and many of them are already fulfilled Spiritualists.

What we want is that the medium shall come untrammeled, without any hangers-on, to occupy his or her time, and I repeat, must be truthful, honest, and of good repute in all things. If such an one you know of, and will do me the kindness to send them my address, or this note, that I may correspond with them on the subject, I think I can make it to their interest, to come to our coast. I repeat, that none but a No. 1 medium need apply

We have been nearly overrun with speaking mediums; in that direction there is a lull. The current is changing into a different channel. I think there is a Mrs. Maud Lord in Chicago, and the Bangs children, that would take here. However, let me hear from you on the subject, and in the mean time, I would like to hear from some medium, to whom you send this or my address. Direct to me at 710 Fulsom St., San Francisco, Cal.

Letter from N. E. Doane.

Brother Jones:—I am under the ban of the churches (of which we have two), and the little Sunday school children are taught or cautioned not to pass my door, or enter the threshold,—of which I don't complain; but it would save me an amount of trouble if their parents or moral teachers would keep them from stealing my plums, and other depredations committed by them at my expense. I suppose, however, that my religious proclivities constitute me a legal prey for Christian thieves, and as I live alone in their midst, I am pelted every Sunday from their "coward's castles" with all manner of missiles, and frequently referred to by the pious age who talks from the pulpit, as "that man who spends his means and time in procuring and reading such books and papers as lead to all forms of Carlat, such as those which Hell and damnation on the cover of his Bible that lies upon the shelf unread." Thus you see they are not satisfied at having hell within, but want hell without; and that is not all;—were it not for the dear Journal, which I receive regularly (through some kind friend) and what few books can buy from my own means to keep my soul from starving, I should be literally smothered to death in this hot-bed of hell and damnation before I ever reached the other world. O, how I long to hear some good Spiritual discurse, and shake hands with a brother. It would give me fresh courage to battle alone. Some how are beginning to wake up; to turn over and breathe fresh. I give them the Journal to read, and prepared homeopath ic doses for them; and if my efforts should prove the nucleus of Spiritualism among them, I will be well rewarded for the privations that I have suffered.

Cromwell, Ind.

Letter from Eli F. Brown.

Brother Jones:—During July, it was our pleasure to assist the Spiritualists of Dayton, Ohio, to form themselves into a society. We think they have entered into the work with a spirit and purpose, that will make their efforts productive of much good to the cause.

The following officers were elected:

O. W. Kelley, President; Mrs. Gary, Vice-President; Wm. H. Best, Secretary; W. C. Carr, Treasurer; J. Gary, Miss Ann Musser, and Dr. C. Bradley, Trustees.

Spiritualism and liberality of thought are rife in the hearts of the people all through Ohio. There is such a dissatisfaction on the part of possible, evangelical people with the ideas of orthodoxy, that good live lecturers upon matters of vital interest and importance are in great demand. We ask that the society at Dayton be received into full fellowship with all who desire to work for the good and the true. All correspondence should be addressed to Wm. H. Best, Secretary.

Our next field of labor will be at Blooming Valley, Crawford County, Pennsylvania. Our permanent address will hereafter be Richmond, Ind.

Richmond, Ind., Aug. 1, 1871.

Voices from the People.

Gallipolis, Ohio.—J. Alexander writes.—We receive the Journal weekly. Mrs. Alexander takes every opportunity of presenting it to the notice of the people, and hopes to send you more subscribers soon. I think we could not do without it.

Romeo, Mich.—E. H. Ewell writes.—I keep the little book, "The Sunday Question," etc., constantly circulating, doing good. That kind of reading is getting in good demand here.

Eastman, Ga.—C. W. Chase writes.—You may guess how we look forward to the day for the paper, only wishing that it might come out the sun each day, and that we were as sure, as we are willing, to drop a copy at each door in this county. It is a new county, only six months old, but there are many old settlers here,—one million one hundred, and many never heard the word spiritualism, or any other word that would tend to enlighten them. Hell, and eternal smashing of teeth is held out to them in abundance.

Battle Creek, Mich.—H. Willis writes.—The inclosed three dollars is for next year's Journal. Glad to have an independent such a paper. Long may it live to gladden our hearts.

Otter Creek, Mo.—D. T. Edwards writes.—It is with pleasure I acknowledge the receipt by last mail, of a certificate of letter of fellowship. Also with letter from yourself. I will be thankful for the privilege of a seat in one of the pews in the columns of the Journal. So many more able pens than mine are doing so much for the cause, that I feel constrained to remain still. So much has been said about Brother Francis' "search after God," and some seem to be greatly hurt because he is about to vanish, myth-like, as he certainly is. I never expected that he would be found, but still believe greatest thing so much good argument could be adduced as are been by the other Francis. Go on, Brother, some will appreciate your labor.

Shingle House, Penn.—Jona. Stevens writes. Please find inclosed one dollar, for which, send me the Journal for three months, the book entitled "The Sunday Question," and "Bell Contradictions of the Bible," also "Life Unfolding." For two to May 1, according to our position of June 25h. We have taken the Banner of Light the most of the time since its publication like it very much; wish to try the Journal in addition. Keep Sunday Question to bringing to light many new ideas. We held a two day's grove meeting the 24 h and 25 h of June. Speaker, Emma U. Woodruff. On naturday it rained nearly all day,—the usually well held no meeting in the grove. At five o'clock Saturday evening she delivered a lecture at our school house to a good and attentive audience. On Sunday the day was fine, and the people came from all directions, to the number of about 1,500 as I understand, the largest ever heard a lecture on the subject of Spiritualism before. She gave two lectures, one in the forenoon and one in the afternoon. The impression she gave to the audience, judging from the conversation and from what has been said since she left, was most happy. One says, "If that is Spiritualism, I am a Spiritualist." Another says, "I will give two dollars a lecture for every one she will deliver here in our place." Another says, "If that is a specimen of the talent you have in your ranks, I am afraid orthodoxy is destined to go to the wall." These sayings were from men that are not Spiritualists, but those who were seeking for more light. The meeting was a grand success. I think more people can be reached by holding grove meetings, than in any other way.

Parma, N. Y.—M. Clark writes.—A little more than three months ago a sick daughter forwarded to you the sum of one dollar for "trial," and the Journal came, a happy surprise to me. The daughter in the bean y and bloom of youth has since passed on to the Summer Land, where her pure and meritous nature here must also be her there a place among angels of the upper spheres. She is gone, and I now cling with still greater tenacity to that which was her gift. I am a reader of the "Search," and feel anxious to see where God shall be found. I think the Journal is doing a good work through your widely circulated and rightly named Philosophic Journal.

Starfield, Ill.—S. J. Moore writes.—I have read a few numbers of the Journal containing the "Search after God," and am free to say that it is the best paper I have ever seen. It ought to be published in book form.

Glen Easton, West Va.—M. W. Hartman writes.—I send you to-day one dollar for the Journal, and wish it was more; but in one time it will be forthcoming. I was astonished to see the remarks by O. White of Lake Pleasant mineral in the paper in regard to the "search after God." I wonder if those persons are afraid of being deprived of their God by J. R Francis; or are they so bad off that they never had any God? There are some who believe in liberality, and yet have expressed an orthodox intolerance.

Remarks:—No; brother. You should not be surprised at others not agreeing with us—we are not. We are only giving the views of one who has been long in spirit-life; who on earth was a Roman Catholic and a distinguished barrister at law.

R. J Sanford writes.—God found! and Brother Francis does not! "May the God of the Father, is eternal truth; therefore perfect wisdom, justice, love and mercy; the devil is falsehood, intolerance, superstition, bigotry, and slander. Are these eternal? God forbid! The effects of these will be upon my spirit, as long as I exist hereafter, but they shall yield to truth at last. There seems to be expectation, in some quarters, of the second coming of Christ, and as to whom he comes to save. Only to those who look for him. He comes neither to the Jew nor to the Gentile, the book nor the iron, the white nor the black, because they are such; nor to the Catholic, or Methodist, or any other sect or party, but to the true worshipers of that church; but to those who shall have put off the animal, and put on the spiritual; put off falsehood and put on truth; put off folly and put on wisdom; put off revenge and put on love and mercy; put off hatred and put on love; put off idolatry and put on godliness; put off sectarian hatred and put on brotherly love. These and none others he comes to save, because in the very nature of God the Father, he can not save any other.

Juein Springs, Kansas.—J. C. Marshall writes.—My subscription expired April 1st. Inclosed please find one dollar for renewal. Times are tight, so I must ask the privilege of renewing by the months as we can not think of doing without the Journal. The cause is in a flourishing condition here. There are many persons here not afraid to think, that leans Spiritualism a bearing, and a hearing is all we ask. Dr. A. H. Davis, of La Cygne, says, he has no doubt of the truth of the Gospels." So he is this side of the grave. There are many embryo mediums in this county. All that seems to be necessary to develop mediumship, is to sit in circles.

Remarks:—All right, brother. We accommodate ourselves to the ability and convenience of our subscribers. All we ask is honest, square dealing.

Strict integrity is essential to, and will insure success in any enterprise—developing mediums not excepted.

Albion, Io. A.—H. M. Benson writes.—You will find inclosed two dollars and twenty-five cents to pay for the Journal. We think a great deal of it. Brother Francis, I have not believed in a God for several years, but the idea of human beings creating and governing planets, is new to me, and is alone worth several times the subscription price of your valuable paper. Of course we would like to know who made the first planet,—that is human nature,—but will wait for the good time coming.

Price-List of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books, as named, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies	.75	.12
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Fahnestock	1.50	.20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers	.50	.05
Alice Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker	1.50	.18
American Crisis, by Warren Chase	.75	.07
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Device	1.50	.20
Apocryphal New Testament	1.25	.16
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orris Abbot. Paper	.50	.05
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth	.50	.06
A Lecture in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. J. A. Logan	.15
Annals of Nature; or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	.20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	.20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child	.50	.06
Arabula, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis	1.50	.20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph	1.00
Cloth	1.50	.20
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis	1.25	.16
Apostles, (translated from the French) by Renan	1.75	.20
A Stellar Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis	1.00	.16
Astro Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor	2.00	.24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by M. C. Wright, small edition	.50	.08
Large Edition	1.50	.15
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Toulmin, M. D	.50	.8
An Eye Opener, by Zope. Cloth,	.75	.12
Paper	.50	.08
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story	.15	.2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster	.15	.02
Analogy Between the facts of the Bible and the Facts of other Spiritualists, by T. G. Forster	.15	.02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle	1.25	.20
Biography of Satan, By E. Graver Price 35 Cents		.02
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child	1.00	.15
Blossoms of Our Spring, (a Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle		.16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen
Book of Health, by J. Wm. Van Namee. Cloth
Branches of Palm, by Mrs. J. S. Adams, a book of every Spiritualist
Beautiful, by Professor W. Denton	.10	.2
Bhagvat-Geeta, or Krishna Now T. stament	1.25	.16
Bringing Him against the Laws of Life and Health, by E. S. Gardner, A. M., M. D. Paper	.50	.06
Cloth	1.00	.16
Cumbers' Constitution of Man	1.75	.16
Common Sense Thoughts on the Bible, by William Denton	.10	.02
Cosmology, by G. W. Ramsay, M. D	.50	.05
Christ Idea in Jesus, by Thomas Paine	1.00	.12
Christ Idea in History, H. Tuttle	1.25	.16
Chester Family, or the Curse of the Drunkard's Appetite, by Julia M. Friend, with an Introduction by C. O. Wright	1.00	.12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M. D	1.25	.16
Christianity No Finality or Spiritualism Superior to Christianity	.10	.02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by H. B. Craven	1.00	.16
Development of man, by Darwin Two Vols. ($2.00 per Vol)	4.00	.48
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Interesting History	1.00	.20
Day of Doom, a Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the sixth edition of 1715	1.00	.12
Devil's Pulpit, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life	2.00	.20
Dawn. A Novel of intense interest to progressive people	1.75	.24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph	.75	.12
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 8, cloth	.75	.12
Errors of the Bible. Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature. By Henry C. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth	.50	.6
Sister Hall, a Theological Romance	.50	.06
Empire of the Mother, over the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright. Paper	.50	.04
Cloth	.75	.12
Epistle on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen	1.75	.24
Epic Thoughts Concerning Religion, or Nature v s Theology, by A. J. Davis	.20	.2
Fugitive Wife, by Warren Chase. Paper	.25	.4
Fugitive Wife, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Medium		.2
Gazelle, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle	1.25	.16
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase	.50	.04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 5 vols, viz: Vol. 1 The Physician; Vol. 2. The Teacher; Vol. 3. The Seer; Vol. 4. The Reformer; Vol. 5. The Thinker. Each	1.50	.20
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students	.10	.2
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	.16
God Proved from Bible Sources, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth, $1 00; postage, 12 cents. Paper,	.75	.06
Habits of Good Society	1.75	.20
Hereafter, or Gleanings from the Past, by G. Stewart	1.00	.08
Health by good Living W. W. Hall M. D	1.50	.20
Hedged In, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps	1.00	.12
Heaven and Hell, by Emanuel Swedenborg	1.25	.16
History and Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy compared	1.25	.16
Heads of the Intellectual Development of Europe, by J. W. Draper, M. D. L. L. D. cloth	2.00	.20
Human Physiology, Statistical and Dynamical, or the Conditions and Course of the Life of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D. L. L. D. 650 pages, cloth $3.50 sheep	4.50	.60
History of the supernatural, (2 Vols., 540 pages each	3.00	.45
Hit. by Dr. Mary E. Walker	1.50	.16
Intuition, by Mrs. F. Kingman	1.25	.16
Immortal Truths, or Every child	1.25	.16
Is the Bible Divine? by S. J. Finney, paper	.25	.2
Cloth	.50	.6
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con	.50	.6
Inquirer's Text Book, by Robert Cooper	1.25	.16
Instructive Communications from the Spirit Land, Mrs. M. S. Park, Medium	1.25	.16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds	1.25	.16
Infidel, or Inquirer's Text Book, by Robert Cooper	.50	.6
Is it the Despair of Science? by W. D. Gunning	.15	.02
Jesus of Nazareth, by Alexander Smyth	1.50	.20
Jewish Crucifixion, or the Chastisement of the Jewish Deity Delineated	.25	.4
Joan of Arc—A Biography, translated from the French, by Sarah M. Grimke	1.00	.12
Kiddie's Secrets of Bee Keeping. Price, paper bound 50 cents. Board bound	.75	.08
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale 8 vo. 670 pages. An edition just published	2.00	.60
Koran with Life of Mohammed, Translated by George Sale, Gent. 12 mo., 476 pages	1.50	.24
Little Joe the Lone One, by Warren Jones	1.00	.12
Life's Unbidden Guest	.50	.5
Life of Thomas Paine, with critical and explanatory observations of his writings, by G. Vale	1.00	.12
Life of Jesus, by Renan	1.75	.16
Love and the Wisdom History, by F. B. Randolph	1.50	.16
Lyrics of the Golden Age, by T. L. Harris	1.00	.20
Legalized Prostitution, or Marriages as it, and as it is should Be, by C. S. Woodruff, M. D	1.00	.16
Life and Moral Actions of Confucius, by H. E. S. Wright	.25	.02
Letters to Peter Miles Grant, by Rev. Moses Hull	.25	.02
Living Present, Dead Past. H. C. Wright. Cloth	.75	.08
Paper	.50	.6
Lyceum Guide. Cloth cover	1.00	.16
Boards	.75	.12
Paper cover	.50	.06
My Love and I, by Abby M. Laflin	1.50	.20
Magic Staff, an Auto-Biography of A. J. Davis	2.00	.24
Moments, by Myron Colony	1.25	.12
Marriage and Parentage, by Henry C. Wright	1.50	.20
Ministry of Angels Realized, by A. E. Newton	.75	.08
Midnight Prayer	.10	.2
Manual and the Soldier, by Mercius Hanson	1.00	.12
Mrs. Prince Life	1.50	.20
Small edition	1.00	.12
Record of Life, by D. S. Gabriel	.50	.06
by A. J. Davis	.50	.6
	.50	.6
	.25	.4
	.25	.4
Man a Unity, by T. G. Forster	.15	.02
Man a Re—ous Animal, by T. G. Forster	.15	.02
Mount Auburn Obituary Collection 1854 to 1866, by Hamm	.50	.06
Mary's Night, or how would you like it, by Annie Denton	.25	.4
Morning Lectures (Seventy Discourses) by A. J. Davis	1.50	.20

and his relations, by Professor S. B. Brittain 4.00 .60
Nature's Divine Revelations, by Andrew Jackson Davis 2.00 .24
New Testament Miracles, and Modern Miracles, by J. H. Fowler .10 .4
Night Side of Nature, by Crowe 1.25 .20
Ordeal of Life. Through Dr. J. C. Grimes' Medium .25 .04
Orthodoxy Tales, about Spiritualism in Texas, by Wm. Denton .10 .20
Our Planet, Geology by Denton 1.50 .20
Outlines The Lesson of Ages .75 .12
Origin of Species by Darwin 2.00 .24
Origin of Civilization and Primitive Condition of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock 2.00 .24
One Religion, Many One God, by Rev. Wm. Case 1.5 .12
Origin of Species, with Notes and References by G. F. Kittridge .16 .02
Persons and Events, by A. J. Davis 2.00 .24
Pre-Adamite Man, by Randolph 1.50 .20
Physiology of Woman by G. Morril, M. D 1.50 .20
Planchette—The despair of Science, by Epes Sargent 1.25 .16
Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. A. J. Davis. Paper 50 cts; postage 8 cts Cloth .75 .10
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M. King 1.75 .24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lizzie Doten 1.25 .16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Horace Wood, Medium. Cloth, .50 .06
Paper .25 .04
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Mrs Maria M. King 1.00 .16
Rules for Forming Spiritual Circles, by Emma Hardinge .5 .02
Sexual Physiology, by R. T. Trall, M. D 2.00 .20
Strange Visitors, Dictated through a clairvoyant 1.50 .20
Spiritual Harp 2.00 .24
Abridged Edition 1.00 .15
Sequel to The Love Life, by the Spirit of Dr. B. R. Rose .20 .2
Spiritual Tracts by Judge Edmonds .20 .4
Self Abnegation, or the true King and Queen, by H. C. Wright, Paper .50 .6
Cloth .75 .12
Spiritualism, or Directions to Development, by A. M. Ladis Farrar .50 .6
Soul Affinity, by A. B. Child, M. D .50 .06
Sacrifice to the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. H. O. G. Willard 2.00 .24
Six Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Emma Hardinge, Paper .75 .08
Cloth 1.00 .16
Scat of Things, by William and Elizabeth Denton 1.50 .20
Spirit Manifestations, by Rev. Adin Ballou .50 .06
Spirit Mysteries Explained, by A. J. Davis 1.50 .20
Supremacy of Reason, by Moses Hull .10 .02
Social Evils by Mrs. M. M. King .25
Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism, by Mrs. M. M. King .20
Sense and Nonsense, S. M. Landis, M. D 1.50 .20
Songs of Life, —H. W. Tucker .20 .02
Spiritual Songs, by H. W. Tucker .15 .02
Spirit Life of Theodore Parker, through the Mediumship of Miss H. Ramsdell .40 .02
Seven Hour System of Grammar, by Prof. D. P. Bliss 1.00 .16
Shoe ship, Randolph 2.00 .20
Spiritual Manifestations, by J. S. Rue 1.0 .02
Sunday Question and self contradictions of the Bible .50 .06
Synagogue .10 .02
The Fountain, by A. J. Davis 1.00 .15
The Irreconcilable Records, or Genesis and Geology, by Wm. Denton, Cloth .25 .04
Paper .40 .06
The Bible in Exile, 2.00 .20
The Faithful Lucretia, an Inspirational Story, by J. William Van Namee, 1.50 .16
The Bible in the Balance 1.50 .20
The Celestial Quarterly, by Moses Hull .10 .02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. B. Davis .5 .02
The Dynamic Cure, by Leroy Sunderland .25 .02
Tale of A Physician, by A. J. Davis, 1.25 .16
The Future Life, by Mrs. Sweet 1.50 .20
The Question Settled, by Hull 1.50 .20
The Seven Wife Open, by George Wood 1.50 .20
The Seven Aims, by Miss E. F. Phelps 1.50 .16
The Orphan's Strength, by Mrs. H. Green 1.50 .16
The Travel Diver by Dr. G. W. Kirby 1.25 .16
The Gospel of Good and Evil, by Silver 1.50 .16
The Trance, by Leroy Sunderland 1.25 .16
The Great South-West, by W. Nicolas 1.00 .8
The Merits of Jesus Christ and the Merits of Thomas Paine as a substitute for merits in others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright .25 .2
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire. Fifth American edition, 576 octavo pages, two steel plates, largest and most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $12 00 2.00 .60
The Gospels, by Rev. Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a history of the origin, evidences, and early history of Christianity 2.00 .32
The Inner Mystery, an Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten .20 .02
The Children, William Denton .5 .2
The Voices, by Warren Sumner Barlow 1.25 .16
The Ignorant Philosophers, a treatise .25 .2
The Woman who Dared, by Epes Sargent 1.50 .20
Theological and Miscellaneous Writings of Thomas Paine 2.00 .24
Thomas Paine's Pilgrimage in the Spirit World .75 .08
The System of Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D' Holbach 2.00 .24
The Problem of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover .50 .04
Board cover .75 .10
Cloth 1.00 .10
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D. .20 .02
The Penetralia, by A. J. Davis 1.75 .24
The Tell a, a Satirical Poem .75 .10
The Konkordian Dream Book, compiled from all the language by P. B. Randolph .50 .06
The Art of Conversation 1.25 .16
The Art of Speaking, Reading, and Speaking 1.50 .16
Undertalk on Mesmerism, Post-paid 1.50
Unhappy Marriage, by A. B. Child .50 .2
Unwelcome Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper .50 .4
Cloth .75 .12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow .50 .05
Vestiges of Creation .75 .06
Vital Force, how wasted and how preserved, by R. P. Miller, M. D. Paper, 50 cts.; Cloth, 1.00 .12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Daru 1.00 .12
What is Right, William Denton .10 .2
What is Spiritualism, and Shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? by Mrs. M. M. King .35
Whether in, is Right, A. B. Child, M. D 1.00 .16
Writings of Orasmus .10 .02
Wolf in sheep's Clothing, or God in the Constitution. Moses Hull .10 .02
Year Book of Spiritualism. Cloth, Paper 1.50 .20
1.00 .06

WE ARE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular retail rates, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as may be desired. If sent by mail, one fifth more than the regular cost of the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited as much as assistance for books, buy postal orders when practicable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

H. SNOW,

819 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, O tzo's Anti-Tobacco Preparations, Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & co.'s Golden Pens, Planchettes, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. Remittances in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HERMAN SNOW, P. O. Box 137, San Francisco, Cal.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,

No 601 NORTH FIFTH ST, ST LOUIS MO.,

Keep constantly on hand all the publications of the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular liberal literature, including Religio-Philosophical Journal and Banner of Light, Magazines, Photographs, Parlor Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

PARKER'S
BREECH LOADING DOUBLE BARRELED
SHOT GUN
BEST IN THE WORLD.
PARKER BROTHERS, WEST MERIDEN, CONN.
SEND FOR A CIRCULAR
New York Office, 97 REEKMAN ST.

THE MAGNETIC TABLE-TURNER.
SEND THE CENTS TO DR. ANDREW STONE, TROY N. Y., and obtain a large, highly illustrated book on the Science of Wandering Instruments.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railroad—Council Bluffs and Omaha Line—Depot North Wells street

Ticket Office, south-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Cedar Rapids Passenger	8.30 a. m.	6.50 p. m.
Pacific Past Line	*10.45 a. m.	*3.50 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.30 a. m.	*3.50 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	†10.00 p. m.	†7.00 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	†10.00 p. m.	†7.00 a. m.
Dixon Passenger	*4.00 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.

Prospect Line.

Prospect and Dunsleith Pass	*9.00 a. m.	*7.15 a. m.
Prospect and Dunsleith Pass	*9.00 p. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Rockford, Rigin, Fox River and State Line	*4.00 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.
St. Charles and Elgin Passenger	*4.15 p. m.	*8.45 a. m.
Junction Passenger	5.30 p. m.	9.30 a. m.
Lombard Accommodation	*8.10 p. m.	*8.50 a. m.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukee Mail	*8.30 a. m.	*10.10 a. m.
Day Express	*4.45 a. m.	*4.0 p.m.
Evanston Accommodation	*12.00 a. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Rose Hill, Evanston, and Highland Park	1.00 p. m.	3.40 p. m.
Afternoon Pass	*4.45 p. m.	*7.40 p. m.
Lincoln Passenger	*6.10 p. m.	*8.50 a. m.
Waukegan Passenger	*6.30 p. m.	*8.35 a. m.
Waukegan	11.00 p. m.	7.45 a. m.
Waukegan	11.00 p. m.	*7.45 a. m.

Kenosha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street Depot.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street

St Paul Express	*12.00 a. m.	*7.10 p. m.
Night Passenger	*9.00 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Janesville Accommodation	*3.00 p. m.	*1.00 p. m.
Woodstock Accommodation	*6.00 p. m.	*10.10 p. m.
Barrington Accommodation	*5.15 p.m.	7.45 a. m.

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.
E. P. Hammond, General Ticket Agent

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road,

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. Ticket Office 66 South Clark street.

Mail	*8.30 a. m.	*7.00 p m
Special N Y Express	*12.00 m.	*4.00 p m.
Hitchardt Accommodation	*2.30 p.m	*10.30 a. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	5.15 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Night Express	*9.00 p. m.	*8.30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Line.

Day Express	*7.30 a. m.	*7.05 p m
Night "	*9.00 p. m.	*8.35 a. m.

F. B. MOSES, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Railroad—Union Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office Lake st., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

Mail Train	*8.30 a. m.	*8.05 p. m.
Fast New York Express	*9.00 a. m.	*5.40 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	12.00 m.	*7.00 p. m.
Night Express	*5.15 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Kalamazoo Accommodation	*4.10 p. m.	*12.00 m.

Cincinnati and Louisville Trains

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*9.20 p. m.
Through Express	12.00 p. m.	†8.30 a. m.

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	*8.00 a. m.	*11.30 a. m.
Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*2.05 p. m.

HENRY C. WENTWORTH, General Passenger Agent.
H. B. RAMSAY, Gen'l Superintendent, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

	*7.45 a. m.	*8.15 p. m.
	†7.30 a. m.	2.40 p. m.
	*11.45 a. m.	*4.15 p.m
	*1.45 p. m.	*5.20 p. m.
	*4.30 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
	*9.00 p. m.	*7.20 p. m.
	*4.30 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
	*8.15 p. m.	*4.50 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	10.00 p. m.	†7.00 a. m.

ROSWELL HARRIS, Superintendent.
SAMUEL POWELL, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office 63 Clt. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	*9.00 a. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Cairo Express	*5.15 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Kankakee Day Passenger	*3.15 p. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Kankakee Night Passenger	*9.00 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
On Saturdays this train will leave at	4.45 p. m.
Champaign Passenger	*4.45 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Hyde Park and Oak Woods	*9.00 a. m.	*7.45 a. m.
" " "	*2.45 a. m.	*9.21 a. m.
" " "	*5.30 p. m.	*7.45 p. m.
" " "	†12.30 p. m.	†7.45 p. m.
" " "	*4.30 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
" " "	*8.15 p. m.	*4.50 a. m.
" " "	*8.30 p. m.	*7.05 p. m.
(St. Louis through Trains.)
Day Express	*9.30 a. m.	*8.15 p. m.
Fast Line	*6.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.

H. HOUGHTY, Gen'l Supt.

A. P. JOHNSON, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

Michigan, Fort Wayne and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Michigan and Canal Streets.

Mail	*8.30 a. m.	6.10 p. m.
Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	6.00 a. m.
Atlantic Express	5.15 p. m.	8.00 p. m.
New York Express	9.00 p. m.	6.00 a. m.
Valparaiso Accommodation	*5.30 p. m.	7.30 a. m.

W. G. CLELAND, Gen. West'n Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st.

Chicago and St. Louis—Depot, corner Madison and Canal st.

Express Mail	*9.15 a. m.	*8.00 p. m.
Joliet Accommodation	*5.30 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Night Express	11.30 p. m.	6.00 a. m.
Lightning Express	2 9.00 p. m.	*8.35 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and Sundays excepted. §Except Monday.

T. B. BLACKSTONE, Pres. & Gen'l Superintendent.
A. NEWMAN, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Office 66 Dearborn st.

CHICAGO, DANVILLE AND VINCENNES RAILROAD.

Milwaukee Depot—Corner Canal and Kinzie Sts., West Side. Freight Office at C., D. & L. G. Co.'s Office, corner Halsted and Carroll sts.

Mail Train Chicago time 8.45 p. m. 9.15 a. m

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, cor Van Buren and Sherman Streets.

Pacific day Express	12.00 a.m.	*4.15 p.m.
" Accommodation	*4.30 p.m.	*9.30 a.m.
Pacific Night Express	12.00 p.m.	*7.00 a.m.

An elegant new sleeping car is run on the 12 m. train, running through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

H. HOUGH, Gen'l Ticket Manager Agent.
R. St. JOHN, Gen'l Freight Agent.
P. A. HALL, Asst'Gen Superintendent.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

Cincinnati Express	*6.45 a. m.	6.40 p. m.
Columbus Express	*9.45 a. m.	*2.30 p. m.
Cincinnati Night Express	*7.45 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.
Columbus Night Express	11.45 p. m.
Lansing Accommodation	*5.30 p. m.	9.15 a. m.

H. B. RAMSAY, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Ticket Office Corner Randolph and Dearborn streets.

Goodrich's Passenger Steamers.

For Milwaukee and West Shore ports *daily at 8 00 a. m.
For Grand Haven and East Shore ports *daily at 7.00 p. m.
For St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, daily at 10 00 a.m.
Green Bay Ports, Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 p. m.

*Sundays excepted. †Mondays excepted. ‡Saturdays excepted.

CHRISTIANITY

ITS ORIGIN, NATURE AND TENdency considered in the light of Astro-Theology.

By D. W. Hull.

This book is, so far as it goes, a thorough review of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plagiarized from ancient heathens. Being unlike almost any other work ever written on the subject, it cannot but be deeply interesting to all. Its explanations of Inspirations are lucid, and as self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office.

Price at retail, 35 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding Nature, and Spirit world, by Hudson Tuttle. Price 75 cents, postage, 12 cents.

REPLY OF WASH. A. DANSKIN, ESQ., PRESIDENT of the First Spiritualist Congregation of Baltimore, to Rev. Thomas E. Bond, D. D., late, in reply to Rev. Thomas E. Bond, D. D., late, in reply to Bond, 15 cents; postage, 2 cents. For sale at the office of the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR PSYCHOMETRIC RESEARCHES AND DISCOVERIES By William and Elizabeth M. F. Denton.

This valuable and highly interesting work has become part of the standard literature of the country.

Price, $1.50cts, Postage, 20cts.

LECTURES ON GEOLOGY, THE PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR PLANET. A valuable scientific work.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

COMMON SENSE THOUGHTS ON THE BIBLE. For Common Sense people. Twelfth thousand, revised and enlarged.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

THE DELUGE, IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

WHAT IS RIGHT. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

BE THYSELF. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

For sale at THE RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL Office.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW WORKS BY PROF. DENTON.

"ORTHODOXY FALSE,

Since Spiritualism is True."

Price, 10 cents: postage, 2 cents.

THE IRRECONCILABLE RECORDS, OR GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

200 pages. Price: paper, 35 cents, postage, 4 cts cloth, 40 cents, postage 8 cts.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

A BOOK FOR WOMEN;

TALKS TO MY PATIENTS,

BY

MRS. R. B. GLEASON, M.D.

A book by a woman, for women, on the diseases of the sex. The LIBERAL CHRISTIAN, speaking of the book says:

"After reading the whole of this book, we pronounce it the most admirable and excellent we have ever had of its class It is written for women; it is full of wise counsels and suggestions regarding the very things in which so many people most need guidance. It is a safe book for young people to read, for any body indeed, and this can be said of very few books devoted to such subjects. There is not a sentence in what can be perverted or abused, so as to do any harm. We wish the book could be read in every household in our country."

Harper's Magazine says:

"We wish the chapter 'Confidential to Mothers,' might be published as a tract and sent to every Mother in the land."

Mrs. Dr. Sales says:

"I would rather have written that book than been queen of the greatest empire on this small globe of ours!"

Godey's Lady's Book says:

"This book treats in a thorough yet delicate manner of all the troubles, cares, and diseases of women. We do not hesitate to say that it is the best book of its class we have yet seen."

Price, $1 50; postage, 16 cents. Address RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 159 S. Clark street, Chicago.

CONJUGAL SINS

AGAINST THE

LAWS OF LIFE AND HEALTH,

AND

THEIR EFFECT ON THE FATHER MOTHER AND CHILD.

BY AUGUSTUS K. GARDNER, A. M., M. D.

Late Professor of Diseases of Females and Chemical Medical Midwifery in the New York Medical College.

CONTENTS.

I. The Modern Women' Physical Deterioration II Local disease in children and its cause III At what age should one Marry IV. Is Continence physically injurious. V. Sexual Periodicity. VI. The injurious results of Physical Excess VII Methods used to prevent Conception and their consequences VIII Infanticide. IX Conjugal relations during the period of Menstruation X. Conjugal relations between the old XI Marriage between Old Men and Young Girls XII What can be done. With Health in View. and the fearful God before us. Appendix

Price in cloth. $1.50. postage 16 cents; in paper, $1.00 Postage 8 cents. The Trade Supplied.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 and 189 So. Clark St., Chicago Ill.

The Most Interesting Relic and Curiosity in the Christian World ever Discovered.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED

BY

THE AMERICAN ENGRAVING CO.,

40 & 42 Main St.,

BRIDGEWATER, CONN.

Price, $2.50.

A finely-executed Engraving,

THE ONLY TRUE LIKENESS

OF

Our Savior.

TAKEN

From one cut in an Emerald by command of Tiberius Cæsar and which was given from the Treasury of Constantinople, by the Emperor of the Turks to Pope Innocent VIII for the Redemption of his Brother, then a Captive to the Christians!

The following EXTRACT in proof of the Authenticity of the above Portrait, is translated from the Latin contemporary Historians of his period:

"News to the Senate of Rome concerning JESUS CHRIST, in the days of Tiberius Cæsar the Emperour, as the governours of sundry provinces under the Cæsars and people of Rome used to advertise the Senate of such news as chanced in diverse countries.

"Publius Lentulus, being at that time president in Judea wrote an epistle to the Senate and people of Rome, the words whereof were these:

"There appeared in these our days a man of great virtue, named JESUS CHRIST, who is yet living amongst us, and of the Gentiles is accepted for a Prophet of Truth, but his own disciples called him the Son of God. He raiseth the dead and cureth all manner of diseases. A man of stature somewhat tall and comely, with a very reverend countenance, such as the beholders may both love and fear; his hair of the colour of filbert full ripe, and plain almost down to his ears; but from the ears downward somewhat curled, and more orient of colour, waving on his shoulders. In the middle of his head goeth a seam, or partition of his hair, after the manner of the Nazarites; his forehead very plain and smooth; his face without spot or wrinkle, beautified with a comely red; his nose and mouth so formed as nothing can be reprehended; his beard somewhat thick, agreeable in colour to the hair of his head, not of any great length, but in the middle of an handsome look; his eyes grey, clear, and quick. In reproving he is terrible; in admonishing, courteous and fair-spoken; pleasant in speech, mingled with gravity. It cannot be remembered that any have seen him laugh, but many have seen him weep. In proportion of body, well shaped and straight; his hands and arms right and delectable to behold; in speaking, very temperate, modest and wise. A man for singular beauty surpassing the children of men."

v10 n21 18s

39,308 CURES

BY THE

POSITIVE & NEGATIVE POWDERS.

IN the following list, the total number of cures of different diseases, which have been performed by the Great Spiritual Remedy, PROF. SPENCE'S POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE POWDERS, is indicated by the figures which follow the name of the disease. The kind of Powders which should be used in each disease is indicated by the letters "P" or "N" or "P. & N," which follow the name of the disease; "P" standing for Positive, "N" for Negative, and "P. & N" for Positive and Negative.

Neuralgia, P, 2,137; Dyspepsia, P, 2,974; Asthma, P, 2,815; Catarrh, P, 962; Chills and Fever, P. & N, 2,419; Rheumatism, P, 1,878; Painful Menstruation, P, 1,497; Suppressed Menstruation, P, 954; Female Weaknesses, P, 1,561; Fever, P, 2,556; Amaurosis (Blindness), P, 56; Coughs and Colds, P, 1,739; Heart Disease, P, 458; Diarrhœa, P, 1,114; Headache, P, 1,841; Dysentery, P, 1,246; Liver Complaint, P, 1,060; Fistula and Ulcers, P, 38; Failing of Womb, P, 317; Involuntary Urination, P, 18; Odorous, P, 276; Dumb Ague, P. & N, 543; Scrofula, and Scrofulous Sore Eyes, P, 315; Typhoid and Typhus Fever, P, 634; Kidney Disease, P, 521; Miscellaneous Diseases, such as Fever Sores, P, Sore Eyes, P; Convulsions, P; Piles, P; Diabetes, P; Chills, P; Consumption, P, 396; Loss of Taste and Diseases of the Skin, P; Gout, P; Insanity, P; Jaundice, P; Threatened Abortion, P; Quinsy, P, 80—328.

BUY THE POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE POWDERS of Druggists and Agents, or else send your money for them to PROF. SPENCE, at his risk; sending all amounts of five dollars or more in the form of Money Orders, Drafts, or else in a Regist

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

Settled Speakers Once More.

(CONCLUDED)

To this letter Mr. Gilson responds as follows:

Mr. E. V. Wilson—Dear Sir:—Yours of the 6th inst., asking for certain information, I will first notice. Your questions are direct, and should receive as direct answers. I am not able to give such, but will give to the best of my knowledge.

To the first question I reply that I do not know who originated the article.

To the second I can only say I do not know who wrote the article, or how the signatures were obtained. I only know how mine was obtained. My attention was called to the article of "Settled Speakers once More," as making false charges against Mr. Peebles, and certain insinuations against the officers of the Cleveland society, and I was requested to meet the officers at a certain time with a view to the consideration of a reply in vindication of all parties concerned. Business engagements prevented me from attending the meeting, and the next I knew, I was called upon by a friend. Mr. Murry, for my signature to the paper in question. Now you have all I know about the origin of the article, or obtaining of signatures, etc.

Yours truly,

J. GILLSON.

Cleveland, Ohio, 171 Ohio street, July 28, 1871.

Thus, one by one, the props on which Mr. Peebles erects his hopes, give way.

1st.—Mr. L. King was not present at this officer's meeting, but absent in Detroit.

2nd.—Mr. Joseph Gillson, Secretary, was not present, as per his own statement in writing.

3rd.—Dr. Parker in his letter gives us very good reasons for believing that he was not present, nor did he furnish the facts, as stated by J. M. P.

4th.—George Rose, Esq., our old and kind friend, had not time or facts. Dr. Parker, Treasurer, and Joseph Gillson, Secretary of the society, were the only persons of the board of officers officially capable of furnishing facts, and both of these gentlemen officially deny in writing furnishing the facts declared by Brother Peebles as presented by them.

The question now remains to be solved,—was George Rose and Dr. U. Pratt at this official (?) meeting? It is certain that Gillson, the Secretary, was not present; it is quite certain that Dr. Parker, the Treasurer, was not present. L. King was in Detroit, and probably never saw the article. The officious Murry is not a member of the board. Now, the next question to determine is this,—were George Rose and Dr. Pratt at that meeting? The next important point to be considered,—how many constitute a quorum? Seven constitute a committee; a quorum, then the meeting was not an official one, and the article resolves itself into first person, singular number, governed by Mr. Peebles, and in this article, as in all former ones, his old trademarks appear. Brother Peebles is convicted. One important fact does appear, and that is, that J. M. Peebles, Consul to Trebisond, and one Brother Murray, were present at this official meeting. Brothers Parker and Gillson, in furnishing the facts and figures,—where did the facts Brother Peebles furnishes, come from? Echo answers, "Where the woodbine twineth."

We now produce official facts and figures to prove our statements to be true, quoting from the article in No. 18, Vol. 10:

1st—"You say the Cleveland Society, under E. S. Wheeler's fatherly care, dwindled down to a corporal's guard."

We answer that the statement is true, and in evidence of the truth of our statement, we introduce an extract from David Eddy's letter to us in the winter of 1869—January:

"You must come to our help; we have not a corporal's guard attending our meetings. The people will not come out to hear Brother Wheeler."

2nd.—That Brother Wheeler was dismissed or suspended from ministering to the society before his time was up in 1869.

3rd.—The statement in a letter from Joseph Gillson, dated July 23 d, 1871:

"You do not believe in settled speakers; others do, and each has certainly a right to his opinion But you will say your own decline is evidence of the folly or unprofitableness of settled speakers. Such is not a fair conclusion. The present embarrassment is of much earlier date than the engagement of Mr. Peebles. The cause lays in the first organization of the society, long before I had any thing to do with it."

Now, then, from the fall of 1867 to March, 1869, Brother Wheeler was the settled speaker over the old society, and during this time, these debts were incurred. Had Brother Wheeler been equal to the task, and able or capable of furnishing food equal to the demands of the Liberals in Cleveland, the Society would have been out of debt to day, and Brother Wheeler in the desk, instead of out of it; for people are willing to pay for that which they want.

2nd—"Cephas B. Lynn writes falsely, stating that the Society had been increased, and partially lifted out of debt under J. M. Peebles' fatherly administration."

The above quotation is from Peebles' article in No 18, Vol. 10. We now give what C. B. Lynn wrote. It appeared in No. 3, Vol. 29, Banner of Light, April 1st, 1871:

"The Cleveland Society.

Under the ministrations of J. M. Peebles, the Cleveland Society of Spiritualists have prospered exceedingly well during the last six months. Large audiences have assembled in Lyceum Hall. A heavy debt burdened the Society. This debt has been growing beautifully less for some time. An item for those opposed to locating speakers. He is now (March) away fulfilling those engagements. The Cleveland friends were loth to part with him even for a short time. Let us prove it.

What we wrote in regard to Brother Lynn's statement, was as follows: In March, 1871, Brother Lynn came through Cleveland. Soon in "Western Lookout," appeared a puff in favor of settled speakers, in contrast "with the vagabond itinerant system," every sentiment of which was untrue and false in fact;

The debt of the Society has not been reduced by Mr. Peebles' management as settled speaker, but increased some fifty dollars during his three months's ministration.

Mr. P. was not, at the time of Brother Lynn's puff, engaged for June, nor were the whole souls of Cleveland sighing for his return in June, nor do we believe that he was engaged for June, 1871, or even expected by the officers or society of Cleveland Spiritualists.

In Mr. Peebles' article replying to us, he makes the officers say, "C. B. Lynn's statement that there was greater harmony and increased attendance, etc., while Mr. Peebles ministered to us, was substantially correct."

Now for the proof that it was false in fact:

1st.—Six month's ministration of J. M. Peebles, from October 1st to April 1st. Brother P. lectured October, December and January, four times, and has lectured one Sunday since, viz., the last Sunday in June, and shows no evidence of future engagements—but, on the contrary, was engaged in Troy, New York, for February and March, in Boston on Sunday, in Baltimore during April, in New Orleans part or all of May, returned from New Orleans to prepare for his second visit to Europe, in order to make arrangements for a world's convention of Spiritualists, reads our "worse article," bies himself to Cleveland, lectures on Sunday, June 25th, gets an article endorsed by the officers of the Cleveland Society, and leaves for Europe.

There is a settled speaker for you—indeed. He is very like the Irishman's fly—when you put your thumb on him he is not there.

Had J. M. P. ministered to the Cleveland Spiritualists six months, as stated by Lynn?

Again, Mr. Gillson says, in answer to our letter, dated Leclaire, Ill., August 27th, 1870: "Mr. Peebles is not engaged by us as settled speaker, and only for October, December and January, 70-71. We can not disclose you. Your reasons are not good enough."

3rd.—Dr. Parker said to us in March, on the occasion of speaking to him Brother Lynn's report,—"Peebles is not engaged for June, and is not ex pected back, and positively not engaged our self, but run us in debt full fifty dollars."

On Monday, the 27th of March, '71, debt burdened the [illegible] has been growing As item for those

This statement, with its inference, is utterly at variance with the truth in the case. Proof:

Mr. E. V. Wilson—Dear Sir:—In reply to yours of the 10th inst., I send receipts and expenses, as desired

Gross receipts for October, 1870 $64 12. Expenses, $129, 25. December, $87 33 Expenses, $104 35. January, $46 00 Expenses, $104 35.

To all receipts for three months, $147;50. Expenses, $337 75

Balance against the society for three months, $190 25.

J. GILLSON.

Cleveland, Ohio, 171 Ohio street, June 30, 1871.

Add to this board bill as there is to my account, $50, for the three months, and the society paid $340 25 to bear J. M. Peebles over what they received from his labors.

The debt grew beautifully less under Brother Peebles' ministration?

"Item for those opposed to settled speakers."

Now look at the statement of work done under our two month's ministration:

"Yours of the 20th inst. was duly received. I regret that other engagements prevented me from devoting my time to the subject of your wish before this evening. The following is an account on my book for the months of November and March:

Dr., Advertising Sunday meetings, $3 05. Nov. 1870. Collections, Nov. 6 h, $15 91. Paid Mr. Wilson for speaking, $100; collections, Nov. 13th, $16, 90. Mr. Wilson's board bill, $12 Collections, Nov. 20th, $11 01. Nov. 27th, $18 95. Net receipts over expenses of four seances in Nov $46 00. Expense of Nov., $115 05; receipts in all, $97 77.

Dr., March 1871, advertising meeting $3,05 Cr., collections, March 5th, $18, 13 Paid Mr. Wilson for speaking $100; collections, March, 12th, $14, 66. Mr. Wilson's board bill, $16,50; collections, March 19.h, $11, 87; collections, March 26th, $20, 03

Receipts of discussion for use of hall, $63 43; Credit for hall rent, March 6th, $7, 58; do., 25.h, 25. Total, $15 83.

Total receipts for two months of E. V. Wilson, $134 60; total receipts for do., 239 95."

Cleveland, Ohio, 171 Ohio street. June 30, 1871.

Now add to this a benefit we gave the society on the evening of March 27.h, 1871, amounting to $13 50 and the society received from our labors, $349 45. Deduct from this the sum of $224 60, and we leave the Society ahead of expenses, $7 85.

Here we show beyond a doubt that the loose statements of Brother Lynn was entirely at fault with the facts in the case.

3 d proposition —"Brother Peebles, we believe, asked to be located in Cleveland. To this the society, at the request—as we believe—of J. M. Peebles, say, or—as we believe—J. M. Peebles writes," Brother Peebles did not ask to be located in Cleveland." On the contrary, we desired him, and (urged) him to settle with us for a year"

This statement we have disproved in our quotations from Joseph Gillson's letter in answer to ours of the 27th of Aug. 1870. and the statement of Dr. Parker to us on the 27 h of March, 1871. We now add the positive statement of Brother Gilson,

Mr E. V. Wilson—Dear Sir:—Yours of the 4th inst., was received on Friday last. In answer I have only to say that at a meeting of the members of the society held, it was fully agreed, after considerable discussion, that for the present, no further engagements be made with speakers, as, with one exception, Mrs. E Hardinge, the speakers the past season have left the Society, financially, in a worse condition than "they found it."

Yours fraternally,

J. GILLSON.

Cleveland, Ohio, 171 Ohio street. June 13 1871.

We quote from another letter of Brother Gillson, written on the 23rd of July, 1871:

"You do not believe in settled speakers; others do, and each has certainly a right to his opinion But you will say your own decline is evidence of the folly or unprofitableness of settled speakers. Such is not a fair conclusion. The present embarrassment is of much earlier date than the engagement of Mr. Peebles. The cause lays in the first organization of the society, long before I had any thing to do with it."

Now, then, from the fall of 1867 to March, 1869, Brother Wheeler was the settled speaker over the old society, and during this time, these debts were incurred. Had Brother Wheeler been equal to the task, and able or capable of furnishing food equal to the demands of the Liberals in Cleveland, the Society would have been out of debt to day, and Brother Wheeler in the desk, instead of out of it; for people are willing to pay for that which they want.

2nd—"Cephas B. Lynn writes falsely, stating that the Society had been increased, and partially lifted out of debt under J. M. Peebles' fatherly administration."

The above quotation is from Peebles' article in No 18, Vol. 10. We now give what C. B. Lynn wrote. It appeared in No. 3, Vol. 29, Banner of Light, April 1st, 1871:

"The Cleveland Society.

Under the ministrations of J. M. Peebles, the Cleveland Society of Spiritualists have prospered exceedingly well during the last six months. Large audiences have assembled in Lyceum Hall. A heavy debt burdened the Society. This debt has been growing beautifully less for some time. An item for those opposed to locating speakers. He is now (March) away fulfilling those engagements. The Cleveland friends were loth to part with him even for a short time. Let us prove it.

What we wrote in regard to Brother Lynn's statement, was as follows: In March, 1871, Brother Lynn came through Cleveland. Soon in "Western Lookout," appeared a puff in favor of settled speakers, in contrast "with the vagabond itinerant system," every sentiment of which was untrue and false in fact;

The debt of the Society has not been reduced by Mr. Peebles' management as settled speaker, but increased some fifty dollars during his three months's ministration.

Mr. P. was not, at the time of Brother Lynn's puff, engaged for June, nor were the whole souls of Cleveland sighing for his return in June, nor do we believe that he was engaged for June, 1871, or even expected by the officers or society of Cleveland Spiritualists.

In Mr. Peebles' article replying to us, he makes the officers say, "C. B. Lynn's statement that there was greater harmony and increased attendance, etc., while Mr. Peebles ministered to us, was substantially correct."

Now for the proof that it was false in fact:

1st.—Six month's ministration of J. M. Peebles, from October 1st to April 1st. Brother P. lectured October, December and January, four times, and has lectured one Sunday since, viz., the last Sunday in June, and shows no evidence of future engagements—but, on the contrary, was engaged in Troy, New York, for February and March, in Boston on Sunday, in Baltimore during April, in New Orleans part or all of May, returned from New Orleans to prepare for his second visit to Europe, in order to make arrangements for a world's convention of Spiritualists, reads our "worse article," bies himself to Cleveland, lectures on Sunday, June 25.h, gets an article endorsed by the officers of the Cleveland Society, and leaves for Europe.

There is a settled speaker for you—indeed. He is very like the Irishman's fly—when you put your thumb on him he is not there.

Had J. M. P. ministered to the Cleveland Spiritualists six months, as stated by Lynn?

Again, Mr. Gillson says, in answer to our letter, dated Leclaire, Ill., August 27th, 1870: "Mr. Peebles is not engaged by us as settled speaker, and only for October, December and January, 70-71. We can not disclose you. Your reasons are not good enough."

3rd.—Dr. Parker said to us in March, on the occasion of speaking to him Brother Lynn's report,—"Peebles is not engaged for June, and is not expected back, and positively not engaged our self, but run us in debt full fifty dollars."

On Monday, the 27th of March, '71, debt burdened the [illegible] has been growing As item for those Reader, did you ever know of a would be leader and settled speaker stooping so low as this man, J. M. Peebles does in dragging into the controversy a man, the president of a society with which this controversy has nothing to do? "One of their months, at least, parallels our experience in March." That is the month of December, in which Mr. Peebles, first, in the fact that March left a surplus in the hands of the Cleveland Society. December left the Cincinnati Society buried hand, and the reasons are these. The second and third Sundays in December were very stormy, the fourth Sunday, Christmas, so cold that the churches were not opened in the morning, and yet we are willing to affirm that the receipts of this stormy month of Dec, 1870, will equal the average of six or of Mr. Peebles' months in Cleveland. And finally, Brother Peebles, we did not open this question of settled speakers; we have only exhibited the fallacy and absurdity of the whole thing, and shall continue to do so until we are directed to do otherwise by our guides.

You that are in favor of settled speakers, get settled as quick as you like, and when you have made a successful settlement, then we will yield the point. As yet, by our every effort in that line has been a most miserable failure, and this last effort of yours to be settled in Cleveland, as well as the false position into which you have drove the very excellent band of officers of the Cleveland Society, is fully worthy of J. M. Peebles, and no one else.

And now for the "Preamble," the "Whereas," and the "Resolves" passed on Sunday evening, June 25th, 1871, at Lyceum Hall, Cleveland, Ohio. It amounts to this, in dialogue:

Peebles, very pious, with a pulpit wipe.—Friend Wilson hit me, and if you don't come to my help I shall never get settled again.

Wilson—Don't cry, Brother Peebles; don't cry. We will resolve that you are—are—are,—what are you, Brother Peebles?—tell us quick.

Peebles—I am the Rev. J. M. Peebles, and graduated out of Orthodoxy into Universalism. Expelled from Universalism (for what, J. M. P.?) I become a Spiritualist, edited the Western Department of the Banner of Light, wrote the Life of Abraham James, tried at one time to control the Religio-Philosophical Journal, undertook to preside over "Mine Society" in Detroit, undertook to edit the Universe, got appointed as Consul to Trebisond; (was that appointment ever confirmed by the United States Senate, J. M. P.?) went over to Europe, stood on Calvary Hill, felt Jesus all over; came home again; am known extensively on both sides of the Atlantic, wrote another book. You called me to speak a year for you. I wanted to speak for you awful bad. Wilson did not want me to, and has wrote a severe article in which he abuses you, the Cleveland Society, and Lily. And now, my wasted energies, exhausted vitality, and depleted mentality requires European air and water.

Cleveland Society.—So it does. Therefore, Resolved, that J. M. Peebles is all that he says or thinks he is, and more, he is a great man, a big man, and has a face in the form, and we desire to listen to the music of his voice once more, all weeping and laughing, mingling pain and joy in a sweet murmur of poetical fiction.

J. M. P. (Viola: Soliloquy)—It is done. Ye gods! what an actor I am! And now that I have covered up my part with the respectability of the Cleveland Society, so that Wilson cannot see my hand in the matter, I will leave for Europe, as I once before did, and leave Messrs Pratt, Parker, Gillson, and King to stand the brunt of the matter.

To the Spiritualists of Cleveland,—Greetings: We have never attacked your Society or its management.

To the gentlemen, officers of the Society:—you have been misled in this matter, and we know that you would not have wrote the article signed by you to the press, save at the instigation of J. M. Peebles.

To the Spiritualists everywhere: We shall defend you—all mediums and societies—against the spider element of settled speakers and reformed ministers. Settled speakers, let us have peace. Will you accept the olive branch? we shall see.

The following letter speaks for itself; it is one out of many we are in receipt of. "The World's Convention?" We shall have something to say about that sometime.

Bergen Wilson:—I am decidedly opposed to settled speakers, and all our experience has been against it. I will say, that this was the rock on which we struck last winter. A friend of Mr. Forster's was determined we should have him all winter. I opposed. We had him three months.

Not one member of the Board voted for any speaker for more than a month next winter. We have had three speakers twice, and always with unfavorable results.

I do n't know any speaker whose pond is deep enough to water the people a year.

I don't know what kills Brother Peebles, but he has cut me. We are on a committee about arranging for a World's Convention. I understand he has gone to England partly to arrange for that. It would have been modest in him, as I was appointed chairman of that Committee, and declined in his favor, and was second on the list, to have called on me. He has been in the city several times.

I think I can do as well without him as he can without me. There is too much of the clergyman about him to suit me, and I think this is the secret of his settled speaker business.

I am not troubled about, "settled speakers."—it will care itself. I see some resolutions about Peebles, etc., to which Moses Hull calls your attention. They don't amount to a row of pins. I think the article you refer to is No. 17. It may come next week.

Henry T. Child, M. D.

904 Race St., Philadelphia.

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled The Sunday Question, and Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

This work consists of 132 large, closely printed pages. It is an exhaustive review of the so-called Sunday question, and of self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the Religio-Philosophical Journal to any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we will send the same work and the Journal for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the Journal three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called Life's Unfoldings, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the Journal will avail him or herself of this generous offer, and in this secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the Journal.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

James Brooks,

The Great Developing Medium, will send printed instructions, which never fail to develop in all those who have any [illegible] Send for them at once. Test [illegible] ro dollars.

Address 906 S. [illegible]

v10 n13 tf

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

[Third Edition, Revised and Corrected.]

JUST PUBLISHED!

A Complete and Truthful History of that Good Man and

PRINCE OF MEDIUMS,

Jesus of Nazareth

BY

PAUL AND JUDAS,

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most

REMARKABLE WORK

in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, Paul and Judas, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, assigning all his now are, giving a continued series of well-connected sessions, presenting scenery, characters and conversations, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely printed pages.

Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

HERMES MERCURIUS TRISMEGISTUS:

(Ter Maximus! King of Egypt! Melchizedec!)

HIS DIVINE PYMANDER.

His First Book; Pymander—The Spirit from the Far Heavens; The Holy Sermon; The Key; That God is not Manifest, and yet Most Manifest; God; The Song; Truth; The Crater; The Divine Mind.

This most ancient and glorious book ought to be in the house of every Christian, moral and religious person in the land. Astrologers adore it. Agnostics, Infidels, Doubters, Infidels, and skeptics, for it contains what can nowhere else be found. This rare and superb volume also consists the world famous Emerald Mystery—and the most astonishing hell-fire and secret doctrines of the Rosicrucians, Alchemists, Hermetists and other illuminati. Also translations from the Vedas; Brahm; the Song of Brahm; and the Smaragdine Table.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

IT COSTS

Only about one third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Handy Book-Elegant. Since suited to any publication, from the smallest Pamphlet to the largest Encyclopedia. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both Styles and Grinder. Also for the Religio-Philosophical Journal, No. 18; price $1.25 and $1.50. Address, Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ROSICRUCIA!!!

THE ROAD TO POWER!! Sexual Science! F. B. Dowd's Private Lectures to Ladies and Gentlemen. A pamphlet of 96 pages, containing principles, ideas, and advice beyond price. Ignorance is the curse of mankind. Price 50 cents. For sale by the author, F. B. Dowd, Davenport, Iowa.

v10 n15 tf.

DR. S. L. McFADDEN AND WIFE, Magnetic Physician, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 848 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago,

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give many convincing tests of spirit presence, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law unto themselves, and to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors and preachers. All Mediums are invited to attend free of charge. The Consolations of the Soul, Lying Spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of diseases, and private communications, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n13 13t

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services. v9 n8 tf

AGENTS! READ THIS!

WE WILL PAY AGENTS A SALARY OF $30 per week and expenses, or allow a large commission, to sell our new and wonderful inventions. Address M. WAGNER & Co., Marshall, Mich.

v9n16tm.

813 RACE ST.

Mrs. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., Philadelphia, can accommodate Mediums visiting that city with five rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.

v10n12 tf

ABSTRACT OF

COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was composed by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets, from 1100 to 624 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 48 pages. Price 25 cents. American News Co., N. Y.

v10 n9 6m

BELVIDERE SEMINARY,

FOR YOUTHS OF BOTH SEXES,

Belvidere New Jersey. Fall Term begins Wednesday, Sept. 13th. One of the most liberal institutions in the land, being strictly non-sectarian. It has the superior advantages of a healthful and beautiful location, added to the comforts and genial influences of a pleasant home, with excellent opportunities for obtaining a practical education in any or all of its several departments, English, Classical, Literary, and Scientific. Pupils graduate in each department in Pennsylvania, address Miss Bell, Principals.

v10 n17 9t.

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large reserve to agents. Send Stamp for Circulars. C. H. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 12, No. 151 Lasalle St., Chicago.

v10 n13 tf

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Medicina Psychica! Anima Medica!!

☞ "Deo hominem externum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—Van Helmont.

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutary, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Test or trial packages mailed free for 25 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 71 I St., Washington, D. C.

v10 n11 tf

THE

HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

Presented through the Organism of

M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,

And Written by

PROF. WM. F. LYON.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"The book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth.

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"The central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of these chapters are devoted to elucidating, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture that may be found in the vicinity of the north Polar Sea. And this opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from one surface to the other, and that the largest ships of our navies may sail or steam their way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12 mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

. For sale by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1785 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE

BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON.

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskrest, or ancient language of the Brahmins.

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, at their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS

OR THE

WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE

REVEALED TO MAN.

The Medium, in his address to the public says:

The Medium (David Corless, of Huntley's Grove McHenry Co., Ill.,) through whom this work was given, has been a careful observer of the phenomena of "the inner life" for over twenty years, and during that time he has been a most humble Medium through which hundreds of philosophical and scientific lectures have been given to attentive listeners. Of himself, he can only say he is an uneducated farmer, but advised in regard to this pamphlet's careful and attentive perusal.

The Introduction entitled "The Unveiling," treats of man as the grand objective ultimate of Life's Unfoldings.

He also stands at the pinnacle of all organized Life in the native purity of all things.

On page twenty-four, the author treats of "the way mediums paint likenesses, in the true order of the development of the soul and body."

In part second, under the general head of mysteries Revealed, the author treats of "How Mankind Manifest their presence through Physical Bodies of Mediums, or the writing of dots. How we influence Mediums to speak. The fullness of all kinds of language investigated. The ring feat and the carrying of Musical Instruments around the room explained."

This work is neatly got up and consists of seventy-three closely printed pages and we hesitate not to say that it contains more original thought upon important subjects, a few only of which we have enumerated, than any other work of equal size we have seen.

. Price 50 cents; postage, 3 cents. For sale wholesale and retail by the publishers, the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

THE

Descent of Man,

AND

Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 600 pp. each, Price $2.50 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

. For sale by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

EXPRESS!

THE "NEW FAMILY" and other Machine Goods, also

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send stamp for circulars. Address: "EXPRESS" Box 120 Clark St., Room 10 Chicago.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL

CHICAGO, AUGUST 16, 1861. VOL. X.—NO. 25.

Original Poetry.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

A MESSAGE.

BY DR. J. MC FARLAND.

I come from my home on that beautiful shore,
To the high, to the low, to the rich, to the poor,
With a message of love from the pure land of light,
I meet you, I greet you, with pleasure to night.
Though danger and toil, though sorrow and pain
May fall on the heart like a torrent of rain,
Thy friends and thy neighbors despite all we see,
Their aid and their comfort they still may refuse the e
All these and ten thousand more sorrows may fall,
Till the soul is embittered with wormwood and gall,
I know thy dread suffering, I know thy sad care,
For I was once near to the brink of despair,
But light beamed upon me more brightly than day,
And angels they wafted my spirit away.
I ne'er shall forget that dear happy band,
Who bore me aloft to the bright Summer Land.
Such raptures as joys I never had known I
'T was richer by far than an earth-gilded throne.
I wished to progress; oh! I longed to advance,—
Was't a holy dream or was it a trance.
That now the dear ones had learned all my pain,
They off red to come,—and they did come again.
They came to my chamber, they came to my bed;
Gently they laid their soft hands on my head,
And urged me to faithfulness while I staid here.
For soon I would find a bright home in their sphere.
My heart it rejoiced, and my soul breathed a prayer,
And oh! how I long d—how I longed to be there!
And, thanks to our God who is Father of all,
To the high, to the low, to the great and the small,
His angels are ministers coming each day
To instruct his dear ones in this heavenly way.
I'm happy to see you so faithful and strong.
Oh, seek for all knowledge—abstain from all wrong;
Though Allopath doctors continue to scowl,
And priest-ridden people may keep up their howl,
We know that the day is progressing with speed,
When dogmatic system and dogmatic creed
Shall sink to oblivion and never more rise
To darken the way that leads to the skies.
Fear not, we are coming to meet you at home,
And clear up the way for the new light to come.
Don't bother your gifts, my dear friends, away
For goods that may perish, perhaps in a day,
But lay a foundation with firm and secure
That will last as the years as the good shall endure.

WORLD OF AMUSEMENT.

Farwell Hall Considered as a Theatre—The Apostles.

Farwell Hall has always been under the control of the Young Man's Christian Association of Chicago.

It was built under the supervision of the pious souls—millionaires—and daily received the prayers and benefactions of its stock-holders, and others of the sanctified.

It was embellished by frescoed Bible scenes, in gaudy colors, which, doubtless, were intended to remind the devotees of the various creeds who might enter there, of "the golden streets of the New Jerusalem."

The Chicago Tribune has heretofore found it paid,—or at least it has, from some motive, been the especial advocate of sanctimonious hypocrites who erected and controlled Farwell Hall, never failing to ridicule and disrespectfully treat through its columns Spiritualists and all other free thinkers.

The following article which we clip from a recent Sunday issue of that paper shows that "the world moves."

The hypocrisy of the leaders of the Young Men's Christian Association, in the management of Farwell Hall, has become so apparent to all classes of observers that the Tribune is compelled to change its tactics and reflect, to some extent, the opinions of the masses, in regard to the mercenary motives of those who fain would make people believe that they were of spotless virtue.—[Ed. Journal.

To the Editor of The Chicago Tribune:

"When the cats away, the mice will play."

There is an old saw to this effect, universal in application and true in conclusion.

Grimalkin Moody being away, I presume is the reason that the Putnam mice played in Farwell Hall on Thursday afternoon. Being interested in preserving the proprieties of that rather remarkable and proper place, I have written to Brother Moody the particulars of the affair, and have little doubt that all the remorse of the Pacific Road will be called into requisition to transports Brother Moody back to Chicago as rapidly as steam and iron can bring him.

I anticipated something of this sort when Mr. went away, and I said to him at the depot, as we "parted in tears;" "Don't stay long Mood, (a familiar term by which I address him)—for the singers will do something to get the better of us." He replied: "Don't be afraid, Pick—(a familiar term by which he addresses me when in a playful mood); we are too strong for them. Everything is lively. (He omitted the allusion to the goose.) I have got the dogs in Rockwell so well drilled that they can't smuggle in even a Sunday School cantata. Have no fears. Where Paul alludes in various instructions to the youthful Timothy. And he went away rejoicing, leaving me rather disconsolate, for I had not the same childlike faith that everything was lovely. To be sure, I did not dream that the dreadful theater would get into Farwell Hall, but I was suspicious lest the Foundlings might get up a square dance, or some secular panorama might unroll its dreary acres of impropriety across the stage—or rather platform—or that the Apostles above might be disturbed by the irreverent notes of 'Captain Jinks' from some fiddle beneath.

You cannot wonder at my apprehensions, for you will well remember what a difficult task we had in suppressing that square dance, when certain evil-disposed persons wanted to kick up their sinful heels, so that the orphans at the asylum might enjoy the winter nights more comfortably. But we succeeded. Orphans are altogether too common. They have no business to be orphans. If they can't subsist on benedictions, reasons, catechisms and other such nourishing fodder, they had better give up being orphans and quit the asylum. Farwell Hall wasn't built to support orphans. You will remember how we had to struggle with the managers of one or two church-fairs who insisted upon a Post Office with which to beguile the unwary stranger and capture his shovel-lined quarter with two lines of bosh; the Hall for an albatus, which is always drawn by that mythical individual from Dowagiac, John Smith; the cake with a ring in it—that ring which is always swallowed by somebody, and never yet circled finger; and other such money-traps, designed by the Dear Creatures to lighten our heavy-laden pockets,—all for the Cause. But again we triumphed, and brother M. came to me in a glow of ecstacy, with his head in an illuminated nimbus, and we congratulated each other that Farwell Hall still stood erect. And M., on that occasion, invited the sinners, in the language of the servant girl in "The Two Paddifocks," to "holler agin."

They did "holler agin."

I have got a catechism attached to my desk who reminds me of these sinners. He is a sly bird, and addicted to eccentricities. He has recently been at work devouring Pink and White Tyranny," making slow progress with it however, as it is rather indigestible stuff even for a cockroach to Stowe away. I offered no objection to his literary efforts, as he seemed to be happy, and I had no other use for the book. But one day I caught him out, engaged in an unpleasantness with another roach on my desk. closed the windows, pinned him down with the scissors stuck through his head, and put a heavy paper-weight on his mahogany-colored tail. I then stepped out for a hammer and cold-chisel, with which to dissect him. I was curious to get at him geologically, as he belongs to the Pliocene period. On my return he was gone. I suspected that my lively friend was up to his old tricks. I unlocked my drawer, took out "Pink and White Tyranny," and, sure enough, there he was, tail upward, boring his way slowly through Chap. III. I could not find it in my heart to interrupt him, he had such a contented air, and I addressed him as Uncle Toby did the fly, to the effect that there was room enough in the world for him and me, especially while he was engaged on "Pink and White Tyranny." I might pursue the simile further by allusion to cats which will never stay hanged, and flies which won't stay under your finger, but I forbear, and return to the sinners.

Like the cockroach; no sooner did we suppose that we had them fast, than they turned up in a new place. Not being able to get into the hall, they got into the Programme, and fairly revelled in it. When our friend came to hear the orations and Gough's moral lectures they were told where to get the best whiskey and free lunches; what the theatres were doing; of the angelic virtues of Lydia Thompson, and the blonde beauties of Pauline Markham; concerning the last billiard match at Foley's, and the salient details of the last horse race at Dexter Park, the whole appealing forcibly to the senses with the delicious perfume of fancy soap, a saponaceous practice peculiar to the insects. Now, whiskey and free lunches, theatres and theatricals, Lydia's audities and Pauline's continuations, billiard matches and horse-races, and fancy soaps, are not exactly the objects for which Farwell Hall was instituted, and that our own official programme should blaze them abroad was "awful." We rectified this, however, and checked the sinners.

But they have "hollered agin;" and this time louder than ever.

Taking advantage of Mood's absence, and the unavoidable necessity of my presence at the last White Stocking match, an order actually got into the hall and took a benefit. A whole company of actors and actresses got in and gave him the benefit. The "Happy Pair," "The Boy from Limerick," scenes from "Wee Heidsbuck," and "A Pretty Piece of Business" got in and were the attractions which did the benefiting. "A Pretty Piece of Business" it was in reality!

The man on the roof informs me that the Apostles and others on the ceiling had a fearful time of it. Abraham was so enraged that he killed Isaac on the spot. Elijah tried to urge on his chariot of fire; but the horses with the legs of unequal length was broken-winded and couldn't get on, and he was obliged to bear it, continually exclaiming: "It is enough." Adam and Eve retired to a corner of the Garden and discussed the whole matter very earnestly. Adam was sincere in his censure, but Eve rather liked it, and hushed up Adam by informing him that as long as he had taken one bite of the apple he might as well eat the whole of it. Adam replied that the apple wasn't a good one, whereupon Eve retorted that he wasn't obliged to bite it. Adam replied that he did it to preserve peace in the family, and then Eve resorted to her final argument, saying that she had always known he was a tyrant, and that a day would come when fling his rib in her face, and Eve screamed, wiping her tears with her fig-leaf apron. The fuss at last grew so furious, and the devil having been raised before, St. Paul had to postpone his sermon to the Ephesians and come over to the Garden to preserve order. One of the most remarkable discussions was between David and St. John. The former fully maintained his reputation as a dancer and general gallant, and contended that the Katie Putnam Troupe had a perfect right to come there, although, as a professional dancer, he felt himself compelled to say that K. P. was not a Terpsichorean success. John retorted that David's practices had always been a scandal, and had constantly put the church to its trumps trying to excuse them. He also contended that Absalom would never have been strung up on that oak tree, if his father had been the proper man he ought to have been. David thereupon got mad and threatened to string John, applying opprobrious epithets to him, and clinching his remarks with the statement that any man who had the absurd habit of eating locusts, with honey, and such stuff, would be naturally narrow-minded, when upon John commenced crying in the wilderness and very seriously disturbed old Noah, who was trying to sleep off his last drunken spree under the vine. At this instant, Dillon appeared on the platform as the "Boy from Limerick." Nebuchadnezzar, that dry old joker, who always did enjoy a good thing, waked up from his grass and gave a genuine horse laugh at the fun below, whereupon Joshua reversed the sun, and ordered Sampson to suppress Neb. Sampson armed himself with his trusty jaw-bone, and went for him, but Neb, with one blow of his hind feet, sent him away to ceiling, and the last that was seen of him Delilah was comforting him. Mathew, Mark and Luke looked down frowningly, and, after discussing the matter in its theological bearing, with a furious episode on the real meaning of the verb "Baptize," and an altercation over their chronological discrepancies, resolved to wait until Brother Moody got back, when they would deliver a joint lecture to him, discharge him, and give up the keys of the hall to Peter.

But, seriously, when Brother Moody gets back, I should like to talk to him something in this wise:

"You may break, you may ruin the vase if you will,
But the scent of the rouge will hang round it still,'

"What—er purification you may apply to Farwell Hall, you cannot remove this taint of the drama which has spotted it. The factsstands on record that it has been used as a theatre, and that three or four dramas have been performed in it by a regular theatre company from the rival theatres, and that the hall was leased for that purpose, with the full knowledge of what the lessees proposed to do. There is no rubbing that out. Would it not, therefore, be at least consistent hereafter to quit all this bosh about the sanctity of Farwell Hall, now that you have discovered that the devil is not half so black as he is painted? Did you not make yourself sufficiently ridiculous when you prohibited an innocent dance to which some generous-hearted persons proposed to indulge, for the sake of a very excellent and deserving charity, which was in some need of funds, to keep its little waifs' backs warm and stomachs full? Having prohibited one and allowed the other, would it not look well for you now to sing small?

"I am free to confess that I like you, Brother Moody. I admire your pluck, your vitality, your energy, and the hit-from-the shoulder way with which you sometimes walk into sinners who have money in their purses and purple and fine linen on their backs. I believe that you are honest, and I know that you are in earnest in the work that you are doing; but you strain at so many gnats and swallow so many double-humped camels that you upset your own kettle and make yourself ridiculous, and then we have to laugh at you. Worse than that, you spoil the very work that you are otherwise doing well. If to your pounds of praiseworthy zeal and tons of energy you added an ounce of common sense now and then, it would correct your unhealthy enthusiasm. When Laurence Sterne wept copiously over the deadness by the roadside and sent the defunct donkey down to posterity in mawkish sentimentality, he was the biggest jackof the twain for the time, and made us doubt the reality of all his sentiment. The ridiculous may lie at the extreme of religion as well as the extreme of fun, but in the latter case it is harmless, while in the former it is hurtful.

"It is time, Brother Moody, that all this nonsense about the theater was stopped. It has now been tried in Farwell Hall itself, under the eyes of the Apostles, in front of the organ, on the very same wooden platform where you exhort the multitudes, in the hall managed by yourself under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. It has done no harm, has not injured the hall or any living human being. I would not counsel you to make the drama a steady diet in your hall, because it is not adapted to it; but the experiment is not ungratifying one, nevertheless, and it should prevent you from the ridiculous position you now and then assume in your feats of camel-swallowing. It should teach you charity toward all classes. It should convince you, now that you have had a theater in your very sanctum sanctorum, that it is not such a terrible evil after all; that there are good people in that profession as well as in others; and that it can be made to subserve high and pure purposes.

"I hope, therefore, that you will draw it mildly hereafter on harmless shows and entertainments which ask admission within your walls; that, as you have deemed it proper to admit the dance for the benefit of gentle charity."

This is the substance of what I shall say to Mood when he returns. I expect he will kick against it, and insist up in doing something ridiculous, but I shall wrestle with him vigorously. I'll be gets used to it and I berieves that will. And I have full faith that, in course of time, I shall liberalize M. himself, so that he will chip this shell of prejudice which environs him, and step out full-feathered, peeping with delight over the fact that the world is not half so bad as he had imagined.

And the public is to be congratulated that the world moves, and that the legitimate drama has at last obtained a foothold in Farwell Hall. It will stir up McVicker, and A. Fox, and Colonel Wood, and the rest, to know that if they do not give us good entertainments Farwell Hall will. The drama originated in the church, and at its inception, was the most powerful auxiliary religion had. Has the good time come when it returns to its old allegiance, and once more walks hand in hand with virtue and knowledge? It is cheering to reflect that hereafter Benedick and Beatrice, Hamlet and Ophelia, Mr. and Mrs. Toodles, Bob Acres and Mrs. Malaprop, Tony Lumpkin and Miss Hardcastle, Charles Surface and Maria, Jacques and Jillana, Fazio and Bianca, Ingomar and Parthenia, and all the other delightful people of the drama, will be pleasanter companions than the young woman of the Post Office, or the vender of the ringless cake, the sooner for the pious frame, the dreary panorama lecturer, and Mr. Gough, with his everlasting temperance piece.

Brother Moody, I congratulate you upon this auspicious commencement, and I look forward with confidence to the time when I shall sit in front and applaud you before the footlights for your masterly personations in some proper play. John Wesley thought it a shame that the devil should have all the good tunes. It is not less shameful that he should have all the good acting. When Naomi Tige, in "Shool," asks Jack Phonyg if he smokes, he immediately replies: "I do everything." There is a great deal of satire, as well as sense, in the reply. Do everything, Brother Moody—only do it wisely and well.

In the meantime, the drama has been performed in Farwell Hall. That is one step gained.

Home's Levitations.

Mr. Home's Latest Achievements—Mid-air Suspension.

Lord Lindsay sends the following extraordinary story to the Spiritualist: "On the evening of the 11th of July, I was showing some experiments in my laboratory to Lord Adare, Mr. Bergheim, Mr. Home, and my brother-in-law. I occurred to me to try if Home could see a magnet in the dark. This is an experiment which I believe was made by Reichenbach, and although, like myself, he was never able to distinguish the light, yet he found a number of persons who did see it under test conditions. I asked Mr. Home, and he expressed himself willing to try the experiment. I then took into one of my rooms, which was totally dark, a large permanent magnet, and having removed the armature, I placed it on the floor near the wall. Mr. Home was then brought into the room, and remained standing near the door for some moments. He then said that he saw some sort of light on the floor in a corner of the room, and immediately said to me, "Give me your hand, and I will show you exactly where I see it." He then led me straight across the room, and, without the least hesitation stooped down and placed my hand on the magnet. I have been trying for more than two years to get a satisfactory result in this experiment, but hitherto with only doubtful success. The instrument used was a large compound magnet, capable of sustaining a weight of twenty pounds. I may mention that on another occasion, I was sitting with Mr. Home and Lord Adare, and a cousin of his. During the sitting Mr. Home went into a trance, and in that state was carried out of the window in the room next to where we were, and was brought in at our window. The distance between the windows was about seven feet six inches, and there was not the slightest foothold between them, nor was there more than a twelve-inch projection to each window, which served as a ledge to put flowers on. We heard the window in the next room lifted up, and almost immediately after, we saw Home sailing in the air outside our window. The moon was shining into the room; my back was to the light, and I saw the shadow on the wall of the window sill, and Home's feet about six inches above it. He remained in this position for a few seconds, then raised the window and glided into the room feet foremost and sat down. Lord Adare then went into the next room to look at the window from which he had been carried. It was raised about eighteen inches, and he expressed his wonder how Mr. Home had been taken through so narrow an aperture. Home said (still in trance), "I will show you;" and then with his back to the window, he leaned back, and was shot out of the aperture head first, with body rigid, and then returned quite quietly. The window is about seventy feet from the ground. I very much doubt whether any tight-rope dancer would like to attempt a feat of this description, where the only means of crossing would be by a perilous leap, or being borne across in such a manner as I have described, placing the question of the light aside.

—Be affable and kind in your intercourse with all. How many a burden has a smile lifted from the shoulders of the despondent. How many have been withheld from a life of crime by a kind word and look.

—Young people are like balls. Being struck

Bro. Jones—Dear Sir:—I have the honor of the acquaintance of a few families who by profession are Spiritualists, and were it not for their moral qualities and genial influence, that fact alone would cause me to avoid their society, for since my boyhood, the most bitter prejudice against Spiritualism has been instilled into my susceptible mind.

Those friends the other evening prevailed upon me to attend a "seance," which I willingly did in anticipation of discovering some of the deception I so long believed to be practiced by Spiritualists, but which in part, since that evening, has been dispelled.

Seating ourselves around a table, with our hands upon it, in the center of the room, we waited patiently for the spirits of the departed to make known their presence by "raps" on the table, or other means with which I am not as yet acquainted. After waiting perhaps an hour without the above indication, my patience became exhausted, and I jokingly remarked, that "the spirits did not intend to honor us with their presence this evening," and left the table, as did several others, who like myself were impelled there by curiosity.

There was then in the room, a young lady, who had not before sat at the table, or ever attended a sitting of that kind (and I must say a lady whose intimate acquaintance will compel me or any other person to admit, is entirely incapable of the slightest deception), who now took her seat at the table, and scarcely five minutes elapsed before it began to tremble. First the movements were scarcely perceptible, but gradually became more violent and startling—the lady herself similarly affected, losing all power of utterance, and apparently all control of her actions. Her hands and arms shook and moved in the most unaccountable manner. Imagine my surprise, after carefully examining the table, to find no connection with it and any of the parties in the room, except the young lady in question, who merely had her hands upon it, and after vainly using all my strength to hold her arms, they still continued performing the actions of persons she had never seen or heard of, and who had been dead years before she had been born, thereby making known to those who knew them in life, that their spirit was then present, and through the mediumistic powers of that lady, answered all questions by signs, that were put by the living friends.

In the presence of these facts, it is unnecessary to inform you, that in defense of this people's ridicule and sneering of years, my mind underwent a change. I have learned to look more leniently upon your doctrines, and have resolved to read and search into for myself the truth or falsity of Spiritualism.

I think it would be well for many of the illiberal and uncharitable individuals who are denouncing Spiritualism and its teachings, instead of taking for granted all the slander on falsehoods and vile denunciations, to do likewise.

Enclosed you will find fifty cents, for which you will please send me for three months on trial, one copy of your valuable paper, commencing with the number in which is contained that able article, "A Search after God," and I have no doubt at the end of that time, through the impartial, manly, and straight-forward editorials of your paper, I will be compelled to look upon Spiritualism even more favorably than at present, and have the honor of enumerating myself as a regular subscriber.

Chicago, Aug. 3, 1861.

Remarks—The above-named gentleman is but one among many thousands of intelligent men and women who are now investigating; the subject of spirit communion is this city—not in a boisterous, fanatical way, but sincerely, philosophically. Indeed, the best minds of the age are looking upon all phases of so-called religion, as grown up people do upon the swaddling clothes of infants, as suited for children—mentally—but not for grown up people. The Philosophy of Life is beginning to receive the attention of the best thinkers of the age.

The Hollow Globe.

Dr. Sherman—Dear Sir: I have read the Hollow Globe carefully, and with deep interest. It is a work which requires much thought, and is replete with suggestions which on most beautiful the coming generations. I consider the chapters on Forces, Inherent Powers, and Reconstruction alone worth the price of the book.

You have shown most conclusively the powers of Reciprocity and Magnetism, with their wonderful uses, passing through their spiritual processes. The diagram on page 178 is truly suggestive.

You have given to the world a book containing more rational ideas upon all important subjects than has ever been written. The nineteenth century, thus far, has been one of great inventions and accomplishments, showing that man has wondrous powers which were called into requisition, surmounts barriers and triumphs to success.

If your ideas shall be proven correct with regard to the interior of the earth being hollow and habitable, your name will indeed be immortalized and honored by generations who shall succeed you.

Trusting that the work upon which you are at present engaged in preparing for the press, may prove as suggestive of thought as the Hollow Globe, I remain

Yours

The Rostrum.

THOMAS PAINE.

An Oration on the Life and Services of the American Author and Patriot; Delivered by Robert G. Ingersoll, at Fairbury Ill., on the Evening of January 30th 1871.

To speak the praises of the brave and thoughtful dead, is to me a labor of gratitude and love. Through all the centuries gone, the mind of man has been beleaguered by the mailed hosts of superstition. Slowly and painfully has advanced the army of deliverance. Hated by those they wished to rescue, despised by those they were dying to save, these grand soldiers, these immortal deliverers, have fought without thanks, labored without applause, suffered without pity, and they have died execrated and abhorred. For the good of mankind they accepted isolation, poverty, and calumny. They gave up all, sacrificed all, lost all but truth and self-respect.

One of the bravest soldiers in this army was Thomas Paine; and for one, I feel indebted to him for the liberty we are enjoying this day. Born among the poor, where children are burdens; in a country where real liberty was unknown; where the privileges of class were guarded with infinite jealousy, and the rights of the individual trampled beneath the feet of priests and nobles; where to advocate justice was treason; where intellectual freedom was Infidelity, it is wonderful that the idea of true liberty ever entered his brain.

Poverty was his mother—Necessity his master.

He had more brains than books; more sense than education; more courage than politeness; more strength than polish. He had no veneration for old mistakes—no admiration for ancient lies. He loved the truth for the truth's sake, and for man's sake. He saw oppression on every hand; injustice everywhere—hypocrisy at the altar, tyranny on the throne, tyranny on the throne; and with a splendid courage he espoused the cause of the weak against the strong—of the enslaved many against the titled few.

In England he was nothing. He belonged to the lower classes. There was no avenue open for him. The people hugged their chains, and the whole power of the government was ready to crush any man who endeavored to strike a blow for the right.

At the age of thirty-seven, Thomas Paine left England for America with the high hope of being instrumental in the establishment of a free government. In his own country he could accomplish nothing. Those two vultures—Church and State—were ready to tear in pieces and devour the heart of any one who might deny their divine right to enslave the world.

Upon his arrival in this country, he found himself possessed of a letter of introduction, signed by another Infidel, the illustrious Franklin. This, and his native genius, constituted his entire capital; and he needed no more. He found the colonies clamoring for justice; whining about their grievances; upon their knees at the foot of the throne, imploring that mixture of idiocy and insanity, George the III, by the grace of God, for a restoration of their ancient privileges. They were not endeavoring to become free men, but were trying to soften the heart of their master. They were perfectly willing to make brick if Pharaoh would furnish the straw. The colonists wished for, hoped for, and prayed for reconciliation. They did not dream of independence.

Paine gave to the world his "Common Sense." It was the first argument for separation, the first assault upon the British form of government, the first blow for a republic, and it roused our fathers like a trumpet's blast.

He was the first to perceive the destiny of the New World.

No other pamphlet ever published accomplished such wonderful results. It was filled with argument, reason, persuasion, and unanswerable logic. It opened a new world. It filled the present with hope and the future with honor. Everywhere the people responded, and in a few months the Continental Congress declared the colonies free and independent states.

A new nation was born.

It is simple justice to say that Paine did more to cause the Declaration of Independence than any other man. Neither should it be forgotten that his attacks upon Great Britain, were also attacks upon monarchy; and while he convinced the people that the colonies ought to separate from the mother country, he also proved to them that a free government is the best that can be instituted among men.

In my judgment Thomas Paine was the best political writer that ever lived. "What he wrote was pure nature, and his soul and his pen ever went together." Ceremony, pageantry, and all the paraphernalia of power, had no effect upon him. He examined into the why and wherefore of things. He was perfectly radical in his mode of thought. Nothing short of the bed-rock satisfied him. His enthusiasm for what he believed to be right knew no bounds. During all the dark scenes of the Revolution never for one moment did he despair. Year after year his brave words were ringing through the land, and by the bivouac fires the weary soldiers read the inspiring words of "Common Sense," filled with ideas sharper than their swords, and consecrated themselves anew to the cause of Freedom.

Paine was not content with having aroused the spirit of independence, but he gave every energy of his soul to keep that spirit alive. He was with the army. He shared its defeats, its dangers, its glory. When the darkest hour came desperate, when gloom settled upon all, he gave them the "Crisis." It was a cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night, leading the way to freedom, honor, and glory. He shouted to them, "These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier, and the sunshine patriot, will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country; but he that stands it now deserves the love and thanks of man and woman."

To those who wished to put the war off to some future day, with a lofty and touching spirit of self-sacrifice he said: "Every generous parent should say, 'If there must be war let it be in my day that my child may have peace.'" To the cry that Americans were rebels, he replied: "He that rebels against reason is a real rebel; but he that in defence of reason rebels against tyranny has a better title to 'Defender of the Faith' than George the Third."

Some said it was not to the interest of the colonies to be free. Paine answered this by saying, "To know whether it be the interest of the continent to be independent, we need ask only this simple, easy question: 'Is it the interest of a man to be a slave?' He found many who would listen to nothing, and to them he said, "That to argue with a man who has no [illegible] is like giving medicine to the dead, or endeavoring to [illegible] timest ought to adorn the [illegible]ox church.

[illegible] of political wisdom in this: [illegible]ton her liberty by a long chain of right reasoning from wrong principles;" and there is real discrimination in saying, "The Greeks and Romans were strongly possessed of the spirit of liberty, but not the principles, for at the time that they were determined not to be slaves themselves, they exercised their power to enslave the rest of mankind."

In his letter to the British people, in which he tried to convince them that war was not to their interest, occurs the following passage brimful of common sense: "War never can be the interest of a trading nation any more than quarreling can be profitable to a man in business. But to make war with those who trade with us is like setting a bull-dog upon a customer at the shop-door."

The writings of Paine fairly glitter with simple, compact logical statements, that carry conviction to the dullest and most prejudiced. He had the happiest possible way of putting the case; in asking questions in such a way that they answer themselves, and in stating his premises so clearly the deduction could not be avoided.

Day and night he labored for America; month after month, year after year, he gave himself to the Great Cause, until there was "a government of the people and for the people," and until the banner of the stars floated over a continent redeemed, and consecrated to the happiness of mankind.

At the close of the Revolution, no one stood higher in America than Thomas Paine. The best, the wisest, the most patriotic, were his friends and admirers; and had he been thinking only of his own good he might have rested from his toils and spent the remainder of his life in comfort, and in ease. He could have been what the world is pleased to call "respectable." He could have died surrounded by clergymen, warriors and statesmen. At his death there would have been an imposing funeral, miles of carriages, civic societies, salvos of artillery, a nation in mourning, and above all, a splendid monument covered with lies.

He chose rather to benefit mankind.

At that time the seeds sown by the great Infidels were beginning to bear fruit in France. The people were beginning to think.

The Eighteenth Century was crowning its gray hairs with the wreath of Progress.

On new ground Science was bearing testimony against the Church. Voltaire had filled Europe with light; D'Holbach was giving to the elite of Paris the principles contained in his "System of Nature." The Encyclopedists had attacked superstition with information for the masses. The foundation of things began to be examined. A few had the courage to keep their shoes on and let the bush burn. Miracles began to get scarce. Everywhere the people began to inquire. America had set an example to the world. The word liberty began to be in the mouths of men, and they began to wipe the dust from their knees.

The dawn of a new day had appeared.

Thomas Paine went to France. Into the new movement he threw all his energies. His fame had gone before him, and he was welcomed as a friend of the human race, and as a champion of free government.

He had never relinquished his intention of pointing out to his countrymen the defects, absurdities and abuses of the English government. For this purpose he composed and published his greatest political work, "The Rights Of Man." This work should be read by every man and woman. It is concise, accurate, natural, convincing, and unanswerable. It shows great thought; an intimate knowledge of the various forms of government; deep insight into the very springs of human action, and a courage that compels respect and admiration. The most difficult political problems are solved in a few sentences. The venerable arguments in favor of wrong are refuted with a question—answered with a word. For forcible illustration, apt comparison, accuracy and clearness of statement, and absolute thoroughness, it has never been excelled.

The tears of the administration were aroused, and Paine was prosecuted for libel and found guilty; and yet there is not a sentiment in the entire work that will not challenge the admiration of every civilized man. It is a magazine of political wisdom, an arsenal of ideas, and no honor, not only to Thomas Paine, but to human nature itself. It could have been written only by the man who had the generosity, the exalted patriotism, the goodness to say, "The world is my country, and to do good my religion."

There is in all the utterances of the world no grander sentiment than this. There is no creed that can be compared with it for a moment. It should be wrought in gold, adorned with jewels, and impressed upon every human heart: The world is my country, and to do good my religion.

In 1792, Paine was elected by the department of Calais as their representative in the National Assembly. The grounds of his popularity in France, that he was selected about the same time by the people of no less than four departments.

Upon taking his place in the Assembly he was appointed as one of a committee to draft a constitution for France. Had the French people taken the advice of Thomas Paine there would have been no "reign of terror." The streets of Paris would not have been filled with blood. The revolution would have been the greatest success of the world. The truth is, that Paine was too conservative to suit the leaders of the French Revolution. They, to a great extent, were carried away by hatred, and a desire to destroy. They had suffered so long, they had borne so much, that it was impossible for them to be moderate in the hour victory.

Besides all this, the French people had been so robbed by the government, so degraded by the Church, that they were not fit material with which to construct a republic. Many of the leaders longed to establish a beneficent and just government, but the people asked for revenge.

Paine was filled with a real love for mankind. His philanthrophy was boundless. He wished to destroy monarchy—not the monarch. He voted for the destruction of tyranny, and against the death of the king. He wished to establish a government on a new basis; one that would forget the past; one that would give privileges to none, and protection to all.

In the Assembly, where nearly all were demanding the execution of the king—where to differ from the majority was to be suspected, and where to be suspected was almost certain death, Thomas Paine had the courage, the goodness and the justice to vote against death. To vote against the execution of the king was a vote against his own life. This was the sublimity of devotion to principle. For this he was arrested, imprisoned and doomed to death.

Search the records of the world and you will find but few nobler actions than that of Thomas Paine voting against the king's death. He, the hater of despotism, the abhorrer of monarchy, the champion of the rights of man, the republican, accepting death to save the life of a deposed tyrant—of a throneless king. This was the last grand act of his political life—the sublime conclusion of his political career.

All his life he had been the disinterested friend of man. He had labored—not for money, not for fame, but for the general good. He had aspired to no office, and asked no recognition of his services, but had ever been content to labor as a common soldier in the army of Progress. Confining his efforts to no country, looking upon the world as his field of action, filled with a generous love for the right, he found himself imprisoned by the very people he had striven to save.

Had his enemies succeeded in bringing him to the block, he would have escaped the calumnies and the hatred of the Christian world. In this country, at least, he would have ranked with the proudest names. On the anniversary of the Declaration his name would have been upon the lips of all the orators, and his memory in the hearts of all the people.

Thomas Paine had not finished his career.

He had spent his life thus far in destroying the power of kings, and now he turned his attention to the priests. He knew that every abuse had been emblazoned in Scripture—that every outrage was in partnership with some holy text. He knew that the throne skulked behind the altar, and both behind a pretended revelation from God. By this time he had found that it was of little use to free the body and keep the mind in chains. He had explored the foundations of deception and had found them infinitely rotten. He had dug under the throne, and it occurred to him that he would take a look behind the altar.

The result of his investigations was given to the world in the "Age of Reason." From the moment of its publication he became infamous. He was calumniated beyond measure. To slander him was to secure the thanks of the Church. All his services were instantly forgotten, disparaged or denied. He was shunned as though he had been a pestilence. Most of his old friends forsook him. He was regarded as a moral plague, and at the bare mention of his name the bloody hands of the Church were raised in horror. He was denounced as the most despicable of men.

Not content with following him to his grave, they pursued him after death with redoubled fury, and accounted with infinite gusto and satisfaction the supposed horrors of his death-bed; gloried in the fact that he was forlorn and friendless, and gloated like fiends over what they supposed to be the agonizing remorse of his lonely death.

It is wonderful that all his services were thus forgotten. It is amazing that one kind word did not fall from some pulpit; that some one did not accord to him, at least—honesty. Sincere that in the general denunciation some one did not remember his labor for liberty, his devotion to principle, his zeal for the rights of his fellow men. He had, by brave and splendid efforts, associated his name with the cause of Progress. He had made it impossible to write the history of political freedom with his name left out. He was one of the creators of light; one of the heralds of the dawn. He hated tyranny in the name of kings, and in the name of God, with every drop of his noble blood. He believed in liberty and justice, and in the sacred doctrine of human equality. Under these divine banners he fought the battle of his life. In both worlds he offered his blood for the good of man. In the wilderness of America, in the French Assembly, in the sombre cell waiting for death, he was the same unflinching, unwavering friend of his race; the same undaunted champion of universal freedom. And for this he has been hated; for this the Church has violated even his grave.

This is enough to make one believe that nothing is more natural than for man to devour their benefactors. The apostles in all ages have crucified and glorified. Whoever lifts his voice against abuses, whoever arraigns the past at the bar of the present, whoever asks the king to show his commission, or questions the authority of the priest, will be denounced as the enemy of man and God. In all ages reason has been regarded as the enemy of religion. Nothing has been considered so pleasing to the Deity as a total denial of the authority of your own mind. Self-reliance has been thought a deadly sin; and the idea of living and dying without the aid and consolation of superstition has always horrified the Church. By some unaccountable infatuation belief has been, and still is considered of immense importance. All religions have been based upon the idea that God will forever reward the true believer, and eternally damn the man who doubts or denies. Belief is regarded as the one essential thing. To practice justice, to love mercy, is not enough. You must believe in some incomprehensible creed. You must say, "Once one is three, and three times one is one." The man who practiced every virtue, but failed to believe, was execrated. Nothing so outrages the feelings of the Church as a moral unbeliever—nothing so horrible as a charitable Atheist.

When Paine was born, the world was religious. The pulpit was the real throne, and the churches were making every effort to crush out of the human mind the idea that it had the right to think.

The splendid saying of Lord Bacon that "The inquiry of truth, which is the love-making or wooing of it, the knowledge of truth, which is the presence of it, and the belief of truth, which is the enjoying of it, are the sovereign good of human nature," has been, and ever will be, rejected by religionists. Intellectual liberty, as a matter of necessity, forever destroys the idea that belief is either praise or blame-worthy, and is wholly inconsistent with every creed in Christendom. Paine recognized this truth. He also saw that as long as the Bible was considered inspired, this infamous doctrine of the virtue of belief would be believed and preached. He examined the Scriptures for himself, and found them filled with cruelty, absurdity, and immorality.

He again made up his mind to sacrifice himself for the good of his fellow men.

He commenced with the assertion, "That any system of religion that has anything in it that shocks the mind of a child cannot be a true system." What a beautiful, what a tender sentiment! No wonder that the Church began to hate him. He believed in one God, and no more. After this life he hoped for happiness. He believed that true religion consisted in doing justice, loving mercy, in endeavoring to make our fellow-creatures happy, and in offering to God the fruit of the heart. He denied the inspiration of the Scriptures. This was his crime.

The contended that it is a contradiction in terms to call anything a revelation that comes to us at second-hand, either verbally or in writing. He asserted that revelation is necessarily limited to the first communication, and that after that it is only an account of something which another person says was a revelation to him. We have only his word for it, as it was never made to us. This argument never has been and probably never will be answered. He denied the divine origin of Christ, and showed conclusively that the pretended prophecies of the Old Testament had no reference to him whatever; and yet he believed that Christ was a virtuous and amiable man; that the morality he taught and practiced was of the most benevolent and elevated character, and that it had not been exceeded by Him. Upon this point he entertained the same sentiments now held by the Unitarians, and in fact by all the most enlightened Christians.

In his time the Church believed and taught that every word in the Bible was absolutely true. Since his day it has been proven false in its cosmogony, false in its astronomy, false in its chronology, false in its history, and so far as the Old Testament is concerned, false in almost everything. There are but few, if any, scientific men who apprehend that the Bible is literally true. Who on earth at this day would pretend to settle any scientific question by a text from the Bible? The old belief is confined to the ignorant and zealous. The Church itself will be, before long be driven to occupy the position of Thomas Paine. The best minds of the orthodox world, to day, are endeavoring to prove the existence of a personal Deity. All other questions occupy a minor place. You are no longer asked to swallow the Bible whole, whale, Jonah and all. You are simply required to believe in God, and pay your pew-rent. There is not now an enlightened minister in the world, who will seriously contend that Samson's strength was in his hair, nor that the necromancers of Egypt could turn water into blood, and pieces of wood into serpents. These follies have passed away, and the only reason that the religious world can now have for disliking Paine is that they have been forced to adopt so many of his opinions.

Paine thought the barbarities of the Old Testament inconsistent with what he deemed the real character of God. He believed that murder, massacre, and indiscriminate slaughter, had never been commanded by the Deity. He regarded much of the Bible as childish, unimportant, and foolish. The scientific world entertains the same opinion. Paine attacked the Bible precisely in the same spirit in which he had attacked the pretensions of kings. He used the same weapons. All the poms in the world could not make him cower. His reason knew no "Holy of Holies," except the abode of Truth. The sciences were then in their infancy. The attention of the really learned had not been directed to an impartial examination of our pretended revelation. It was accepted by most as a matter of course. The Church was all-powerful; and no one, unless thoroughly imbued with the spirit of self-sacrifice, though for a moment of disputing the fundamental doctrines of Christianity. The infamous doctrine that salvation depends upon belief—upon a mere intellectual conviction—was then believed and preached. To doubt was to secure the damnation of your soul. This absurd and devilish doctrine shocked the common sense of Thomas Paine, and he denounced it with the fervor of honest indignation. This doctrine, although infinitely ridiculous, has been nearly universal, and has been as hurtful as sensless. For the overthrow of the infamous tenet, Paine exerted all his strength. He left few arguments to be used by those who should come after him, and he used none that have been refuted. The combined wisdom and genius of all mankind cannot possibly conceive of an argument against liberty of thought. Neither can they show why any one should be punished, either in this world or another, for acting honestly in accordance with reason; and yet, a doctrine with every possible argument against it has been, and still is, believed and defended by the entire orthodox world. Can it be possible that we have been endowed with reason simply that our souls may be caught in its toils and snares, that we may be led by its false and delusive glare out of the narrow path that leads to joy into the broad way of everlasting death? Is it possible that we have been given reason simply that we may through faith ignore its deductions, and avoid its conclusions? Ought the sailor to throw away his compass and depend entirely upon the fog? Reason is not to be depended upon in matters of religion, that is to say, in respect of our duties to the Deity, why should it be relied upon in matters respecting the rights of our fellows? Why should we throw away the laws given to Moses by God himself, and have the audacity to make some of our own? How dare we drown the thunders of Sinai by calling the eyes and ears in a petty legislature? If reason is to determine what is merciful, what is just, the duties of man to man, what more do we want either in time or eternity?

Down, forever down with any religion that requires upon its ignorant altar the sacrifice of the goddess Reason, that compels her to abdicate justice, the shining throne of the soul, and from her forms the imperial purple, snatches from her hand the sceptre of thought and makes her the bondwoman of a senseless faith!

If a man should tell you that he had the most beautiful painting in the world, and after taking you where it was should insist upon having your eyes shut, you would likely suspect, either that he had no painting, or that it was some pitiable fraud. Should he tell you that he was a most excellent performer on the violin, and yet refuse to play unless your ears were stopped, you would think to say the least of it, that he had an odd way of convincing you of his musical ability. But would his conduct be any more wonderful than that of a religionist who asks that before examining his creed you will throw away your reason? The former gentleman says, "Keep your eyes shut, my picture will be ever-ything but being seen." "Keep your ears stopped, my music objects to nothing but being heard." The last say, "Away with your reason, my religion dreads nothing but being understood."

So far as I am concerned, I most cheerfully admit that most Christians are honest, and most ministers sincere. We do not attack them; we attack their creed. We accord to them the same rights that we ask for ourselves. We believe that their doctrines are hurtful. We believe that the fragmental text, "He that believes shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned," has covered the earth with blood. It has filled the heart with arrogance, cruelty, and murder. It has caused the religious wars; bound hundreds of thousands to the stake; founded inquisitions, filled dungeons; invented instruments of torture; taught the mother to hate her child; imprisoned the mind; filled the world with ignorance; persecuted the lovers of wisdom; built monasteries and convents; made happiness a crime, investigation a curse, and self-reliance a blasphemy. It has poisoned the springs of learning; misdirected the energies of the world; filled all countries with want; housed the people in hovels; fed them with famine; and but for the efforts of a few brave Infidels it would have taken the world back to the midnight of barbarism, and left the heavens without a star.

The maligners of Paine say that he had no right to attack this doctrine because he was unacquainted with the dead languages; and for this reason, it was a piece of pure impudence in him to investigate the Scriptures.

Is it necessary to understand Hebrew in order to know that cruelty is not virtue, and that murder is inconsistent with infinite goodness, and that eternal punishment can be inflicted upon man only by an eternal fiend? Is it really essential to conjugate the Greek verbs before you can make up your mind as to the probability of dead people getting out of their graves? Must one be versed in Latin before he is entitled to express his opinion as to the genuineness of a pretended revelation from God? Common sense belongs exclusively to no tongue. Logic is not confined to, nor has it been buried with, the dead languages. Paine attacked the Bible as it is translated. If the translation is wrong, let its defenders correct it.

The Christianity of Paine's day is not the Christianity of our time. There has been a great improvement since then. One hundred and fifty years ago the foremost preachers of our time would have perished at the stake. A Universalist would have been torn in pieces in England, Scotland, and America. Unitarians would have found themselves in the stocks, pelted by the rabble with dead cats, after which their ears would have been cut off, their tongues bored, and their foreheads branded. Less than one hundred and fifty years ago the following law was in force in Maryland:

"Be it enacted by the Right Honorable, the Lord Proprietor, by and with the advice and consent of his lordship's governor, and the upper and lower houses of the Assembly, and the authority of the same;

"That if any person shall hereafter, within this province, wittingly, maliciously, and advisedly, by writing or speaking, blaspheme or curse God, or deny our Saviour, Jesus Christ, to be the son of God, or shall deny the Holy Trinity, the Father, Son, and holy Ghost, or the God head of any of the three persons, or the unity of the God-head, or shall utter any profane words concerning the Holy Trinity, or any of the persons thereof, and shall thereof be convict by verdict, shall for the first offence be bored through the tongue, or a fined twenty pounds to be levied of his body. And for the second offence, the offender shall be stigmatized by burning in the forehead with the letter B, and fined forty pounds. And that for the third offence, the offender shall suffer death without the benefit of clergy."

The strange thing about this law is, that it has never been repealed, and is still in force in the District of Columbia. Laws like this were in force in most of the colonies, and in all countries where the Church had power.

In the Old Testament, the death penalty was attached to hundreds of offences. It has been the same in all Christian countries. To-day, in civilized governments, the death penalty is attached only to murder and treason; and in some it has been entirely abolished. What a commentary upon the divine humbugs of the world!

In the day of Thomas Paine the Church was ignorant, bloody, and relentless. In Scotland the "Kirk" was at the summit of its power. It was a full sister of the Spanish Inquisition. It waged war upon human nature. It was the enemy of happiness, the hater of joy, and the despiser of religious liberty. It taught parents to murder their children rather than to allow them to propagate error. If the mother held opinions of which the infamous "Kirk" disapproved, her children were taken from her arms, her babe from her very bosom, and she was not allowed to see them, or write to them a word. It would not allow ship-wrecked sailors to be rescued from drowning on Sunday. It sought to annihilate pleasure, to pollute the heart by filling it with religious cruelty and gloom, and to change mankind into a vast horde of pious, heartless fiends. One of the most famous Scotch divines said: "The Kirk holds that religious toleration is not far from blasphemy." And this same Scotch Kirk denounced, beyond measure the man who had the moral grandeur to say, "The world is my country, and to do good my religion." And this same Kirk abhorred the man who said, "Any system of religion that shocks the mind of a child cannot be a true system."

At that time hell delighted the Church as the beauties of endless torment, and listening to the weak wailings of damned infants struggling in the slimy coils and poison folds of the worm that never dies.

About the beginning of the nineteenth century, a boy by the name of Thomas Aikenhead, was indicted and tried at Edinburgh for having denied the inspiration of the Scriptures, and for having, on several occasions, when cold, wished himself in hell that he might get warm. Notwithstanding the poor boy recanted, and begged for mercy, he was found guilty and hanged. His body was thrown in a hole at the foot of the scaffold and covered with stones.

Prosecutions and executions like this were common in every Christian country, and all of them were based upon the belief that no intellectual conviction is a crime.

No wonder the Church hated and traduced the author of the "Age of Reason."

England was filled with Puritan gloom and Episcopal ceremony. All religious conceptions were of the grossest nature. The ideas of crazy fanatics and extravagant poets were taken as sober facts. Milton clothed Christianity in the soiled and faded finery of the gods—had added to the story of Christ the fables of Mythology. He gave to the Protestant Church the most outrageously material ideas of the Deity. He turned all the angels into soldiers,—made Heaven a battle-field, put Christ in uniform, and described God as a military general. His works were considered by the Protestants nearly as sacred as the Bible itself, and the imagination of the people was thoroughly polluted by the horrible imagery, the sublime absurdity of the blind Milton.

Heaven and hell were realities—the judgment day was expected—books of account would be opened. Every man would hear the charges against him read. God was supposed to sit on a golden throne, surrounded by the tallest angels, with harps in their hands and crowns on their heads. The goats would be thrust into eternal fire on the left, while the orthodox sheep on the right, were to gambol on sunny slopes forever and forever.

Such a nation was profoundly ignorant, and consequently extremely religious, so far as belief was concerned.

In Europe, Liberty was lying chained in the Inquisition—her white bosom stained with blood. In the New World the Puritans had been hanging and burning in the name of God, and selling white Quaker children into slavery in the name of Christ, who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me."

Under such conditions progress was impossible. Some one had to lead the way. The Church is, and always has been, incapable of a forward movement. Religion always looks back. The Church has already reduced Spain to a unit, Italy to a hand-organ, and Ireland to exile.

Some one not connected with the Church had to attack the monster that was eating out the heart of the world. Some one had to sacrifice himself for the good of all. The people were in the most abject slavery; their manhood had been taken from them by pomp, by pageantry, and power. Progress is born of doubt and inquiry. The fathers of the Reformation inquires To doubt is heresy—to inquire is to admit that you do not know; the Church does neither.

More than a century ago Catholicism, wrapped in robes red with the innocent blood of millions, holding in her frantic clutch crowns and sceptres, honors and gold, the keys of heaven and hell, tramping beneath her feet the liberties of nations, in the proud moment of almost universal dominion, felt within her heartless breast the deadly dagger of Voltaire. From that blow the Church never can recover. Livid with hatred, she launched her eternal anathemas at the great destroyer, and ignorant Protestants have echoed the curses of Rome.

In our country the Church was all-powerful, and although divided into many sects, would instantly unite to repel a common foe.

Paine struck the first grand blow.

The "Age of Reason" did more to undermine the power of the Protestant Church than all other books have been known. It furnished an immense amount of food for thought. It was written for the average mind, and is a straightforward, honest investigation of the Bible and of the Christian system.

Paine did not falter from the first page to the last. He gives you his candid thought, and candid thoughts are always valuable.

The "Age of Reason" has liberated us all. It put arguments in the mouths of the people; it put the Church on the defensive; it enabled somebody in every village to corner the parson; it made the world wiser, and the Church better; it took power from the pulpit and divided it among the pews.

Just in the proportion that the human race has advanced, the Church has lost power. There is no exception to this rule.

No man ever materially advanced that held strictly to the religion of its founders.

No nation ever gave itself wholly to the control of the Church without losing its power, its honor, and existence.

Every Church pretends to have found the exact truth. This is the end of progress. Why pursue that which you have? Why investigate when you know?

Every creed is a rock in running water; humanity sweeps by it. Every creed cries to the universe. "Halt!" A creed is the ignorant Past bullying the enlightened Present. The ignorant are not satisfied with what can be demonstrated. Science is too slow for them, and so they invent creeds. They demand completeness. A sublime sequence, a grand fragment, are of no value to them. They demand the complete circle—the entire structure.

In music they want a melody with a recurring accent in measured periods. In religion they insist upon immediate answers to the questions of creation and destiny. The alpha and omega of all things must be in the alphabet of their superstition. A religion that cannot answer all questions, and guess every conundrum, is, in their estimation, worse than worthless. They desire a kind of theological dictionary—a religious ready reckoner, together with guide-boards at all crossings and turns. They mistake impudence for authority, solemnity for wisdom, and bathos for inspiration. The beginning and the end are what they demand. The grand flight of the eagle is nothing to them. They want the nest in which he was hatched, and especially the dry limb upon which he roosts. Anything that can be learned is hardly worth knowing. The present is considered of no value in itself. Happiness must not be expected this side of the clouds, and can only be attained by self denial and faith; not self-denial for the good of others, but for the salvation of your own sweet self.

Paine denied the authority of Bibles and creeds—this was his crime—and for this the world shut the door in his face, and emptied its slops upon him from the windows.

I challenge the world to show that Thomas Paine ever wrote one line, one word in favor of tyranny—in favor of immorality; one line, one word against what he believed to be for the highest and best interest of mankind; one line, one word against justice, charity, or liberty, and yet he has been pursued as though he had been a fiend from hell. His memory has been execrated as though he had murdered some Borgia for his wife; driven some Hagar into the desert to starve with his child upon her bosom; defiled his own daughters; ripped open with the sword the sweet bodies of loving, kissing, innocent women; advised one brother to assassinate another; kept a harem with seven hundred wives, and three hundred concubines, or had persecuted Christians even unto strange cities. The Church has pursued Paine to deter others. No effort has been in any age of the world spared to crush out opposition. The Church used painting, music, and architecture, simply to degrade mankind. But there are men that nothing can awe. There have been at all times brave spirits that dared even the gods. Some proud heads are always above the waves. In every age some Diogenes has scorned to sell the gods. True genius never cowers, and there is always some Samson feeling for the pillars of authority.

Cathedrals and domes, and chimes and chants—temples frescoed and groined and carved, and gilded with gold—altars and tapers, and paintings of virgin and babe—censer and chalice, chasuble, paten and alb—organs and anthems and incense rising to the winged and bejewelled manipleamice and stole—crosses and crosiers, tiaras and crowns—mitres and missals and masses—rosaries, relics and robes—martyrs and saints, and windows stained as with the blood of Christ, never for one moment awed the brave, proud spirit of the Infidel. He knew that all the pomp and glitter had been purchased with liberty—that priceless jewel of the soul. In looking at the cathedral he remembered the dungeon. The music of the organ was not loud enough to drown the clank of fetters. He could not forget that the taper had lighted the fagot. He knew that the cross adorned the hilt of the sword, and so where others worshiped, he wept and scorned.

The doubter, the investigator, the Infidel, have been the saviors of liberty. This truth is beginning to be realized, and the intellectual are beginning to honor the brave thinkers of the past.

But the Church is as unforgiving as ever, and still wonders why any Infidel should live. Her wicked enough to endeavor to destroy her power.

I will tell the Church why.

You have imprisoned the human mind; you have been the enemy of liberty; you have burned us at the stake—wasted us upon slow fires—torn our flesh with iron; you have covered us with chains—trodden us in dungeons; you have filled the world with fear; you have taken our wives and children from our arms; you have confiscated our property; you have denied us the right to testify in courts of justice; you have branded us with infamy; you have torn out our tongues; you have refused us burial. In the name of your religion, you have robbed us of every right; and after having inflicted upon us every evil that can be inflicted in this world, you have fallen upon your knees, and with clasped hands, implored your God to torment us forever.

Can you wonder that we hate your doctrines—that we despise your creeds—that we feel proud to know that we are beyond your power—that we are free in spite of you—that we can express our honest thought, and that the whole world is grandly rising into the blessed light?

Can you wonder that we point with pride to the fact, that Infidelity has ever been found battling for the rights of man, for the liberty of conscience, and for the happiness of all?

Can you wonder that we are proud to know that we have always been disciples of Reason and soldiers of freedom; that we have denounced tyranny and superstition, and have kept our hands unstained with human blood?

We deny that religion is the end or object of this life. We say it is so considered it becomes destructive of happiness—the real end of life. It becomes a hydra-headed monster, reaching in terrible coils from the heavens, and thrusting its thousand fangs into the bleeding, quivering hearts of men. It devours their substance, builds palaces for God (who dwells not in temples made with hands), and allows his children to die in huts and hovels. It fills the earth with mourning, heaven with hatred, the present with fear, and all the future with despair.

Virtue is a subordination of the passions to the intellect. It is to act in accordance with your highest convictions. It does not consist in believing, but in doing.

This is the sublime touch that the Infidel in all ages have uttered. They have handed the torch from one to the other through all the years that have fled. Upon the altar of reason they have kept the sacred fire, and through the long midnight of faith, they led the divine flame.

Infidelity is liberty; all religion is slavery. In every creed, man is the slave of God—woman is the slave of man, and the sweet children are the slaves of all.

We do not want creeds; we want knowledge—we want happiness.

And yet we are told by the Church that we have accomplished nothing; that we are simply destroyers; that we tear down without building again.

Is it nothing to free the mind? Is it nothing to civilize mankind? Is it nothing to fill all the world with light, with discovery, with science? Is it nothing to dignify man and exalt the intellect? Is it nothing to grope your way into the dreary prisons the damp and dropping dungeons, the dark and silent cells, where the souls of men are chained to the floors of stone, to greet them like a ray of light, like the song of a bird, the murmur of a stream, to see the dull eyes open and grow slowly bright, to feel yourself grasped by the shrunken and unused hands, and hear yourself thanked by a strange and hollow voice?

Is it nothing to conduct these souls gradually into the blessed light of day—to let them see again the happy fields, the sweet, green earth, and hear the everlasting music of the waves?

Is it nothing to make men wipe the dust from their swollen knees, the tears from their blanched and furrowed cheeks?

Is it a small thing to rescue the heavens of an insatiate monster, and write upon the eternal dome, glittering with stars, the grand word—FREEDOM?

Is it a small thing to quench the flames of hell with the holy tears of pity—to unbind the martyr from the stake—break all the chains—put out the fires of evil war—stay the sword of the fanatic, and tear the bloody bands of the Church from the white throat of Science?

Is it a small thing to make men truly free—to destroy the dogmas of ignorance, prejudice and power—the poisoned fables of superstition, and drive from the beautiful face of the earth the fiend of Fear?

It does seem as though the most zealous Christian must at times entertain some doubt as to the divine origin of his religion. For eighteen hundred years the doctrine has been preached. For more than a thousand years the Church had, to a great extent, control of the civilized world, and what has been the result? Are the Christian nations patterns of charity and forbearance? On the contrary, their principal business is to destroy each other. More than five millions of Christians are trained, educated and drilled to murder their fellow-christians. Every nation is groaning under the vast debt incurred in carrying on war against other Christians, or defending themselves from Christian assault. The world is covered with forts to protect Christians from Christians; and every sea is covered with iron monsters ready to blow Christian brains into eternal froth. Millions upon millions are annually expended in the effort to construct still more deadly and terrible engines of death. Industry is crippled, honest toil is robbed, and even beggary is taxed to defray the expenses of Christian warfare. There must be some way to reform this world. We have tried creed, and dogma and fable, and they have failed; and they have failed in all the nations dead.

The people perish for the lack of knowledge.

Nothing but education—scientific education—can benefit mankind. We must find out the laws of nature and conform to them.

We need free bodies and free minds—free labor and free thought—chainless hands, and fearless brains. Free labor will give us wealth. Free thought will give us truth.

We need men with moral courage to speak and write their real thoughts, and to stand by their convictions, even to the very death. We need have no fear of being too radical. The future will verify all grand and brave predictions. PAINE was splendidly in advance of his time; but he was orthodox compared with the Infidels of to-day.

Science, the great Iconoclast, has been busy since 1800; and by the highway of Progress are the broken images of the Past.

On every hand the people advance. The Vicar of God has been pushed from the throne, of the CÆSARS, and upon the roofs of the Eternal City once more falls the shadow of the Eagle.

All has been accomplished by the heroic few. The men of science have explored heaven and earth, and with infinite patience have furnished the facts. The brave thinkers have used them. The gloomy caverns of superstition have been transformed into temples of thought, and the demons of the past are the angels of to-day.

Science took a handful of sand, constructed a telescope, and with it explored the starry depths of heaven. Science wrested from the Gods their thunderbolts; and now the electric spark freighted with thought and love, flashes under all the waves of the sea. Science took a tear from the cheek of unpaid labor, converted it into steam, created a giant that turns with tireless arm, the countless wheels of toil.

THOMAS PAINE was one of the intellectual heroes—one of the men to whom we are indebted. His name is associated forever with the Great Republic. As long as free government exists, he will be remembered, admired and honored.

He lived a long, laborious and useful life. The world is better for his having lived. For the sake of truth he accepted hatred and reproach for his portion. He ate the bitter bread of sorrow. His friends were untrue to him because he was true to himself, and true to them. He lost the respect of what is called society, but kept his own. His life is what the world calls failure, and what history calls success.

If to love your fellow men more than self is goodness, THOMAS PAINE was good.

If to be in advance of your time, to be a pioneer in the direction of right, is greatness, THOMAS PAINE was great.

If to avow your principles and discharge your duty in the presence of death is heroic, THOMAS PAINE was a hero.

At the age of seventy three, death touched his tired heart. He died in the land his genius defended—under the flag he gave to the skies. Slander can not touch him now—hatred can not reach him more. He sleeps in the sanctuary of the tomb, beneath the quiet of the stars.

A few more years—a few more brave men—a few more rays of light, and mankind will venerate the memory of him who said:

"Any system of Religion that shocks the mind of a child can not be a true system;"

"The world is my Country, and to do good my Religion."

FLORENCE SEWING MACHINES.

Wm. H. Sharp, & Co., General Agents.
63 Madison Street.

This machine is recommended to any who desire a first-class Family Sewing Machine; and is noted for its quiet, rapid motion, regularity of tension, and ease of management. Four different stitches, and reversible feed-motion—features peculiar to the Florence Machine, and claimed by no other in the world.

Samples and terms to agents furnished on application.

TEN DOLLARS!
($10) GIVEN AWAY!! ($10)

We will give to every One buying a FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE through our House TEN DOLLARS' worth of any of the books advertised in our book-list, or of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, or a part of each as a premium or inducement.

The Florence Machine is one of the very best manufactured, and ranges in price from sixty-five dollars to one hundred and fifty.

We will furnish descriptive circulars and samples on application.

[illegible] street, Chicago.

New Books.

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY.

By Hudson Tuttle.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. PRICE $2.00; Postage 16c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to new hopes and aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.

 Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE BIBLE IN THE BALANCE,

A Book for the Age and the Times,

and one that should be in the hands of every liberal man and woman in the land.

You want it for your own instruction, that you may be furnished with acknowledged authority to meet the arguments of the theologian, historian, chronologist and scientific man with his own weapons.

It discusses the matter of Bible canons, versions, translations and revisions with ability, citing none but authors in the highest repute, and those that are above criticism.

The book is printed in excellent style, 12 mo., on good type and fine paper, with beautiful illustrations of the mounds and mound-relics of the Mississippi Valley

It is substantially bound in cloth and contains three hundred and twenty pages.

The interest felt in the work is so great that orders were received for nearly the whole of the first edition before it was published, one party alone having received orders for over three hundred copies.

Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address: RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

v6 n16 tf.

THE Science of Evil; OR FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.

BY JOEL MOODY.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the PROBLEM, and reveals the MYSTERY of Evil, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be the LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo., of 343 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 20 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

The Great MAGNETIC CURE.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR TO DR. E. SMITH, NORMAL, ILLINOIS.

Criticism on the THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY,

Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.

BY M. B. CRAVEN.

12 mo., 317 pages.—Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Dr. P. B. RANDOLPH'S WORKS.

DEALINGS WITH THE DEAD. The human soul, its migrations and its transmigrations; 268 page, bound in cloth.

Price, 75cts. Postage, 12cts.

AFTER DEATH, OR DISEMBODIED MAN. The Location, Topography and Scenery of the Supernal Universe; its Inhabitants, their Customs, Habits, Modes of existence; Sex after Death; Marriage in the World of Souls; The sin against the Holy Ghost, its fearful penalties, &c., &c. Being the Sequel to Dealings with the Dead.

Price, $1,00; Postage 20cts.

PRE-ADAMITE MAN, demonstrating the existence of the Human Race upon this Earth 100,000 years ago. Fourth Edition, well bound in cloth and containing over Four Hundred Pages.

Price, $1,50, Postage, 20cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

A GREAT CHANCE FOR AGENTS. Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new [illegible] Wire[illegible]

MEDIUM'S DIRECTORY.

[PUBLISHED EVERY OTHER WEEK.]

The Religio-Philosophical Journal being on special friend to all true mediums, will hereafter publish a complete Directory, giving the place of all professional mediums, so far as advised upon the subject. This will afford a good facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time, that we may keep their places of residence correctly registered.

☞ It is a lamentable fact that some mediums so far forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not unfrequently even of those who are far their superiors. The names of such persons will be dropped from this Register as soon as we have evidence sufficient of their indulgence in such unbecoming.

It should be borne in mind that clairvoyants visiting medicines carry contradictions within themselves—so to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control the medium visited; hence it may be that a medium does admirably to certain persons, another better to others—all having their friends, and justly so, too, and all equally honest and useful in their places.

CHICAGO.

Sange children, 227 S. Morgan St. ‡
Mrs. Stiles Brown, 197 W. Washington St.
Dr. W. Cleveland 511 Wabash Avenue.
Mrs. A. Crocker, 179 W. Madison St. ‡
Mrs. S. F. Cate, rear of 321 State st. on Victoria Ave. ‡
Mrs. Dr. Wolf, 165 West Madison St. ‡
Dr. S. Dwyer, 253 West Madison st. Chicago
Dr. J. P. Grigg, 228 W. Randa n street, cor. Peoria. ❁
Mrs. Jorgenson, Parlors 28 and 29 Honore Block ‡
Mrs. M. Jenks, 176 W. Van Buren street. ❁
Mrs. J. C. Reed 468 Wells, bet. 16th & Clark street. ❁
Dr. S. L. M. Potter and Wife, 343 W. Madison St.❁‡
Mrs. C. Moody, 106 12th street. ❁ ‡
Mrs. Dr. Collis Harwood, 65 No. Halsted st. ❁ ‡
Mrs. A. H. Robinson, 122 Fourth Avenue.❁ ‡
Madame Ritter, 301 S. Clark St. ‡
Mrs. M. Smith, 1 Honore Block, Madison St.❁
Dr. Sargent, 78 Third Ave.‡
Dr. M. L. Sherman and Wife, 306 South Clark St.❁‡
Dr. Sam. Grover, test and trance, 70 Clark street.❁
Mrs. S. T. Viber, 669 Indiana Ave.❁‡
Dr. J. Wilbur, 460 W. Randolph st. ❁
A. D. Wyllis, Cor. Clark & Madison st. ¶
Mrs. M. S. Weeks, Room 60 D. Haven Block, Chicago.

BOSTON.

Dr. H. B. Storer, ❁‡
Mrs. Julia M. Friend, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. S. J. Stickney, 282 Tremont St.
Dr. Main, 220 Harrison Ave. ❁
Mrs. A. C. Watson, 201 Washington St.
Freeman Hatch, 3 Beaver Place.
Mrs. L. W. Leedy, 9 Hudson St.❁
Mrs. Marshall, 39 Edinboro St.
W. H. Mosier, 170 W. 4p ingfield street. ¶
Mrs. A. E. Hodges, 1 Oak St.‡
Mrs. M. M. Harry, 134 W. Concord St.‡
Samuel Grover, 25 Dix Place.
Mrs. F. O. Hyzer, 181 Tremont St.‡
E. G. Littlejohn, 36 Hanson street, Boston, Mass.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mrs. Sarah A. Anthony, S. W. cor. 7th & Catharine st. ‡
Miss A. M. Bulver, 1218 So. 11th st. ‡
Mrs. A. Reynolds Bundle, 1629 No. 8th st. ‡
Peter Beisel, 229 No. 13th st. ❁
H. P. Blaker, 514 So. 10th st. ‡
Mrs. Sarah N. Buzby Heaters, 1037 Mt. Vernon st. ❁
David S. Cadwallader, 1005 Race st. ❁ ‡
Miss Emily Dick, 933 Race st. ‡
Mrs. S. Fay, 1306 Heiter wood st. ‡
Mrs. Glanding, 1712 Warnock st. ‡
Mrs. Reed, 816 Girard st. ❁
Mrs. Annie Goodrich, 414 Enterprise st. ‡
Mrs. Gindinger, 1230 Catharine st. ‡
De Witt Clinton Hough, 813 Race st.
Edward Greene, Machinist, 1037 Girard. ‡
Mrs. Mary Lamb, rear of 1317 No. Front st. ❁ ‡
Mrs. Lawrence, 1521 So. 6th st. ‡
Mrs. Miller, 717 Erie st. ‡
Mrs. L. T. Man., 940 So. 13th st. ‡
Mrs. Mary McLachlin, 1039 Federal st. ‡
Mrs. R. McNeil, 1016 Richmond st. ‡
Miss Mitchell, 234 Spruce st. ‡
Mrs. G. A. Mumbl, Room above 11th. ‡
Mrs. Mock, 512 No. 10th st. ‡
Mrs. Jennie Martin, 1510 No. 16th st. ‡
Mrs. Mayo, 1539 Cherry st. ‡
Miss Anna Murr, 1522 Cherry st. ‡
Mrs. Mary Millard, S. W. cor. 7th & Catharine s. ‡
Mrs. Mary Pa mer, 1440 No. 11th st. ❁
Jacob L. Paxson, 1037 Mt. Vernon st. ❁
Mrs. Powell, 429 Spruce st. ‡
Samuel Pahl, Hanover St. Girard st. ‡
J. J. Peterson Kelly, 919 Cross st. ‡
B. F. Richardson, 633 No. 1 th st. ‡
Mrs Kate S. Robinson, 2126 Brandywine st. ‡
Prof. J. B Rogers, 234 So. 7th st. ‡
Mrs R. R. Stoddard, 518 Race st. ‡
Isaac Taylor, 105 Laurel st. ❁ ‡
Mrs. Taylor, 105 Laurel st.
Mrs. Xavier, 1220 Fulton st. ❁

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Dunforth, 84 Lexington Ave.❁
Miss Blanch Foley, 634 Third Ave.
Mrs. H. Seymour, 140 Hester St.
Mrs. J. Cotton, 247 E. 31st St.
J. William Van Namee, 420 Fourth Ave.❁‡

AURORA, ILL.

Mrs. A. C. Smith, Aurora, Ill. ‡
Mrs. A. Swift, Aurora, Ill. ❁ ‡

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Mrs. Weiss, Grover.
Mrs. M. E. Gridley, 613 W. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lewis, Bloomington, Ill.‡

BLYSTONE CITY, N. J.

Mrs. B. Wallis.

GREEN GARDEN ILL

Mrs. Calkins.❁‡

GENESEE, WIS.

Mrs. B. W. Balcom. ❁ ‡
Mrs. P. A. Logie.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

A. R. Severance and Mrs. J. H. R. Severance, M. D. 467 Milwaukee street Milwaukee, Wis.❁‡
W. W. Herring, 121 Spring street, Milwaukee, Wis. ❁
Mrs. Carrie B. Wright, 440 Race st. ‡

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, Box 1231, Rockford, Ill. ❁
Mrs. M. J. Olson S. Rockford, Ill. ‡

RICHMOND IND.

Francis S. Haswell. 96 N. Marion street.
Dr. Samuel Maxwell, 73 S. 6th street.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Wm. H. Hatch, 118 Kearney St.

ST. CHARLES, ILL.

Mrs. Leonard Howard.❁‡
D. P. Kayner, M. D.❁

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Mrs. Mary B. Beech.

WHITEWATER, WIS.

Mrs. A. B. Severance ❁‡

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Orvin Abbott, Minneapolis, Minnesota. ❁
Little Annie Ocie Bigelow, Iowa. ‡
Josephine Allen, Geneseo, Ill.
L. Jane Atwood, Lake Mills, Wis.
Miss M A A pbl si Bayne, Ohio. ❁
Mrs. Austin, Ohio. ‡
Mrs. Jennie Adams, Box 1202, Kansas City, Mo. ❁
Mrs. E. A. Blair, 106 Ridge st., Salem, Mass. ¶
Dr. H. Barnes, Wellsboro, Tioga Co., Pa. ❁
M. K. Cassius, 186 Bank street, Newark, N. J.❁
Mrs. J. F. Currier, Cincinnati, Ohio.❁
Mrs. J. C. Drake, 34 Hoffman Block, Cleveland, Ohio.
Doherty & Purcell, Indianapolis, Ind. ¶
George M. Dutton, Algona, Iowa. ‡
J. W. Fay, Toledo, O. ❁
Mrs. J. E. Brunel, Sarm. Gold, Mo. ‡
David S. Fuller, Davenport, Iowa. ❁‡
Alonzo J. Schlesinger, Schenectady N. Y. ❁
J. S. Fayette, Girard, N. Y. ‡
Dr. S. W. Fenno, 116 Reign st, Columbus, Ohio ❁
Mrs. E. Gay, Canandaigua, New York. ❁
Dr. J. M. Holland, 200 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs Iowa. ❁
Judge D. L. Hoy, M ble, Alabama.
U. S. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.❁
Dr. B. Hoal, 52 Whitehall st, Atlanta, Ga.❁
Mrs. Jennie Ferris, Traveller. ‡
Dr. P. T. Johnson, Tpsilanti, Mich. ❁
J. W. Kenyon, Watertown, Wis. ❁
Mrs. C. Lathrop, 97 East Harrison street. ❁
Mrs. J. S. Loomis, Batavia, Genesee, Mich. ❁
Mrs E. F. Moore Care of Wells & Co., 601 North 5th street, St. Louis, Mo. ❁
Mrs. Dr. Mansfield, Marysville, N. Y. ‡
Mrs. A. Meeker, Farmington, Mich. ❁
Mr. John D. Odell, Waterloo, N. Y. ❁
Mrs. Lucy Pierce, Cambridge, Henry Co., Ill. ❁‡
Mrs Hazel Pike, 8 nth Read Ind. ❁
Mrs. M. F. Webster, Stewartville, Ind.
R. S. Star, Fort Huron, Mich. ¶
Isaac Jackson Sloan, Covington, Ind.‡
Mrs. P. W. Stephens, east side of 4th street, between I & J, Sacramento, Cal. ❁
H. H. Sherman, Gahanna, Ohio. ‡
Annie C. Torrey, Houston, Texas. ‡
Mrs. Thompson, Linden Station, ❁
Warren Wight, Waterloo, Seneca Co., N. Y. ❁
Mrs. Fanny Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas. ‡

❁ Healers.
‡ Speak Artists.
¶ Psychometrist.
Seances and Test.
Writing and Drawing.
Physical Manifestations.
Trance Speaking.

Health by Good Living.

BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,

Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."

THIS book is to show how high health can be maintained at common diseases cured by "good living," which means eating with a relish the best food, prepared in the best manner.

The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game fruits, and the grains which make bread.

The best cookery preserves the natural tastes and juices.

As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get that great blessing without money and without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down lower:" What shall a man do? What shall fat men eat? How to get fat: Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Spring diseases: Children's eating: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' eating: Cold and headache: Biliousness: A lazy liver: Miscellaneous [illegible]: Why are we dyspeptic? Disease-maker: Curious cure of neuralgia: and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

It tells

[illegible]ure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure [illegible] amusement: How to cure nervousness: How to cure exhaustion: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean. How to get good sleep: How to maintain high health. How to avoid disease: And all these without medicine: without money; without price.

It tells about

Luncheons and how to take them: Late dinners and how to take them: How drunkards are made at eating-houses: How girls are made at boarding-schools: How health is lost: How home love is lost: How novel reading ruins them: How love of dress is instilled: How young men are ruined about: How bad matches are made: How good wives are made at home: How home influences purify.

Price $1.50. Postage 16 cents For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF

Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the venerable soil of India, wastrammeled and stifled by the altar that substituted for intellectual life a semi-brute existence of dreaming impotence.....

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that when on a mother is sending forth her children even to the utmost end has, in unfading testimony of our origin, bequeathed as the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.....

To religious despotism, imposing, speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....

.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I prefer shrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

 PRICE $2.00; postage 36 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

A REVELATION!!!

of the

EXTRAORDINARY VISITATION

of

SEPARTED SPIRITS!

Of Distinguished Men and Women of all Nations, as Manifested through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers."

The Spirits of WASHINGTON, FRANKLIN PENN, GIRARD, ST. PATRICK, NAPOLEON, JOHN WESLEY, BYRON, GEO. FOX

and Hosts of Celebrated Characters of the Past, who take Possession of and Discourse through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers," of New York, giving Wonderful Information respecting the Events of their Lifetime, and their Opinions of Present Criticisms concerning those Events, as well as their Immediate Condition in the World of Spirits.

PRICE:—35 cts; postage, 2 cts. Liberal discount to the trade.

ADDRESS:—RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 and 189 S Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

THE VOICE OF PRAYER,

A Poem by W. S. Barlow, Author of "The Voices."

This little poem is fully equal to any of Mr. Barlow's best efforts, and should be read by everybody.

Printed on fine tinted paper with blue line border. Price 20 cents; postage 2 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Exeter Hall! Exeter Hall!

HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL

THE following are extracts from a few of the notices of Exeter Hall, the Theological Romance:—

"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—(Public Opinion, London, England.

"It is indeed a wonderful book."—(New York Mail.

"We commend it to the widest popular approval."—(Banner of Light, Boston.

"We have no hesitation in declaring this a great work."—(Universe, New York.

"The book is well and powerfully written. * * * The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason.'"—(Liberal, Chicago.

"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—(Democrat's Magazine, New York.

"Convincingly illustrative of the errors of Theology."—(Investigator, Boston.

"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—(Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.

Price, 60 cents. Postage, 4 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,

BY C. L. JAMES.

An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce legislation. For sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo Post paid for 35 cents.

v9 n18-tf.

HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

[illegible]ical Publishing House.

☞All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1.—3 mo.

☞Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Order, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to fifteen cents, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions commencing should more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.00 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names entered on the subscription books without the cash payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the ensuing year, with or without further reminder from this office

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office—whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Upon the margin of each paper, or upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 1870, 1870, it will be marked, Smith J.—16 Dec.—0. The 16 means 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 15th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith J.—15 Dec.—0, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞Those sending money to this office for the JOURNAL should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, AUGUST 26 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER LIII.

CAUSE AND EFFECT—THE YANKEE'S EXPERIMENT.

The mind, constantly animated with fresh hopes, and yearning for a solution of the question, travels onward among the winding labyrinths of science and art, new scenes constantly greeting the vision. Life, in all its departments, is varied in its nature, hence there will continue to arise new subjects that will demand our attention. Faith sustains us—faith that after this tedious search, a bright field will open up before us, where our highest aspirations will be realized. Impotence to solve a problem, many times renders the mind positive, and not receptive of those grand truths that the Spirit World are ever seeking to shower down upon it. Perfect passivity is required—no stopping to criticise an idea that is advanced, or a position that is assumed. When in rapport with a spirit, the mind must be negative to his, and then he can transmit his own thoughts, give expression to his own sentiments.

In our investigations, we have been sensible of the magnitude of this question, yet we have never faltered, never hesitated to march boldly forward in to the regions of abstruse philosophy, unearthing the truths contained there and presenting them to the children of earth. We propose to solve this problem, present the solution thereof to the world, and have the same recorded in lasting letters on the pages of history. A truth is a truth, whether enunciated amidst a cry of opposition, or approval.

Searching after a God—he who is supposed to be omnipotent, and to whom is attributed the creation of all things, is a strange anomaly in this day and age of the world. Search after God! Penetrate the heavens! Travels among the stars! Visit the distant planets, and survey the wonders of the universe, and still the ejaculation will come, I can not find God! Child of earth, listen! Go where you will, in any of the multifarious departments of matter or spirit, and still no tangible evidence exists that there is a God. Night, one eternal night, all the time! What noise is that which greets the ear. We trace it to its source, examine its cause, and the connection of a God therewith at once vanishes.

A shrewd Yankee, who was trafficking temporarily in Africa, one who was a keen observer of human nature, arranged some fine chords and wires on the limbs of a tree, in such a manner that when the wind blew, a strange wierd music was produced. This attracted the attention of the poor Negroes at once. They could not see the fine chords in the tree, could not detect the source of the music, or comprehend the agency at work, and each day large numbers congregated there, to listen to the strange melody which the ingeniously devised arrangement could produce, and while there, they would prostrate themselves beneath the tree, regarding it as the home of their God. To them, human beings of the lowest order, there was a divine mystery in the strange, solemn, weird music that seemed to emanate from the high branches. The news of this wonderful tree spread far and wide, and it was regarded with superstitious awe by the natives. When God breathed, that is, when the wind blew, it was then that the beautiful music was produced and the natives, in consequence, regarded this tree as [illegible] would congregate beneath [illegible], listen to the notes as they [illegible]ing breeze, and prostrate [illegible] ground, delighted with the [illegible] himself had condescended to no[illegible] These beautiful strains of music that went off on the wings of the wind, especially at night, strangely affected the poor Negro, inspired him with superstitious notions, made him devoutly believe that God himself had made his home among the branches of the tree, and that he was especially favored!

To-day, in all nature there is music, strangely weird and beautiful, that seems to come from a God! The spiritual ear discerns it, and it fills the mind with ecstatic emotions, and we feel, like worshiping its cause. But to render our position clearer, we will say there are certain manifestations in the material world, the cause of which we attribute to a God. The poor Negro in Africa had his ideas of a Deity. He breathed in the wind, and straightway enchanting music was produced! Could he have understood that a Yankee had been at work arranging the strange device, he would have ceased his worship at once. Those who glance at the problems in nature,—inexplicable to them,—have their superstitious natures at once excited, and they feel that none but a God could have arranged them. In their manifestations of intelligence in this respect, they imitate the reasoning of the poor Negro—he could not understand the source of the sweet music that sounded off on the breeze like the expiring notes of an Æolian harp, and he ascribed a God thereto at once!

Those who glance at the earth, its hills and mountains, its rivers and lakes, its majestic scenery, its wonderful productions, at once play the negro, and because they cannot understand its origin, comprehend the philosophy of its action, all at once declare: God did all this!

In our investigations, then, when we trace an effect to its cause, then a God vanishes! When the poor negro finally followed those beautiful and enrapturing strains of music to their source—found that a wooden-nutmeg Yankee had concocted the whole device, and caused them to do a great deal of foolish worshiping, they were very much aggravated.

This world is made up of effects. Trace the effect to a cause, and in no case will you find an Infinite God connected therewith. O Ignorance, loathsome, hideously deformed! from our inmost soul we pity you. Whether manifested under a tree in Africa or on the carpeted aisles of a church, with some pompous, evangelical minister, it is alike detestable! That minister who preaches Christ crucified is but a little superior to the Congo negro who worships God through the instrumentality of music. On all sides we see these rude notions existing in regard to a God,—having no higher foundation than the conceptions of the poor negro.

There is only one agent at work in the whole universe—Cause! We behold nothing but effects! The stream that moves the ponderous wheels is concealed from our view. The motion thereof is the effect. Trace the effect to the cause, and what do you find standing there, in kingly majesty and supremacy? Man! But what does that prove? Yes, what does anything prove? Trace any effect to a cause, and you will find the same result. The flowers bloom and scent the hills and valleys with their fragrance; the little birds sing their sweet songs, and in nature's vast cathedral they keep up a continual rejoicing. What of these? They are effects produced by wise arrangements in the material world. The earth is a strange structure. Its activities are so arranged that these results are produced which you see on all sides! Trace the earth to its Cause, and its forces were so arranged by the master minds that conceived it, that the effects would be produced which we see on all sides. During the experience of our guide in spirit-life, he has devoted a large portion of his time to tracing effects to their cause. In all cases, under all circumstances, he has been enabled to find individualized intelligences back of the effects, superintending the workings of those silent forces that produced them. O children of earth, do not ape the poor negro, who because he could not trace the effect to its cause, became wonderfully religious and worshiped an unknown God. In searching for a God we should deal with causes.

Back of all effects that we can trace to their cause we find individualized intelligence. Can we not, then, reasonably infer that he is connected with all causes?

Matter is not an effect, neither is the soul of man; both have eternally existed; they are independent of any infinite God. The various formations or combinations of matter, however, is an effect. He who can traverse the arcana of nature, venture into the "holy of holies," the regions of causes, then he stands on a high pinnacle indeed, and can hold converse with master minds of by-gone ages. He can trace those causes to their effects, and behold man on the high rounds of progression's ladder, viewing in wonder the wise arrangement. Ah, what a scene! The thunders on Mount Sinai, when Moses and Elias appeared to the Savior, gave indications of the presence of a God. Effects are the real cause of the belief in the existence of a God. Were they transparent, so that their cause could be seen, the belief in the existence of an Infinite, Intelligent Personality would vanish in a moment, for back of them would be found the comprehensive judgment and quick discernment of wise sages who have been long in spirit-life. Thus it has ever been. No commencement to time, no first day, no first man, no first world! There never was a time when the machinery of the universe did not move as now. Never a day when the heavens were not studded with innumerable luminaries, and the grand wheels of progress were not moving!

In our Search for God a grand lesson may be learned; for as you go back of the effects and examine its cause, at that very moment your God will vanish like a will-o'-the-wisp. But still before you, all around you, are effects that you cannot comprehend. The ponderous wheels of creation move, and the motive power is beyond your reach; you cannot see the master hand, of the strange devices that are brought in requisition, hence, negro-like, you ascribe all to an Infinite God. The belief in the existence of an Infinite God has nothing to do with man's destiny or happiness. The idea that man is beautifully interlinked with all the causes of creation, is grand indeed, and would you not wish it true?

Some learned ones would call this visionary—connecting individualized intelligences with the machinery of creation! They would prefer to ape the poor, illiterate negro, and attribute it all to God, or the operation of "nature's laws."

(To be continued.)

Fejee Philanthropy.

It is really amusing to see the efforts of Christians to reform the Chinese, Mahometans, Indians, Patagonians, and lastly the Fejee Islanders. The Fejee Islanders are about as low in the scale of existence as a human being can get without naturally fading into a monkey, and sustaining thereby the theory of Darwin. Late reports from missionaries among the Fejees, showed that many had been converted, sanctified, and redeemed; but now comes the rumor that they have backslidden, and gone back to cannibalism. It is well to try to reform these cannibals, but they have as little idea of grace, sanctification, the Trinity, baptism, or the blood of the lamb, as a mosquito has of surgery, when it bleeds your nose. The Chicago Tribune takes the following sensible view of these missionary labors:

From the Fejee Islands there comes the thrilling information that a portion of the islanders, who have recently been converted to Christianity, have broken out into revolt, and have gone back to cannibalism. Whether or not the insurgent negroes have made their first meals from roasts, stews, boils, broils, fricassees, and hashes of their own missionaries, we are not informed; and, as missionaries usually go from New England, the fact is not of much consequence either way. The only thing of consequence is a revival of the conversion that heathen, however much they may need to conversion, usually die in the faith of their ancestors; and, hence, that conversions mainly affect the life, and rarely or never the death, of these heathen who undergo them. It further suggests the inquiry as to the value of a "conversion" which, in a moment, may be reversed by a whole people, and which reversal will permit them to return in a moment from a promising state of sanctification to one of the lowest depths of demoral nature. It must be a puzzler to those denominations which profess to believe in "election," and "once in grace, always in grace," to discover people all praising and worshiping the Lord, and giving freely of banyan and cocoanuts to the missionaries on one day, and on the very next day having a grand feast in which potted missionary is the plat de resistance, and holy tracts are used for wrapping up cold remnants of the repast.

Whatever the affair may suggest to Christians—to those who in response to persistent mendicancy have given of their hard earnings for the support of missions among those remote heathen, it certainly suggests to outsiders that this whole system of foreign missionary effort is a very gross blunder and an inexcusable stupidity. If what the various orthodox churches are teaching be true, then three-fourths of the people of Chicago, and the same fractional majority of all civilized people, are going straight to future damnation.

With three-fourths of our own people unconverted, it is still taught and practiced that the work of salvation must be carried to the Fejee Islanders, although it is constantly demonstrated in their case that the game never pays for the powder.

Here are our own Indians. We have stolen their lands; we have exterminated what was once a mighty nation, that extended over half a continent. We found them comparatively innocent, noble and happy. We have given them the sword, whisky, the small-pox; and we have mercilessly pursued them until to-day, when there remain only a few starving shreds of these aboriginal nations. One would think that our Christian evangelists would have some small compassion, some little yearning of the bowels, toward these unfortunates. One would think that Christian fervor, in the desire to extend the benefits of the gospel to heathen, would reflect upon the nearness of these Indians, and the necessity, in view of their early total extermination, of a preparation for the coming life. Not a Protestant church in all this broad Christian land, as its mendicant deacons pass up and down the carpeted aisles, ever collects a dollar for the benefit of the salvation of the Indians whose homes we have stolen, whose blood we have shed, and whose lives we have contaminated by presenting only our meanest vices.

Let the Fejee Islanders eat each other in Christian love-feasts, and let them dish up as entrees the fools who have sailed to them on a mission of preaching and conversion. It is no wonder our churches complain of want of spirit, and of a failure to reach the world. Wrapped up in creeds, enveloped in worthless doctrinal discussions, impractical, in that they overlook the spiritually starving men and women who brush against their very skirts, in order to carry food to barbarians thousands of miles away,—they do nothing practical; nothing which commands the respect of intelligent men; nothing which entitles them to the support of the communities among whom they exist.

Gambling Hells.

There are gambling hells in Chicago—they are broad and deep, and are machines to ruin young men, and corrupt the morals of society. There are also in churches gambling hells, and they are full of devils—ministerial, cloven-footed gentry, who prey as the wolf does; and whose record in life is made up of unclean things. A Hell in church—did you ever suppose it? Yes, and houses of assignation there, too! Did not the Hillsdale professor institute a house of prostitution among his own church members? But hell is our subject; yes, hell,—gambling hells,—under the garb of sanctity and the cloak of Christian charity. The Church of St. Albans, in New York City, had one of these gambling hells, and a lady instituted suit against that organization to recover moneys which had been spent in getting up and superintending a fair for its benefit. This lady animated with a high sense of Christian charity and duty, advanced her means in order to make purchases of various articles, that from the sale of which she realized a handsome profit;—not intending to donate to the church the purchase money. But the church members of St. Albans saw the matter in a different light, and they resolved to appropriate to their own benefit the money the lady had so judiciously expended in making purchases. The minister, with a sanctimonious air, and a solemn expression to his eyes, as they rolled upward to the "throne of grace," would not consent to liquidate the lady's claim. The wardens of the church, whose prayers went heavenward morning and evening, nobly sustained their pastor, and the lady found herself minus the money she had expended. She betook herself to prayer—very naturally would do so—and for six long years prayed to God to soften the hearts of the incorrigible minister and wardens, but unfortunately her entreaties died away in sweet plaintive whispers somewhere in the clouds, and never reached the "throne of grace." Poor woman, what Christian resignation! Her patience at last became exhausted. Prayer would not penetrate the hearts of those who had appropriated her means, and finally she ceased them, and applied to the law, to compel the Christians to disgorge their ill-gotten gains, and in her efforts she was successful. The judge in deciding the perplexing question, read the Church a lecture on "gambling," which, no doubt, had a good effect. Strange, a judge teaching morality to churches, the same as he would to a lot of harlots or gamblers arraigned before him. Gambling outside of churches; gambling hells in the churches. What next?

Eleven Hundred Different Religions—Which is Right?

The whole batch is founded upon myths—myths piled upon myths.

The early inhabitants of the earth conceived of God, and bad Supreme Beings. The attributes of both were such as were found in the tyrants who ruled over them. The devotees feared and worshiped both.

From time to time, leading minds cut loose from some dogma, and instituted in its place a more consistent thought, which in time became a cardinal article in the traditions of his sect.

As time has rolled on, these locks have increased, until they now number eleven hundred!

It is indeed a religious world. God and Devil worshipers without number teem all over the face of the globe!—a mighty host of religious devotees! All are trying to appease the wrath of their supposed Great Supremes!

To say that their religion is all a fallacy, will perhaps, shock the hereditary religious feelings—the excessively morbid veneration and idolatry of some Spiritualists; nevertheless, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL has its mission to perform, under the supervision of the angel world, and it will do it fearlessly.

It will teach the Philosophy of Life, as the inspiration to that end shall reach us from the supernal spheres.

The wisdom of sages of unnumbered centuries, is being day by day, infiltrated into the minds of mortals—teaching them that to live happily and wisely, is to live in accordance with the laws of life, to live up to the highest conceptions of truth, as each soul shall be inspired through their perception, reflection, and moral faculties.

While all are related—are links in an endless chain—each is an individual unit, endowed with powers and capacity to think and act.

Wisdom is the result of the harmonious action of a well-balanced mind—let all strive to obtain wisdom from its legitimate source. To that end, study well the Philosophy of Life—accept angelic teachers of large experience, always testing the spirit with the touchstone of truth, and all phases of religion will disappear, and in their place fraternal love will rear its altar, and all men will be recognized as brethren—aye extending to the angelic spheres, the anthems of love and good-will one toward another will everywhere abound.

The intercommunion between this rudimental sphere and the angel world will be so perfect, that the cry will be exultingly uttered,

"O Death, where is thy sting!
O Grave where is thy victory!"

Spiritualism.

Mr. Carbonell, an exponent of Spiritualism in Charlestown, Mass., proposes to allow himself to be handcuffed and sewed up in a large bag and thrown into the river, when, as is claimed, he will come up with the bag on his arm, still whole, and not a stitch or cut disturbed, and the handcuffs in his hand. The Davenport Brothers have given up all pretensions to Spiritualism, and now perform their tricks only as tricks, leaving the spectator to account for them the best way he can. Spiritualism has had its day, so far as any claims to its being true are concerned, and it now takes its place among delusions and impostures of the past."

The foregoing we clip from an exchange. It is a sweet morsel for that class of readers who believe that they are to be washed in Christ's blood, and come out white sheep. Indeed, it is a very sheepish item. It believed at all, it must be by very sheepish individuals. Any person having brains superior to a sheep, from common observation, knows that every statement in the item is false. The Davenports are Spiritualists, and spirits daily manifest themselves to the public through their mediumship.

Carbonell, a believer in spirit communion, in derision of the fools who deride spirit intercourse, made the statement referred to, and the simple devotees of old theology believed he had some such power, outside of the spiritual phenomena.

It is Spiritualism has had its day, so far as any claims to its being true is concerned, and it now takes its place among delusions and impostures of the past," how happens it, ye simpletons, that scientific bodies are just beginning to examine into its merits?

Editors who publish such items without comment, to tickle the fancy of the most ignorant, outrage the common sense of semi-fools of their readers.—[ED JOURNAL.

THOSE WHO WISH to have this paper discontinued when the time is up to which it is paid for, should notify us of that wish two weeks before such time expires, as it takes that time to get it out of the mailing machine. When an order to discontinue is given by those in arrears, remittances should be made to square up in full, including the two weeks which the paper will be mailed the subscriber after such notice is given.

Mrs. Ferris, the Medium.

Just as we were going to press, we received from a gentleman in Terre Haute, Ind., a letter inclosing clippings from a newspaper published in that city, in which this falsehood among other statements appears:

"We have much more authority to substantiate what we publish, in our possession to make use of in our columns, taken from reliable papers in the country, and documentary evidence from other sources, including some from the police of Chicago; for the present we withhold them for lack of space.

Four or five years ago, Mr. Ferris and Mrs. Ferris resided in this city,—Chicago—for several months, and held many seances. The insinuations in regard to "documentary evidence, including some from the Police Court of Chicago," is a vile lie, for which the publisher of the paper should be held responsible.

Mrs. Ferris is an excellent medium. The devotees of old theology had better resort to some other argument to refute the facts of spirit communion. If the phenomenon be true (as it purports to be in her seances) that spirits do come and manifest themselves, those who would investigate the subject, will be in tolerable good company when their loved mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, and children, come and commune with them through the mediumship of Mrs. Ferris.

The newspaper editors who cater to such vile slanders against Mrs. Ferris, would have joined with the old Jews who charged the Nazarene with all manner of impropreties, and demanded that a robber should be released and Jesus crucified, if they had lived at that time.

Poor old theology has made but little progress in morals, and her devotees will have plenty to do to look after the free-love tendencies of their own flock—their ministers not excepted.

There never was a word uttered in the city of Chicago against Mrs. Ferris except by W. F. Jamieson, who has a mania for denouncing physical manifestations.

He with a tall woman in black—clothed in one of her dresses, gained access to one of Mrs. Ferris' seances (where he would not have been admitted had he not been disguised) and struck a light. No person but himself and the tall woman in black saw any fraud on the part of Mrs. Ferris. They having gained admission by fraud, and locking out of fraudulent eyes, professed to see Mrs. Ferris handling the instruments being played, and Jamieson published such a statement in the daily papers. His statement was refuted by all others who attended the seance. Hundreds of thousands have witnessed the manifestations of spirit power through Mrs Ferris' mediumship, and her integrity as a medium is not questioned by any honest investigator who witnesses the manifestations in her presence.

Our Spiritualist friends will do well to stand by Mrs. Ferris in her trials and persecutions, and refer her revilers to the foul nests that need removal in the polluted ranks of old theology. Every day's newspapers bring to the surface new and ripe cases, so that they who love such savory dishes need have no fears of getting out of an abundant supply to appease their greedy appetites.

Beecher.

"It is related that when Beecher was in the country last summer he lost his hat, and found it in about a week in a barn where he had left it, but with four eggs in it. This is as it should be. Beecher had just written a eulogy on the hen. Why shouldn't the Hen-re-ward Beecher?"

But unfortunately he did not take advantage of this strange occurrence. He should have consulted Greeley on agriculture, when he would have been directed to deceive the hen by an ingeniously constructed valve in the bottom of the hat, which would have let the egg into a reservoir below. The hen, on seeing no egg, would have continued to lay until she "laid herself out."

The Bible says that the human heart is "deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked," but we presume that Mr. Beecher did not wish to induce such a strain on the old hen by multiplying her customary duties. Indeed, had he constructed the valve, as Greeley would have suggested, he would, no doubt, have been arrested for cruelty to animals. The old hen that sought his hat must have been of a pious nature, a descendant of the old Puritan stock, and when she deposited her egg, cackled "Old Hundred," in honor of the event.

Out of Order.

A new foreman in an office sometimes unavoidably results in bungling work, notwithstanding the vigilant eye of an editor. The article from the pen of our Sister Wilcoxson bears evidence of that fact, the paragraphs in the same being misplaced. But the little mishap will attract the attention of all our readers to the article, who will in consequence give it a careful perusal. Read the paragraph, "I am almost alarmed at the thought, etc," then pass on until you reach the line "resort to any invention of men, etc," reading the paragraphs that follow. Then retrace your steps, and read the remainder. In consequence of the error, our foreman has not smiled since, and will not until forgiven by the author.

Robert G. Ingersoll.

We call attention to the able lecture of Robert G. Ingersoll, at Fairbury, Ill., in this issue of the JOURNAL. He is one of the leading lawyers of the State, and in the address referred to has given evidence of being a ripe scholar and profound thinker.

DR. PAUL COSTER, the healing medium, sends us a list of subscribers, together with his photograph, while in the act of healing a young man, from Okaswaw, Iowa, for which he has our thanks. He is reported to be a good healing medium. Our friends in that section of the country will do well to give him a trial.

Personal and Total.

—Brother S. C. Tober, of Cairo, Ill., sends a long defense of Mrs. Farris, as a reliable medium. We endorse all he says in her favor.

—E. Sprague, of Geneseo, Ill., sends the following to Rev. E. H. Wentworth: I have waited still now hoping to see an answer to your challenge to discuss the claims of Spiritualism. I accept it, and will meet you at any proper place between Chicago and Quincy, Michigan, on the Southern road. When done with that challenge, you or any respectable clergyman or gentleman can meet me on the following: Resolved, That Spiritualism is the only religion of the Bible, and that the churches have no claim to be the church of Christ.

—A London (Eng.) publisher has engaged the next work of Hudson Tuttle, and will place it in the printer's hands as soon as the manuscript is ready.

—Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson will speak in Des Moines, Iowa and vicinity, during September and October. Address care of E. M. Davis, Esq., Des Moines.

—Mrs. Rachel Moore, of St. Louis, is said to be meeting with fine success as a healer. She can be addressed in care of Warren Chase & Co., 614 North Fifth street, St. Louis.

—T. S. A. Pope's address is now Cameron, Mo.

—Brother J. O. Barret informs us that the Spiritualists had a glorious time at Geneva, Aug. 18. Mrs. Parry, Dr. Underhill, and E. W. Stevens were present to aid Brother Barret in his glorious work.

—Quite a number of our readers are acting as agents for C. E. Woolley & Co., whose advertisement headed "Wanted Agents" may be found in another column. This firm is perfectly reliable and trustworthy.

—We have another edition of the Shagwa Ghosts going through the press, the last being very nearly exhausted. The demand has been greater even than we anticipated.

—H. Kinney, of Waverly, N. Y., manufactures first-class wagons, carriages, etc. See his advertisement in another column.

—A. B. Severance, of Milwaukee, gives good satisfaction as a psychometrist.

—We are happy to learn that Dr. Abba Lord Palmer is doing a good business.

—The Spiritualists of Ottumwa, Iowa, are wide awake, and are doing a good work. Brother S. B. Mills, in writing from there, says: Mary A. Neles desires the address of the author of the article, "Houses for God," which lately appeared in the JOURNAL, but fails to give her own Post office address.

—C. B. Mills, of Ottumwa, Iowa, writes: We have had a rich feast from the heavenly world during the past week, served us through the mediumship of our beloved sister, Bell. A. Chamberlain. Of for a continual feast of the heavenly manna that the high and holy spirits dispensed through her mediumship.

—Brother A. Dodge writes from Stanwood, Kan., speaking in high terms of the mediumship of Mrs. A. M. Kelsey.

—Dr. R. D. Goodwin is said to be doing a grand good work at St. Louis, Mo.

—Brother Samuel Elsworth writes to us speaking in high terms of the mediumship of Miss Emma Martin, 64 Grand River Street, Detroit. She is a Clairvoyant test medium, and we believe that Susie M. Johnson, whose lectures so delighted a Chicago audience a few years ago, is associated with her.

—Brother Jones—We received during June and July from Bro. Frank Searles, $3; Bro. — E. Wheelock, $3; Bro. P. H. McGowen, —; Bro. Amos Green, $1. Allow us to return our most heartfelt thanks to each donor.

LOUISA AND AUSTIN KENT.

Stockholm, N. Y., Aug. 1, 1871.

—It is a curious feature of Court life under the Second Empire in France, if it be true, that nearly all the prominent ladies of the Tuileries, including the Empress herself, were in the habit of consulting certain fortune tellers on the events of the future. Three of them especially are said to have received visits from Eugenie and her ladies of honor—Madame Lenormand and Leclerque, and an old soothsayer and magician named Dr. Manicardi. The latter died recently in Paris, and among his papers was found a diary containing most singular statements about the state of affairs to which we have referred. It is said that this curious diary will be published at an early day.

—Cephas B. Lynn has been at Chicago, and writes to the Banner as follows, in reference to the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL: The editor and proprietor, S. S. Jones, greeted us in a way that did our soul good. The JOURNAL, so they tell us, is going on in a very prosperous manner. E. V. Wilson controls the Frontier Department of the paper, and therein tells the public where he has been, and what he has seen, and what he has done; and also where he intends to go, and what he intends to do when he gets there. Bro. Wilson, called by some, out of playfulness, "the gentle E. V.," is not a settled speaker; he travels the entire country, and does his own peculiar work in his own peculiar way, in all of which he is remarkably successful. Dr. H. T. Child, editor of the Philadelphia Department, continues to write in an unostentatious manner, about mediumship and the reform movements of the day. Mr. J. H. Francis, the enterprising assistant of Mr. Jones, has been connected editorially with THE RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL for nearly three years. It is only since last June, however, that his name has appeared as "associate editor." For the last year Bro. Francis has been engaged in a "Search after God"—a "leader" appearing each week in the JOURNAL, under that title. These articles have provoked all kinds of criticism.

—We learn from the Banner that Lois Waisbrooker's health is improving. She hopes to be able to do good service in the fall campaign. She will not be in Michigan till the last of August, instead of the 8th, as intended. She is ready to make engagements for Sundays and week night lectures in Michigan during September and October. Address in care of S. M. Bockwell, Battle Creek, Mich., till further notice. We have an able lecturer here on file, which we shall publish soon.

—Mrs. E. A. Blair, the well known blindfold instrument for spirit painting, is at present at Bangor, Maine. Her permanent address is 84 Atlantic Block, Lawrence, Mass.

—MYSTERIOUS.—While our popular artist, Mr. George Rose, was painting a picture of a young gentleman (Master Bonney, a pet and exemplary specimen) on the plate, just to one side of the picture, while the young man recognised as a deceased sister. Mr. Rose states he can be cannot account for the singular novelty in the picture business.—Petaluma, Cal., Oriental Jay Bird.

—Mrs. Sarah A. Byrnes will speak in Hanson, Mass., the first Sunday in September.

Philadelphia Department.

BY ..... HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 614 Race street, Philadelphia.

Statuvolism—Will State.

It is a custom which we generally consider better avoided than observed, to use technical terms from the ancient languages—learned phrases which may not be understood by the mass of the people. Our readers will excuse a few words, however, upon the science of mind, which obscure in itself, is often rendered much more so by the strange terms used by those who attempt to teach it. We have Animal Magnetism which really does not express, anything very definite; Mesmerism, Psychology, Biology and Somnambulism, which latter signifies sleep waking,—one of the least important and interesting phases manifested by those who present it.

When our friend Dr. Fahnestock wrote his valuable work, and for many years prior to this he called it Artificial Somnambulism, or Sleep Waking, in other words,

The term Somnolence, meaning sleep, induced by the Will, would express the idea usually attached to this, but this is very imperfect, because sleep is only an incident to this,—as it is to the ordinary state. We were going to say normal or natural state,—but they are all this, only different. Latterly, Dr. Fahnestock has adopted a new term —STATUVOLENCE—and in a recent letter to us he says: "I found it necessary to change the name of the science. I now call it Statuvolism, from two Latin words,—statue a condition, and volo the will,—or a condition from the will of the subject. It is a condition from the will, and not a sleep."

We have from time to time presented our views in these columns, on the subject of life; have shown clearly that man is a three fold being,—having a physical, an intellectual and a spiritual nature, and that each of these is duplicated,—having an interior and an exterior. Thus the physical body has an interior chemical form peculiar to itself, which remains after the mental and spiritual forces have passed entirely from the body, and it is left as we call it dead, subject to the action of these forces and the struggle between these and other forces in nature around it, which results sooner or later in its decomposition. The mental nature of man has an interior as well as an exterior nature, which is readily recognized, and the same is true of the spiritual nature.

We are very much indebted to Dr Fahnestock for valuable suggestions in regard to these divisions of human nature. The subject of Somnambulism, or Animal Magnetism, had been very much in the hands of unknown persons who knew very little of the laws of life, and who exhibited this either from curiosity or from mercenary purposes, and the more intelligent teachers who have taken up the subject, have blindly followed these, repeating crude experiments and modifying them to their peculiar notions,—so that each one had a system of their own. When Dr. Fahnestock presented his theory, that it was altogether through the action of the will of the individual that the operator had thrown into toto state, and that the operator had little or nothing to do with it, except to direct this state, it naturally aroused the ire of the teachers and their pupils, who had been educated in the belief that they must be passive instruments in the hands of the operators. The latter, never unwilling to yield what they conceived to be a great power, and wonderful and peculiar gift of their own, and the former unable from the influence of these to show off the idea which had been strongly impressed upon their minds by the so called operator. We listened to Dr Fahnestock's lectures twenty-five years ago, and were prepared then to accept some of the views he uttered, out not the whole.

Every investigator must have known that there are truths, often of a profound character, that we hear uttered from time to time, and sometimes feel disposed to ridicule or oppose, simply because we have not arrived at that state in which they become truths to us. It is positively essential that the mind shall grow to a condition that will enable it to perceive a truth, before it can receive it, and we know that this condition is often retarded by bad forence, or worse still, by prejudice, which closes the avenues of the understanding.

We confess to something of the former in regard to the truths then presented by our friend but having been favored with an opportunity of seeing him repeatedly, and having taught him how to place ourselves in this condition, we are ready to accept these truths, and intend to present our views with our own thoughts and impressions as well as such as we may receive from the spirit world in relation to the very important subject. Our aim being to discover the truth. We shall present the doctor's ideas and criticise them candidly, with no other object than to reach the highest conceptions of truth that can be obtained, and to go on gaining more and more.

The Doctor discards the idea that there is a magnetic fluid which passes from the operator to the subject, and that through this the magnetic and somnambulic conditions so called, whether trance, clairvoyance, insensibility or any other condition, were induced. The theories of all the writers and operators have taken the ground not only of the existence of such a fluid, but also of the necessity of its being transmitted to the subject by the operator. There seemed to be a plausibility in this theory, from the fact that one after another pursued the same course and attempted to throw the fluid, either by manipulations, or by the will upon the subject,—and the latter was invariably taught that this was absolutely necessary, and hence it became so, for the time being,—since as a man thinketh, so he is, especially true of the passive condition of mind in which the will is resigned to any preconceived idea. We are not prepared to admit that there is no magnetic fluid, or as we prefer to call it, vital force. We know from experience and observation, both externally and internally, that every substance as well as every individual living being, has an atmosphere or influence around it peculiar to itself. We may call it magnetic or any other fashionable term. Every one has experienced some of this. The earliest impressions of the new born child, without any volition, leads it to select those whose influences are genial and pleasant, and to repel such influences as when surrounded by those who do not furnish the proper conditions for it. So all through life, we select our companions and associates, without any effort of the will, and often against the will. With, therefore, we freely admit the Doctor's theory and feel very grateful to him for the suggestions he has made, we may say the important discovery, for it is such—we are not willing to ignore the experiences of the past in all which is claimed by or for each one, that the emanations of life from certain individuals are beneficial to others; that every healthy human being generates more life force than is required for his or her system, and gives this off, and that there are certain individuals to whom this is well adapted, and who are benefited by coming into the sphere of such persons. Our reason and observation teaches us this,—and more than this, we in common with the clairvoyants of all ages, can see these emanations radiating from individuals; can distinguish a peculiar color and influence in each. Hence the artists have always presented their saints and heroes with a halo of light around their heads, and sometimes their whole bodies; hence all the "sick sometimes," so called, of Baron Reichenbach—meaning thereby impressible persons —have seen "od force," not only around human beings, but around all bodies. We have seen more than this clairvoyantly. While the individual was passive, the emanations were uniform or nearly so from all the organs,—but whenever the mind was aroused and the will was directed through any particular organ or class of organs, then the light began to pass off much more rapidly and brilliantly from such organ or organs,—and we have frequently seen it directed by the will to correspondent organs in others, and have actually seen thought aroused and set into action by this which we call inspiration, and which is just as real as when passing from one human being to another, as it is when it passes from a spirit to a man being. We claim, therefore, from observation on the external plain from reason, and from clairvoyance or observation in the interior plane, that there is a fluid analogous to magnetism more nearly related, however, to the vital force which passes, not only from one individual to another, but out into the great dom in of nature, and exercises a potent influence there. We agree with the Doctor that this fluid is no way essential to the production of the somnambulic or statuvolic condition,—and that it is not proper to teach a subject that this is so, as it produces a condition in which the individuality is very much lost, and the subject becomes in a measure the slave of reading the mind in this state, delights in acting according to the will of the operator. Spirits seeing the evil resulting from this, have in many instances taken away subjects from the control of their so-called operators or magnetists.

We believe that any experimenter who will carefully try the plan suggested by Dr. Fahnestock, will find that there is no necessity for any manipulation or effort of their will on their part, and that susceptible persons will soon learn to go into this state more readily without these than with them. The discovery of Dr. Fahnestock is, we believe destined to revolutionize the whole subject of psychology, and for this he deserves the thanks of humanity. We accept the idea that this condition is always induced by the will of the individuals the act either consciously or otherwise, and that it should always be done more loudly and with all the knowledge the individual can have of it. We have occasionally spoken of our own experiences, where we believed it would be for the good of others.

On the 17th of April, 1870, we went into the first trance,—at least it was a new experience. It continued about two hours, and was produced, as we then supposed, by the influence of Mrs Yeaw and the spirits who were around us. It occurred at a circle in our parlor. This experience has been repeated hundreds of times, and sometimes the trances have lasted over twenty four hours. We believe this has saved our life in the form. We supposed it was necessary to have a person in this form, or the spirits to do this for us. Since our interview with Dr. Fahnestock, and the instructions we received from him, we find that there is no difficulty whatever in going into that condition at any moment, and that when we do so, spirits can readily take possession of our organization, and utter their own thoughts, so that we may listen to them as any other person does. This, however, is not a new experience, but we are very glad to know that this state can be thus induced by the will, and we hope to be able to obtain many successions of trance while there. We shall present a series of articles on this subject in the JOURNAL.

In Memoriam.

Passed on to the higher life, Mrs. Hannah Young, in the 65th year of her age.

We attended the funeral of this sister from her late residence in Norris street, in this city, on the 9th of August. By request we give an abstract of our remarks on this occasion: "dressed are the dead when die in the Lord."

Friends, we have assembled on this solemn occasion to pay the last tribute of respect to the casket of a beloved mother and friend, and while feelings of sadness must cover our hearts on account of the departure from our midst of one whom we have loved and cherished, still we are not as those without hope. We have said death brings sadness to our spirits, and we feel mournful over the absence of the loved ones, but there is a far more sad and desolate condition than this. When the angel of death visits a household in which all is darkness and dismay in regard to the future. Well has the poet said,

"Alas for him who never sees,
The stars shine through his cypress trees,
Who, hopeless, lays his dead away,
Nor looks to see the light of coming day,
Across the mournful marble play.
Who hath not seen in tears of faith,
This truth to flesh and sense unknown.
That life is ever loved of death,
And love can never lose its own."

My friends, we do not mourn as those who are without comfort and hope. We know that our loved one still lives,

"Clad in the white robes of angels."

And that

"There's not a charm of soul or brow,
Of all we knew and loved of thee,
But lives in holier beauty now,
Baptized in immortality."

The lesson of death is one of the most important that comes to us in this life; there is nothing that melts the hardness of the human heart, and takes away that selfishness which sometimes springs up within us so effectually as this. When the form of those we love upon the altar of the human soul, and our sympathies are warmed and kindled into a flame that melts away all the hardness. Husbands and wives are drawn nearer to each other; brothers and sisters are drawn closer to each other; all the little differences that may have grown up amongst us are lost and gone; friends who have scarcely known each other, find that they have ties of affection. In our spirit world, when we shall look back over the scenes of this life, we shall cherish with pleasure as bright spots on our journey, these very hours that to many seems so bitter and sad. We shall see the light shed freely around our paths, even amid the tears that now dim our eyes.

These lessons are thus sent to us that we may pause in our life journey, and ask ourselves, whither are we going. We may weep for our departed, for we have so often failed in life's highest and holiest aims, which are simply to be good and do good.

Let us listen to that voice which ever whispers what we would do right. This is the way; walk therein. Be true to your self, and you grow stronger.

For our departed friend, there can be no sorrow. She has gone to join the loved one's on that bright shore, and even now, as we speak of them, they are moving around us, and they look down upon the earth, but they feel the heart throbs of those who weep. She stands in our midst, and says, "My brave boys, I have not gone far from you. I have watched over you all these years. I am your own mother, and fondly do I gaze upon you now. I shall walk by your side to cheer you on in every noble work. Oh, my son, be faithful, be true," and to all of us they say, if you would manifest your respect for her you have gone from us, do those things only which you know would be pleasing and grateful to them in their bright home above. This shall we be prepared, when we go to join the holy angels in their blest abode, to meet our loved ones there, and as their joy in seeing us, Boys and Girls, Now is Your Chance! Address, ADAMS & CO, BOURNE'S BUILDING 57, BOSTON. v10 nl1 3t

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

Manchester (Ill.) Grove Meeting.

On Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 2d and 3d, E. W. Stevens, Mrs. Mattie Hulett Parry, and J. O. Barrett are engaged as speakers.

Manchester is in Scott County, seven miles from Beardstown, and the same from Chandlerville.

Friends from around will call on P. L. Hills, J. F. Daniels, G. H. Hills, or A. H. Manley.

Branch County Circle.

A Quarterly Meeting of the Branch County Circle will be held at Shinneman's Grove, six miles west of Coldwater, on the Chicago road, on Saturday, Aug. 26th, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M., all are invited to attend.

Good speakers will be in attendance.

E. F. GILES, President.
MRS. S. M. GILES, Secretary.

Mediums' and Speakers' Convention.

A Quarterly Convention of Mediums, Speakers and others, will be held at Starr or Central Hall, Le Roy, N. Y., on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 2d and 3d, commencing at 10 o'clock each day.

The New York State Spiritualist Association holds its annual session on Saturday at 2 P. M., in connection with this convention.

Let there be a general attendance from all parts of Western New York. The halls are commodious, the facilities for arriving by railway ample, and the rich experiences of past conventions furnish sufficient guarantee for the success of the present. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

Committee { J. W. SEAVER, Geo. W. TAYLOR, A. T. TILDEN.

Ohio State Association of Spiritualists.

The Annual Session will hold its Fifth Annual Convention, on the first Saturday and Sunday of September next, in Roberts Hall, Milan, Ohio, commencing at 11 o'clock, A. M. Each local society, and children's progressive lyceum is entitled to four delegates and two additional for each fifty members or fraction over the first fifty.

Important business will come before the convention, and every society and lyceum in the State is earnestly requested to send a full delegation.

The well-known and tried hospitality of the Milan Society is extended to all delegates, who will be provided with homes as far as possible. Eminent speakers are expected, who will be duly announced, and a cordial invitation is extended to all speakers and mediums, to all Spiritualists and liberalists to meet and renew their strength at this annual reunion.

Milan is situated three miles from Norwalk, on the Lake Shore R. R., and all trains are met by the Milan hacks.

HUDSON TUTTLE, President.
GEO. W. WILSON, Rec. Secretary.
EMMA TUTTLE, Cor. Secretary.

Grand Union Picnic at Galesburg.

All true Spiritualists, all Christian people, and all friends of truth and humanity everywhere, are cordially invited to a Grand Union Picnic, to be held at Spring Lake Grove, in Galesburg, Ill., Thursday, Aug. 31st, 1871. Good speakers will be present. All will be free to participate in a general—bring their own refreshments. Those attending from a distance will be "refreshed" from some brother's basket in the Grove. Pleasant grounds and boat-riding will add to the pleasures of the occasion.

The C. B. & Q. R. R. has generously offered to return free on all its lines all those paying full fare in going. If the weather proves unfavorable, the splendid Concordia Hall in the city can be had.

Let there be a glorious meeting that shall tend to open up a wider field of thought, of sympathy and action that shall bless mankind—akin to that introduced by the Pilgrim Fathers.

Committee { A. B. HANCOCK, Galesburg, C. L. ROBERTS, Yates City, Ill., CHAS. LADD, Uniola.

Convention of Spiritualists.

At a picnic of the friends, held at Geneseo, Ill. July 4th, it was unanimously resolved to hold a meeting, for the purpose of organizing the Spiritualists of Henry county and vicinity, and to help the good cause by holding quarterly meetings at different points in the county.

It was further resolved to meet at Cambridge on the first Saturday and Sunday in September next, in order to consider the propriety of organization. J. Allen, C. H. Doty, and R. G. Raymond were appointed a committee to issue a call therefor.

We therefore announce that said Convention will meet at the Court House, in Cambridge, on Saturday, Sept 2d, at 1 o'clock P. M.

All are cordially invited to attend,

J. ALLEN, C. H. DOTY, R. G. RAYMOND, } Committee.

Iowa State Association of Spiritualists.

This Association will hold its Third Annual Convention at Iowa Falls, Hardin Co., Iowa, commencing Friday Oct 6th, at 10 A. M., and continue three days.

As important business will come before this Convention, it is earnestly requested that all liberal minds in the State will come out and make this the most interesting time ever held in the State.

Good speakers and test mediums will be present, and no pains will be spared to entertain friends from abroad.

Speakers wishing to attend the Convention are requested to correspond with the President and Secretary, at Anita, Cass Co., Iowa.

J. M. BLAKESLEY, President.
EDWIN CAYE, Secretary.

Friends of Human Progress.

The Sixteenth Annual Meeting of the Friends of Human Progress, of North Collins, will be held at Hemlock Hall, in Brant, Erie County, N. Y., commencing on Friday, the 25th of August, 1871, at 10 o'clock A. M., —continuing three days.

G. B. Stebbins, of Detroit, L. G. Howe, of Fredonia, Lydia L. Watson, of Pikesville, George W. Taylor, of Collins, and others will be present to address the meeting.

Levi Brown, Lucy P. Hawley, Moses Tucker, Phebe Tucker, George W. Taylor—Committee.

Persons from a distance will stop at Angola, Lake Shore Railroad. Ready conveyance can be obtained to the meeting, which is six miles. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

WE WILL GIVE YOU

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS,

If by following the directions we send, you do not make from twelve to a hundred dollars per week in your own town. No more capital or expense required. Men and Women, Boys and Girls, Now is Your Chance! Address, ADAMS & CO, BOURNE'S BUILDING 57, BOSTON. v10 nl1 3t

WANTED,

Pecuniary aid to a very important missionary work. Also a male or female partner willing to tramp, or work and live in any county. Another humble, if needed, to disseminate truth. Success and constant happiness and aid from spirit friends guaranteed; or a suitable boy or girl, black or white, to educate for a life long labor in a missionary work of great benefit and already established. Address WM. H. LAMBDIN, NORTH VINELAND, NEW JERSEY.

MATRIMONIAL.

A GENTLEMAN 30 YEARS OLD—A SPIRITUALIST, of good habits and fair education, medium stature, light complexion, blue eyes and brown hair, desires to correspond with ladies for the purpose of a better acquaintance, and marriage. To one who feel favorably impressed by his notice, can wish to correspond, may rest assured that their letters will be received in confidence and treated with honor. Address GEORGE HARDCASTLE, Quincy, Ill. v10 nl1 4t

The Tenth Thousand!

Prof. Howe

Has already Published the Tenth Thousand OF HIS

SEVEN-HOUR SYSTEM OF GRAMMAR.

Price $1 Bound; Fancy Paper 50 cents.

, For sale wholesale and retail by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

MEDIUMS.

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph or from lock of hair, readings of character; marked changes, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those intending marriage; directions for the management of children; Address to the inharmoniously married, etc.

TERMS—$2.00 for full delineation; brief Delineation—$1.

A. B. SEVERANCE,
457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE, Wis.

Visible.

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex; symptoms, temperament, (if not known, send photograph). Address P. O. Box 92, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.

v10 n8 4f

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by lock of hair, autograph, look of letter, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advise concerning business, and give written examinations from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $1.00. Communications from spirit friends, $2.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.

nl v10 tf.

MRS. A. M. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium

168 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the car, age and leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the positive and negative forces found in the system and in nature. The prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made to her within ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

MRS. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controling her accomplish the same, is done so well who the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $1.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $1; answering Business Letters, $2. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

DR. SAMUEL MAXWELL,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN.

TREATS the sick by magnetic touch, and the use of appropriate magnetized remedies. Also makes clairvoyant examinations. Patients to be treated by letter should send age, sex, and leading symptoms. Bound in private families if desired. Come to, or address,

SAMUEL MAXWELL, M. D.
72 South Bryan St., Bangor, Me.
v9 n9 tf

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS.

Madison Doherty, having severed his connection with A. D. Wilde, of Chicago, has opened a Gallery, at Indianapolis, Indiana, where he will sit for spirit pictures.

Parties at a distance wishing their pictures can get the same result as if present, by inclosing a lock of hair, a picture, and the fee of three dollars, and post office stamp, stating the day and hour they wish a trial. Money refunded if no result is obtained.

DOHERTY & PURSELL, PHOTOGRAPHERS,
Nos. 94 & 96 East Washington street,
Indianapolis Indiana.

v10 n12 3m

ATTRACTIVE NEW BOOKS.

ERNEST RENAN'S WORKS.

THE LIFE OF JESUS.—THE LIFE OF SAINT PAUL.—AND THE LIVES OF THE APOSTLES.

These three remarkable books, by the great French Philosopher, are attracting the earnest attention of all readers. They are of rare interest and fascinating, are splendidly and concisely written, beautiful in style, admirable in sentiment, and filled with reverence, tenderness, and warmth of heart.

, Price $1.75 each; postage 20 cents.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA;

Or; the Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation. Translated from the French of Louis Jacolliot. A remarkable volume, which is making a great sensation in Europe, and exciting the profoundest attention of thinking people.

, Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

HABITS OF GOOD SOCIETY.

A hand Book for Ladies and Gentlemen; with hints and anecdotes concerning nice points of health, good manners, and the art of making one's self agreeable. The best and most entertaining book on the subject ever published.

, Price $1.75; postage 20 cents.

THE ART OF CONVERSATION,

With directions for Self-Culture. Teaching the art of conversing with ease and propriety, and setting forth the literary knowledge requisite to appear to advantage in good Society. A book of real merit and intrinsic worth.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

THE ARTS OF WRITING, READING, AND SPEAKING.

A remarkably clever book that every one, whether educated or not, will find of immense advantage and profit. A capital companion for the two preceding works. THE ART OF CONVERSATION.

, Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

Any of these books are all beautifully printed and handsomely bound in cloth covers, with gilt backs.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark st., Chicago, Ill.

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

"SPREADING."

By Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson.

The readers of the Religio-Philosophical Journal must be highly amused by the challenge which the irate Dr. Orr has now given me. "Oh dear! what can the matter be?"

I invite attention to the terrible article of mine which so excited the gallant (?) gentleman, and drew out his first spread. It was written by request of a friend, and will be found in the Religio-Philosophical Journal, of May 13th, and Dr. Orr's famous reply may be found in the Religio-Philosophical Journal, of July 8th, in which he spreads himself to a considerable extent, without even refuting my position, or making direct reply thereto, but goes off on the subject of disease, deals in empty sarcasm, without any definite clearing up of my questions, truly put forth in the spirit of candid inquiry, as well as of honest conviction. But the very learned Doctor refuses to meet the subject with the "ordinary courtesies attending polemic discussions"—shouts "Buncombe!" once more—charges me with misstatements in an article of the Journal of August 19th, and then with a last spread gives me that generous, gallant, "spreading" challenge!—"If I consider myself capable!"

Now, then, I am fairly called to trial; and please, Dr. Orr, will you truthfully answer the following question:

Are you the "Dr. Orr," refered to in the following extract from my book of manuscript-writings, in which I copied from a collection of spirit communications in a pamphlet book, which Dr. Fahnestock had in his possession, when I labored in Marietta, and was entertained at his house?—"Copy of a communication given to the Lancaser Circle, Feb. 21st, 1861, by Samuel B. Fahnestock, Sen., of Dr. William B. Fahnestock, through the mediumship of Dr. Orr."

"When Nature slept in sweet repose,
Wrapped in chaotic darkness wild,
The Almighty Voice, serene, arose,
In accents sweet, eloquent, yet mild, etc."

This beautiful poem consists of over forty lines.

Is in your last article of August 19 h, you say, "I never was a medium for Dr. Fahnestock, or any one else." If there is another "Dr. Orr," through whom this poem, and many fine prose articles, as well as sublime poetry, was given, I stand corrected. But if you are the man whom I supposed, did you not at that time preach for an orthodox congregation, from which you concealed the fact of your mediumship; and did you not thus "privately" sit for Dr. F. and others of that "Lancaster Circle," they well knowing your position? If I have stated anything wrong, I am indebted to Dr. Fahnestock and his friends for all that I have asserted. Before the publication of my recent article, I met in this city Miss S. W. an old friend of Dr. F., and from her gained fresh testimony of these facts. You will do the cause of truth justice, to answer me honorably. "Ordinary courtesy" should forbid us turning from an important theme to trespass upon the generosity of our editor or readers, by indulging in personal abuse—nor did I have a thought of inviting any such ungallant course of inquiry. But that spread of yours did provoke my criticism, seeing my article was not addressed to you but to Dr. Fahnestock. Please tell me now, did he invite, suggest, or in any manner whatever propose to you, to help him to put a stopper on this "magnetic chain?" Or did you take pity on him, and think to help him over the stumbling stones at me, and thus divert public attention? Really, the subject grows so ridiculously interesting from the present stand-point, there's no knowing who will come in for a spread next; but that suggestion of Dr. F., to fall back upon "chloroform, nitrous oxide, bathsash, sulphuric ether," and perhaps "mybeau," put carried out, will spread not a few for a protracted "somnambulism," or sleep walking toward the undertaker's office! Can it be, that you, Dr. Fahnestock, would justify the introduction of these questionable ethers, and for the promiscuous experiments of the public, which must induce questionable, even dangerous results?

I am most alarmed at the thought; but if your "somnambulism" be a natural state, so easily induced, and within the reach of every individual, why resort to unnatural or dangerous agencies to produce it? In this, you certainly admit and use an exciting cause, and if you

If I am now "petted and praised" surely I know how empty is all human praise, by the experience of others, but all praise I can "bear meekly," seeing it has been earned by active labor and a rigid devotion to truth and honesty. Strange, indeed, that a candid difference of opinion is not to be granted by friends, or that any entertainment, however lavish and free, should demand of us the suppression of our honest convictions!

I am sorry this discussion should take so personal a character, but it has proved one thing: that some are far from dealing justly with those who differ from them in their pet theories.

That Dr. Fahnestock is doing a good work in arousing individual thought, and awakening dormant magnetic energies, I do not doubt,—for what may be found in the magnetic operator, is also to be found, in a greater or less proportion, within the organism of the subject; there could be no life without it. There is no doubt, then, that will-power, or volition, in each individual, may so arouse, stimulate, or arrest the life forces, as to induce in degree, the same results which an operator may produce.

To show how perfectly blind Dr. F. seems to be in regard to mediumistic facts, I here quote his remarks upon the recent scientific investigation of the Home phenomena, in the Journal of August 19th.

"I answer that the supposed 'nerve atmosphere' is simply the effete matter eliminated from, and peculiar to all persons as well as to mediums. This effete substance, being physical matter, spirits convert into semi-physical hands, etc., which can be seen by clairvoyants, etc."

Horrid! Ridiculous! "Simply effete matter!" Morbid matter which by the process of insensible perspiration is thrown off, being rejected by the physical organism! Rotten, putrescent, decomposed for the system to contain and be healthy, taken up by spirits and converted into "semi-physical hands" by spirits, whose present condition of life demands the refinement of all physical particles entering into this chemistry of organic manifestation! This idea is too irrational and absurd to go down. All true clairvoyants—that is, all true seers—behold a fine, luminous vapor, here around bibles embodied and disembodied spirits, which is entirely separate and distinct from the morbid, effete particles which the body parts with by natural, regular excretion and perspiration. In some persons this luminous surrounding gathers brilliancy and motion which appears in a high state of mental enthusiasm or inspiration, to shoot up in a belt of vivid glow, or fine rays, from the head. This is represented by the olden pictures of Christ and his apostles, and our finest artists so clothe their bright angels and departed sages. Had Dr. Fahnestock ever had the personal experience of a seer, he could not have made so foolish a statement—as to clothe our glorified and unfleshed relatives and teachers in that filthy, repulsive garb of rotten, effete matter. At my first experience in a circle, a fine, powerful influence approached me, which was playing around the circle in a deep trance. From her hands streamed a fine, soft, continuous flow of light, which she appeared to impart or pour upon the heads of each member of the circle, and the peculiar crackling, which is sometimes produced by rubbing a fur in winter, accompanied at intervals this light. That it produced the same or similar effects upon persons utterly ignorant of the magnetic philosophy that it did upon the initiated, was fully evident.

Whole volumes might be written on this question, of what mediums have experienced and seen; and what right has a man who never had such experience to tell us we 'do not see' or feel, but "imagine" it all? When a person so flatly contradicts us, or, like Dr. Orr ("a Bible Spiritualist for the last thirty-five years"), sets us such a significant example of clerical "courtesy" for us to follow, why should we not take up the scalpel which has been offered us?

But now, gentlemen, with the explanation I demand of Dr. Orr, I have one question to ask for my own edification and that of many others: How many doctors will it take to master this very obstinate disease of thinking for one's self?

And now, concerning the challenge. Surely, I did not imagine before that this third party arrangement was gotten up for the special opportunity of "spreading" one's self!

I resort to any invention of men, like this, in order to precipitate or induce "the condition, what becomes of your oft-repeated declaration, that "one need only be taught how, and they can enter the state immediately, or entirely of themselves?" Now, lest I spread this article to too great length, I must briefly remark, I can not see how my honest opinion can tear down any "temple" that you may have built for these "developed natives," or "healing mediums;" and inasmuch as we, or myself, I may say, have seldom received hospitality selfishly, I see little sagacity or wisdom in telling only one side of the story, and with such a tone of deep lamentation! When I traveled in Pennsylvania, and stopped with you, I was a good test medium—gave free delineating readings, was called upon to diagnose the most difficult cases—of which you can not have forgotten—a girl of fifteen, whose trouble had baffled the skill of the physicians, and was a mystery to yourself. From your own lips I was assured of the fire, satisfactory tests I gave you and your friends—the "double" appearance of your daughter, Sarah, which had been prophesied in a beautiful poem, two years previous, and if I recollect aright, through this same "Dr. Orr." At the same time, I was not so "weak" or "sick" but that I went out on the street to get a ball. Conservatism shut up the popular hall against any Sunday meeting. The poor, despised colored society cloved me their church, and alone, I went out that Sunday eve, with its true sympathies for the south, and through the dark alley—so mortal friend to accompany me on my mission of obedience to the humane and liberating spirits of the higher life! Arriving at the church, I found the little Bethlehem filled to its utmost capacity. The generous-hearted, "courteous," grateful blacks had politely welcomed the white people of the place, and one side of the room was occupied by whites, the other by the usual worshipers. Out to the street, a little distance away, an eager, curious crowd remained standing through the entire service.

Those were "less prosperous days," when I needed true friends; practical friends,—when I often went "faint on my journey, because my purse would not allow me a good dinner—when I wore a thread-bare dress, for the same reason. I am truly, deeply grateful for all true, unselfish kindness, but I do not feel indebted to those for whom my mediumistic gifts were exercised without money and without price! The rebuke that other gone me is daily to-day—and that in self-defence,—would have furnished me a fare, where unworthy complaints and one-sided statements could not mar the fellowship of souls chosen for the reformation and progress of the present and coming generations.

Mrs. Addie L. Ballou.

A New Feature.—It appears that Addie L. Ballou, who ministers on each Sabbath to the spiritual waifs of the Spiritual Association of this city, is authorized to solemnize marriages, and our city ministers may now expect to share with the Rev. Addie the perquisites attending such happy occasions. We find the following in the Cincinnati Times of the 14th:

"This morning a lady, whose manner and tone would indicate that her opinion on women's rights was formed in accordance with the teachings of Susan B., Elizabeth Cady, Anna Dickinson, and the rest of them, made her appearance at the marriage license desk of the Probate Court. In her hand was carried a neatly folded paper which she passed over to the clerk with, 'Is there anything else for me to do in this case?' An examination of the document revealed the fact that it was the return required by law in testimony of the solemnization of marriage between Mr. O—s G—and Miss Annie G—, by the Rev. Mrs. Addie L. Ballou. The mother of the bride, actively engaged in the agitation of the woman question, insisted that the ceremony should be performed by no other than a lady preacher. Therefore the Rev. Addie was sent for, and came the distance of two hundred miles from another State to make the two souls happy."

If the fair Addie administers religious food with the same determined force of character with which she delivers her marriage returns; woe be unto those who stir up wickedness and vice to-day.—Terre Haute Express.

Remarks: Mrs. Ballou received her authority to perform the marriage ceremony according to law by a letter of fellowship from the Religio-Philosophical Society a long time since, and has tied the silken cord of love (outward form) many times, to the entire satisfaction of parties most interested.

We believe she sometimes is inspired to step aside from orthodox forms in concluding the ceremony by adopting a standard that will be more fully appreciated in the hereafter.

In the above notice, we see that old theology is imitated, and the odious "Rev." freely used. We are of the opinion, however, that Mrs. Ballou has too much good sense to attach that title to her name when writing marriage notices.

Emma Hardinge Britten.

To the Editor of the Religio-Philosophical Journal:—Will you kindly oblige me by announcing in your paper the proposed departure of my wife, Emma Hardinge Britten, per "Siberia," for Boston, to-morrow, the 10th, and that all communications intended for her are in future to be addressed to 251 Washington street, Boston, Mass; care of Mr. Thomas Barney.

Yours Respectfully,
William Barrow.
Newton Highlands, Aug. 9st, 1871.

SPIRITUAL SW IN THE SOUTH.

Letter from N. D. Hoy.

Ed. Journal:—Inclosed are three printed slips. Those headed "Spiritualism," and "Wonderful Results from Spiritualism," are from the Observer and the Monitor, of Tuscaloosa, Alabama. The slip headed, "Marvels of Clairvoyance," is from the Canton [Miss.] Mail, though originally communicated by me to the Boston [Miss.] Republican.

These, if published, will give your readers some idea, though a limited one, of my effort to bring Spiritualism before the people through the secular papers.

During the last six months I have lectured through portions of Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky, and have had a hard time of it generally; for it must be borne in mind that my labors have led me into districts half as large as the state of Illinois, in which, it is believed, no lecture had been heard, no spiritual book or paper had been read, and where the philosophy of our loved religion is invariably spoken of as one of the "isms" of the north, and allied to free love, Mormonism, and everything else that is false and ridiculous. What can a reformer do amongst such a people? I have had ample opportunity to learn the spiritual needs of the south, and these are, I am sure, above all others, test mediums. The people want the proof of spirit communion, and they seem now in real earnest upon the subject, and until this is given, they will persist in denouncing spiritualism as a humbug.

There is a most inviting field in the south for test mediums, but these, I think, should be accompanied by lecturers—the phenomena and the philosophy should go together.

I have been at several places where the Davenports have "exhibited," as the people term their manifestations, but can not learn that any body has been converted by them. Indeed, I have long known from observation that what A. J. Davis says about the dark circles is particularly true. Cosmo Carlisle, is true; that is, that the manifestations given at dark circles are prostless, tending only to confound, amaze and excite the beholder. Several of the papers have denounced the manifestations given by the Davenports as juggiery, whilst others seem to have no settled opinion in regard to the matter. Every one, however, with whom I have personal acquaintance upon the subject, regards the manifestations as mere juggiery, and where I have protested against the absurdity of supposing that persons tied hard and fast can do such things as are done in the presence of the Davenport Brothers, I am answered that they are not to see what more jeazling bite than she feats performed by Signor Blitz, and Herr Alexander, who do not exhibit in the dark.

What an admirable opportunity has Professor Fay as every exhibition, to "rise and explain" how under certain conditions and in the presence of certain media, spirits can materialize and manifest themselves, and cite some of the innumerable instances in which, in all ages past, they have done so. I can not learn, however, that the professor has ever explained.

It does not follow that even in a dark circle a little light is not got and the throws upon the mind, inasmuch as the committee, I believe, always leave the professor's tongue untied.

There will arise a class of manifestations, soon, so strikingly beautiful and significant, and come to us in so unobtrusive a shape, that no person can doubt them, and in comparison with which all previous manifestations will be regarded as but "gumo, inexplicable show"! I have high authority for this statement, and will tell you something about it in my next.

I can not close this rambling letter without saying something about the kind and noble spirits—in the flesh—who have ministered to me in my wanderings, and who seemed to be almost miraculously raised up to me in the dark hour of need. These are Dr. Carr and Col. Beers, of Mobile, Alabama; R. Hudson, Esq., and family, near Clayton, Alabama; Mr. Riddick and family, and Dr. Pickernson, and family, of Tuscaloosa, Alabama; Col. Shearer, of Meridian, Mississippi, and family; Col. Benton and wife, and Col. Charles S. Gibbs, of Livingston, Alabama, on whom I ought to bestow something more than a passing notice, for other reasons than those growing out of his kindness to me. He was a seer before the advent of the spiritual phenomena. To-day, on the table of a leading house in Judge Redmonds, in the second volume, I believe, of Edmund's and Dexter's "Spiritualism." He is now in his eighty fifth year,—tall and erect, and with his long white beard flowing over his breast, presents a most venerable appearance.

Col. Benton and wife were both clairvoyants and members of the Old Presbyterian Church, before they became speaking of spiritualism.

Col. Lockett, of Canton, Mississippi; Mr. Pantor, a Swede, of Water Valley, Mississippi; Dr. Peawitt, of Grand Junction, Tennessee, and J. J. Perkins, of Chattanooga, Tennessee, may heaven's choicest blessings rest upon all of these, who, like these Spiritualists, are amongst the highest types of humanity.

Woodbury, Ky., July 24th, 1871.

Spiritualism.

We have a communication, published in another column, with regard to a lecture on this subject. We have no objection to being enlightened on any question, and we suppose all our readers would be glad to hear such persons who believe in calling spirits from the other world, have to say about it; if it be true that there are people walking in our midst, who can, by some extraordinary power, call back to earth the departed spirit, let us hear from them that they are willing to tell us.

We do not believe in the matter at all; we look upon the whole thing as being a humbug; but, at the same time, if any man thinks there is truth in it, we would like to find it by testimony, if not too long. So if Mr. Hay will lecture, we will have one listener, prejudiced against his views, but disposed to weigh his arguments.

We hear he visits Tuscaloosa in fall of mediums. That may be so, and we hope it is; but we also trust he will tell us all about these mediums, and what they can and can not do.

Marvels of Clairvoyance.

When Rose Sargent published his learned work, entitled, "Pancheste: or, the Despair of Science," the writer, reviewing the same in one of the periodicals of the day, suggested that the scientists would have next to direct their researches to the spiritual world, as there no theory of deduction from its material side could cover or account for the phenomena of modern Spiritualism. He might have added that whenever scientists shall do this, they will find a new field presented, and by a class of minds as capable of comprehending the occult, or the spiritual, as any who have won distinction in the domain of the physical sciences.

The poem herewith offered you for publication, was read by an entranced clairvoyant in my presence, but a few words of explanation may be necessary to a proper understanding of it. The intelligent reader is aware that both the Old and New Testaments abound with accounts of visions, but the rationale of their production was never fully understood before the advent of the spiritual dispensation. Now it is known by many thousand of intelligent minds, both in Europe and America, that a certain class of persons are susceptible to peculiar psychological influences, as well from spirits in the flesh as from those out of it. Such persons sometimes become entranced by supersensuous intelligence, who project into the mental halls of the spirit their mental images, which to the entranced medium appear as palpable and objective realities. Such was evidently the condition of Saint John on the Isle of Patmos, when the angel there with him signified to him the wonderful things described in his revelations. With these preliminary remarks, I shall, as briefly as possible, detail the circumstances of the manifestation in question. I shall give neither names, date, nor place, having no permission to do so, and feel that with the candid reader, my veracity will not depend upon them. There were present in the circle Dr. G. Stevens, Mr. H., Mrs. H., Col. E., Mrs. E., Annie G., a girl of ten years, and myself. At previous circles communications by rope had been given to Annie by Nettie F., who had been Annie's playmate before she passed to the Summer Land, some twelve months previous. But now a communication of a very different character is to be given. The clairvoyant, Dr. G., becoming entranced, informed us that spirit girls appeared to be rambling over a beautiful lawn in the distance, and engaged in pic[illegible] them into baskets wi[illegible] arou[illegible]. When they had filled their baskets, they approached the circle, and one of them putting her left hand on the clairvoyant's shoulder, pointed upward with the other, when the medium described a large curtain slowly rising in the air. Near the top of this curtain the medium described the little girls as ascending by ladders, who then began to pin their flowers to the curtain, arranging them into letters and words, and the verses which constitute literally the following poem; Col. E. acting as amanuensis.

I could fill many pages with accounts of other poems, read by the same clairvoyant, which I will present, but the majority of the people are so little prepared to believe them that I rarely allude to them in my public lectures:

The Poem.

Yes, Annie dear, I love thee still,
I truly love thee, Annie dear,
For if thou dost thy mother's will,
Love and affection draw me near;
And I enjoy with thee the bliss
That children in obedience find,
And then I breathe a gentle kiss
Upon thy lips; and when thy kind
And generous soul doth long for me,
I am, dear Annie, then with thee.

But, Annie dear, do not forget
To be obedient—to be good;
For tears of pity and regret
Flow from my eyes at every mood
Of willful temper, which decays
Thy generous feet in angry strides,
To pain mine heart, whose hopes and joys
Are centered in thyself—her pride!
Oh Annie dear! oh Annie sweet,
Be good, that we again may meet.

And when we meet again I'll look
A spirit, in thy spirit eye,
And then I'll read, as in a book
Illumined by a brighter sky,
The story of thy life, dear Annie,
All will be known to thee and me,
And we shall pick in Eden's glen
Sweet flowers of eternity.
Oh, Annie dear! oh, Annie sweet,
Be good, that we again may meet.

Nettie.

Wonderful Results from Spiritualism.

About ten days ago, the smoke-house of Mr. Stephen Miller, of this city, was robbed, by night, of a considerable quantity of bacon and other groceries. For two days no clue was had as to who was the perpetrator of the larceny. At that time there was sojourning here one Col. Hay, an enthusiast on the subject of Spiritualism, who had held several meetings at private houses, aided by the well-known medium, Prof. Voyle, of this place. Mr. Miller's wife, of this place, at length hit upon the happy idea of consulting the case to them for investigation. Mr. Miller, being a practical man, and a skeptic on the subjects of Spiritualism, clairvoyance, etc., laughed so loudly at the bare idea of the thing, that the whole neighborhood was clearly audible to the ears of his neighbors who lived on the opposite side of the street. But his wife, being less prejudiced against those wonderful feats, messes, or whatever they may be called, at last got Mr. Miller to consent to call on Col. Hay and Voyle. So soon as Mr. Voyle was sufficiently charged with the spiritual matter, the question was asked, "who stole Miller's meat?" The answer was written, "Henry Brown." This Brown Mr. Voyle had never heard of before. He is a negro, living about two miles in the country, as was afterwards learned. The question was repeated several times, with the same result.

Next day, for curiosity's sake, and to gratify his wife, Mr. Miller procured a search-warrant, and got Mr. S. Powell, one of the sheriff's deputies, to go out to Brown's house to search. It for the missing articles. Strange to say, the search was entirely successful. All the missing bacon, etc., was found concealed in the negro's cabin, and was brought to town.

We heard of these facts from others, but were so incredulous that we were not satisfied till we had them from Mr Miller's own lips, which we did last Thursday morning. He is one of our oldest and most respectable citizens, and a man whose veracity is far above all doubts. This is the strongest argument in favor of Spiritualism that has ever been brought home to us, and is deserving of note. It also disproves the assertion of some, who, unable to explain the mystery, give the devil the credit of having a hand in it. Now, we know that old Nick had naught to do with the discovery of this theft, but the whole goodness, if he had, be it, as we heard a gentleman say, not so bad a fellow as we have all been taught to believe,—indeed an individual in our midst who has been terribly traduced. But, knowing him as we do, and as represented, we know that he has nothing to do with that Spiritualism which is the means of exposing rascals and rascality.

This should serve as a useful lesson to the negro, Brown, who, hereafter, with impunity, even though no mortal eye may rest upon them. Whenever a citizen of Tuscaloosa is robbed, all that he will have to do in order to regain the plunder and punish the plunderer, is to call in to his aid a spiritual medium, who will tell him all that he wishes to know. From this time forward, we expect a great diminution of crime in this vicinity. Of course, we should have liked to have the negro Brown properly punished for his crime. Doubtless the trial will be an interesting one.

"Spiritualism Dead."

Brother Jones:—Never since the advent of Modern Spiritualism were the times more rife with encouragement—never more prolific with rich promises for the future. The fountains of the great deep are being broken up, and the living waters of truth are submerging the earth. Everywhere is the spirit of inquiry awakening. From every quarter the cry is coming, "Give us more light." In every community the scales are falling from the people's eyes, and they are beginning to see and realize the glorious truths of the New Gospel.

We want lecturers—we want books—we want papers—are the daily ejaculations of thousands of hungry souls.

We have been lecturing in the capacity of State Missionary in Indiana for a portion of the time within the past two years, and have given many courses of lectures, organized societies, and made many near and dear friends, and are still desired by many to serve in this capacity, but we want to see and shake hands with some of the many friends in Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin, with whose names we have been familiar for years, and from some of whom we have received warm invitations to dispense amongst them the glad tidings of the new spiritual dispensation.

And now, if they will write to us immediately, and furnish us with their address, and a statement of the condition of things amongst them, we will respond in terms that will suit them.

Friends, do n't omit to write because you have not a full treasury, and therefore feel that you are not able to employ a speaker. We want to see you all, whether rich or poor. We want to greet you, and kindle up the fires of friendship. Therefore, we want all the friends to write—all the Spiritualists and Liberalists in Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin, we want to see you all this fall and winter if we can find you, though in lieu of traveling all the time, we would accept a few monthly engagements, while preparing another work for the press. Let us hear at once from you, whether organized or unorganized.

"Mr. Grave's Spiritualism is dead, I believe," said a friend who met us on the street. "Yes," we replied, "A subterranean mole once concluded the sun did not shine, because he did not poke his head out far enough to see it."

K. Graves.

Richmond, Ind.

—Conceit is usually in proportion to ignorance.

Voices from the People.

Fremont, Ind.—N. Latta writes.—I first subscribed for the Journal as a trial subscriber, and being a poor man I have not had the money before, but considering myself beyond all description edified, I must send a "Search after God" conscienced. Thanking you for putting the confidence in me you have, I am much obliged. Please continue the Journal, as I cannot do without it. I must have it. Please send it till I notify you to stop.

De Kalb, Ill.—L. Z. Parks writes.—Dear Brother, you stand at the helm of one of the great ships of Spiritualism, and if you keep your eye on the compass,—the true spirit,—the cargo will all safely land in the harbor of eternal rest, to enjoy the reward of our labor in the good cause of doing good to and for each other.

Grizzley Flat, Cal.—D. T. Loofbourrow writes.—Please find inclosed three dollars for subscription to the Journal. Send it to me for one year. Please inform me whether the "Search after God" can be found in a separate publication.

Remarks:—Not at present. Back numbers of the Journal containing it exhausted long ago.

Beaver Dam, Wis.—Mrs. M. E. Hopkins writes.—I have been taking your Journal on trial. My time expired, I think, the first of July. I am much pleased with the paper, and inclose a P. O. order of $3.00 for one year.

Arkansas City, Kan.—A. W. Hoyt writes.—Inclosed please find $1 50, for which please forward your valuable journal to the address of F. A. Cowles. The Journal is doing a heap of good down here in this frontier country. Every week it comes loaded with the valuable news of the week. Long may it wave. The "Search after God" is one of the most interesting pieces ever put in print. If it ever comes out in book form (which I hope it will), you may put me down for a copy.

Columbus, Ga.—Thomas Chaffin writes.—Inclosed you will find a money order for $3 00. I find my time will be up on the 30th of July. This will be three years I have taken your paper, and I am well pleased with it. I hope to be able to pay for it many years.

Hopkinton, Iowa.—Mrs. E. N. Lessey writes.—Inclosed please find 75 cents, a renewal of my subscription for the Religio Philosophical Journal, for three months. My term of subscription expired on the 5th inst., and I cannot do without the Journal. Its contents for me are meat indeed, and every word of each paper is read, by the time another reaches me. The "Search after God" is grand, is glorious, is wonderful, and I am following it up with the author.

Columbus, Wis.—J. W. Kenyon writes.—Old orthodoxy trembles. O. H. Head has been here. He does not stay long enough in a place.

Stevenson's Mills, Mo.—D. T. Edwards writes.—I desire No. 14 of present volume. No. 15 has come to hand, and I am not satisfied to lose a single link out of the chain of the "Search after God." There has been so much said concerning your "Search" that I have not thought it worth my while to speak of it. As for my part it has so far been in unison with my own thoughts—only exceeding them in every case. Many have expressed a wish to see the close of the articles, months ago, desiring to see the result. I fear they will close too soon.

Hillsdale, Mich.—P. Ferris writes.—Please find inclosed one dollar for the blessed Journal, for I cannot do without it.

Davenport, Iowa.—David S. Fuller writes.—I had rather go without one meal a day than to go without the Journal. The "Search after God" is worth more to me than the paper costs twice over.

Watertown, Wis.—J. W. Kenyon writes.—I have been following the directions of my spirit guides, who promised to cure me of physical debility and deformity, and develop my mediumistic powers. Their directions are given through a medium with whom I am living. At times they take the medium and manipulate my person, throwing me into a magnetic condition. While in his presence and that of others whom they claim to me as healing and developing mediums, they commence throw on an influence that is very painful and hard to bear—often leaving parts of my body sore. While they were engaged in straightening a curvature of the spine, the operation was so painful as to confine me to my bed for three days. In the presence of Mrs. A. H. Robinson, of Chicago, and Mrs. M. Hayes, of Waterloo, I have been thrown into a perspiration. They (the spirits) claim to see the animal magnetism in my system. Dr. Fahnestock, do not these facts prove that they do? Again, they have directed me to sit alone and concentrate my mind upon some place or person that I desire to be located. I have followed Dr. Fahnestock's system of artificial somnambulism? The effects upon my person of these two different systems of magnetism are entirely dissimilar. In the one I am conscious of frequently becoming unconscious; of the latter, more vivid consciousness of mind is the result.

Ballston Spa, N. Y.—J. W. Foster writes.—There is now quite a number of copies of your valuable paper received at our office weekly. I am doing all I can to circulate it. Indeed, there is a great call for the numbers containing the "Search after God." I have circulated mine as fast as I have received and read them. May your subscription list continue to grow until it numbers more names than the Remonstrance you caused to be sent to the Legislature of the State of Illinois last winter. That was a noble act on your part.

Springfield, Mass.—M. A. Witherby writes.—My dear father, George T. Garland, who has been taking your paper, will not need it any longer, as he can live but a short time. You can continue sending it to his address up to the expiration of the time paid for only. It has been a great comfort to him in his declining years, though he has not been able to read it for some four weeks. He is 89 years of age, and his reason is as bright and shining as most old people's at the age of 70, and now, though sick so long, he still retains his reason, and is so ready and willing to go,—which I think is due to a happy belief gained mostly through your valuable paper.

Remarks:—It gives us pleasure to know that our venerable brother appreciates the Philosophy of Life in his declining years, and fully realizes that the change called death is a white-robed angel who unlocks the door leading to a higher and more glorious state of being, where the spirit will be reclothed with a spiritual body, and freed from the corroding influences of years, that are common to earth-life.

Kendall, Mich.—J. E. Sweet writes.—You will find two dollars inclosed for the renewal of my subscription. We are happy to learn through the Journal, that the scientific men of England are about investigating the science of Spiritualism, —hoping they will bear in mind that science implies knowledge—not mere conjecture or opinion. To give any department of human inquiry the mark of a science, it is necessary to collect together firmly established facts, and by fair and legitimate reasoning, to deduct those useful truths which naturally flow from them. When we diverge from this we treat of mere conjecture, and become the ignorant impostor and fanatic. We are interested in the "Search after God,"—trusting that when he is found, we shall be permitted to take one look at him square in the face.

Mobile, Ala.—W. B. Nelson writes.—There are many numbers of your paper sold in this city, and I think they are doing an excellent work.

Wellsville, Mo.—J. T. Stenmons writes.—Whilst I heartily believe in the ability of disembodied spirits to communicate with persons living on earth, under proper conditions, to put in motion machinery, etc., I search [illegible] It is contrary to all my former teachings and all my preconceived notions.

Wilwaukee, Wis.—J. B. Burr writes.—You will hereafter please send my paper to 90 Wisconsin street, Milwaukee. The Journal I consider a little ahead of any other paper published in the Union.

Remarks:—Such are the reports, in substance, that reach us from all parts of the country—even from foreign lands.

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

"SPREADING."

By Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson.

The readers of the Religio-Philosophical Journal must be highly amused by the challenge which the irate Dr. Orr has now given me. "Oh dear! what can the matter be?"

I invite attention to the terrible article of mine which so excited the gallant (?) gentleman, and drew out his first spread. It was written by request of a friend, and will be found in the Religio-Philosophical Journal, of May 13th, and Dr. Orr's famous reply may be found in the Religio-Philosophical Journal, of July 8th, in which he spreads himself to a considerable extent, without even refuting my position, or making direct reply thereto, but goes off on the subject of disease, deals in empty sarcasm, without any definite clearing up of my questions, truly put forth in the spirit of candid inquiry, as well as of honest conviction. But the very learned Doctor refuses to meet the subject with the "ordinary courtesies attending polemic discussions"—shouts "Buncombe!" once more—charges me with misstatements in an article of the Journal of August 19th, and then with a last spread gives me that generous, gallant, "spreading" challenge!—"If I consider myself capable!"

Now, then, I am fairly called to trial; and please, Dr. Orr, will you truthfully answer the following question:

Are you the "Dr. Orr," refered to in the following extract from my book of manuscript-writings, in which I copied from a collection of spirit communications in a pamphlet book, which Dr. Fahnestock had in his possession, when I labored in Marietta, and was entertained at his house?—"Copy of a communication given to the Lancaser Circle, Feb. 21st, 1861, by Samuel B. Fahnestock, Sen., of Dr. William B. Fahnestock, through the mediumship of Dr. Orr."

"When Nature slept in sweet repose,
Wrapped in chaotic darkness wild,
The Almighty Voice, serene, arose,
In accents sweet, eloquent, yet mild, etc."

This beautiful poem consists of over forty lines.

Is in your last article of August 19 h, you say, "I never was a medium for Dr. Fahnestock, or any one else." If there is another "Dr. Orr," through whom this poem, and many fine prose articles, as well as sublime poetry, was given, I stand corrected. But if you are the man whom I supposed, did you not at that time preach for an orthodox congregation, from which you concealed the fact of your mediumship; and did you not thus "privately" sit for Dr. F. and others of that "Lancaster Circle," they well knowing your position? If I have stated anything wrong, I am indebted to Dr. Fahnestock and his friends for all that I have asserted. Before the publication of my recent article, I met in this city Miss S. W. an old friend of Dr. F., and from her gained fresh testimony of these facts. You will do the cause of truth justice, to answer me honorably. "Ordinary courtesy" should forbid us turning from an important theme to trespass upon the generosity of our editor or readers, by indulging in personal abuse—nor did I have a thought of inviting any such ungallant course of inquiry. But that spread of yours did provoke my criticism, seeing my article was not addressed to you but to Dr. Fahnestock. Please tell me now, did he invite, suggest, or in any manner whatever propose to you, to help him to put a stopper on this "magnetic chain?" Or did you take pity on him, and think to help him over the stumbling stones at me, and thus divert public attention? Really, the subject grows so ridiculously interesting from the present stand-point, there's no knowing who will come in for a spread next; but that suggestion of Dr. F., to fall back upon "chloroform, nitrous oxide, bathsash, sulphuric ether," and perhaps "mybeau," put carried out, will spread not a few for a protracted "somnambulism," or sleep walking toward the undertaker's office! Can it be, that you, Dr. Fahnestock, would justify the introduction of these questionable ethers, and for the promiscuous experiments of the public, which must induce questionable, even dangerous results?

I am most alarmed at the thought; but if your "somnambulism" be a natural state, so easily induced, and within the reach of every individual, why resort to unnatural or dangerous agencies to produce it? In this, you certainly admit and use an exciting cause, and if you

If I am now "petted and praised" surely I know how empty is all human praise, by the experience of others, but all praise I can "bear meekly," seeing it has been earned by active labor and a rigid devotion to truth and honesty. Strange, indeed, that a candid difference of opinion is not to be granted by friends, or that any entertainment, however lavish and free, should demand of us the suppression of our honest convictions!

I am sorry this discussion should take so personal a character, but it has proved one thing: that some are far from dealing justly with those who differ from them in their pet theories.

That Dr. Fahnestock is doing a good work in arousing individual thought, and awakening dormant magnetic energies, I do not doubt,—for what may be found in the magnetic operator, is also to be found, in a greater or less proportion, within the organism of the subject; there could be no life without it. There is no doubt, then, that will-power, or volition, in each individual, may so arouse, stimulate, or arrest the life forces, as to induce in degree, the same results which an operator may produce.

To show how perfectly blind Dr. F. seems to be in regard to mediumistic facts, I here quote his remarks upon the recent scientific investigation of the Home phenomena, in the Journal of August 19th.

"I answer that the supposed 'nerve atmosphere' is simply the effete matter eliminated from, and peculiar to all persons as well as to mediums. This effete substance, being physical matter, spirits convert into semi-physical hands, etc., which can be seen by clairvoyants, etc."

Horrid! Ridiculous! "Simply effete matter!" Morbid matter which by the process of insensible perspiration is thrown off, being rejected by the physical organism! Rotten, putrescent, decomposed for the system to contain and be healthy, taken up by spirits and converted into "semi-physical hands" by spirits, whose present condition of life demands the refinement of all physical particles entering into this chemistry of organic manifestation! This idea is too irrational and absurd to go down. All true clairvoyants—that is, all true seers—behold a fine, luminous vapor, here around bibles embodied and disembodied spirits, which is entirely separate and distinct from the morbid, effete particles which the body parts with by natural, regular excretion and perspiration. In some persons this luminous surrounding gathers brilliancy and motion which appears in a high state of mental enthusiasm or inspiration, to shoot up in a belt of vivid glow, or fine rays, from the head. This is represented by the olden pictures of Christ and his apostles, and our finest artists so clothe their bright angels and departed sages. Had Dr. Fahnestock ever had the personal experience of a seer, he could not have made so foolish a statement—as to clothe our glorified and unfleshed relatives and teachers in that filthy, repulsive garb of rotten, effete matter. At my first experience in a circle, a fine, powerful influence approached me, which was playing around the circle in a deep trance. From her hands streamed a fine, soft, continuous flow of light, which she appeared to impart or pour upon the heads of each member of the circle, and the peculiar crackling, which is sometimes produced by rubbing a fur in winter, accompanied at intervals this light. That it produced the same or similar effects upon persons utterly ignorant of the magnetic philosophy that it did upon the initiated, was fully evident.

Whole volumes might be written on this question, of what mediums have experienced and seen; and what right has a man who never had such experience to tell us we 'do not see' or feel, but "imagine" it all? When a person so flatly contradicts us, or, like Dr. Orr ("a Bible Spiritualist for the last thirty-five years"), sets us such a significant example of clerical "courtesy" for us to follow, why should we not take up the scalpel which has been offered us?

But now, gentlemen, with the explanation I demand of Dr. Orr, I have one question to ask for my own edification and that of many others: How many doctors will it take to master this very obstinate disease of thinking for one's self?

And now, concerning the challenge. Surely, I did not imagine before that this third party arrangement was gotten up for the special opportunity of "spreading" one's self!

I resort to any invention of men, like this, in order to precipitate or induce "the condition, what becomes of your oft-repeated declaration, that "one need only be taught how, and they can enter the state immediately, or entirely of themselves?" Now, lest I spread this article to too great length, I must briefly remark, I can not see how my honest opinion can tear down any "temple" that you may have built for these "developed natives," or "healing mediums;" and inasmuch as we, or myself, I may say, have seldom received hospitality selfishly, I see little sagacity or wisdom in telling only one side of the story, and with such a tone of deep lamentation! When I traveled in Pennsylvania, and stopped with you, I was a good test medium—gave free delineating readings, was called upon to diagnose the most difficult cases—of which you can not have forgotten—a girl of fifteen, whose trouble had baffled the skill of the physicians, and was a mystery to yourself. From your own lips I was assured of the fire, satisfactory tests I gave you and your friends—the "double" appearance of your daughter, Sarah, which had been prophesied in a beautiful poem, years previous, and if I recollect aright, through this same "Dr. Orr." At the same time, I was not so "weak" or "sick" but that I went out on the street to get a ball. Conservatism shut up the popular hall against any Sunday meeting. The poor, despised colored society cloved me their church, and alone, I went out that Sunday eve, with its true spirit-power, to the south, through the dark alley—so mortal friends to accompany me on my mission of obedience to the humane and liberating spirits of the higher life! Arriving at the church, I found the little Bethlehem filled to its utmost capacity. The generous-hearted, "courteous," grateful blacks had politely welcomed the white people of the place, and one side of the room was occupied by whites, the other by the usual worshipers. Out to the street, a little distance away, an eager, curious crowd remained standing through the entire service.

Those were "less prosperous days," when I needed true friends; practical friends,—when I often went "faint on my journey, because my purse would not allow me a good dinner—when I wore a thread-bare dress, for the same reason. I am truly, deeply grateful for all true, unselfish kindness, but I do not feel indebted to those for whom my mediumistic gifts were exercised without money and without price! The rebuke that other gone me, in the spirit of ingratitude, is a matter of self-defence,—would have furnished me a fare, where unworthy complaints and one-sided statements could not mar the fellowship of souls chosen for the reformation and progress of the present and coming generations.

Mrs. Addie L. Ballou.

A New Feature.—It appears that Addie L. Ballou, who ministers on each Sabbath to the spiritual wants of the Spiritual Association of this city, is authorized to solemnize marriages, and our city ministers may now expect to share with the Rev. Addie the perquisites attending such happy occasions. We find the following in the Cincinnati Times of the 14th:

"This morning a lady, whose manner and tone would indicate that her opinion on woman's rights was formed in accordance with the teachings of Susan B., Elizabeth Cady, Anna Dickinson, and the rest of them, made her appearance at the marriage license desk of the Probate Court. In her hand was carried a neatly folded paper which she passed over to the clerk with, 'Is there anything else for me to do in this case?' An examination of the document revealed the fact that it was the return required by law in testimony of the solemnization of marriage between Mr. O—s G—and Miss Annie G—, by the Rev. Mrs. Addie L. Ballou. The mother of the bride, actively engaged in the agitation of the woman question, insisted that the ceremony should be performed by no other than a lady preacher. Therefore the Rev. Addie was sent for, and came the distance of two hundred miles from another State to make the two souls happy."

If the fair Addie administers religious food with the same determined force of character with which she delivers her marriage returns; woe be unto those who stir up wickedness and vice to-day.—Terre Haute Express.

Remarks: Mrs. Ballou received her authority to perform the marriage ceremony according to law by a letter of fellowship from the Religio-Philosophical Society a long time since, and has tied the silken cord of love (outward form) many times, to the entire satisfaction of parties most interested.

We believe she sometimes is inspired to step aside from orthodox forms in concluding the ceremony by adopting a standard that will be more fully appreciated in the hereafter.

In the above notice, we see that old theology is imitated, and the odious "Rev." freely used. We are of the opinion, however, that Mrs. Ballou has too much good sense to attach that title to her name when writing marriage notices.

Emma Hardinge Britten.

To the Editor of the Religio-Philosophical Journal:—Will you kindly oblige me by announcing in your paper the proposed departure of my wife, Emma Hardinge Britten, per "Siberia," for Boston, to-morrow, the 10th, and that all communications intended for her are in future to be addressed to 251 Washington street, Boston, Mass; care of Mr. Thomas Barney.

Yours Respectfully,
William Barrow.
Newton Highlands, Aug. 9st, 1871.

SPIRITUAL SW IN THE SOUTH.

Letter from N. D. Hoy.

Ed. Journal:—Inclosed are three printed slips. Those headed "Spiritualism," and "Wonderful Results from Spiritualism," are from the Observer and the Monitor, of Tuscaloosa, Alabama. The slip headed, "Marvels of Clairvoyance," is from the Canton [Miss.] Mail, though originally communicated by me to the Scranton [Miss.] Republican.

These, if published, will give your readers some idea, though a limited one, of my effort to bring Spiritualism before the people through the secular papers.

During the last six months I have lectured through portions of Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky, and have had a hard time of it generally; for it must be borne in mind that my labors have led me into districts half as large as the state of Illinois, in which, it is believed, no lecture had been heard, no spiritual book or paper had been read, and where the philosophy of our loved religion is invariably spoken of as one of the "isms" of the north, and allied to free love, Mormonism, and everything else that is false and ridiculous. What can a reformer do amongst such a people? I have had ample opportunity to learn the spiritual needs of the south, and these are, I am sure, above all others, test mediums. The people want the proof of spirit communion, and they seem now in real earnest upon the subject, and until this is given, they will persist in denouncing spiritualism as a humbug.

There is a most inviting field in the south for test mediums, but these, I think, should be accompanied by lecturers—the phenomena and the philosophy should go together.

I have been at several places where the Davenports have "exhibited," as the people term their manifestations, but can not learn that any body has been converted by them. Indeed, I have long known from observation that what A. J. Davis says about the ladies and gentlemen who sport Seneca Carlisle, is true; that is, that the manifestations given at dark circles are prostitute, tending only to confound, amaze and excite the beholder. Several of the papers have denounced the manifestations given by the Davenports as juggiery, whilst others seem to have no settled opinion in regard to the matter. Every one, however, with whom I have personal acquaintance upon the subject, regards the manifestations as mere juggiery, and these I have protested against the absurdity of supposing that persons tied hard and fast can do such things as are done in the presence of the Davenport Brothers. I am assured that they are not one whit more dexterous than the feats performed by Signor Blitz, and Herr Alexander, who do not exhibit in the dark.

What an admirable opportunity has Professor Fay as every exhibition, to "rise and explain" how under certain conditions and in the presence of certain media, spirits can materialize and manifest themselves, and cite some of the innumerable instances in which, in all this past, they have done so. I can not learn, however, that the professor has ever explained.

It does not follow that even in a dark circle a light is not to get and be thrown upon the mind, inasmuch as the committee, I believe, always leave the professor's tongue untied.

There will arise a class of manifestations, soon, so strikingly beautiful and significant, and come to us in so unobtrusive a shape, that no person can doubt them, and in comparison with which all previous manifestations will be regarded as but "gamo, inexplicable show"! I have high authority for this statement, and will tell you something about it in my next.

I can not close this rambling letter without saying something about the kind and noble spirits—in the flesh—who have ministered to me in my wanderings, and who seemed to be almost miraculously raised up to me in the dark hour of need. These are Dr. Orr and Col. Beers, of Mobile, Alabama; R. Hudson, Esq., and family, near Clayton, Alabama; Mr. Riddick and family, and Dr. Pickernson, and family, of Tuscaloosa, Alabama; Col. Shearer, of Meridian, Mississippi, and family; Col. Benton and wife, and Col. Charles S. Gibbs, of Livingston, Alabama, on whom I ought to bestow something more than a passing notice, for other reasons than those growing out of his kindness to me. He was a seer before the advent of the spiritual phenomena. The next I will say of him, is a letter from him to Judge Redmonds, in the second volume, I believe, of Edmund's and Dexter's "Spiritualism." He is now in his eighty fifth year,—tall and erect, and with his long white beard flowing over his breast, presents a most venerable appearance.

Col. Benton and wife were both clairvoyants and members of the Old Presbyterian Church, before they became speaking of spiritualism.

Col. Lockett, of Canton, Mississippi; Mr. Pantier, a Swede, of Water Valley, Mississippi; Dr. Peawitt, of Grand Junction, Tennessee, and J. J. Perkins, of Chattanooga, Tennessee, may heaven's choicest blessings rest upon all of these, who, like these Spiritualists, are amongst the highest types of humanity.

Woodbury, Ky., July 24th, 1871.

Spiritualism.

We have a communication, published in another column, with regard to a lecture on this subject. We have no objection to being enlightened on any question, and we suppose all our readers would be glad to learn if persons who believe in calling spirits from the other world, have to say about it; if it be true that there are people walking in our midst, who can, by some extraordinary power, call back to earth the departed spirit, let us hear from them that they are willing to tell us.

We do not believe in the matter at all; we look upon the whole thing as being a humbug; but, at the same time, if any man thinks there is truth in it, we would like to find it by testimony, if not too long. So if Mr. Hay will lecture, we will have one listener, prejudiced against his views, but disposed to weigh his arguments.

We hear he visits Tuscaloosa in fall of mediums. That may be so, and we hope it is; but we also trust he will tell us all about these mediums, and what they can and can not do.

Marvels of Clairvoyance.

When Rose Sargent published his learned work, entitled, "Pantheists: or, the Despair of Science," the writer, reviewing the same in one of the periodicals of the day, suggested that the scientists would have next to direct their researches to the spiritual world, as there no theory of deduction from its material side could cover or account for the phenomena of modern Spiritualism. He might have added that whenever scientists shall do this, they will find a new field presented, and by a class of minds as capable of comprehending the occult, or the spiritual, as any who have won distinction in the domain of the physical sciences.

The poem herewith offered you for publication, was read by an entranced clairvoyant in my presence, but a few words of explanation may be necessary to a proper understanding of it. The intelligent reader is aware that both the Old and New Testaments abound with accounts of visions, but the rationale of their production was never fully understood before the advent of the spiritual dispensation. Now it is known by many thousand of intelligent minds, both in Europe and America, that a certain class of persons are susceptible to peculiar psychological influences, as well from spirits in the flesh as from those out of it. Such persons sometimes become entranced by supersensuous intelligence, who project into the mental halls of the spirit their mental images, which to the entranced medium appear as palpable and objective realities. Such was evidently the condition of Saint John on the Isle of Patmos, when he saw there with him signified to him the wonderful things described in his revelations. With these preliminary remarks, I shall, as briefly as possible, detail the circumstances of the manifestation in question. I shall give neither names, date, nor place, having no permission to do so, and feel that with the candid reader, my veracity will not depend upon them. There were present in the circle Dr. G. Stevens, Mr. H., Mrs. H., Col. E., Mrs. E., Annie G., a girl of ten years, and myself. At previous circles communications by rope had been given to Annie by Mattie F., who had been Annie's playmate before she passed to the Summer Land, some twelve months previous. But now a communication of a very different character is to be given. The clairvoyant, Dr. G., becoming entranced, informed us that spirit girls appeared to be rambling over a beautiful lawn in the distance, and engaged in pic[illegible] them into baskets wi[illegible] arou[illegible]. When they had filled their baskets, they approached the circle, and one of them putting her left hand on the clairvoyant's shoulder, pointed upward with the other, when the medium described a large curtain slowly rising in the air. Near the top of this curtain the medium described the little girls as ascending by ladders, who then began to pin their flowers to the curtain, arranging them into letters and words, and the verses which constitute literally the following poem; Col. E. acting as amanuensis.

I could fill many pages with accounts of other poems, read by the same clairvoyant, which I will present, but the majority of the people are so little prepared to believe them that I rarely allude to them in my public lectures:

The Poem.

Yes, Annie dear, I love thee still,
I truly love thee, Annie dear,
For if thou dost thy mother's will,
Love and affection draw me near;
And I enjoy with thee the bliss
That children in obedience find,
And then I breathe a gentle kiss
Upon thy lips; and when thy kind
And generous soul doth long for me,
I am, dear Annie, then with thee.

But, Annie dear, do not forget
To be obedient—to be good;
For tears of pity and regret
Flow from my eyes at every mood
Of willful temper, which decays
Thy generous feet in angry strides,
To pain mine heart, whose hopes and joys
Are centered in thyself—her pride!
Oh Annie dear! oh Annie sweet,
Be good, that we again may meet.

And when we meet again I'll look
A spirit, in thy spirit eye,
And then I'll read, as in a book
Illumined by a brighter sky,
The story of thy life, dear Annie,
All will be known to thee and me,
And we shall pluck in Eden's glen
Sweet flowers of eternity.
Oh, Annie dear! oh, Annie sweet,
Be good, that we again may meet.

Nestor.

Wonderful Results from Spiritualism.

About ten days ago, the smoke-house of Mr. Stephen Miller, of this city, was robbed, by night, of a considerable quantity of bacon and other groceries. For two days no clue was had as to who was the perpetrator of the larceny. At that time there was sojourning here one Col. Hay, an enthusiast on the subject of Spiritualism, who had held several meetings at private houses, aided by the well-known medium, Prof. Voyle, of this place. Mr. Miller's wife, of this place, at length hit upon the happy idea of consulting the case to them for investigation. Mr. Miller, being a practical man, and a skeptic on the subjects of Spiritualism, clairvoyance, etc., laughed so loudly at the bare idea of the thing, that the noise was heard in what was clearly audible to the ears of his neighbors who lived on the opposite side of the street. But his wife, being less prejudiced against those wonderful feats, messes, or whatever they may be called, at last got Mr. Miller to consent to call on Col. Hay and Voyle. So soon as Mr. Voyle was sufficiently charged with the spiritual matter, the question was asked, "who stole Miller's meat?" The answer was written, "Harry Brown." This Brown Mr. Voyle had never heard of before. He is a negro, living about two miles in the country, as was afterwards learned. The question was repeated several times, with the same result.

Next day, for curiosity's sake, and to gratify his wife, Mr. Miller procured a search-warrant, and got Mr. S. Powell, one of the sheriff's deputies, to go out to Brown's house to search. It for the missing articles. Strange to say, the search was entirely successful. All the missing bacon, etc., was found concealed in the negro's cabin, and was brought to town.

We heard of these facts from others, but were so incredulous that we were not satisfied till we had them from Mr Miller's own lips, which we did last Thursday morning. He is one of our oldest and most respectable citizens, and a man whose veracity is far above all doubts. This is the strongest argument in favor of Spiritualism that has ever been brought home to us, and is deserving of note. It also disproves the assertion of some, who, unable to explain the mystery, give the devil the credit of having a hand in it. Now, we know that old Nick had naught to do with the discovery of this theft, for he loves goods, for, if he had, he is, as we heard a gentleman say, not so bad a fellow as we have all been taught to believe,—indeed an individual in our midst who has been terribly traduced. But, knowing that he is as wicked as represented, we know that he has nothing to do with that Spiritualism which is the means of exposing rascals and rascality.

This should serve as a useful lesson to the negro, Brown, who, hereafter, with impunity, even though no mortal eye may rest upon them. Whenever a citizen of Tuscaloosa is robbed, all that he will have to do in order to regain the plunder and punish the plunderer, is to call in to his aid a spiritual medium, who will tell him all that he wishes to know. From this time forward, we expect a great diminution of crime in this vicinity. Of course, we should have liked to have the negro Brown properly punished for his crime. Doubtless the trial will be an interesting one.

"Spiritualism Dead."

Brother Jones:—Never since the advent of Modern Spiritualism were the times more rife with encouragement—never more prolific with rich promises for the future. The fountains of the great deep are being broken up, and the living waters of truth are submerging the earth. Everywhere is the spirit of inquiry awakening. From every quarter the cry is coming, "Give us more light." In every community the scales are falling from the people's eyes, and they are beginning to see and realize the glorious truths of the New Gospel.

We want lecturers—we want books—we want papers—are the daily ejaculations of thousands of hungry souls.

We have been lecturing in the capacity of State Missionary in Indiana for a portion of the time within the past two years, and have given many courses of lectures, organized societies, and made many near and dear friends, and are still desired by many to serve in this capacity, but we want to see and shake hands with some of the many friends in Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin, with whose names we have been familiar for years, and from some of whom we have received warm invitations to dispense amongst them the glad tidings of the new spiritual dispensation.

And now, if they will write to us immediately, and furnish us with their address, and a statement of the condition of things amongst them, we will respond in terms that will suit them.

Friends, do n't omit to write because you have not a full treasury, and therefore feel that you are not able to employ a speaker. We want to see you all, whether rich or poor. We want to greet you, and kindle up the fires of friendship. Therefore, we want all the friends to write—all the Spiritualists and Liberalists in Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin, we want to see you all this fall and winter if we can find you, though in lieu of traveling all the time, we would accept a few monthly engagements, while preparing another work for the press. Let us hear at once from you, whether organized or unorganized.

"Mr. Grave's Spiritualism is dead, I believe," said a friend who met us on the street. "Yes," we replied, "A subterranean mole once concluded the sun did not shine, because he did not poke his head out far enough to see it."

K. Graves.

Richmond, Ind.

—Conceit is usually in proportion to ignorance.

Voices from the People.

Fremont, Ind.—N. Latta writes.—I first subscribed for the Journal as a trial subscriber, and being a poor man I have not had the money before, but considering myself beyond all description edified, I must send $3 "Search after God" conscienced. Thanking you for putting the confidence in me you have, I am much obliged. Please continue the Journal, as I cannot do without it. I must have it. Please send it till I notify you to stop.

De Kalb, Ill.—L. Z. Parks writes.—Dear Brother, you stand at the helm of one of the great ships of Spiritualism, and if you keep your eye on the compass,—the true spirit,—the cargo will all safely land in the harbor of eternal rest, to enjoy the reward of our labor in the good cause of doing good to and for each other.

Grizzley Flat, Cal.—D. T. Loofbourrow writes.—Please find inclosed three dollars for subscription to the Journal. Send it to me for one year. Please inform me whether the "Search after God" can be found in a separate publication.

Remarks:—Not at present. Back numbers of the Journal containing it exhausted long ago.

Beaver Dam, Wis.—Mrs. M. E. Hopkins writes.—I have been taking your Journal on trial. My time expired, I think, the first of July. I am much pleased with the paper, and inclose a P. O. order of $3.00 for one year.

Arkansas City, Kan.—A. W. Hoyt writes.—Inclosed please find $1 50, for which please forward your valuable journal to the address of F. A. Cowles. The Journal is doing a heap of good down here in this frontier country. Every week it comes loaded with the valuable news of the week. Long may it wave. The "Search after God" is one of the most interesting pieces ever put in print. If it ever comes out in book form (which I hope it will), you may put me down for a copy.

Columbus, Ga.—Thomas Chaffin writes.—Inclosed you will find a money order for $3 00. I find my time will be up on the 30th of July. This will be three years I have taken your paper, and I am well pleased with it. I hope to be able to pay for it many years.

Hopkinton, Iowa.—Mrs. E. N. Lessey writes.—Inclosed please find 75 cents, a renewal of my subscription for the Religio Philosophical Journal, for three months. My term of subscription expired on the 5th inst., and I cannot do without the Journal. Its contents for me are meat indeed, and every word of each paper is read, by the time another reaches me. The "Search after God" is grand, is glorious, is wonderful, and I am following it up with the author.

Columbus, Wis.—J. W. Kenyon writes.—Old orthodoxy trembles. O. H. Head has been here. He does not stay long enough in a place.

Stevenson's Mills, Mo.—D. T. Edwards writes.—I desire No. 14 of present volume. No. 15 has come to hand, and I am not satisfied to lose a single link out of the chain of the "Search after God." There has been so much said concerning your "Search" that I have not thought it worth my while to speak of it. As for my part it has so far been in unison with my own thoughts—only exceeding them in every case. Many have expressed a wish to see the close of the articles, months ago, desiring to see the result. I fear they will close too soon.

Hillsdale, Mich.—P. Ferris writes.—Please find inclosed one dollar for the blessed Journal, for I cannot do without it.

Davenport, Iowa.—David S. Fuller writes.—I had rather go without one meal a day than to go without the Journal. The "Search after God" is worth more to me than the paper costs twice over.

Watertown, Wis.—J. W. Kenyon writes.—I have been following the directions of my spirit guides, who promised to cure me of physical debility and deformity, and develop my mediumistic powers. Their directions are given through a medium with whom I am living. At times they take the medium and manipulate my person, throwing me into a magnetic condition. While in his presence and that of others whom they claim to me as healers and developing mediums, they commence throw on an influence that is very painful and hard to bear—often leaving parts of my body sore. While they were engaged in straightening a curvature of the spine, the operation was so painful as to confine me to my bed for three days. In the presence of Mrs. A. H. Robinson, of Chicago, and Mrs. M. Hayes, of Waterloo, I have been thrown into a perspiration. They (the spirits) claim to see the animal magnetism in my system. Dr. Fahnestock, do not these facts prove that they do? Again, they have directed me to sit alone and concentrate my mind upon some place or person that I desire to be located. I have followed Dr. Fahnestock's system of artificial somnambulism? The effects upon my person of these two different systems of magnetism are entirely dissimilar. In the one I am conscious of frequently becoming unconscious; of the latter, more vivid consciousness of mind is the result.

Ballston Spa, N. Y.—J. W. Foster writes.—There is now quite a number of copies of your valuable paper received at our office weekly. I am doing all I can to circulate it among others. There is a great call for the numbers containing the "Search after God." I have circulated mine as fast as I have received and read them. May your subscription list continue to grow until it numbers more names than the Remonstrance you caused to be sent to the Legislature of the State of Illinois last winter. That was a noble act on your part.

Springfield, Mass.—M. A. Witherby writes.—My dear father, George T. Garland, who has been taking your paper, will not need it any longer, as he can live but a short time. You can continue sending it to his address up to the expiration of the time paid for only. It has been a great comfort to him in his declining years, though he has not been able to read it for some four weeks. He is 89 years of age, and his reason is as perfect and shining as most old people's at the age of 70, and now, though sick so long, he still retains his reason, and is so ready and willing to go,—which I think is due to a happy belief gained mostly through your valuable paper.

Remarks:—It gives us pleasure to know that our venerable brother appreciates the Philosophy of Life in his declining years, and fully realizes that the change called death is a white-robed angel who unlocks the door leading to a higher and more glorious state of being, where the spirit will be reclothed with a spiritual body, and freed from the corroding influences of years, that are common to earth-life.

Kendall, Mich.—J. E. Sweet writes.—You will find two dollars inclosed for the renewal of my subscription. We are happy to learn through the Journal, that the scientific men of England are about investigating the science of Spiritualism, —hoping they will bear in mind that science implies knowledge—not mere conjecture or opinion. To give any department of human inquiry the mark of a science, it is necessary to collect together firmly established facts, and by fair and legitimate reasoning, to deduct those useful truths which naturally flow from them. When we diverge from this we treat of mere conjecture, and become the ignorant impostor and fanatic. We are interested in the "Search after God,"—trusting that when he is found, we shall be permitted to take one look at him square in the face.

Mobile, Ala.—W. B. Nelson writes.—There are many numbers of your paper sold in this city, and I think they are doing an excellent work.

Wellsville, Mo.—J. T. Stenmons writes.—Whilst I heartily believe in the ability of disembodied spirits to communicate with persons living on earth, under proper conditions, to put in motion machinery for miracle (?) speech. It is contrary to all my former teachings and all my preconceived notions.

Wilwaukee, Wis.—J. B. Burr writes.—You will hereafter please send my paper to 90 Wisconsin street, Milwaukee. The Journal I consider a little ahead of any other paper published in the Union.

Remarks:—Such are the reports, in substance, that reach us from all parts of the country—even from foreign lands.

Price-List Of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books desired, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

	Price	Postage
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies,	.75	.12
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Johnston,	1.50	.20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers,	.25	.05
Alice Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker,	1.25	.16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase,	.25	.02
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Device,	1.50	.20
Apocryphal New Testament,	1.25	.16
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbot, Paper,	.50	.06
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth,	.50	.06
A Lecture in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. P. A. Logan,	.15
Arcana of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	.20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	.20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child,	.50	.08
Ambrosia, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	.20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph, Cloth,	1.50	.20
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis,	1.00	.16
Apostles, (translated from the French) by Renan,	1.75	.20
A Stellar Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis,	1.00	.16
A Series of Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor,	2.00	.24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. C. Wright, small edition,	.60	.12
Large do.,	1.50	.12
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Toulmin, M. D.,	.50	.6
An Eye Opener, by Sopa. Cloth,	.75	.12
Paper,	.50	.04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. Ware,	.15	.2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster,	.15	.02
Analogy Between the Facts of the Bible and the Facts of modern Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster,	.15	.02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle,	2.00	.24
Biography of Satan, By E. Graves' Price 35 Cents
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child,	1.00	.12
Memoirs of Ole Bull, (a Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle,	1.25	.16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen,	2.00	.24
Book of Poems, by J. Wm. Van Namee. Cloth,	.75	.8
Bramble of Pain, by Mrs J. S. Adams, a book for every Spiritualist,	1.25	.16
Bellaviati, by Professor W. Denton,	.10	.1
Bhagvat-Geeta, or Hindoo New Testament,	1.25	.16
Bhagvat Sing against the Laws of Life and Health, by E. K. Gardner, A. M. M. D.' Paper,		.06
[illegible]		.08
[illegible]		.20
[illegible]		.20
[illegible]		.16
[illegible] of the Drunkard's Appeal, by Julia M. Friend, with an introduction by H. C. Wright,	1.00	.12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M.D.	1.25	.16
Christianity No rivalry or Spiritualism Superior to Christianity, by Wm. Denton,	.10	.02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by M. B. Craven,	1.50	.16
Descent of man, by Darwin. Two Vols., ($2.00 per Vol),	4.00	.40
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Interesting History,	1.50	.20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the 6th edition of 1715,	1.00	.12
Devil's Pulpit, Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life,	2.00	.20
Dova. A Novel of intense interest to progressive people,	1.75	.24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph,	.75	.12
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 12 cts. Cloth,	.75	.12
Errors of the Bible. Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature. By Henry. C. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth,	.50	.8
Easter Rail, a Theological Romance,	.50	.06
Empire of the Mother, over the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright, paper,	.50	.04
Cloth,	.75	.12
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen,	1.75	.24
Free Thoughts Concerning Religion, or Nature vs Theology, by A. J. Davis,	.20	.2
Fugitive Wife, by Warren Chase, Paper,	.50	.6
Festival Night, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Medium,	.5	.2
Gazelle, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle,	.50	.06
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase,	.50	.04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 4 vols, viz: Vol. 1 The Physician; Vol. 2. The Teacher; Vol. 3. The Seer; Vol. 4. The Reformer; Vol 4. The Thinker. Each,	1.50	.20
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students,	.15	.2
Good Men in Modern Times,	1.50	.16
God Dealing with Slavery, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. Paper,	.75	.10
Habits of Good Society,	.50	.06
Hartmann, or Sovereign from the Past, by G. C. Stewart,	1.00	.16
[illegible]h by good Living W. W. Hall M. D.,	1.50	.20
[illegible] A. J. Davis,	1.50	.20
[illegible] ought to be the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper,	.50	.6
Cloth,	.75	.12
[illegible] and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper,	.50	.5
Cloth,	.75	.12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism,	2.00	.24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. C. Wright,	.25	.02
How and Why I become a Spiritualist,	.75	.12
Helen Harlow's Vow, by L. Waisbrooker,	1.50	.16
How to Write, by H. P. Miller, M. D., paper,	.40	.4
Cloth,	.75	.12
Abridged do, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates Ajar,	1.00	.16
Hollow Globe,	2.00	.30
History and Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy compared,	1.50	.16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe, by J. W. Draper, M. D. L. L. D. cloth,	2.00	.60
History, Philosophy, Statistics and Dynamics, or the Rise and Course of the Life of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D. L. L. D. 666 pages, cloth $2.50 sheep $3.00
History of the supernatural, (2 Vols., $4.00 paper boards,
Hit, by Dr. Mary H. Walker,
Infidelity, by Mrs. F. Kingman,
Incidents in a book by Mrs. [illegible]
Is the Bible Divine? by S. J. Finney,
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Negative's Text Book, by Robert Cooper,	1.25	.16
Instructive Communications from Spi.it Land, Mrs. M. S. Park,	1.50	.16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds,	1.50	.16
Index, or Inquirer's Text Book by Robert Cooper,	1.25	.16
Is it the Dawnin of Science? by W. D. Gunning,	.15	.02
Jesus of Nazareth, by Alexander Smyth,	1.50	.20
Jehovah Indicted, or the Character of the Christian Deity Delineated,	.25	.4
Joan of Arc—A Biography, translated from the French, by Sarah H. Grimke,	1.00	.12
Kidder's Secrets of Box Keeping. Price, paper bound 35 cents. Board bound,	.75	.08
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale, [illegible] with Life of Mohammed, Translated by George Sale, Gent. 12 mo., 475 page,	1.50	.24
Life Line of Lone Cabin, by Warren [illegible]		.12
Life of Thomas Paine, with critical and [illegible] by Cheetham, Wheeler, Jennings, by G. Vale,		.16
Life of Jesus, by Renan,	1.75	.20
Love and its Various Aspects, by P. B. Randolph,	1.50	.16
Lyrics of the Golden Age, by Lizzie Doten,	1.50	.16
Lectures Practicing, or Subjects as it, and as it is to be, by C. S. Woodruff, M. D.,	1.00	.16
Life and Moral Lessons of Confucius, by M. L. K. Wright,	.25	.02
Letters to Hon. Miles Grant, by Rev. Moses Hull,	.25	.02
Loving Protest, Dead Past. H. C. Wright. Cloth,	.75	.08
Paper,	.50	.04
Leaves of Gold. Cloth cover,	1.00	.16
Boards' .75.	.50	.08
Paper cover,	.25	.02
My Love and I, by Abby M. Laffin Parker,	.50	.8
Magic Staff, an Auto-Biography of A. J. Davis,	1.75	.24
Miracles and Modern Spiritualism, by Emma Hardinge and Professor, by Henry C. Wright,	1.50	.20
Mystery of Angels Explained, by A. B. Newton,	.25	.2
Midnight Prayer,	.10	.1
Mission and the Missions, by Marvin Monroe,	1.00	.16
Mrs. Packard's Prison Life,	1.50	.20
Memoirs of the Breed of Ide, by P. B. Cadwallader,	.50	.06
Manual for Children, (for Lyceums) by A. J. Davis, Cloth,	.75	.8
Manual, gilt,	1.00	.8
Abridged edition,	.50	.4
My offering, and Other Stories, by Lizzie Doten,	1.50	.20
Mediums, their Development and Conditions, Published for the Benefaction of Spirit Circles, by J. H. Powell,	.25	.02
Man a Reality, by T. G. Forster,	.15	.02
Man a Being, by T. G. Forster,	.15	.02
Modern American Spiritualism 1848 to 1868, by Emma Hardinge,	2.00	.24
Man's Rights, or how would you like it, by Annie Denton Cridge,	.10	.2
Morning Lectures, (Twenty Discourses) by A. J. Davis,	1.50	.20

[illegible] 69
[illegible] 60
[illegible] .4
[illegible] .4
Ordeal of Life. Through Dr. J. G. Grimel, Medium, 25 .04
Orthodoxy False, since Spiritualism is True, by Wm. Denton, 10 .02
Our Planet, Geology by Denton, 1.50 .20
Optimism, The Lesson of Ages, .75 .12
Origin of Species, Darwin, 2.00 .24
Origin of Civilization and Primitive Conditions of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock, 2.00 .24
One Religion, Many Creeds, by Rose Wisanz, 1.5. .25
Outlets of Spectre, with Notes and Statements by G. F. Kittredge, .10 .02
Persons and Events, by A. J. Davis, 2.50 .30
Pre-Adamite Man, by Randolph, 1.50 .20
Physiology of Woman, by G. Merril, M. D. 1.50 .20
Pinnebitte—The dangair of Science, by Epes Sargent, 1.25 .16
Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. A. J. Davis. Paper 50 cts; postage 8 cts. Cloth, 1.00 .16
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M. King, 1.75 .24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lizzie Doten, 1.25 .16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Horace Wood, Medium. Cloth, .20 .02
Paper, .10 .04
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King, 1.00 .—
Rules for Reading Spiritual Circles, by Rem's Ear Organ, .5 .02
Sexual Physiology, by R. T. Trall, M. D. 2.00 .24
Strange Visitors, Dictated through a clairvoyant, 1.50 .20
Spiritual Harp, 2.00 .24
Abridged Edition, 1.00 .16
Sermon to The Love Life, by the Spirit of Dr. R. E. Rose, .20 .2
Spiritual Tracts by Judge Edmonds, .20 .2
Self Abnegationist; or the true King and Queen, by H. C. Wright, Paper, .50 .6
Cloth, .75 .12
Spiritualism, or Discussions in Development, by A. M. Ladin Farrar, .50 .5
Soul Affinity, by A. B. Child, M. D., .20 .2
Sermon to the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. E. O. G. Willard, 2.00 .24
Six Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Emma Hardinge, Paper, .75 .—
Cloth, 1.00 .—
Soul of Things, by William and Elizabeth Denton, 1.25 .20
Spirit Manifestations, by H. D. Stone, .75 .12
Spirit Mysteries Explained, by A. J. Davis, 1.50 .20
Supremacy of Reason, by Moses Hull, .10 .02
Social Evils by Mrs. E. M. King, .25 .04
Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism, by Mrs. M. M. King, .25 .—
Sense and Nonsense, S. M. Landis, M. D. 2.00 .20
Songs of Life,—S. W. Tucker, .20 .02
Spiritual Songs. S. W. Tucker, .15 .02
Spirit Life of Modern Parker, through the Mediumship of Miss S. Ramsdell, .50 .06
Seven Hour System of Grammar, by Prof. D. P. Howe, .20 .04
Paper, .50 .04
Selection of Evil, by Joel Moody, 1.75 .20
Seership, Randolph, 1.50 .20
Spiritual Manifestations by J. S. R [illegible] 10 .02
Sunday Question and self contradictions of the Bible, .20 .02
Syntagma, 1.00 .13
The Fountain, by A. J. Davis, 1.00 .13
The Irreco ciable Records, or Genesis and Geology, by Wm. Denton, .25 .04
Cloth, .50 .06
The Bible in India, 2.00 .30
The Faithful Creature, an Inspirational Story, by J. William Van Namee, 1.50 .16
The Bible in the Balance, 1.50 .16
That Terrible Question, by Moses Hull, .10 .02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. B. Davis, .5 .02
The Dynamic Cure, by Lewyy Sunderland, 21.50 .16
Tale of A Physician, by A. J. Davis, 21.50 .16
The Future Life, by Mrs. Sweet, 1.50 .20
The Unseen Universe, by H. Hull, 1.50 .16
The Gates Wide Open, by George Wood, 1.50 .16
The Gates Ajar, by Miss. E. S. Phelps, 1.50 .16
The Child's Hymn Book, by H. C. Green, .50 .6
The Pearl Diver by Dr. G. W. Kirby, .10 .2
The Gospel of Good and Evil, by Silver, 1.50 .16
The Trumpet, by Lewyy Sunderland, 1.50 .16
The Great South-West, by W. Nicolas, 1.00 .14
The Merits of Jesus Christ and the Merits of Thomas Paine are related as merits in others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright, .25 .2
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire. Fifth American Edition, 1000 pages, two steel plates, Largest and most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $12 00, 5.00 .60
The Disgusts, by Rev. Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a history of the origin, evidences, and early history of Christianity, 2.00 .24
The Inner Mystery, an Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten, .20 .02
The Debtor, William Denton, .10 .2
The Voices, by Warren Sumner Barlow, 1.25 .16
The Lyceum Guide, .25 .4
The Voices, by Warren Chase, 1.50 .20
The Ignorant Interpreter, .10 .2
The Teacher, by Rev. Robert Taylor, 1.50 .20
Theological and Miscellaneous Writings of Thomas Paine, 2.00 .24
Thomas Paine, or Pilgrimage in the Spirit World, .75 .08
The System of Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D' Holbach, 2.00 .24
The Psalms of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover, .50 .06
Boards cover, .75 .10
Cloth, 1.00 .16
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D. .20 .02
The Penetralia, by A. J. Davis, 2.00 .24
The Tah o, a Satirical Rhapsody, .75 .08
The Christian Drama Book, compiled from all languages, by P. B. Randolph, .50 .06
The Art of Conversation, 1.50 .16
The Arts of Writing, Reading, and Speaking, 1.50 .16
Undertalk on Mesmerism. Post-paid, 1.50
Unhappy Marriage, by A. B. Child, .20 .2
Unwelcome Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper, .50 .10
Cloth, .75 .12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow, .50 .06
Voices of Counties, .5 .2
Vital Force, how exerted and how preserved, by N. P. Miller, M. D. Paper, 50 cts; Cloth, 1.00 .12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Daru, .50 .6
What is Right, William Denton, .10 .2
What is spiritualism, and shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? by Mrs. M. M. King, .05
Whatever is, is Right, A. B. Child, M.D. 1.00 .16
Writings of Cicero, .75 .08
Wolf in sheep's Cloth'ng, or God in the Constitution. Moses Hull, .10 .02
Year Book of Spiritualism. Cloth, 1.25 .20
Paper, 1.00 .16

WE ARE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH all Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular rates, and, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as may be desired. If sent by mail, one fifth additional for postage on the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. In making remittances for books, buy postal orders when procurable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

H. SNOW,
319 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,
Keeps for sale the
RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,
And a general variety of
Spiritualist and Reform Books,
At Eastern prices. Also, O-ton's Anti-Tobacco Preparation, Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & co.'s Golden Pens, Planchettes, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. ☞ Remittances in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HANNAH SNOW, P. O. Box 137, San Francisco, Cal.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,
No. 614 NORTH FIFTH ST, ST. LOUIS, MO.,
Keep constantly on hand all the publications of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular liberal literature, including RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL and BANNER OF LIGHT, Magazines, Photographs, Parlor Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

PARKER'S
BREECH LOADING, DOUBLE BARRELED
SHOT-GUN
BEST IN THE WORLD.
PARKER BROTHERS, WEST MERIDEN, CONN.
SEND FOR A CIRCULAR
New York Office, 27 BEEKMAN ST.

THE MAGNETIC TREATMENT.
SEND THE CHIPS TO DR. ANDREW STONE, TROY N. Y., and obtain a large, highly illustrated book on the subject of curing disease, post-paid, by return mail.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

[illegible]

Night Passenger	3.30 p. m.	11.10 a. m.
Junction Passenger	5.30 p. m.	8.30 a. m.
Lombard Accommodation	6.10 p. m.	8.50 a. m.

Milwaukie Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukie Mail	5.00 a. m.	10.10 a. m.
Day Express	9.45 a. m.	4.30 p. m.
Evanston Accommodation	11.30 a. m.	2.30 p. m.
Rose Hill.
	1.30 p. m.	5.40 p. m.
	5.40 p. m.	7.40 p. m.
	6.10 p. m.	9.10 a.m.
		8.30 a. m.
		6.30 a. m.

Canal and Kinzie street.

	10.00 a. m.	7.15 p. m.
		6.30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Line.

Day Express	7.30 a. m.	7.40 p. m.
Night "	5.00 p. m.	6.30 a. m.

F. B. MOSES, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 56 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Railroad—Union Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office Lake st., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

	a. m.	9.05 p. m.
	9.02 a. m.	4.00 p. m.
	12.15 p. m.	10.00 a. m.
	2.00 p. m.	10.30 a. m.
	4.10 p. m.	12.00 m
		8.30 p. m.
		10.30 a. m.

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	9.00 a. m.	11.30 a. m.
Accommodation	4.30 p. m.	8.05 p. m.

HENRY C. WENTWORTH,
General Passenger Agent.

H. B. RAMSDEL, Gen'l Superint'endent, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Hinsdale Accommodation	7.45 a. m.	6.15 p. m.
Mail and Express	11.30 a. m.	3.40 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	11.45 a. m.	11.15 p. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	4.45 p. m.	6.30 p. m.
Mendota Passenger	4.30 p. m.	9.45 a. m.
Evening Express	6.00 p. m.	7.30 p. m.
Aurora Passenger	8.30 p. m.	8.30 a. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	6.15 p. m.	8.50 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	10.00 p. m.	11.30 a. m.

ROSSIE HOWES, Superintendent.
SAMUEL POWERS, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office in St. Cent. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	10.30 a. m.	7.45 p. m.
Cairo Express	10.15 p. m.	7.30 a. m.
Kankak Day Passenger	9.30 a. m.	7.45 p. m.
Kankak Night Passenger	5.30 p. m.	7.00 a. m.

On Saturdays this train will leave at 6.00 p. m.

Chicago Express	9.00 a. m.	9.30 a. m.
Hyde Park and Oak Woods	8.30 a. m.	7.40 a. m.
" " "	10.30 a. m.	9.30 a. m.
" " "	12.30 p. m.	11.30 a. m.
" " "	3.30 p. m.	2.15 p. m.
" " "	5.30 p. m.	4.15 p. m.
" " "	8.10 p. m.	7.00 p. m.

(St. Louis through Express.)

Day Express	9.30 a. m.	8.15 p. m.
Fast Line	10.30 p. m.	7.00 a. m.

M. L. ROCKEFF, Gen'l Supt.
W. P. JOHNSON, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

Wagon and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Madison and Canal Streets.

	8.30 a. m.	6.15 p. m.
	9.00 a. m.	6.00 a. m.
	5.15 p. m.	8.00 a. m.
	6.00 p. m.	7.30 a. m.
	66 Clark St.

Canal and Madison streets.

	9.15 a. m.	9.00 p. m.
	4.50 p. m.	9.35 a. m.
	12.35 p. m.	12.00 m.
	3.30 p. m.	2.30 p. m.
	7.30 p. m.	6.35 a. m.

*Sundays except. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and Sundays excepted. ‖Except Monday.

Kinzie Str., West Office, corner Market.

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, or Van Buren and Sherman Streets.

Pacific day Express	12.00 p.m.	12.15 p.m.
Fast Line—Accommodation	4.30 p.m.	4.45 p.m.
Pacific Night Express	12.00 p.m.	7.30 a.m.

An elegant parlor sleeping car is attached to the 10 a. m. train, running through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

E. H. SANFORD, Gen'l Passenger Agent.
R. ST. JOHN, Gen'l Ticket Clerk.
P. A. HALE, Asst'l Gen Superintendent.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

Cincinnati Express	9.05 a. m.	5.40 p. m.
Columbus Express	9.05 a. m.	9.30 p. m.
Cincinnati Night Express	11.45 p. m.	6.30 p. m.
Columbus Night Express	11.45 p. m.
Logansport Accommodation	4.00 p. m.	9.35 a. m.

H. B. SHAW, Gen'l Pass. Agt. Tabot Office Corner Randolph and Dearborn streets.

Goodrich's Passenger Steamers.

For Milwaukee and West Shore ports *daily at 9.00 a. m.
For Grand Haven and East Shore ports *daily at 7.00 p. m.
For St Joseph and Benton Harbor, *daily at 10 a. m.
Green Bay Ports, Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 p. m.

*Sundays excepted. †Mondays excepted. ‡Saturdays excepted.

CHRISTIANITY.

ITS ORIGIN, NATURE AND TENdency considered in the light of Astro-Theology.

By D. W. Hull.

THIS book is, so far as it goes, a thorough review of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plantation from ancient heathens. Being unlike almost any other work ever written on the subject, it cannot but be deeply interesting to all. Its explanations of Scripture are bold, and so self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.

, For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office.

Price at retail, 20 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding the laws of the Fu[illegible] of

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR PSYCHOMETRIC RESEARCHES AND DISCOVERIES. By William and Elizabeth M. F. Denton.

This valuable and highly interesting work has become a part of the standard literature of the country.

Price, $1.50cts, Postage, 20cts.

LECTURES ON GEOLOGY, THE PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR PLANET. A valuable scientific work.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

COMMON SENSE THOUGHTS ON THE BIBLE. For Common Sense people. Twelfth thousand, revised and enlarged.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

THE DELUGE, IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

WHAT IS RIGHT. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

BE THYSELF. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

For sale at THE RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL Office.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW WORKS BY PROF. DENTON.

"ORTHODOXY FALSE,
Since Spiritualism is True."

Price, 10 cents: postage, 2 cents.

THE IRRECONCILABLE RECORDS, OR GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

160 pages. Price: paper, 25 cents, postage, 4 cts cloth, 60 cents, postage 12 cts.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

CONJUGAL SINS
AGAINST THE
LAWS OF LIFE AND HEALTH,
AND
THEIR EFFECT ON THE FATHER MOTHER AND CHILD.

BY AUGUSTUS K. GARDNER, A. M., M. D.

Late Professor of Diseases of Females and Chemical Medical Midwifery in the New York Medical College.

CONTENTS.

I. The Modern Women—Sexual Physical Deterioration. II. Local diseases in children and its cause. III. At what age should one Marry. IV. Is Continence physically injurious. Personal Pollution. V. The injurious results of Physical Excess. VII. Methods used to prevent Conception and their consequences VIII. Infanticide. IX Conjugal relations during the period of Menstruation. X. Conjugal relations between the old. XI. Marriage between Old Men and Young Girls XII What may be done With Health in View, and the Dearof God before us. Appendix.

Price in cloth, $1.50. postage 16 cents; in paper, $1.00, Postage 8 cents. The Trade Supplied.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 and 189 So. Clark St., Chicago Ill.

THE FUTURE LIFE

As Described and Portrayed by Spirits.

Through Mrs. Elizabeth Sweet.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY
JUDGE J. W. EDMONDS.

CONTENTS.

Chapter I—The Holy City.
Chapter II—Spiritual Message.
Chapter III—The Spir t Echo.
Chapter IV—Powers and Responsibilities of Mind
Chapter V—Communication from a Spirit.
Chapter VI—Spirit life.
Chapter VII—A picture of the Future.
Chapter VIII—Margaret Fuller.
Chapter IX—Swedenborg's Wife.
Chapter X—Interview with Pollock.
Chapter XI—New Desires.
Chapter XII—John C. Calhoun.
Chapter XIII—Interview with Webster.
Chapter XIV—A Second Visit.
Chapter XV—Another Interview.
Chapter XVI—Reformation.
Chapter XVII—Spheres of Progression.
Chapter XVIII—Valley of the Shadow of Death.
Chapter XIX—A Mirror.
Chapter XX—The Book of Life.
Chapter XXI—A Beautiful Lesson.
Chapter XXII—Retrospection.
Chapter XXIII—The Medium.
Chapter XXIV—The Preacher.
Chapter XXV—Reception of Spiritualism.
Chapter XXVI—The Drunkard.
Chapter XXVII—The Organ-Boy
Chapter XXVIII—The Man of Ease and Fashion.
Chapter XXIX—The Self Satisfied.
Chapter XXX—Natural Development of the Soul.
Chapter XXXI—Voltaire and Wolsey.
Chapter XXXII—The Cynic.
Chapter XXXIII—The Second Birth.
Chapter XXXIV—The Rivers.
Chapter XXXV—The Queen.
Chapter XXXVI—A Scene in Spirit-Land.
Chapter XXXVII—The Miser.
Chapter XXXVIII—Spiritual Influence.
Chapter XXXIX—The New City.
Chapter XL—The Erring One.
Chapter XLI—The Miser.
Chapter XLII—The Beggar.
Chapter XLIII—Insignificance of Man.
Chapter XLIV—Capabilities of the soul.
Chapter XLV—The Skeptic.
Chapter XLVI—Realities of Spirit-Life.
Chapter XLVII—The Convict.
Chapter XLVIII—The Soul's Aspiration.
Chapter XLIX—The Dying Girl.
Chapter L—The Inner Temple.
Chapter LI—The Foolish Mother.
Chapter LII—The Disobedient Son.
Chapter LIII—Cardinal Richelieu.
Chapter LIV—Practical Nature of Spirit-Life.
Chapter LV—Glimpse of a Higher Life.
Chapter LVI—Communication.
Chapter LVII—A Word from Voltaire.
Chapter LVIII—Home of Unhappy Spirits.
Chapter LIX—Experience of Voltaire.
Appendix.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.
For sale at this office.

LYCEUM GUIDE,

A Collection of
SONGS, HYMNS, AND CHANTS,
Lessons, Readings and Recitations,
MARCHES AND CALISTHENICS,
(With Illustrations,)
TOGETHER WITH
Programmes and Exercises,
The Whole Designed for the Use of PROGRESSIVE SUNDAY LYCEUMS.

By J. M. Peebles, J. O Barrett, and Emma Tuttle.
The Musical Department by J. G. Clark.

THIS NEW BOOK FOR SUNDAY LYCEUMS contains all the excellent features of previous works, with such improvements as the practical experience of Lyceums during the past six years have suggested.

Its appendix contains a large number of letters from Conductors of Lyceums and friends of the Institution. It is interesting to beneficial influences, and giving much valuable information pertaining thereto.

This book is complete in every particular, and is illustrated with THIRTY FINE ENGRAVINGS of Banners, Emblematic Standards for Groups, Calisthenics, &c.

PRICE—In paper cover, 60 cents; postage, six cents. In boards, neat, strong, and durable, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In cloth, extra, gold lettered sides, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. From which prices liberal discount will be made on quantities for Lyceums.

39,308 CURES
BY THE
POSITIVE & NEGATIVE POWDERS.

IN the following list, the total number of cures of different diseases, which have been performed by the Great Spiritual Remedy, PROF. SPENCE'S POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE POWDERS, is indicated by the figures which follow the name of the disease. The kind of Powders which should be used in each disease is indicated by the letters "P" or "N" or "P & N," which follow, the name of the disease; "P" standing for Positive, "N" for Negative; and "P & N" for Positive and Negative.

Neuralgia, P, 2,137; Dyspepsia, P, 2,976; Asthma, P, 2,215; Catarrh, P, 967; Chills and Fever, P & N, 2,419; Rheumatism, P, 1,870; Painful Menstruation, P, 1,497; Suppressed Menstruation, P, 934; Female Weaknesses, P, 1,561; Fever, P, 2,366; Amaurosis (Blindness), N, 56; Coughs and Colds, P, 1,789; Heart Disease, P, 458; Diarrhœa, P, 1,114; Headache, P, 1,841; Dysentery, P, 1,562; Liver Complaint, P, 100; Pains and Aches, P, 961; Deafness, N, 58; Bronchitis, P, 825; Piles, P, 218; Chalic, P, 112; Worms, P, 380; Inflammation, P, 971; Fevralgia, P, 74; Acidity of the Stomach, P, 520; Earache, P, 446; Toothache, P, 305; Flatulence, P, 260; Hysteria, P, 54; Dipheria, P, 91; Spermatorrhœa, P, 1,000; Nervousness, P, 961; Erysipelas, P, 962; Constipation, P, 896; Loss of Taste and Loss of Smell, N, 32; Nervousness, P, 672; St. Vitus' Dance, P, 23; Disease of Prostate Gland, P, 23; Sciatica, P, 91; Bleeding, P, 1,469; Tumors and Cancers, P, 25; Falling of Womb, P, 817; Involuntary Urination, N, 18; Influenza, P, 276; Dumb Ague, P & N, 501; Scrofula and Scrofulous Sore Eyes, P, 573; Typhoid and Typhus Fever, N, 434; Kidney Disease, P, 571; Miscellaneous Diseases, such as Fever Sores, P; Sore Eyes, P; Convulsions, P; Fits, P; Diabetes, P; Cholera, P; Cramps, P; Consumption P; Croup, P; Diseases of the Skin, P; Gout, P; Insanity, P; Jaundice, P; Threatened Abortion, P; Quinsy, P, 49; Erysipelas, P.

BUY THE POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE POWDERS of Druggists and Agents, or else send your money for them to PROF. SPENCE, at his risk; sending all sums of five dollars or more in the form of Money Orders, Drafts, or else in a Registered Letter.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE.

| MAILED POSTPAID AT TH

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

Bible Spiritualism.

DEAR SIR:—Will you please send us a few copies of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. And if convenient, I should like for you to give, through the medium of the same, Bible proofs that Spiritualism is true.

Dr. ANDREW MOON.

Brookway Center, St. Clair Co., Mich.

This letter speaks for itself, and it is a fair specimen of hundreds that we are continually receiving.

We do not think the Bible belongs to the Christian churches, but properly to the Spiritualists; and yet we do not need it to prove man as immortal being; on the contrary, the Bible does require Spiritualism to prove its truths.

Dr. Moon is evidently hungry for spiritual food,—is not satisfied with the Bible, hence calls on us to prove our principles by that authority which is not satisfactory to him. Well, brother, we will give you a few quotations from the Bible.

Read the 12th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, and you will find an account of the dying and untying feats, the movement of considerable matter, as well as spiritual knockings, referred to.

Read the 12th chapter of I. Corinthians, and every phase of Modern Spiritualism is fully described.

In the 14th chapter of I. Corinthians, not only speaking in unknown tongues is described, but fully endorsed, and in the 7th verse we are told—"And even things without life giving sound, whether pipe or harp, (or bell or horn, or rape on tables or piano fortes) except they give a distinction in the sound, how shall it be known what is piped or harped," or rapped on the table, or played on the accordeon?

In the 13th chapter of Hebrews, 2nd verse, we are told: "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

We cannot understand what the Apostle means in this text, unless it is that angels, once man, as strangers, are travelers on this earth, and frequently call on us for entertainment. It is an important text, and worthy of due reflection. (Item for settled speakers: Are these strangers referred to in this text itinerant or settled speakers?)

In I. Corinthians, 14 h chapter, 23 I verse, I read: "And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets."

We would have written it in text as follows: "And the prophets are subject to the spirits of the prophets,"—for we do not believe that we control the spirits, but that, on the contrary, they, the spirits, control us.

In the 16 n chapter of St. Luke, we find that Abraham, the rich man, and the beggar, meet, after death and have a long conversation on matters of former and present life, and this was told by one not yet a spirit.

In the 9th chapter of St. Luke, and in the 16th chapter of St. Matthew, we find the immortal Moses and Elias talking with Jesus and seen by Peter, James and John. These are very common occurrences among our modern mediums and seers. Is it Spiritualism?

In the 1st chapter of Revelations, 18 h verse, we read: "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore. Amen." If this is not one who once lived in the flesh and died and found that death was but a change from one life to another life, from one world to another, with power to return, then we know nothing of testimony.

In connection with this verse, read the 1st, 2d, 9th, 10 h 11th, 12 h, and 17 h verses of the same chapter; also the 7th to the 13th verse of the 23 I chapter of Revelations.

Brother Moor, these are but a few out of the Bible. Surely should we go to the Jew for that which we have in heaven's own light at first hand and with ourselves. Our God is a good Father, and if you seek him he will be found of you, and his angel strangers may become your guests.

Sister Laura Cuppy Smith in Chicago.

We heard brave words and true, spoken by this sister, in Jackson Hall, on Sunday, July 30 h, 1871, to a beggarly audience of sixty persons in the morning and fifty-six persons in the evening.

We took up the Sunday engagement for the 30 h, on purpose to hear our sister, expecting to see the house full; but found it empty! Why? We ask again—why? Because the Spiritualists of Chicago favored settled speakers; because children ruled instead of men of sound sense; because many of the would-be leaders slunk back to crucify the mediums of the cause of God; because the Present Age declared to the world, "Now, what we want is to get rid of all such as give tests in public;" because all the leaders of the cause have neglected their professions, and become lukewarm.

We looked every paper through for an advertisement of Sister Smith's meetings, and looked in vain. We inquired of every police officer and intelligent looking man, for Spiritual meetings, and the vacant stare and strange look manifested said at once. "We know nothing of it." Finally we found Jackson Hall—a very pleasant one, and capable of seating 300 persons, if closely packed.

Then came the lecture—true and noble words full of soul-thought, fresh from the fount of love and truth. Why will you not come out and sustain this true and noble sister in her efforts to redeem our cause out of the hands of the false, the untrue, the faithless, and all who are opposed to the advancement of true Spiritualism. Brave little woman, work on. Stand for the right, and alone you will be more strong than with the world to back you in the wrong.

Spiritualists, will you let our brave little sister starve in your midst, or will you on to her support and maintain her in her noble work?

BIRD (OF SETTLED SPEAKERS):

Spiritualism in Cobdenster, Battle Creek, Detroit, and Kalamazoo, Mich.; Cincinnati, Cleveland, New York, Painesville, Ohio; Chicago, Rockford, Belvidere, Havana, Waukegan, Ill.; Troy Rochester, Buffalo, and other places in New York; St. Louis and Hannibal in Missouri.

BIRDS OF AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF SPIRITUALISTS:

Providence, R. I.; Rochester, N. Y.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Richmond, Ind., and we tremble for progress of Troy. It may be the death-bell will toll the requiem of your death in April, 1872,— [illegible]ARTURE" IN SPIRITUALISM.

[illegible] delegates from any place where [illegible] Spiritualists are willing to send a [illegible]de the call of the A. A. S.

—Thank God for tonsils! Too head, heart, and stomachless of mankind would have long since gone hopelessly to sleep, were it not for a few of them.

The Late Michigan Love-Feast.

The moral philosopher of the New York Tribune has been remarking as follows:

The town of Hillsdale, in Michigan, has recently enjoyed a scene of hysterical interest, which affords a singular mixture of French sentimentality and Yankee mysticism. The Rev. E. H. Whipple, who bears the honorable titles of clergyman, father of family, and professor of belle lettres in the college at Hillsdale, has been relieving the monotony of his collegiate and sacerdotal functions by an intimacy with the wife of one of the deacons, to whose honorable name we will give no further publicity.

Of course, the liaison could not long be hidden in a little town where there are tired eyes at every window, and where every visit is carefully observed and estimated by neighbors across the way. Circumstance favored the busy research of malicious eyes; the relations between the parson and the deacon's wife became the subject of remark, and the secret sin seemed intolerable to the professor, when set in the light of his townsmen's countenances. So one Sunday evening, after services were over, he asked a number of the prominent church-members to remain, and read to them a confession which would have been impossible to any man not crazed with morbid vanity and a constant brooding over his own mental processes. He acknowledged his intimacy with the unfortunate lady he had misled, and said he made this confession in the interest of his imperiled salvation. He then invited three of his parishioners to go with him to the house of the outraged deacon, and there repeated the humiliating confession. The injured husband received the avowal with christian magnanimity. The whole company joined in prayer. The wronger and the wronged shook hands in token of forgiveness, and the next morning the deacon and his wife left Hillsdale.

The penitent professor remains, and receives a large share of public sympathy for his humble truthfulness.

There are people who seem really to admire this sort of exhibition, degrading and unwholesome as it is. They say it is better to act in this way than for husband and seducer to shoot and stab each other. But, in admitting this, it is not necessary to say that these shocking and deleterious scandals are needed or laudable. There is danger to the character of excitable young people, in elevating into an attitude of moral heroism this unsavory performance of Mr. Whipple. It was an act of intense and irredeemable falsehood. He had pretended upon his sin until he feared the flames of perdition in case he did not confess publicly. He chose to blast the character and the peace of a respectable family who had shown him great favor, rather than put his own salvation in jeopardy. A manly man or an honest friend would not have yielded to this spiritual cowardice. He would have forsaken and forswornin his crime, settling his account with God in earnest penitence, and trusting to true repentance and good works to blot out his sin. He had no right to destroy the innocent man who had befriended him and the erring woman who had trusted him on any such pitiful plea that only in that way he could escape hell. The fear of physical hell is no excuse for flinching from earthly duties, and the fear of damnation will never excuse an act of meanness and treachery. Mr. Whipple may learn some day that his craven confession was as bad as his sin.

The most singular detail of these attacks of mystical sensuality is the unhealthy craving for excitement and desire for publicity they evince. It would greatly shock Mr. Whipple and his sympathizers to hear that the person was guided in part by the same motives that induce the bar-room habit to tell of his conquests, and the school-girl to print her sentimental verses in the county paper. He felt an irresistible temptation to take the whole community into his intimate confidence. The operations of his own mind and heart, the struggles of his soul, seemed to him matters of such infinite importance that the order and decency of the day in which he lived ought to be sacrificed to the pleasure of discussing them. What other feeling had Casanova and Lauzun in writing those scandalous memoirs which have blushed the name of hundreds of females? What else was it that drove Rousseau to that frightfully truthful exposition of his diseased fancies and sinful life? The world has no concern with the state of any man's spiritual pasture. Each must work his own salvation. The morbid exercises of our neighbor's hearts are not of much practical benefit to us. The really valuable autobiographies, such as Gibbon's and Franklin's, are those which tell us what the narrators did, and how they did it; not how they loved and prayed and suffered.

If there is any moral to be drawn from this Hillsdale scandal, it is one which the sentimental penitent probably never suspected; and that is, that there is no such thing as honor among paramours, and sooner or later, either under pressure of fear, hate, vanity, or remorse, those who have the weakness to sin will have the weakness to blab.

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled THE SUNDAY QUESTION, and SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.

This work consists of 123 large, closely printed pages. It is an exhaustive review of the so-called Sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of twenty-five cents, together with the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL to any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we will send the same work and the JOURNAL for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the JOURNAL three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the JOURNAL will avail him or herself of this generous offer, and thus secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street Chicago, Ill.

☞ We are in want of dues for the JOURNAL. When it is not convenient to pay all, let us have a part, as an earnest of a good will. Make up! we are in earnest.

READ the advertisement of that most wonderful work, JESUS OF NAZARETH.

—Many people estimate their importance from the high eminence of their pride.

—A knave is a dishonest fool.

Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote.

The most certain and perfectly harmless antidote for the poisonous effects, and remedy for the tobacco appetite, is known by the above name.

It is compounded by Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated medium of Chicago, while entranced by a celebrated chemist, long in spirit life. This antidote is warranted to break the habit of using tobacco by the inveterate lover of the weed, when the directions (in each box) are followed.

Agents for selling the same throughout the country are wanted. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office. Price $2.00 per box—sent by mail free of postage, on receipt of the money.

Grove Meeting in Wisconsin.

At Reidsburg, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 26th and 27th.

Speakers, Dr. H. C. Dunn, J. O. Barrett, and Mrs. Mattie Hunt Parry.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

[NEW EDITION]

THE

BIOGRAPHY OF SATAN:

Or, an Historical Exposition

OF THE

DEVIL AND HIS FIERY DOMINIONS.

Disclosing the Oriental Origin of the Belief in a DEVIL and Future ENDLESS PUNISHMENT. Also the Pagan Origin of the Scriptural terms, BOTTOMLESS PIT, LAKE OF FIRE AND BRIMSTONE, KEYS OF HELL, CHAINS OF DARKNESS, CASTING OUT DEVILS, EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT, THE WORM THAT NEVER DIES, ETC., ETC.

By K. Graves.

CONTENTS.

CHAP.

Address to the Reader.

1. Evils and demoralizing effects of the doctrine of endless punishment.
2. Ancient traditions respecting the origin of belief in the Devil.
3. A wicked Devil and an endless Hell not taught in the Jewish Scriptures.
4. Explanation of the words "Devils" and "Hell" in the Old Testament.
5. God (and not the Devil) the author of evil according to the Bible.
6. God and the Devil originally twin-brothers, and known by the same titles.
7. Origin of the terms, "Kingdom of Heaven," "Gates of Hell," etc., also of the traditions respecting the Dragon chasing the woman (see Rev. 12), the woman clothed with the sun, etc.
8. Hell first instituted in the skies. Its origin and descent from above.
9. Origin of the tradition respecting "the bottomless pit."
10. Origin of the belief in a "Lake of fire and brimstone."
11. Where is Hell—ancient notions respecting its character and origin.
12. Origin of the idea of man's evil thoughts and actions being prompted by a Devil.
13. The Christian's Devil—where imported or borrowed from.
14. The vast as retributive terms of the Bible shown to be of Oriental origin.
15. The doctrine of future after-death punishment proved to be of heathen and priestly origin—being traced to its invention by ancient Pagan priests.

Conclusion—One hundred and sixty-three questions for believers in post mortem punishment.

—:o:—

This little work is deserving of and is receiving a very large sale and extended circulation.

Price, 35 cents; postage, 2 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the publishers, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Publishing House, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

James Brooks,

The Great Developing Medium, will send printed instructions, which never fail to develop in full those who have any mediumistic powers. Send for them at once. Test four spiritual gifts. Inclose two dollars.

Address 806 S. Clark st, Chicago.

v10 n19 tf

THE PSALMS OF LIFE,

A COMPILATION OF

PSALMS,
HYMNS, ANTHEMS,
CHANTS,
ETC.,

Embodying the Spiritual, Progressive, and Reformatory Sentiments of the Present Age. By John S. Adams.

This work has been compiled with special reference to the large and increasing demand for a volume expressing the sentiments and views of the advanced minds of the present time, and meeting the requirements of every species of Reform. It is entirely free of Sectarianism, of all the theological dogmas of the past and fully recognizes the progress and elevation of Spirit, in every condition of life on earth.

This book contains five hundred and twenty-two choice Selections of Poetry, with suitable Music on each page from Handel, Hadyn, Mozart and Other Distinguished Composers.

It combines the advantages of "Hymn" and "Tune" Book. It is prefaced with a Classification of Subjects, and Complete Indexes of First Lines, Tunes and Metres; and being of convenient size, is generally accepted as the Standard Music Book of Spiritualism, Radicalism and General Reform.

alike desirable for the LECTURE-ROOM and the HOME CIRCLE OF THE PEOPLE.

"I think there is in the book I think I ought to say a great truly spiritual poetry than in soever, whatever the size of the

[illegible]

PRICE [illegible]
Postage, 16 [illegible]

☞ For Sale at the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL BOOK STORE,

187 and 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

v9n13 tf.

ABRIDGED EDITION

OF THE

SPIRITUAL HARP,

PRICE—$1.50. Postage 16 cents. For sale at the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE,

187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

[illegible]EPH OF WASH[illegible]S DANSKIN, ESQ., PRESIDENT of the First Spiritualist Congregation of Salt Lake, to [illegible] 10 cents; postage, 2 cents. [illegible] [illegible]

[THIRD EDITION, REVISED AND CORRECTED.]

JUST PUBLISHED!

A Complete and Truthful History of that Good Man and

PRINCE OF MEDIUMS,

Jesus of Nazareth

BY

PAUL AND JUDAS,

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most

REMARKABLE WORK

in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, Paul and Judas, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, usurping all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely-printed pages.

PRICE, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St. Chicago.

HERMES MERCURIUS TRISMEGISTUS:

(Tat Maximus! King of Egypt! MELCHISEDEC!)

HIS DIVINE PYMANDER.

His First Book; Pymander—The Spirit from the Far Heaven: The Holy Sermon; The Key; That God is not Manifest, and yet Most Manifest; God; The Song; Truth; The Creater; The Divine Mind.

This most ancient and glorious book ought to be in the house of every Christian, moral and religious person in the land—especially ministers. Also all the doubters, doubters, infidels, and sceptics, for it contains what can nowhere else be found. This rare and superb volume also contains the world famed, absolutely strange—the singular and secondless belief and secret doctrines of the Rosicrucians, Alchemists, Hermetists and other illuminati. Also translations from the Vedas; Brahm; the Song of Brahm; and the Smaragdine Tablets.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE.

IT COSTS

Only about one third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Aiderton's Handy Books Binder. Sizes suited to any publication, from the smallest Pamphlet to the largest weekly. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both styles and binders. Size for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 18; price $1.20 and $1.50. Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ROSICRUCIA!!!

THE ROAD TO POWER!! SEXUAL SCIENCE! P. B. Dowd's Private Lectures to Ladies and Gentlemen. A pamphlet of 60 pages, containing price-lists, ideas, and advice invaluable to the afflicted in the cure of manhood. Price 50 cents. For sale by the author, P. B. Dowd, Davenport, Iowa.

v20 n15 tf.

DR. S. L. MCFADDEN AND WIFE, MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN, Spiritual Test Medium, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 848 W. Madison St., corner of MAY, up stairs, Chicago.

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law unto themselves,—to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors and preachers. All Mediums are invited to attend free of charge. The Contradictions of the Bible, Lying Spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of disease, and private consultation, from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n15 13t

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services.

v9 n8 tf

AGENTS! READ THIS!

WE WILL PAY AGENTS A SALARY OF $30 per week and expenses, or allow a large commission, to sell our new and wonderful inventions. Address M. WAGNER & Co., Marshall, Mich.

v9n25tf.

813 RACE ST.

M. H. STODDARD, of 813 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, can accommodate MEDIUMS visiting that city with first-class rooms for business purposes, at reasonable rates.

v10n13 tf

ABSTRACT OF

COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was composed by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets, from 1100 to 624 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 64 pages. Price 25 cents. AMERICAN NEWS Co., N. Y.

v10 n9 3m

BELVIDERE SEMINARY,

FOR YOUTHS OF BOTH SEXES,

Belvidere New Jersey. Fall Term begins Wednesday, Sept. 13th. One of the most liberal institutions in the land, being strictly non-sectarian. It has the superior advantages of a healthful and beautiful location, added to the comforts and genial influences of a pleasant home, with excellent opportunities for obtaining a practical education in any or all of its several departments, English, Classical, Literary, and Scientific. Pupils graduate in some departments in Gymnastics.

For circulars, address, Miss BUSH, Principals.

v10 n17 3t.

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large PROFITS to AGENTS. Send stamp for Circular. C. E. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 24, No. 151 Lassie St., Chicago.

v10 n13 tf

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Dico hominem æternum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN HELMONT.

—:o:—

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS.

The most safe, salutatory, and efficient Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance), Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Test or trial packages mailed free for 20 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 711 H St., Washington, D. C.

v10 n11 tf

THE

HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF

M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,

AND WRITTEN BY

PROF. WM. F. LYON.

—:o:—

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"This book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth.

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of vital interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"If spiritualists, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"The central idea contained in the following work, and the one to which most of these chapters are dedicated to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is entirely habitable, and is already occupied by different species that may be found in the unexplored open Polar Sea, and this opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from the shores of Asia to those of America, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail or steam either way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two habitable sides of one."

13 no., 447 pp. Price $2 00; postage 20 cents.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1758 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE

BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON.

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskreet, or ancient language of the Brahmins

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original, and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is print-d on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago

LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS

OR THE

WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSE

REVEALED TO MAN.

The Medium, in his address to the public says:

The Medium (David Corless, of Huntley's Grove McHenry Co., Ill.,) through whom this work was given, has been a careful observer of the phenomena of "Modern Spiritualism" for over twenty years and during that time he has been the humble Medium through which hundreds of Philosophical and scientific lectures have been given to attentive listeners. Of himself, he can only say he is an uneducated farmer, far advanced in years. He asks for this work a careful and attentive perusal.

The Introduction entitled "The Unveiling," treats of man as the grand objective ultimate of Life's Unfoldings.

He also stands at the pinnacle of all organized Life in the native parlor of all things.

On page twenty-four, the author treats of "the way mediums paint likenesses, in the true order of the development of the arts and sciences.

In part second, under the general head of mysteries revealed, the author treats of "How Mankind Manifest their presence through Physical Bodies of Mediums. How the writing is done. How we influence Mediums to speak. The fullness of all kinds of language investigated. The ring test and the carrying of Musical Instruments around the room explained."

This work is really got up and consists of seventy-three closely printed pages and we hesitate not to say that it contains more original thought upon important subjects, a few only of which we have enumerated, than any other work of equal size we have seen.

 Price 50 cents; postage, 5 cents. For sale wholesale and retail by the publishers, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago.

THE

Descent of Man,

AND

Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 600 pp. each. Price $2.50 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

EXPRESS!

THE "EXPRESS" and other Rubber Goods, FOR

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send stamp for circulars. Address "EXPRESS" Co. 180 Clark St., Room 19 Chicago

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL

HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY

THE ARTS AND SCIENCES, LITERATURE, ROMANCE AND GENERAL REFORM

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause: she only asks a hearing. [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR. CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 2, 1871. VOL. X.—NO. 24.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Official Report of the Fifth Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania State Society of Spiritualists, held at Washington Hall, Philadelphia, August 16, 1871.

[Reported for the Journal by Henry T. Child, M. D.]

In the absence of the President, Mrs. Eliza L. Washburn was called to the chair. The call for the meeting was then read by the secretary, Dr. Henry T. Child.

A resolution was adopted to appoint three committees, one on resolutions, one on nominations and one on finance.

The following appointments were made by the chair:

Committee on Resolutions—Mrs. Elizabeth Beale, chairman; Mrs. Annie Bilston, Henry M. Twining.

On motion, Dr. Child was added to the above committee.

Committee on Nominations—Ellen M. Child, Sarah N. Ely, J. Jefferson Reilly.

Committee on Finance—Lydia A. Schofield, Anna M. Lowerie, Mrs. Mann.

The secretary read

THE FIFTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE PENNSYLVANIA STATE SOCIETY OF SPIRITUALISTS.

Again, in the rolling circle of another year, it becomes our duty to present an account of our labors in the great work of enlightening the world by the diffusion of knowledge in all departments of man's nature, giving him a better understanding of his spiritual as well as material universe, but of himself and his destiny.

We know that Spiritualism is spreading its benign influence over all lands, and awakening a deeper and more profound interest,—not only in regard to man's conditions in the future life, but those of the present also. Our society, though small in numbers, stands forth as the representative of a great state, in which there are many Spiritualists scattered all over its wide domain. We regret that there is such general apathy in regard to organization, even for the simplest purposes and with very few restraints. Our labors as a society, have been limited because our means were not sufficient to employ missionaries, and sustain our publications as we desire. At the same time, we have evidence that the cause in which we have enlisted is making constant and rapid progress, and that large numbers of persons are being convinced of the fundamental principles of Spiritualism. The demand for lecturers and test mediums is constantly increasing, and we know that new mediums are being developed, and the manifestations are not only more numerous, but more satisfactory than at any former period. Spiritualism is assuming a much higher position than it has ever had before, and is commanding the respect of the thoughtful minds in the community.

The press which has heretofore been disposed to sneer at and ridicule this subject, is either silent or disposed to give fair statements of the facts and phenomena that occur. The literature of the day is presenting food for the public mind on this great subject. At our last annual meeting, an effort was made to bring the various local societies to co-operate with us, and for an auxiliaries in the great missionary work. We hope this object may yet be attained.

The great obstacle to our success is the want of funds to enable us to put into the field active and enterprising missionaries. Our earnest and faithful missionary, Hannah T. Stearns, found it necessary to recuperate for a season, and in January last, she wrote: "I feel it best, for this season, to close my labors for the society." From her reports, it appears that, during the portion of the year she was engaged with us, she gave eighty-eight lectures to about ten thousand five hundred persons.

By the reports of Dr. H. T. Child, who is also a missionary, it appears that he has given one hundred and fifty-eight lectures to about sixteen thousand persons. We have distributed through our missionaries over six thousand papers, most of which have been donated to the society by members.

From the treasurer's report, it appears that we have received during the past year and up to the 1st of August, subscriptions as follows:

Robert Lamborn	$2.50
Ellen Leamore	2.00
Clementina G. John	1.00
George Custon	1.00
O. B. Peirce	1.00
Sarah Ely	1.00
Henry T. Child, M. D.	1.00
Ellen M. Child	5.00
Lydia A. Schofield	1.00
Anna M. Lowerie	1.00
Elizabeth M. Beale	1.00
J. C. Pearce	1.00
Francis Knight	1.00
Elizabeth Conroy	1.00
Hannah Beale	1.00
Judah Hussey	1.00
Ann Brown	1.00
Sarah Ely	1.00
Caroline A. Grieve	2.00
S. Nicola Shumway	1.00
A. Mary Wise	1.00
Mary Beaver	1.00
David Seeley	1.00
James M. Shumway	1.00
Harriet C. Chase	1.00
Joseph John	1.00
Mary A. Stretch	1.00
Wm. H. Jones	1.00
Peter Snyder	1.00
John Adams	1.00
David Stevenson	1.00
G. E. Long	1.00
John F. Kapp	1.00
William and Stephen and Penny Badger	1.00
Wm. H. Evans	1.00
T. S. Johnson	1.00
Mrs. Silvia Johnson	1.00
Wm. Jones	1.00
Ellen Appleton	1.00
Silvia Thompson	1.00
Harriet Long	1.00
Mary Ann Gould	1.00
James Kirk	1.00
Sarah Kirk	1.00
Total	$ 83.00
Collections at meetings	$710 87
Balance in treasury last year	11.91
Total receipts	$804.16
We have expended:
In payment of missionaries	$710.51
Expenses of Annual Meeting	35 16
Total expenditures	$795.67
Bal. in Treasury	8.49
	$804.16

On motion, the report was accepted, and directed to be printed in the proceedings of the meeting.

The Committee on Nominations reported the following named persons for the respective offices, and they were elected:

President, Eliza L. Washburn.

Vice-Presidents, John F. Knapp, Sunbury; Ebenezer Hines, Bucks County.

Secretary, H. T. Child, M. D.

Treasurer, James M. Shumway.

Board, Henry Breneman, Harrisburg; Anna Lowerie, Philadelphia; John S. Isett, Spruce Creek; Mary Evans, Philadelphia; Elizabeth Beale, Philadelphia; Joseph Potts, Harrisburg; John Ely, Reading; John S. Adams, Susquehanna County; Edward Brown, York; William R. Evans, Carversville; Dr. Fetherolf, Tamaqua; Harriet Fowler, Titusville; Reuben Lunt, Cory; William Fleming, Pittsburgh; Rebecca Granda, Bucks County; Frederick Gumpert, Altoona; David Heyard, Chester Valley; Sarah Kirk, Phoenville, Bucks County; Ellen M. Child, Philadelphia; Dr. D. T. Kirby, Wilkesbarre; H. W. Marsh, Bloomsburg; E. Meyers, York; Mary A. Stretch, Bucks County; Lydia A. Schofield, Philadelphia; S. M. Shumway, Philadelphia; Elizabeth Bayley, Philadelphia; Joseph John, Philadelphia; Clementina G. John, Philadelphia; Dr. J. T. Aiken, Blooming Valley.

The Committee on Resolutions reported the following, which were read, and, after remarks by Dr. H. T. Child, Jacob L. Passon, J. Jefferson Reilly, B. F. Richardson, (Child medium) and Moses Hall, they were adopted.

WHEREAS, Spiritualism, as a religion and philosophy, is a joint work of spirits out of the body and in it, and

WHEREAS, The unparalleled spread of this system marks an era in the world more significant than any other that history has presented; therefore

Resolved, That as the introduction of modern Spiritualism was naturally and beautifully through the physical manifestations, awaking an interest on the mental and spiritual planes of man's nature, and bringing forth evidences adapted to the wants of these planes, therefore we recognize that the course which has hitherto so successfully marked the progress of this cause is the one best adapted to carry it forward.

Resolved, That we believe that Spiritualists will best promote this cause by co-operating with wise and good spirits in the introduction of the various forms of manifestations.

Resolved, That as mediums in all ages have been the instruments through which spirits have made themselves and the cause known to humanity, therefore we consider it to be the duty of all Spiritualists to endeavor to protect and promote the welfare of mediums.

Resolved, That while we would discountenance all frauds and deception, we believe it is a truth that, "Whatsoever ye seek ye shall find," and those who go to mediums determined to find deception, will seldom fail, while the honest seeker after truth has nothing to fear.

Resolved, That we rejoice in the evidence of the vast increase of power on the part of spirits to produce manifestations, and also to render them more positive and unmistakable, and that the very general diffusion of these refutes the supposition of some, that the manifestations are diminishing and are about to cease.

Resolved, That we rejoice in the change of the tone of the press in regard to the manifestations of spirits, and that, in answer to public opinion, it is presenting frequent and fair accounts of these.

Resolved, That the president is requested to appoint a finance committee, consisting of one or more persons from each county in the state, whose duty it shall be to collect funds and subscriptions for this society, also, to furnish a list of Spiritualists in their respective localities.

The president appointed the following:

Dr. Henry T. Child, Anna Lowerie, Mary Beale, of Philadelphia; Mary A. Stretch, Wm. R. Evans, and Sarah Kirk, Bucks (County); J. Jefferson Reilly, Berks County; Simon Breneman, Lancaster; Wm. Beckman, Montgomery Co.; Henry Breneman, Dr. W. Beal, Dauphin Co.; John F. Kapp, Northumberland Co.; Jay Cassapel, Bradford Co.; John S. Adams, Susquehanna Co.; Milo A. Townsend, Mercer Co.; J. Dobson, Bedford Co.; D. M. Bennett, York Co.; Henry Fetunger, Berks Co.; Dr. Hershbergert, Schuylkill Co.; Wm. Fleming, Allegheny Co.; W. C. French, Erie Co.; Dr. Chase, Erie, Warren Co.; Harriet Fowler, Crawford Co.; Jas. Green, Tioga Co.; M. M. Gamble, Brad ford Co; Amanda Gammare, Fayette Co.; John S. Isett, Huntingdon Co.; C. W. Judd, Franklin Co.; Miss Rhea Kay, Lycoming Co.; John Lamborn, Chester Co.; Eli W. Marsh, Columbia Co.; Samuel Meyers, Cumberland Co.

The above named persons are respectfully requested to act upon this committee, and report to our secretary, Henry T. Child, M. D., of Philadelphia, at an early day. If any cannot do this, we will be obliged to [illegible] the names of those who are willing to attend to this duty, to be able to carry forward much more effectually the work of our state society. Year after year we find Spiritualism working its way among the people,—awakening deeper and more profound interest as they learn more of its phenomena. Twenty years ago, we knew nothing of these; to-day they are as familiar as household words,—and even the scientific minds are beginning to be aroused to the necessity of investigating these things. There are abundant opportunities for the examination of this subject, and in this age, when the people, who are the real jurymen and jurywomen to try these things, are examining the evidence,—we need not wait for the slow and tardy verdict of the scientific men, but each one will judge for themselves. The phenomena are springing up in our midst everywhere, and well is it for the mind that is somewhat prepared to meet them. Only a few days since, I was called to see a lad in convulsions, and I recognized at once that he was a medium, and under the influence of an undeveloped, vicious spirit. In a few moments I relieved him, and he had been quite well ever since. Drinking a glass of intoxicating liquor rendered him susceptible to that influence, and I presume would do it at any time. He has promised to abstain from this; and I believe if he does he will escape much suffering.

Moses Hull said:

It always takes scientific men a quarter of a century to get an idea. When a thing is universally acknowledged, then comes the question, What was it produced it?

He took for his text, Revelations xvi: 13 14 "And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs, come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of that great day of God Almighty."

Men are beginning now to acknowledge almost universally the phenomenon of Spiritualism. There is hardly a day but that the secular papers, not of a friendly character, they ridicule and sneer at them, are noting these phenomena. The magnetic aural theory will, before twelve months elapse, be acknowledged as a spiritual theory.

The devil must have some law by which he is able to do this. They say it is a miracle-working power belonging to the devil; the Bible simply tells us about the devil. We are indebted for his moral backbone they may ridicule and sneer at them, are noting these phenomena. The magnetic aural theory will, before twelve months elapse, be acknowledged as a spiritual theory.

The devil must have some law by which he is able to do this. They say it is a miracle-working power belonging to the devil; the Bible simply tells us about the devil. We are indebted for his moral backbone to John Milton, and certain fables.

The devil was somehow cast down to earth and numerous angels followed him, and the warfare was continued in the Garden of Eden.

The devil is introduced in the Bible, and begins figuring in the third chapter of Genesis. When the devil beat God in everything else, God could work a miracle. God would not use miracles to forward a thing that was not true. God has always had one weapon that the devil had not. There are spirits of devils, and they do work miracles or they do not. The devil does not work miracles unless he can counterfeit miracles. That which is false much proves nothing. Elder Grant's argument is that the devil and his angels are cast into hell. He tells us the whole atmosphere is filled with devils, who are doing these things, and no doubt came into the atmosphere except the spirits of devils.

Mr. Hull denied that hell means the atmosphere around the earth. Peter means by the word Tartarus what the Egyptians and Hindoos and other religions originated in the Valley of the Nile. The Nile came up every year, and then went down, as a matter of course, and when it went down there were little pools of water left which became stagnant. There was a great deal of typhoid fever around this lake. The stagnant water gave birth to a large number of phosphorous insects. They told us that under this lake was hell. The Typhoon was the god of disease. Any one who reads mythology must know that the ancients meant by hell a lake of fire and brimstone.

Elder Grant says these demons never meant the spirits of the dead. The Jews used the word demon to signify the spirit of a dead man that came back and possessed the living. The speaker here referred to Josephus to prove the truth of his argument. Josephus tells us demons were the spirits of good men who came back and induced men to lead good and virtuous lives. The argument of devil after Spiritualism is not new by any means.

When Robert Fulton spoke about the steamboat he was preached against, not only in the United States, but in England. They declared it was the devil's invention. Long before that time every reform has been originated by the devil. When the Jews said of John the Baptist, "Behold he has a demon," they meant nothing more than that he had the spirit of a dead man.

The next thing we know is Jesus begins his work, and they say, "Lo! him, he was a devil." If John the Baptist and Jesus were under the influence of the devil, the speaker was willing the devil should have control over him. The speaker here referred at length to the history of Galileo.

Rev. Mr. Hull maintained that when Columbus discovered America it was said to be the work of the devil.

A Scotchman invented the windmill, and was denounced to a great extent for his invention.

To the invention of the circulation of the blood and printing, it was all the work of the devil.

When vaccination was discovered by Dr. Thomas Jenner, it was the work of the devil.

The temperance reform and the anti-slavery reform was the work of the devil, they said. Slavery was considered a divine institution. The speaker said that about a year ago he met a Methodist minister who thanked God his Church had taken the first stand against slavery. They passed a law that no slaveholder could be a communicant. This law, however, does not exist after the reconstruction proclamation. Geology was called the devil's religion for a long time.

Elder Elder Grant, his brains not because he denied the existence of the Bible, set it the force of geology. If the devil exists at all, he exists either by the power of God or contrary to the power of God. You cannot imagine a devil without making God responsible for it.

HARRY BASTIAN.

His Seances in the East—Springing of Lights, Etc.

I witnessed the physical manifestations the other day, through Bastian, and they were, upon the whole, the most satisfactory in my experience. I repeated my interview a short time after, and they fell short of my expectations, and besides this general fact, some one sprung a light and the medium was up and untied, handling the instruments, etc. He instantly got into his seat, and appeared to be tied, and satisfactorily to the man that tied him, who was a skeptic. It would have been very pleasant to have found him a fixture, but he was not,—though hardly any two testified alike as to his exact position: Twice again the light was sprung with substantially the same results. He was pronounced a fraud by some of the audience, and so stated in the papers over their signatures. I felt myself as if the facts warranted their conclusion, though there were some things in connection, as well as at my first interview with him, that made me feel as if I had better reserve my condemnation. A few days after, Mr. Bastian was very anxious to meet us again, letting us do anything we chose, and go anywhere and see what the result would be. We did so in the small room of Elliott Hall. Frames were made 6 feet high and 3 feet square, and covered with netting such as is used for mosquito bars,—all four sides and top. He went under it, and the table was outside of it, on which were placed the usual instruments, etc. The frame had a tape attached to the top, and held fast by one of us, so that no movement could be made with it without detection. Two pieces of tape were fastened across the side near the table, and held in such a way that any extension of the netting in the least could be detected, and immediately the usual phenomena took place. There is no need of particularizing,—the affair was entered satisfactory. After that his hands were secured with threads, tied to his leg and chin. Instantly on putting out the light, the movements began, and immediately the light turned on,—were in the eclipse about ten seconds, but not a change in the threads. In this trial he was not under the frame, but threads are very satisfactory,—more so than ropes, as is usual, especially in this case in the dark. As soon as the tying had been examined and the lights extinguished, the usual phenomena took place as before, and on entering the light he was found untied, fastenings—not broken nor tangled, but all straight and without a knot; in a word, he was untied, not hands pulled out.

J. WETHERBEE, Boston, Mass.

MR BASTIAN IN PORTLAND.

We copy from the Press of the 19th the following fair and truthful report of Mr. Bastian's first seance last Tuesday evening, with some additions to us in it more nearly understood.

Last evening a company numbering fifty, (eighty by actual count) many of whom were of severe skeptics, assembled at the house of Jerse R. Kay, Esq., No 80 Danforth street, to witness the manifestations produced through the mediumship of Mr. Harry Bastian, said to be one of the most accomplished of the class. Mr. Davenport, father of the celebrated Davenport boys, appeared to be master of ceremonies. The usual precautions against the admission of light were observed, such as boarding up the windows and closing all doors; as of course it was exceedingly hot; and on the table was placed the musical instruments, bells, commonly considered necessary at such exhibitions. The first thing was the collection of the half-dollars from the audience by Mr. Bastian's agent; and the committee named by the selection of Messrs. A. D. Marrand William G. Davis as a committee to bind the medium in his chair. Mr. Davenport said he hoped to obtain some manifestations, but if none appeared, or any person was not satisfied with them, his money should be refunded. The committee refused to use the rope provided for binding the medium, and proposed white spool cotton, which was accepted. The room was darkened, and the usual jangle of instruments was heard, and when light was produced, one of the threads was found to be broken; broken, the medium said, by one of the instruments when flying round. (It will be remembered by those present, that before the light was produced a voice said "we have dropped the tambourine on the thread and broken it; strike a light and try it again." We think the editor of the Press will recollect this.) A second test resulted in the same manner. The medium refused to submit to a third test of that kind, and insisted that the rope should be used. A commotion followed, and the talk got loose and promiscuous, the medium taking offence at some unintended remark from the committee, and the committee construing his words [illegible] cord, and the suspicion found [illegible] (Our friend Marr made this remark: "I wish to say before the room is lighted, that we expect when the light is produced to find the thread removed and the medium bound with the rope." Light was called for, and the medium "cowboy sitting unbound in his chair. [illegible] of the threads could be found. This [illegible] considers the believers in the [illegible] wholly about "conditions" and [illegible] state of the stomach," etc.) declared the whole thing a [illegible] and removed their money, and left the [illegible] remainder decided to stay and see the [illegible] The medium was placed, unbound, in [illegible] the side of the table, and immediately [illegible] chair on the table and crowned with a tambourine. Next he was found put in his original position by the side of the table; his feet were placed on white paper and marked around so that he could not move them without being detected. Pennies were put on different parts of his body and on his bound hands; the knotted cords still remaining apparently firm and unchanged, and securing him to the chair. And still the manifestations went on. (We add that, while thus sitting a cowboy tied, with "a nickel" on each foot, each hand, each hand, and two on his head, upon lighting the room, an iron ring was found on his arm—the nickels removed. As quickly as the light could be extinguished and relighted, the ring was found removed from the arm and lying on the top of the medium's head.)

Strange voices chatted with their friends in the audience, and asked and answered questions. They were several ghosts, and not above cracking jokes in Dutch. Mr. Bastian filled his mouth with cold water during one of these exercises, and when light was restored emptied the tray water into a vase, to prove that it was not ventriloquism on his part. The most beautiful manifestation was the last. The young lady at the piano was asked by the "spirit voices" to sing the song "Beautiful Star," and as the sweet, brilliant strains floated and rolled through the darkness, over the heads and near the audience, The "spirits" said "it was getting late, and time to shut up shop," and very politely bade Mr. Davenport and Mr. Hill and others a good night,—addressing them by name,—and promised to come and assist them at another seance pretty soon.

On Wednesday evening, Mr. Bastian held another seance at Mr. King's, and the manifestations were very fine. Among others, after being securely tied, the knots were sealed with sealing wax by Capt. Nash, Esq., and strips of sticking plaster placed over the rope's ends at various places by E. L. Hall. The lights being extinguished, we requested that the medium's coat be removed. Instantly he was heard to shiver; the light was struck and Mr. Bastian's coat was in the audience, he sitting in his shirt sleeves, the seals unbroken, and the sticking plaster removed. We took off our coat, a linen one, and laid it on the table beside Mr. Bastian. After some manifestations, we requested that our coat might be put on to him as a test observing of the medium, and a light was instantly struck, and there our coat was, on his person, under the ropes, as if it had been there when he was tied, and put on the seals on the knots and the sticking plaster was undisturbed. These are facts. We leave our readers to form their own opinions as to the agency producing these wonderful results.

A Serene Death.

To many, death is a welcome messenger, coming with silent footsteps to break the last link of life. The pale features, dim eye, and care-worn expression, seem to be grandly illuminated sometimes just as the spirit is taking its departure. There are few things in biography more beautiful than the life of Jane Stilling. It contains, among many religious narratives which have a poetical coloring, an account of Eberhard Stilling, a man remarkable for his piety and stainless life. A writer for Appleton's Journal thus relates the story of Eberhard Stilling's

[illegible] death of old Eberhard Stilling, grandfather of Johann Jung Stilling, was so wonderful that it seems more like fiction than [illegible] I have seen nothing like it—so poetical, dream-like, and airy. He called his children into a wood, one day, and left them to play by a beautiful spring while he went to gather some fagots. On his return, he appeared very cheerful and happy, folding his hands and smiling. He sat down by the side of his children and told them the following story:

"As I left you to go into the wood, I saw at a distance before me a light, just as when the sun rises in the morning. I was much surprised. 'What is that,' thought I; 'the sun is already standing in the heavens—is it a new sun? It must be something strange; I will go and see it.' As I approached, there was before me a large plain, the extent of which I could not overlook. I had never seen anything so delightful in my life! Such a fine perfume and such a cool air proceeded from it as I cannot express. The whole region was white with the light—like day with the sun is night compared to it. There stood many thousand castles, one near another. Castles! I cannot describe them to you; they were as if made of silver. There were gardens, meadows, bushes, brooks. Oh God! how beautiful. Not far from me stood a great and glorious mansion. Some one came toward me out of the door of this mansion like a virgin. Ah! a glorious angel! When she was close to me, O God! I saw it was our dear, departed Dora. She came to me with such a friendly countenance, with the very look which formerly so often stole my heart, 'Father, ponder in our eternal habitations; you will come to us soon!' I looked, but all our forest before me; the glorious vision had departed. Children, I shall die soon; how glad I am at the thought!" From that hour old Stilling seemed like one transported, and, during the whole vision, he passed, in a calm and joyful frame of mind, away from the world.

A—True spiritual media.—Human organisms in whom the earth is so transparently tempered, that the divine light, glory, and fragrance from the great supernal world, shine streaming down into this.

The Committee ... ics for discussion at this Convention ... ast this evening for him on the existing power ... Dogmatism and Superstition, and requested ... to introduce it by an Essay that should bring the matter fairly before the audience. In performing this duty, I shall aim to be simple and direct. It is, however, impossible to speak of the existing power of superstition ... speaking of Superstition itself. It has a ... lineage, and is always the same thing. Its power is dynamic: its malignity is in its quality, not in its mass. But its mass is fearful; for it is bounded only by the realm of ignorance, stupidity, and credulity.

Is it proper, some will ask, to speak of an existing power of superstition? Is not superstition a thing that existed once, or exists elsewhere? It is a popular delusion that superstition has disappeared; or, if not, that it has become harmless. This is the superstition of the superstitious. The insane think all insane but themselves. Everybody hates superstition, and everybody hugs it. It is the universal horror and the universal pet,—the confessed foe of religion, and the as cordially clutched guardian of it. "It is cursed and caressed by the same devotees. The disease is a mild form of rheumatism in our case, but gout in our neighbors. It is the "fire-water" which is ruining the man over the way, but which we take in very small quantities for the stomach's sake,—our sweet, his poison. Our superstition should not be called superstition. Would you find the genuine article, you must go to the "little church round the corner." You call it the "little church round the corner," and the well-bred rector refers you to the big cathedral on the square. You hasten thither, and are told with lofty disdain that you have come to the wrong place. The horror you look for is in a synagogue, on the side street. Your search is like the search for the boreas sun. The Romanist enlarges on the superstitions of the Pagans. The Protestant waxes hot, as he describes the superstitions of the Romanists. The Unitarian looks down on the superstition of the Protestant. The Theist fastens the charge on the Unitarian. The Positivist declares that the Theist's belief in a personal God whirls the very soul of superstition. By general consent, it is admitted that the Positivist has cleared himself from the aspersion; and, by general consent, it is agreed that the Positivist is an unhappy creature, who has got rid of his devils indeed, but at the expense of getting rid of his angels.

The insurance would be, then, that Superstition is commensurate with Supernaturalism. Not quite. Supernaturalism thinks of a being who comprehends, oversees, presides over the natural universe, on a principle that is not exhausted by an organic universe. Superstition describes this Being as directly interfering as ruler and director. The finest minds may point to the supernatural; only the coarser are infested with Superstition. It is a familiar saying, that Ignorance is the mother of Superstition. It would be hard to say that Ignorance was the mother of Supernaturalism. No one by searching, perhaps, can find out God. But very little searching suffices to reveal that God is not whimsical or capricious like ourselves. "What is the whole history of the intellectual progress of the world but one long struggle of the intellect of man to emancipate itself from the deceptions of Nature? Millions of prayers have been breathed to what we now know were inexorable laws. Only after ages of toil did the mind of man emancipate itself from those deceptive appearances of Nature, to which the long infancy of Humanity is universally doomed." (Buckle's Morals, 1, 76.)

It is needful to be thought that Africa was a land of monsters, serpents large enough to stop armies, and men without heads; that golden apples grew in Spain; that giants and enchantresses lived in Sicily; that a cave on the Black Sea was the mouth of hell. The Roman legions and the traveling merchants made these phantoms vanish. The naturalism has an evil Demon named Koin, who tries to strangle them in their sleep. He never comes, except when they have been gorging themselves with food. He is the nightmare of an overloaded stomach. If you want to reach the heart of this subject without pains, open the first volume of Mr. Buckle's "History of Civilization," the 289th page, and you will find matter for profound reflection. There is the whole case in a nutshell. There is the clear statement, fortified by hosts of references and illustrated by facts in every field, that Superstition is simply the child of Ignorance. There you will read that so simple a process as the drinking of marshy land-water by the brains of Englishmen of their notions of a special providence in chills and fever, while the same Englishmen pray for wet or dry weather because they have not discovered the laws that control the fall of rain. The discovery of these laws will still further limit the domain of the Supernatural.

A right love of mind was purged of superstition by the science which discovered the law of the eclipse. An Athenian general, Nikias, fearing to risk a battle at the time of a lunar eclipse, allowed himself and his army of forty thousand men to be either slain or taken prisoners. In [illegible] Sunday. Thousands ... be more prosperous, if ... uiter a prayer.

Six hundred years ago, St. Francis d'Assisi, kneeling in his little chapel, had a vision. The Virgin and her Son appeared to him, thanked him for his great services to the church, and begged him to mention any small favor they could render him as a token of their gratitude. Francis, bowed down by the condescension and oppressed with humbleness, merely asked that all who, from that time forward, should confess and partake of the Mass in that particular chapel, might have all their sins forgiven. The request, though too insignificant to be spoken of, was granted. But to make it more worthy of such a petitioner and such a giver, the trifling privilege was extended to the churches of the Franciscan order throughout the world. On a day in last August the Church of St. Francis, New York, was crowded from morning till night with pious souls who were anxious to get a few centuries of their allotted purgatory wiped off.

Archbishop Manning, who is spoken of as a promising candidate for the papacy, if the present incumbent ever leaves it, gravely justifies the practice of trading in celestial real estate, which so shocked Wyckliffe and Huss, and at length outraged Europe into Protestantism.

The rite of Baptism shows a pure case of superstition. The Indian "medicine man" muttered a formula over a gourd filled with water from a neighboring fountain, and sprinkled it on his sick patient. The Peruvian after consulting his gis, bathed in the nearest running stream, and said: "O thou river! receive the sins I have this day confessed unto the sun; carry them down to the sea, and let them never more appear."

The Aztecs began their order of baptism thus; "O child! receive the water of the Lord of the world, which is our life; it is to wash and to purify; may these drops remove the sin which you drew to you before the creation of the world,"—and in conclusion the priest said: "Now he is born anew and liveth anew, now is he purified and cleansed, now our mother, the water again bringeth him into the world. When the Romish priests saw the ceremony, they thought the old Enemy had been at work, and crossed themselves with holy water more decously than ever.

The Episcopal priest, before applying the water, prays that God will "grant to the child that thing which by nature he can not have," will "wash him and sanctify him with the Holy Ghost;" and, after applying the water, declares the child to be regenerate. Was ever Pagan suckled in a more fantastical creed than this? When the superstition vanishes from the rite, and it becomes a simple observance of sentiment, nobody cares about it.

The Communion is another instance of unmitigated superstition. See that morsel of bread. It was ripened in the field, harvested, ground, kneaded, baked in an oven,—touch it, taste it, it is bread, and nothing more. Consider this wine in the goblet. It was grown in a vineyard, imported in a vessel, bought at a grocer's shop. It differs from ordinary wine in not being so good. But, on the utterance of certain words in a religious service, the substance is transformed. What seems bread, becomes God's body. What seems wine becomes God's blood. The mouthful and the sip pass the Lord of the world into the soul through the gateway of the lips. The Divine Intervention is pledged to come in at every utterance of the charmed words, and pack the living Godhead into a thin wafer that would not stay the hunger of a child. The natural mind calls this blasphemous nonsense. The supernatural mind calls it divine mystery.

The English Book of Common Prayer affirms that "the body and blood of Christ are verily and indeed taken and received by the faithful in the Lord's Supper." "Grant us," the priest implores, "grant us so to eat the flesh of thy dear Son, and to drink his blood, that our sinful bodies may be made clean by his body, and our souls washed through his most precious blood." When Zwingli took out the poison by declaring that the supper was simply a memorial observance, it dropped into disuse. "Whereas" stands by the statement that the earth will explode sooner than the truth that earthquakes and other natural convulsions are caused by human sin. The Presbyterians in Philadelphia have put on record their conviction that the hideous woes that afflict France are a doom passed on the nation by the Protestant God to pay for the Massacre of St. Bartholomew. Such nonsense is the despair of history, and the confusion of reason.

The vulgar idea of prayer is saturated with superstition. "Prayer," says an "Orthodox" [illegible] he rope up in the belfry: we pull it, the bell in heaven." Says another: [illegible] treasurer in heaven, knows every [illegible] Father's hand-writing, and can [illegible] upon by any [illegible] for his Father's bills". Said an [illegible] in iron, and you must pump a long time to get it. Speed the pump." Here is natural [illegible] for you! Suit-sugar, pump-handles, and [illegible] to pay on demand! The ropes rattle, [illegible] sink, the promises to pay wait for [illegible] are [illegible] tions. But should they prove to be true, then [illegible] not to have believed them will be an awful and irreparable misfortune. It will entail the con- [illegible] "A distinct avowal, [illegible] not to be regard-by law. Super- [illegible] vention comes in [illegible] Jere- [illegible] opposed before you pray, why pray? [illegible] time is coming when men will not pray for natural or spiritual gifts; when it will be seen that all such prayers have been breathed in vain to inexorable laws. Read John Weiss' chapter on "False and True Praying," in his new book on "American Religion;" shame yourselves by the reading out of the superstition of paying for things which, if you really desire, you will earn; and, by studying that and other chapters, educate yourselves into the clearest ideas about rational religion that have ever been printed.

While present views of Providence last, Christians cannot look down on Pagans. The augurs and soothsayers are their brothers. While the present idolatry of the Bible lasts, Christians cannot look Intelligent heathens in the face.

"See that Christian missionary," said a Hindu to his companion,—"see that Christian missionary carrying his god under his arm." There is a pure fetich: a book of charms; a miracle-working product of the printing-press. The Bible Society turns it out by the hundred thousand copies; no spurious parts omitted, no apocryphal part put in; no substantial error, no dark taste explained; no intelligent classification of books allowed; no vowel points changed. That the volume should be understood is not essential. It is not necessary even that it should be read. It must be distributed and possessed. It is scattered among the heathen by shiploads; it is left at the doors of people who cannot read; there is a copy in every room of your hotel; the salon of every steamboat has one or more; the traveler puts it in his trunk as a talisman; the soldier puts it in his breast-pocket to ward off the bullet or stay the bayonet thrust (which it sometimes does), the undisturbed presence of the book in the pocket being thought sufficient to insure its virtue. To read a chapter every morning, without asking what it means, will keep off the devils for the day. Devout people open it at random and find a divine oracle in the text that first meets the eye. If a child flings the book down and kicks it, the resources of parental discipline are inadequate in the emergency, and the minister must be called in to prescribe for the offence. The proposition to translate the volume into plain English is repelled; and the idea of reading the volume as one reads other books is scouted with horror.

"Have you any request to make, Tommy?" said a pastor to a little boy who was sick. "Yes: when I am buried, please put my little Testament in the coffin with me. I am a very little boy, and I am afraid Jesus will forget me. But I will reach up my New Testament to him, and then he will receive me."

Who shall do justice to the superstitions that infest the Sabbatarian mind? Here is one day in seven that is not to be reckoned in the ordinary calendar: it is an intruder in the astronomical universe. It has no place in the schedule of time; history has to jump over it. The solar system has orders to pass by it. It takes no celestial observations. Another sun shines for it; other winds blow for it; other elements work for it; the laws of hydrostatics and pneumatics and gravitation are suspended on that day. They are the ministers of God, and tradition says that on this day God was asleep. On that sacred day the obedient sea, converted from its secular habits, swallows up not the unskilful sailor, but the worldly absentee from church. The Sabbatic wrath spares not the Sabbath-expert who knows not how to manage their sail but the irreverent who do not love the Sunday school. If the sportsman is killed on Sunday by his own gun, it is not because he is a careless sportsman, but because he was not reading his Bible. If a carriage breaks down on Sunday, it is not the fault of the road or of the axle; the laws of mechanics are of no account on Sunday; that the word of Scripture might not be broken, the wheel gave way. The natural forces are all orthodox on one day of the week. The sea becomes "evangelical." The sun dispenses the gospel, and is literally a sun of righteousness. The winds obey the behests of the Holy Ghost. The beasts prophesy. The trees of the field are strict Sabbatarians. Nature studies the Bible, and goes by the letter of it; she guards the slumbers of God. The "New Cyclopedia of Illustrations," a work introduced to the public by no less a person than Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, of New York, quotes approvingly an Eastern legend to the effect that, while Solomon was on his way to visit the Queen of Sheba, he came to a valley in which dwelt a peculiar tribe of monkeys; on inquiring into their history, he learned that they were the posterity of a colony of Jews, who by habitual profanation of the Sabbath had degenerated into apes.

Dogmatism is superstition of opinion. A dogma is an opinion with a magical attachment. It is a medicated bullet. The dogma is a fetich. The less you understand it, the diviner it is. Its mysteriousness is its merit. The credo quia absurdum is the motto of the dogmatist. The formula is a charm, a phlactery to be worn about the neck or on the arm, or more on the forehead. Emblazon it on the church, and Christ will dwell there. Set it over the gates of your college, and God will bless the institution. Let the Lyceum Committee write it upon the wall of their council room, and the course will be favored, in spite of dullness, stupidity, and ignorance. Is it not the truth in its deepest sense, but the spelling. The superstitious Jew would not tread on a piece of paper lest the holy name should be written on it. The Christian is equally dainty with his creed. The Articles of Faith professed by Christendom have been so long associated with marvel and miracle, that they have no long been held in awe. Their apparent absurdity being re-posed a proof of their supernatural origin, their professed incomprehensibleness being the measure of their occult virtue; they have been believed so saintlessly [illegible] ...ainst let all rational [illegible] ...st men who exalt in the d[illegible] its application to the most [illegible] of life,—insurance, for e[illegible] card the very notion of law in the [illegible] that concern their rational being; that man, who demand accurate and full knowledge before embarking in enterprises of ordinary moment, should think knowledge an impertinence in the upper domain of thought, and should actually prefer dream and fancy, and spectral illusion, to the simple realities of truth and fact, when the problems of deepest import are under discussion, is certainly amazing. God would be ludicrous were it not for the terrible power this habit exercises over the minds of men.

The existing superstition, with its attendant dogmatism, is represented in this country by the existing Churches,—the three or four thousand owned by the Roman Catholics, the forty or fifty thousand held by Protestant Christians of the various sects. The Roman Church wields a power of pure superstition, and makes it felt in every important department of life,—in politics, education, literature, in domestic usage, and in private experience. Its three or four millions of members are subjects of a spiritual authority that lays an interdict on intelligence, stultifies conscience, and oppresses will.

The Protestant Churches exert a baleful influence through the superstitious reverence for dogma. The influence is felt in all the speculative operations of the mind,—in philosophy, ethics, science, and education. It is felt in colleges and public schools. Publishing houses confess it. Lecture committees yield to it. It interferes with the amusements of the people, and is brought to bear on their social habits. It is brought to bear on the young by means of the Sunday schools, domestic teaching, and manuals of education. It selects their reading and dictates their thoughts on all subjects of intellectual belief. It holds possession of the chief seats of power and patronage to a degree that is appalling. It wields a despotism that none but the boldest dare resist. Without interfering directly in politics, it is able to affect occasionally political movements by fastening the charge of infidelity on candidates for office. Eminent men of science creep under the chains it places at the approaches to knowledge; and eminent statesmen defer to its claims, in order to secure popularity. Men of business become bigots that they may become rich. Its power is dangerous because it is insidious, and because it touches the springs of thought. It is difficult to measure and to meet. Even they that are under its dominion are often the last to own its peril. Harrasts the movement of thought, as the head winds do the sails.

A vast danger from superstition lurks in Spiritism. It is as yet undeveloped, but it is rapidly developing. Thus far it has appeared in the more vulgar forms of fortune-telling, soothsaying, and necromancy.

This great ignorance, illusion of evil, the Free Religious Association primarily aims to dethrone. Its motto is not faith, but knowledge. It seeks to know. It believes in knowing. The definition of truth it does not attempt. The love of truth it would fain promote. It would emancipate the mind from the tyranny of the supernatural, from the bonds of dogmatism, from the dereliction of idolatry and superstition. In doing this, it is actuated by the sincerest of aims. It is animated by pure human regard.

1. In the first place, we charge Superstition with ruinous waste of means. The Egyptians could not eat their onions because they had made gods of them. The Jews could not improve their Sabbath because they had consecrated it. The Christians are unable to make rational use of their Bible because they deem it the "word of God," too holy to read intelligently. It is sacred to stupidity. The antiquarian, the archæologist, the historian, the philosopher, the moralist, look at it with longing eyes, but refrain for lack of words. It is a buried treasure which is defended by magical charms. Literature has no claim upon it. It is too hallowed to be the property of the human mind. It is forbidden to the vulgar to know its genuine thoughts. A seventh part of all the time there is having been given to the Lord, men may not avail themselves of it for their human purposes. It must be devoted to doing nothing. To open libraries on that day, or lecture-rooms to give instruction in science, history, mechanics, literature, art,—to entertain the tired people with music, to facilitate easy journeys into the country, to make galleries and gymnasiums and gardens accessible to toiling operative multitudes, would be an affront to the majesty of Heaven, would disturb the slumbers of the gods. The Communion Supper feeds nobody either with food or sympathy, because it is a "holy ordinance." In order that the sacrament may be observed, the occasion is lost. The human qualities of Jesus cannot be appropriated. No contact can be appreciated,—the virtue in him being transplanted to his mythological character. In Naples, one sees hanging upon the walls of shrine and chapel implements and weapons, fishing lines and nets, through which poor people have been saved from danger, or have met signal good fortune. The grateful owners devoted them to the Virgin, and have never since been by her called for. Being once consecrated, they could not be used. This tool-worship is very expensive to poor people, though the tools be nothing but rusty knives, a skein of twine, or an old oar. Who shall compute the cost of it, when the sanctified and wasted tools are tools that hold the literature of a nation; nay persons, the like of whom are not born more than once in a thousand years; and fifty-two golden days in every twelvemonth, each composed of precious and irrecoverable hours?

II. The second charge we make against superstition is, that it demoralizes and degrades mankind. Old Burton says: "No part affected by superstition is the brain, heart, will, understanding, soul itself, and all the faculties of it; all is mad and dotes." "Death takes away life," says Pliny, "but not superstition. No torture is like it, mute so continuous, so general, so violent, so destructive." "The visionary," says Plutarch, "hath never a wink at all; for he can neither use his reason when awake, nor be free from his fears when asleep. His reason is always asleep, and his fears are always awake." "When the atheist falls sick, he reckons up his verities and debauches, his excessive labors or unmannerly disregard of life or climates. But the fanatical superstitious accounts every little distemper in his body or decay in his estate, the death of his children, crosses, and disappointments, as the immediate strokes of God. If he be sick, he thrusts away the physician; if he be in grief, he shuts out the philosopher." The soul of superstition is fear of the unseen powers, dread of the unknown. It infects with cowardice. Why are men afraid of inquiry? Why do they cower under creeds they disbelieve? Why do they sit dumb in presence of calamity? Why do they submit to strokes of fortune they might parry, and accept situations they might escape from? Why the backwardness to explore Nature? Why the horror of new opinions? Men are ruled under their prejudices as children [illegible] their blankets, peopling the dark place[illegible]

We are not half the men we ought to
We will not do our own work, from the sticking hope that God will do it for us.
will not push our own way, from the stupe[illegible]
we may crouch God's path. Be[illegible]
[illegible] ...ompliments, [illegible]
[illegible] ...pplying more strength is exhausted, it droops

him of his natural strength.

Superstition in the Roman Empire must have been a bitter thing, when poets loathed it as the destruction of all goodness; when moralists denounced it as the subverter of all goodness; when philosophers deplored its malignant influence on the nations nature; when a man like Plutarch branded it as the worst calumny against the Deity as more pernicious than atheism, as being, in a word, essential atheism with cowardice superadded; when thinking people hailed with rapture the materialism of Epicurus, which at least gave them promise of quiet and unbroken sleep in their graves. It took away their gods, and that was the greatest boon that could be conferred.

Superstition must have been a frightful curse in Italy, when the monk Savonarola dared to assail it in the person of the Pope of Rome. It must have been a ruinous woe in Bohemia, when John Huss poured out his torrents of eloquent indignation upon it; when his scholar, Jerome Faulfish, burned the papal bull under the gallows; when the people rose, insulted the priests, stormed the town-house, and defied the authority of the Church. It must have been a corroding disease in Germany, when Martin Luther bore his witness against the doctrine of indulgences, and at the risk of his life confronted the ancient system under which he was educated with the pomp and terror of the world.

The flashes of lightning that Theodore Parker drew from the cloudy masses of faith, and that have not ceased to blaze yet, reveal the temper of superstition in a horrible light. Temper is bitter, though not as powerful, as in Greece and Rome. These great souls were struggling to emancipate men from their bondage to the supernatural, to get breathing room for the mind, to secure liberty for thought and will, to gain the right of eminent domain for the human faculties in every sphere of natural activity, to make them, so far as the light or the generation permitted, kings and priests to themselves. They could not execute their work perfectly, because they could not see it perfectly. We see it better than they did. Our successors will see it better than we do. The time will come when Nature will assert the claim to the whole dominion of the supernatural; and then, when the half gods go, the gods will arrive.

That superstition calumniates the Deity need not be argued; that it is a grand offense. "For my own part," said the philosopher, "I had much rather people should say of me that there neither is nor ever was such a man as Plutarch, than they should say that Plutarch was a peevish, fickle, froward, vindictive, and touchy fellow."

Mr. Lecky, in the sentimental mood that sometimes comes over him, writes: "No error can be more pernicious than to imagine that, when a critical spirit is abroad, the pleasant beliefs will all remain, and the painful ones alone will perish. Superstitions appeal to our hopes as well as to our fears: They often meet and gratify the inmost longings of the heart, and offer certainties to which reason can only afford possibilities or probabilities. They sometimes even impart new sanctions to moral truths. Often they become essential elements of happiness, and their complete decay is most felt in the languid and troubled hours when it is most needed. We owe more to our illusions than to our knowledge. "Why is it," said Luther's wife, looking sadly back upon the dark creeds which she had left, "that in our old faith we prayed so often and so warmly, and that our prayers are now so few and so cold?"

But the argument conveyed in this mournful passage proves too much. Let comfort be the master, and who would leave the fireside? Was Luther wrong in leaving the Church of Rome? Not in this pensive mood has Mr. Lecky written his History of Rationalism in Europe." That we owe more to our illusions than to our knowledge, he has taught thousands to question: that proposition we take leave, in his own name, to deny. We are quite willing that the pleasant superstitions should go with the painful ones; that the prayers should become fewer and colder till, as ceremonies, they cease; that the dreams should be dispelled as the day waxes and the sun shines; that along with the evil should fade away in the brightening daylight of science. Instead of considering ourselves in "languid and troubled hours" with illusions, let us make such hours fewer by knowledge.

Heat and light are not the same thing, but they have one cause. Light undergoes no change of manifestation that does not in the same manner and degree affect heat. So, it seems to us, intellectual enlightening on the nerves of seeing produces vision, falling on the nerves of feeling produces heat. So, if knowledge strikes the understanding alone, it merely illumines; but if it strikes the will, it causes moral enthusiasm, a glow is excited, that, better than any striking of flints or crackling of fagots, will take away the chill of the human heart.

Letter from Mrs. J. P. McCoy.

Dear Sir:—Permit me to write for your valuable paper a short account of the funeral discourse delivered by Mrs. Amelia Colby, on the death of Mr. Hutchens, near Williamsburg in this county, last Sabbath (July 30th). Mr. H. passed to spirit life some four months ago,—firm in his belief in the Harmonial Philosophy. He requested that Mrs. Colby should deliver his funeral discourse. A beautiful grove near the town was selected for the purpose, and a temporary rostrum and seats constructed. At an early hour the crowd began to gather, and at half past ten, the time appointed for the speaking to begin, some ten or twelve hundred people had assembled,—some, as they expressed it, to hear what she "would say upon such an occasion," others, and a goodly number too, believing firmly in the beautiful Harmonial Philosophy, came together to sympathize with, and encourage the younger wife and children of the departed brother in their loneliness; and to have their spiritual strength renewed by the grand truths uttered by the gifted Mrs. Colby.

Her subject, "The Philosophy of Death," she handled in her usual masterly style, unfolding new truths, and opening new avenues of thought for the thinking mind. Her eulogy on, and tribute to the departed brother was beautiful and true. Her words to the widow and friends was very affecting, and went home to many hearts. It would be vain to try to give a correct idea of all, or even part, of what she said. Suffice it to say, that all unprejudiced minds received the truth, and went away wiser and better. But, unfortunately, all were not unprejudiced minds, for a few good (?) orthodox sisters seemed greatly excited when their idea of a God was handled [illegible] there ought to be for such as our speakers." So much for Christian liberality. (If you will allow me so paradoxical an expression.) Mrs. Colby at the close of the discourse delivered a fine inspirational poem, which I much regret I was unable to obtain for you. The good friends of progress then opened their houses and hospitably entertained those who were unprovided with refreshments. At half-past two we again assembled listened for an hour to a very [illegible] lecture, the subject of which was, "Is

[illegible] and Math-

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST.

Letter from A. C. H. Orr.

BROTHER JONES: In your paper of Aug. 5th a Brother proposes the following question: "Did Jesus really come forth with his natural body of flesh and blood?" and desires to see it answered. It is true, as this Brother asserts in his article, "that a majority of the churches teach that the resurrection of the dead consists in a reunion of soul and body," and as the world supposes that the doctrines taught by the churches are taught by the scriptures, the Bible is made responsible for this unphilosophical absurdity. The scriptures of the New Testament certainly teach the doctrine of a resurrection,—that is a life after physical death, but nowhere intimate that man's natural body will be again vertied. The original word anastasis from anasteno, simply signifies to stand up,—a position indicative of life, in contradistinction from a recumbent position figuratively indicative of death. This word, with its derivatives, is used throughout the New Testament to expose future life alone, without the slightest reference to a body of any kind. The English word resurrection, by which the idea of the Greek word anastasis is rendered, comes from the Latin resurgo—"to rise," "to be renewed again," etc., and only legitimately embraces the idea of a renewed existence after a separation from the physical body at death. The accommodated sense in which the word resurrection is made to embrace the idea of raising dead bodies by a "majority of churches," appears to be an offshoot of that ignorance, growing out of materialism, which considers the soul as a mere "puff of wind," which, to exist in the future, must be reunited with the body from which it had been separated. In attempting to answer the Brother's question, I shall be guided by the clear, plain and incontrovertible testimony derived from the simple history itself, as recorded by John in the 20 h chapter of his gospel—"Did Jesus really come forth with his natural body of flesh and blood?" I answer, I am clearly convinced that he did not. Start not, my theological friend, but listen, and remember that this notion of yours on the subject of the resurrection, like a good many more of your notions, is just as destitute of scriptural as it is of physiological support. John tells us that early on the first day of the week Mary Magdalene came to the sepulchre, and, stooping down and looking in, she saw "two angels in white sitting at the head or foot of where the body of the Lord had lain. After some conversation with them, she turned herself round and saw Jesus himself standing," "and knew not that it was Jesus." Mary Magdalene was intimately acquainted with Christ. She had stood by his cross only three days before, and if any one living at the time was capable of recognizing his identity, it was she. I shall suppose him to be the gardener, and addresses him as such. If the Savior had risen in, and now appeared to her in the identical body of his crucified flesh, what a mistake of this kind would have happened? Rather improbable. Again, Mark in the 16th chapter and 12th verse of his gospel, tells us that after Christ appeared to Mary Magdalene, he appeared in another form, to two of his disciples as they walked and went into the country." And Luke gives this case more fully. In the 24 h chapter of his gospel, he tells us that these disciples were going to Emmaus, some distance from Jerusalem. As they walked, Jesus joined them, and although conversing with him on the subject of his own death, they traveled with him for miles without knowing him. (It is true, Luke states that their eyes were holden so that they did not know him) Dr A. Clark very correctly observes that there was nothing supernatural in this. The reason, he adds, is given by Mark—"He appeared in another form." The inference from these cases is plain, that Jesus did not rise with the same body placed in the sepulchre. But the advocates of a bodily resurrection tell us that the identity of Christ's resurrection body was so complete as to retain even the "print of the nails" in his hands and feet. Such is represented as the appearance on a certain occasion. I admit; but as we soon will see, in appearance only. The Saviour was about introducing a new dispensation, the corner stone of which was the doctrine of a life beyond the grave,—immortality. He had chosen twelve disciples, the future teachers of this dispensation, who had been witnesses of his supernaturalese exhibitions "from the beginning." These men, steeped in Jewish materialism, and capable only of appreciating such evidence as came through their material senses, were to be eye witnesses of the grand crowning evidence of immortality,—his own resurrection, of which truth their united testimony was to convince the world. That is important, then, that they should be convinced themselves, and that evidence suited to their capacity and circumstances should be given. After appearing in his resurrection or spiritual body to, and convincing Mary Magdalene and the two disciples going to Emmaus, of his identity, he appeared to three future witnesses, who were assembled in a room and to them he said, showing them his hands and feet as the only kind of evidence they could appreciate. One of the disciples, Thomas, called Didimus, was not present at this interview. When the rest told him they had seen the Lord, he replies, "Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger in the print of the nails, and thrust my hand in his side, I will not believe." Here was one of the chosen witnesses, and I have the conditions upon which his convictions could be predicated. Jesus enters, eight days afterwards, through closed doors, assumes a body identical with that of his resurrection body, and gives Thomas the evidence required. That Savior's crucified body was a material body of flesh and blood. If he rose in it, did this material body pass through a key hole to get to his disciples? Again, the body of flesh was one with which he conversed—did he take a body of flesh and blood to heaven? If so, there is very little dependence to be placed in Paul's assertion, 1 Corinthians, 15 h chapter, 50th verse—"Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God."

If articles on the subject of the resurrection be acceptable to your readers, Mr. Editor, I shall be happy to present you with a few others.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

OBSESSION.

Letter from D. G. Mosher.

BROTHER JONES:—I notice in the Journal of July 8 th, a letter from Thomas Woodliff, in which he gives a short account of having passed experiences usually named "obsession," followed by your remarks in relation to the same, and the cause and cure. Much has been written and said upon this different subject, and that mostly by those who have had little or no experience in the line of "obsession," rendering their arguments of little avail in solving the mysterious problem. Thomas Woodliff, in my opinion, knows more of the real nature of "obsession," and the object on the part of the obsessing spirits, and the result aimed at, than a score of writers without experience, by having been obsessed. Having myself passed through the most severe trials in this line ever endured by any mortal, I feel that I have learned an important lesson in relation thereto, that no person can fully understand without similar experience, or a different mode of reasoning is applied than, as yet, has been adduced, in solving this difficult problem. Skepticism and ignorance do not seem inclined to accept the testimony of a maniac (?), or one "possessed of the devil," therefore I solemnly believe that "obsession," and all spirit manifestations usually attributed to "evil spirits," "low order of spirits," "undeveloped spirits," &c., are directed in wisdom from on high. If I am right, a decision must be rendered accordingly before the full dawn of the "Second Spiritual dispensation."

Give the "possessed of the devil" a hearing and the character of the "obsessor" will be illustrated in a truer light. I do not wish to be understood as saying that all who have been "obsessed" have learned the true import of such "obsession," for the object of "obsession" in different cases is not the same, as reference to different examples will prove.

An estimable young lady,—one of the first as well as the best speaking mediums in one of the Eastern States,—nurtured in the cradle of Universalism, and under her mediumship preached the doctrine that all in the spirit world were on the same plane of intellectual development, was seized by "undeveloped spirits," and tormented day and night for sometime, by foul imprecations, loathsome in the extreme. The change produced in the mind of the medium was, that she was convinced that there was all grades of character in the spirit world the same as in this, instead of the "one plane" doctrine of the old-school Universalism, and when this change was fully made, "the devil left her," and afterwards she preached the, to her, new doctrine. This is a case of decided spiritual aid, and

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. S. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
J. R. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE
Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1.—3 mo.

Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Order, if you can obtain. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration has been reduced to fourteen cents, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an express order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No name entered on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the ensuing year, with or without further reminder from this office

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it, until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take from the post-office, or removing and leaving uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

LOOK TO YOUR SUBSCRIPTION.

Upon the margin of each paper, or upon the wrapper, will be found a statement of the time to which payment has been made. For instance, if John Smith has paid to Dec. 30th, 1870, it will be marked, "Smith J.—30 Dec.—0." The 0 means 1870. If he has paid to Dec. 30th, 1871, it would stand thus: Smith J.—30 Dec.—1, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 71 for 1871.

The Postmaster will receive no subscriptions for the Journal, and he should be notified whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and certainly prepay names plainly.

CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 9, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER LIV.

Cause and Effect, Mutual Interblending—Views of Different Spirits—The Universe Not an Infinite Effect—Wonderful Knowledge of Advanced Spirits.

In our previous article we carefully examined into the relation of cause and effect, showing that every effect, when carefully examined and traced to its cause, could be readily comprehended by man, leaving no room in connection therewith for the exercise of superstition. Superstition, as well as the belief in an Infinite Personal God, has for its basis foundation ignorance.

In tracing effects to their causes a grand lesson can be unfolded, the true destiny of man be clearer revealed, and the philosophy of life better understood. In our former article we briefly alluded to the experiment of an ingenious Yankee, in exciting within the breast of the ignorant negro of Africa a belief in the existence of a God through the instrumentality of an ingeniously arranged device whereby beautiful strains of music were produced. The effect was apparent to their senses. They could hear the sweet melodies as they vanished in the distance—sense the sound of something which they believed flowed direct from God himself, and at once their superstitious notions were aroused. What should they ascribe this music to if not to a God? The tree stood alone in a vast plain. None could conceal themselves from their vigilant observation so as to avoid detection, and they could not do otherwise than to ascribe the existence of that which they could not comprehend to a God! This was perfectly natural. No one will blame the poor negroes for the devotional spirit they manifested, and for the sincerity of their worship under the luxuriant branches of that tree. The Yankee device, cunningly arranged, produced that music, and the result was at once attributed to a God.

But, Lucretus, who has been searching for God for a long time in the spirit-world, and whom we introduced to our readers in some of our previous chapters, again comes to our guide and demands a hearing.

Lucretus—Your illustration seems beautiful, but do not fully solve the problem to my mind.

Spirit—Cause and effect are the grand ultimates of the universe, one gradually blending into the other, and it is impossible to separate the two. Separate them completely, and the effect would cease to exist immediately. The Yankee constructed the ingenious device, and was the real God that the negroes worshiped, but the wind produced those enrapturing strains of music which so delighted their ears. The effect, the music, and the cause, the wind, were beautifully interblended, and to separate the two would be an impossibility, without destroying the sound.

Lucretus—In what respect do the views of spirits differ in regard to the existence of a God?

Spirit—I have attended a conclave of wise sages in the spirit-world, listened to their addresses in regard to a Supervising Intelligence in the universe, and their views were as various as those entertained on earth. These sages meet at regular periods to discuss the question, and

[illegible] as ence. The
1st, those who believe in an
Mind as the Cause of all things. 2d, those who attribute creation to the and Sir Laws. 3d, those who pla
ome all his works throug

the instrumentality of individualized intelligences. 4th, those who believe in the "God-Circle of Spirits" who are innumerable, but one in purpose, and who occupy the highest position on progression's ladder, and control the reins of the universe.

Lucretus—The members of this Society have strange notions in reference to Deity. Do any of them worship their God?

Spirit—Some of them do; others do not, depending altogether on their organization, and code of belief.

Lucretus—But is there no method by which this perplexing question can be settled, and the truth arrived at?

Spirit—Not so long as one effect remains in the universe that cannot be traced to a cause. So long as one problem in existence remains unsolved, or one note of music produced that can not be traced to its original source—the ingeniously formed device that produced it—so long will some one be ready to kneel and worship.

Lucretus—The wise circle of sages who meet to discuss this problem,—do they think they can ever solve it?

Spirit—Some of them, of course, think it already solved. While on the earth sphere, they observed the action of unseen forces, and attributed them to the influence of a God. I have pointed this fact out to them, and can readily explain the philosophy of every thing that they then based their belief upon. Take, for example, the illiterate negro who based his idea of the existence of a God on the melodious music that the ingeniously arranged wires produced; explain to him the cause thereof, and prove to him conclusively that man constructed the device, and still he would see effects equally unaccountable, and his belief in the existence of a God would continue. There is one scientist connected with those who assemble to discuss this question, who, while on earth, based his idea of the existence of a God on lightning, thunder, rain, and the atmosphere. These four mysterious agents in action in the material world, convinced him, negro-like, that a God must exist. I have demonstrated to him that the elements which cause these phenomena are under the immediate control of individualized intelligences; but I stood amazed when I saw him pointing at other effects still beyond him, which he can not now comprehend, and which he ascribes to a God! When the cause there of is explained to him, he will still cling to his God-idea, for there will yet remain effects the silent causes of which he can not understand.

Lucretus—Should not the tracing of one effect, in the material or spiritual world, to its cause, settle the question?

Spirit—It demonstrates only that one problem. All the problems yet solved in the material or spiritual world produce the same decisive answer: the controlling cause—man. In vain have I endeavored to obtain other solutions. But those effects I have traced to their cause are few, very few in number, while on all sides those that are still more grand and incomprehensible, arise and confront me.

Lucretus—But the universe is an infinite effect, and should it not have a cause commensurate therewith—God.

Spirit—True, the universe is infinite in extent, but not an infinite effect. An infinite effect would simply be a oneness—sameness in all things. There is not a sameness in all things, hence no infinite effect. Effects are all finite. An infinite effect would make all beings exactly alike, whereas all are unlike. Let that idea explode, that the universe is an infinite effect—for it is not. Take but two the weight, density, specific gravity, and the animal-making properties of Jupiter; yes, there are wise sages in the spirit-world that, understanding the geological formation of the earth, can write a natural history thereof,—sketch the size and appearance of all the species of animals that ever lived upon it, tell the periods in which they lived, etc., but who have never seen any of them. Do you suppose that chance controls this? No! The soil for all the species is prepared expressly for them, and they come forth at the appointed time, regularly and systematically.

Lucretus—Your statements astonish me. Do such powers exist among spirits?

Spirit—Emphatically, yes. The puny astronomers of earth have learned the first lessons in science. They have advanced just one step—a feeble one, too. They understand quite well the motions of the planets; what they stop there? Puny child, think not so; by and by—step by step—they will advance until they can explain the character of those forces that produce those motions.

Lucretus—They can then go no further?

Spirit—Yes; they then will proceed step by step, until they can fully explain the characteristics of those elements that form the planets. In the spirit-world are books on the Motion of Planets, the Forces that Produce it; Planetary Development, and intricate rules for the production of animal life thereon. Those spirits who understand these problems can tell exactly the species of animals that each planet will produce.

Lucretus—Your views

shall impose, but under conditions that shall be required by so-called spirits of intelligent men of the next sphere of existence. If such conditions afford room for fraud, they will be able to explain such fraud, when their scientific acumen shall have detected it, even under conditions imposed.

It will hardly do for these men to say that fraud was practiced upon them, but they were unable to detect it; an assumption that would be highly unbecoming to scientists!

Let us have no more trumpeting of fraud, and humbug, until scientists show their expertness at catching the bug.

Caution to Newspaper Publishers.

Beware of publishing any advertisements that come to you from a firm styling themselves "Thompson Raymond & Co., Bridgewater, Conn.," unless you get your pay therefor in advance. If they are not Dead Beats, they act very much like people who are.

GROVE MEETING.—The Spiritualists of Southern Wisconsin will hold a mass grove meeting on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 9 h and 10 h, at Genesee. J. O Barrett, State missionary, and E Winchester Stevens, are engaged as speakers. All are invited with baskets well filled, to the picnic on the grounds. By order of the Committee.

E. W. STEVENS.

Personal and Local.

—Jacob the Healer, otherwise known as the "Zouave," has recently returned to Paris. During his stay in London, many persons have been benefited by his healing power, and some of his patients intend following him to Paris to continue the treatment.

—There are a few Spiritualists that have not quite advanced out of the old orthodox shell, who may be seen with a Unitarian or Universalist paper in their hands perusing its contents. Brother S H. Ewell, of Romeo, however, is not one of that kind, judging from the following extract from his letter: It has been a long time since I wanted to have my Spiritualism filtered through the Jewish writings, Hebrewism, Unitarianism, or Universalism, to make it palatable. I take my lam clear. It is not any too strong for me at that, and there is no place where I can get the juice more pure or unadulterated than through your excellent paper.

—One of the would-be Spiritual papers has mixed together all the isms, and formed a mixture of "all sorts," composed of Trinity, the blood of the Lamb (not Mary's little lamb), salvation for all, and spirit communion, forming a compound that is good for orthodoxy, or suited to a slight attack of liberalism.

—The third edition of "Jesus of Nazareth; or, A True History of the Man called Jesus Christ, through Alexander Smyth," has been recently issued from the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Publishing House,—which is a guarantee that it has been received and read with a wide gratification. We have before alluded to this book, which goes through the history of Jesus with a searching, if not scorching, scrutiny, and holds up to the light all that tissue of fable and superstitious belief with which it was thought best to surround his long-revered name. It is quite unnecessary for us to call attention to the character of a book which has already made itself so well known as to reach its third edition.—Banner of Light.

—A grand military festival and fete champetre in aid of the Union Home and School, for the education and maintenance of the destitute children of soldiers and sailors, is to be held at the celebrated Fashion Course, West Flushing, Long Island, commencing Oct. 2, and continuing two weeks. We hope the undertaking will prove worthy of the noble cause which it is intended to benefit.

—Dr. H. F. Fairfield is coming west. He is already engaged to speak, in the month of October, in East Saginaw, Mich. Would like to make engagements for September, November and December. Address, Ancora, N. J.

—The Spiritualists have had a glorious picnic at Waco, Texas. Brother H. C. Pierce writes as follows from there: We have a small society here in Waco, and occasional speaking. Last Sunday we all went out of town, and held a glorious picnic in the grove, in one of God's temples made without hands. Mr. Glover, Mr. Breed, Dr. Wheeler and myself were the speakers. I gave the principal lecture in the morning upon Spiritualism,—the Bible and Modern Spiritualism compared. Mrs. Breed gave us two fine inspirational poems, and also several spirit tests.

—Dean Clark is now ready to enter the field of labor in the West. He is regarded in the East as one of the most able and eloquent inspirational speakers in the ranks, and we hope he will meet with such encouragement in the West as will make him feel at home. Address him in care of Banner of Light, Boston, Mass.

—Mrs. Wilcox on will speak in Des Moines, Iowa, and vicinity, during September and October. Address in care of E. M. Davis, Esq., Des Moines, Iowa.

—We had the pleasure of attending one of Mrs. Lord's seances, where beautiful phosphorescent lights were seen floating all around the room.

—Brother J. L. Potter is doing great good as a pioneer lecturer, in Minnesota. He is not afraid to attack the strongholds of old orthodoxy. Long may he live to do a good work.

—Mrs. Nellie J. T. Brigham lectures in Philadelphia in March, instead of February. She speaks in Music Hall, Boston, the last two Sundays of February; the first two are not engaged, and we believe those are the only ones she has unengaged up to April. She commences a three months' engagement, in Troy, N. Y., in September.

—The Portland Monitor says: We wrote a few days ago two letters, addressed to two different individuals in spirit life, and placed them in envelopes precisely alike, and without superscription. They were both answered pertinently by the Sexton, the answer being written on the outside of each envelope, the name of each person addressed was attached to each, and the envelopes were returned to be unopened.

—Through the kindness of a friend we are in possession of a copy of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. It is devoted to Art, Science, Literature, Romance and Reform, and especially to Spiritual Philosophy. We do not endorse the religious sentiment of the paper, but admire the boldness, frankness and intrepidity of the editors. They select a mark, and whether right or wrong, they shoot at it fearlessly, to hit. If S. S. Jones, who inscribes upon his banner, "Truth wears no mask, bows to no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause," is the only subject he ever exchanges blows with, for the Journalists it will be esteemed a favor.—Marshall County Republican.

An exchange says: Science has whipped the orthodox devil out of the world and got the God into a close corner. Thunder, before the investigation of electricity, was the voice of God. Gold, before the days of Professor Newton, used to point our sophisticated theologians down; but since his days, gravitation does all such work. So once is taking up one after another of God's works and doing them for him.

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

UNDER THE MAPLE.

BY MISS K. P. OSGOOD.

The start it gave me just now to see,
As I stood in the doorway looking out,
Rob Grow at play by the maple tree,
Throwing the scarlet leaves about!

It carried me back a long, long way;
Ten years ago—how the time runs by!
There was nobody left at home that day
But little Jimmie and father and I;

My husband's father, an old, old man,
Close on to eighty, but still so smart;
It was only of late that he began
To stay in the house and doze apart.

But the finger took [illegible] afternoon
To go in the window to warm his bones;
And as fast as it moved, just so soon
He went right over it all again.

Till, seeing how sad he seemed to be
I thought, with the air so warm and still,
It could not hurt him to go with me
And sit for a little under the hill.

So, lending my arm to his feeble tread,
Together slowly we crossed the road,
While Jimmie and his cart ran on ahead
With a heap of pillows for wagon load.

We made him a soft nest cushioned about,
Of an old chair out of the barn close by;
Then Jim went off with a caper and shout,
While we sat silent, father and I.

For me, I was watching the men at work,
And looking at Jack, my oldest son,—
So like his father! he never wore shirt,
But kept straight at it till the stint was done.

Seventeen was Jack that last July;
A great stout fellow, so tall and strong!
And I spoke to the old man by-and-by,
To see how fast he was getting along.

But father had turned away his head,
A-following Jimmy's busy game
With the maple leaves, whose bloody red
Flashed up in the sun like so much flame.

His lips, as he looked, began to move,
And I heard him utter a word or two:
"Yes, Joe! I do in the Weston Grove?
Just wait—one minute—I'll go with you!"

"Why father," I cried, "what do you mean?"
For I knew he talked of his brother Joe,
The twin that was drowned at scarce fifteen,
Sixty summers and more ago.

"The sun has dazzled you; don't you see
That isn't a tree a-blazing there?
It's only Jim, by the maple tree,
Tossing the red leaves into the air."

But still he nodded, and looked, and smiled,
Whispering something I could not hear;
Till, fairly frightened, I called the child,
Who left his play and came frolicking near.

The old man started out of his rest:
"Yes, Joe, yes; I'm coming," said he.
A moment he kept his tottering feet
And then his weight grew heavy on me.

"Father!" I screamed; but he did not mind.
Though they all came running about us then;
The poor old body was left behind,
And the twins were young together again.

And I wonder sometimes, when I wake at night,
Was it life or eyes of my own were dim?
Did something stand, beyond my sight,
Among the leaves, and beckon to him?

Statuvol [illegible] State.

[NUMBER II.]

In a former article we spoke of this state, and of the instructions given us by Dr Fahnestock. Having been susceptible to this condition all our life, there was no difficulty in inducing it. All that is needed is to withdraw the mind from any activity, and becoming passive, will to go into the State, and almost instantly a feeling of unconsciousness, so far as the physical is concerned, comes over us. If there has been pain in any part of the body a sense of numbness comes first, and then a loss of consciousness, which may be increased until the spirit leaves the body, and we go away. That which we supposed to be the influence of some individual in the form, or of spirits, we now find to be our own will. Soon, however, we are conscious of the presence of spirits, and as we go deeper into the state, and lose all consciousness of the external, this becomes more and more distinct. Instead of going under the control of spirits, we now go as companions, co-voyagers, traveling whither our inclinations lead us.

This removes the great objection which we have long felt to magnetism, namely, the loss of individuality of the person who submits to the imaginary operation of another.

We are naturally led in the investigation of this subject to ask what is the Will? We believe it approximates nearer to Omnipotence than anything else,—that it has done more in the universe than any other power.

In our analysis of man, we find him to be composed of a great number of organs and faculties, each one of which has its specific object or function.

The action of any single faculty produces what we call an impulse,—and we find many persons whose faculties are so harmonious that they are always moved by impulses in spasmodic and erratic actions that produce very little good.

A combination of several of these faculties produces the Will. The power of the Will depends upon two things; first, the distinctness and energy with which the single faculties act; and secondly, the harmony and co-operation with which they combine and act together.

If a number of faculties act separately at the same time, it produces confusion and anarchy,—but if they are well trained and work together, they are like a battalion of soldiers under the command of some leading faculty, which, like a skilful officer, gives directions to the forces which are subordinated to him.

We have spoken of a general influence which has been called Magnetic. This may be compared to the action of the sun, which is general throughout the entire solar system, and special whenever it is brought to bear upon any point. Its existence may be compared to the fires which we build to warm our houses and other places. Now, although the sun does not always warm our houses, yet we should never be able to warm our houses if it were not for the sun; and it would be very absurd to say because we can warm our houses with fire, therefore there is no sun.

To understand this statuvolic condition, we must realize the nature of man and comprehend the fact that the real man,—the spiritual nature,—that which passes out at death, has continued identity, which makes the line of existence one. This has the power of organizing itself, as we know in sleep and trance, so that it may travel a long distance, though its connection is not entirely severed, except in what is called death. This connection A. J. Davis has described as being somewhat similar to that of the umbilical chord of the child. We [illegible] which Dr. Fahnestock [illegible] under [illegible] learned to pene[illegible] faculties, and [illegible] body be placed in a [illegible] calls upon the spiritual nature, [illegible] like the whole secret of this phenomena, the value of which in the relief of suffering, the removal of disease, the prolongation of life in the physical body, the elevation and unfoldment of the mental faculties, the development and activity of the spiritual or soul nature, the result of all of which must tend greatly to promote the happiness of mankind, is not appreciated by any, and can only be so as it is realized.

We think the directions given by the Doctor in his valuable work, called "Artificial Somnambulism," are sufficiently clear to enable most persons to understand and apply this great truth.

During the past eighteen months we have been subject to entrancement, as we supposed by spirits, aided by mortals, and having spent many hours in that way, we found great relief of physical suffering which has been our lot during most of the intervals as the result of poisoned wounds from a post mortem examination.

On our recent visit to Harrisburg, we were entranced, as we supposed, by the spirit of our friend Dr. Hare, for we saw him by our side, and gave a communication from him to Dr. Fahnestock.

While in this state the latter suggested that when Dr. Hare had concluded, we should remain without waking while he spoke to us. We did so, and he assured us that we could take the influence off of any portion of the body and leave it on the rest. We had been suffering for several days very severely with the head which was much swollen and inflamed, but now felt easy. Under his directions we woke up, leaving the hand and arm asleep at least entirely free from pain, though we could move it better than before. We have kept it in this state now nearly two weeks, and it has been entirely free from pain. During the first week moving it caused some pain, as there was considerable inflammation. This, however, has subsided, and now we can move it better than we have at any time during the last three and a half years. During the first three days it remained in the state without any conscious efforts on our part. It then seemed to come out, and then without going to sleep we were enabled to do as one was commanded to do formerly, "Stretch forth thine hand," and it was healed, or rather placed in a condition in which there was no consciousness of pain, and the natural functions being carried on, and their tendency is always to health. We noticed from day to day, while the hand was kept in this condition, that the inflammation and swelling, which had become chronic gradually passed away. The value of this discovery is inestimable, as many are already prepared to testify, and we think every one should carefully study the Doctor's book, and endeavor to put into practice its important suggestions, not only in themselves but in their friends, as we consider this man more important than the experiments which have heretofore been practiced in animal magnetism, there being no possibility of injury if the directions are followed.

If it be true that "he who makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before is a benefactor of the race," he who relieves humanity of suffering, and who opens the means of rejuvenescence by which it can attain to grander heights of knowledge and happiness, is still more a benefactor.

The physiologist knows that there are two sets of nerves,—one of motion, and the other of sensation or consciousness.

Sir Astley Cooper discovered this anatomical fact, and found that the spinal chord is composed of four distinct bundles of nerves, the two front one's are the nerves of motion, and those behind are nerves of sensation. These may be remembered more readily by fixing in the mind the letters A M, anterior for motion, and P S, posterior for sensation.

When this will power is properly trained we may cut off either the motion or the sensation from any part of the body, except those which are under the control of a third class of nerves,—the involuntary motions which keep up the action of the heart, lungs, etc.

The rigidity of the muscles which accompanies some conditions of this state, and which has improperly been termed paralysis, is the result of the action of the will, which fixes the muscles and compels the nerves to hold them there. Paralysis may also occur from the same cause, but its opposite of a condition directly the opposite of this, in which the muscles are relaxed and the action of the nerves cut off for the time. The power of throwing the body, either in part or entirely, into an unconscious condition, so that severe operations, and even the most painful ones may be done with, without any feeling on the part of the spirit, is one of the greatest marvels of human existence, but it has been proved beyond a doubt. This is, however, but one of the conditions incident to this separation of the spiritual from the physical, which when partial we call sleep or trance, and when complete, death. We propose to consider all the conditions of this state, and as far as we can, give our experience in them, and any light which we may obtain from others in the form or out of it.

We believe the consciousness of pain is not seated in the physical body, but somewhere in the interior, perhaps in the soul itself. We know that the consciousness may be suspended for a long time, either partially or in the entire body, and yet the vitality may remain. A state of unconsciousness may be as far as an individual can go, but it is usually the beginning of a series of states which we shall describe.

The direct power of the will over the human body is spiritual, and the more we thus become developed the better will it act, and in the inner life this power is vastly increased, and is not confined as with us to the body or those substances which come in contact with it, but spirits are able to move inanimate objects without physical contact by the will power alone. We know there must be a connection somewhere between the spiritual and the physical in all living beings, by means of which the latter is moved. This subject of the movement of physical bodies without contact, clairvoyance, mind reading, etc., etc., will be themes for future articles.

—Live as if for a day or an age.

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

Manchester (Ill.) Grove Meeting.

On Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 9d and 3d, E. W. Stevens, Mrs. Mattie Hulett Pratt and J. O. Barrett are engaged as speakers.

Manchester is in Boone County, seven miles from Belvoir, and the same from Clinton Junction.

Friends from abroad will call on P. L. Ellis, J. P. Daniels, G. H Ellis, or A. H. Manley.

Mediums' and Speakers' Convention.

A Quarterly Convention of Mediums, Speakers and others, will be held at Starr or Central Hall, Le Roy, N. Y., on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 2d and 3d, commencing at 10 o'clock each day.

The New York State Spiritualist Association holds its annual session on Saturday at 2 P. M., in connection with this convention.

Let there be a general attendance from all parts of Western New York. The halls are commodious, the facilities for arriving by railway ample, and the rich experiences of past conventions furnish sufficient guarantee for the success of the present. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

Committee { J. W. SEAVER, Geo. W. TAYLOR, A. T. TILDEN.

Ohio State Association of Spiritualists.

The Association will hold its Fifth Annual Convention, on the first Saturday and Sunday of September next, in Roberts Hall, Milan, Ohio, commencing at 11 o'clock, A. M. Knox local society, and children's progressive lyceum is entitled to four delegates and two additional for each fifty members or fraction over the first fifty.

Important business will come before the convention, and every society and lyceum in the State is earnestly requested to send a full delegation.

The well-known and tried hospitality of the Milan Society is extended to all delegates, who will be supplied with [illegible] members are expected, cordial welcome is to [illegible] to all Spiritualists and [illegible] to the general [illegible]

By Order of the Executive Committee.

WILSON HURRAH, on the Lake, [illegible] by the Milan Banks.

H TUTTLE, President.

Convention of Spiritualists.

At a picnic of the friends, held at Geneseo, Ill., July 4th, it was unanimously resolved to hold a meeting, for the purpose of organizing the Spiritualists of Henry county and vicinity, and to help the good cause by holding quarterly meetings at different points in the county.

It was further resolved to meet at Cambridge on the first Saturday and Sunday in September next, in order to consider the propriety of organization. J. Allen, C. H. Doty, and R. C. Raymond were appointed a committee to issue a call therefor.

We therefore announce that said Convention will meet at the Court House, in Cambridge, on Saturday, Sept. 2d, at 1 o'clock P. M.

All are cordially invited to attend,

J. ALLEN, C. H. DOTY, R. C. RAYMOND, } Committee.

Iowa State Association of Spiritualists.

This Association will hold its Third Annual Convention at Iowa Falls, Hardin Co., Iowa, commencing Friday, Oct 6th, at 10 A. M., and continue three days.

As important business will come before this Convention, it is earnestly requested that all liberal minds in the State will come out and make this the most interesting time ever held in the State.

Good speakers and test mediums will be present, and no pains will be spared to entertain friends from abroad.

Speakers wishing to attend the Convention are requested to correspond with the President and Secretary, at Anita, Cass Co., Iowa.

J. M. BLAKESLEY, President.

EDWIN CATE, Secretary.

WE WILL GIVE YOU

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS,

If by following the directions we send, you do not make from one to two hundred dollars a month. Directions and Ample Means with which to do it sent for only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. No more capital or expense required. Men and Women, Boys and Girls, Now is Your Chance! Address, ADAMS & CO, PUBLISHERS, 25 Bromfield St., BOSTON. v10 n22 2t

MATRIMONIAL.

A GENTLEMAN 30 YEARS OLD—A SPIRITUALIST, of good habits and fair education, medium stature, light complexion, blue eyes and brown hair, desires to correspond with ladies for the purpose of a better acquaintance, and marriage. Those who feel favorably impressed by this notice, are wish to correspond, may rest assured that their letters will be received in confidence and treated with honor. Address GEORGE HARDCASTLE, Quincy, Ill. v10 n21 4t

The Tenth Thousand!

Prof. Howe

Has already Published the Tenth Thousand of his

SEVEN-HOUR SYSTEM OF GRAMMAR.

Price $1 Bound; Fancy Paper 50 cents.

. For sale wholesale and retail by the Religio Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE CAREER OF THE CHRIST-IDEA IN HISTORY.

A COMPANION VOLUME TO

"THE CAREER OF THE GOD-IDEA,"

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

CONTENTS.

I Introductory; II Career of the Christ-idea in Hindostan and among other Races; III Prophecies of the Advent of Jesus; IV Conception and Genealogy; V Birth of Jesus; VI John the Baptist,—his relation to Jesus; VII The sermon on the Mount; VIII Miracles; IX sending forth the Apostles; X The fatal journey; XI Burial and Resurrection; XII The Descent into Hell; XIII The Gospels; XIV Resume of the Life and Character of Jesus; XV Causes of the Extension of Christianity; XVI. The ultimate of the Christ-idea.

Price $1.25. Postage 16 cents.

The demand for these new works of Hudson Tuttle both in this country and Europe, is unprecedented.

For sale at the Religio-Philosophical Journal Office.

SUBSCRIBERS TO PETERS' MUSICAL MONTHLY get all the latest and best Music at one and two cents a piece. Every number contains from $4 to $5 worth of new Music; and it is sent but for 5 cents. The July and August numbers contain Thirty Pieces of Music (72 pages, sheet music size,) and will be mailed for 50 cents. Address J. L. PETERS, 599 Broadway, New York.

v10 n24 3t

Artificial Somnambulism.

The author of the above named book, is a philosopher of large experience and great merit.

In this work he treats of the philosophy of mind as demonstrated by practical experiments during the last twenty years. No work has ever been published which so thoroughly demonstrates many popular theories to be unfounded, and fallacious; and at the same time gives a rational theory for phenomena manifested.

DR. FAHNESTOCK is a thorough believer in spirit communion, and teaches in this work the modus operandi, by a demonstration.

The following is the table of contents of this valuable work.

CHAP. I.—HISTORICAL SURVEY. Mesmer not the discoverer of the state—His theory of it—Its examination by the French commissioners—Their conclusions—The author's remarks.

CHAP. II.—Of the causes which have retarded the progress of the science.

CHAP. III.—Of the conditions necessary for the production of the somnambulic state, with instructions how to enter it, etc. I.—Of the instructor or "operator." II.—Of the patient. III.—Instructions. IV—Of the sensations experienced by those who enter this state. V.—Of their awaking.

CHAP. IV.—Theory of this state.

CHAP. V.—Of the somnambulic proper sleep. I.—Of a partial state of Artificial Somnambulism.

CHAP. VI.—Pseudo-Somnambulism.

CHAP. VII.—Of the senses: I.—Motion; or, the power to move.

CHAP. VIII.—Of the functions of the faculties. I.—Consciousness. II.—Attention. III.—Perception. IV.—Memory. V.—Association. VI. AND VII.—Likes and Dislikes. VIII.—Judgment. IX.—Imagination. X.—Will.

CHAP. IX.—Of the peculiar functions of perception in the different faculties while in a natural state. I.—Of the peculiar functions of perception when in a state of Artificial Somnambulism. II.—The functions of perception when in a state of Artificial Somnambulism. 1.—Consciousness. 2.—Attention. 3.—Perception. 4.—Memory. 5.—Associations. 6 and 7.—Likes and Dislikes. 8—Judgment. 9.—Imagination. 10.—Will.

CHAP. IX.—Of reading or knowing the mind. I.—Illustration. II.—Illustration. Theory of Dr. Collyer. Mental alchemy or electrifying.

CHAP. XI. I.—Of the identity of other mysteries with this state. II.—Of the mysteries practiced by the modern magicians of Egypt. III.—Of the "mysterious lady. IV.—Of the earth mirrors, First earth glass, Second earth glass. V.—Second sight. VI.—Phantasms.

CHAP. XII.—Transposition of the senses.

CHAP. XIII.—Mineral sleep.

CHAP. XIV.—Natural Somnambulism. I.—Trance.

CHAP. XV.—Of intuition.

CHAP. XVI.—Of presentiment or foreknowledge.

CHAP. XVII.—Of interior provision. II.—Of exterior provision. III.—Prophetic dreams. IV.—Witchcraft.

CHAP. XVIII.—Sympathy. I.—Clairvoyance. Clairvoyance at a distance.

CHAP. XIX.—Of the sense of hearing.

CHAP. XX.—Of the senses of smell and taste.

CHAP. XXI.—Of the sense of feeling.

CHAP. XXII.—Of the sense of location. Of their physical strength.

CHAP. XXIII.—Of the influence of Artificial Somnambulism on the system. I.—Of its influence upon a healthy subject. II.—Of the influence of Artificial Somnambulism upon diseased subjects.

CHAP. XXIV.—Artificial Somnambulism considered as a therapeutic agent.

CHAP. XXV.—Of the kinds of disease cured while in this state. I.—Tetanus, or St. Vitus's dance. II.—Epilepsy. III.—Dyspepsia. IV.—Intermittent fever. V.—Fever. VI.—Case. VII.—Inflammatory rheumatism. VIII.—Chronic rheumatism. IX.—Hysteria. X.—Melancholy from misguided love. XI.—Case. XII.—Case. XIII.—Case. XIV.—Contraction of the muscles of the fingers. XV.—Scarlet fever. XVI.—Case. XVII.—Case.

CHAP. XXVI.—Surgical operations.

CHAP. XXVII.—Obstetrical cases. Conclusion.

This valuable work is for sale at this office, at $1.25 per volume, postage 20 cents. See book list in another column. The trade supplied on reasonable terms.

HEALING MEDIUMS.

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph or from lock of hair, readings of character; marked changes, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those intending marriage; directions for the management of children; hints to the inharmoniously married, etc.

TERMS—$2.00 for full Delineation; brief Delineation—$1.

A. B. SEVERANCE,

v7n18tf. 407 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE, Wis.

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex. occupation, temperament, (if not known, send photograph). Address P. O. Box 80, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.

v10 n3 tf

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101 NEWBOSTON, ILLINOIS

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by Examination, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $5.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.

n1 v10 tf.

MRS. A. M. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium

148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago,

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the positive and negative forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controlling her accomplish the same, is done as well who the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $1.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $2; answering Business Letters, $3. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

DR. SAMUEL MAXWELL,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN,

TREATS the sick by magnetic touch, and the use of appropriate magnetized remedies. Also makes clairvoyant examinations. Patients to be treated by letter should send age, sex, and leading symptoms. Board in private families if desired. Come to, or address,

SAMUEL MAXWELL, M. D.

75 SOUTH SIXTH ST., RICHMOND, IND.

10 va17

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS.

Madison Doherty, having severed his connection with A. D. Willis, at Chicago, has opened a Gallery, at Indianapolis, Indiana, where he will sit for spirit pictures.

Parties at a distance wishing these pictures can get the same result as if present, by inclosing a lock of hair, a picture, and the fee of three dollars, and post office stamp, stating the day and hour they wish a trial. Money refunded if no result is obtained.

DOHERTY & PURSELL, PHOTOGRAPHERS,

Nos. 94 & 96 East Washington street,

v10 n17 3m Indianapolis Indiana.

DR. S. L. MCFADDEN AND WIFE, MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 848 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago,

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law unto themselves,—to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors and preachers. All Mediums are invited to attend free of charge. The Obstructions of the Bible, Lying Spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of diseases, and private communications, from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n19 13t

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Deo hominem externum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN HELMONT.

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutatory, and efficient Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Two or three packages mailed free for $2 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M.D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 71 I St., Washington, D. C.

v10 n11 4t

GEORGE W. SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services. v9 n8 tf

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

ANOTHER POP GUN DISCHARGED.

"Warrington" on Spiritualism.

It is "nothing new under the sun" for scribblers, penny-a-liners, and "our special correspondents" of a time serving and odiumless subsidized press to vent their spleen and expose their ignorance upon the great subject to which we are devoted, and we have come to feel almost neglected when these panderers to sectarian bigotry withhold their customary diatribes and anathemas against our cause or its advocates.

There invendoes and assaults seldom do more than to excite our commiseration for the ignorance and conceit of those flippant and Quixotic knights of the quill, who think to show their smartness and win the plaudits of the multitude, by running a tilt at the great windmill that is blowing the chaff of error and superstition out of the religious of the world, and pumping the water of life from the everlasting well-spring of truth for the famishing millions of this world.

We have little disposition to descend from our post of honor to castigate these caterers to the passions and prejudices of the spiritually blind—for we need no further experience to teach us that "Discretion is the better part of valor," when polecats and other mephitic creatures assail us, and if they can bear the stench of their own emanations, we deem it punishment enough for their temerity, and prefer to "give them a good letting alone," rather than to punish ourself by disturbing the "odor of sanctity" which is their badge of distinction and source of protection.

We deem it a compliment to our cause and its advocates, that bigots, polite or non, chief priests, scribes, and pharisees generally, revile and persecute them, for it plainly shows that "our kingdom is not of this world," and that we have ideas too great, and a philosophy too broad, philanthropic and pure, for their appreciation and selfish purposes.

There a class of kid-gloved literateurs who from their Parnassian heights presume to look down with disdain upon mediate people who use common sense, and their other senses, in the discovery and application of truth; and these would-be autocrats in the literary and religious world frequently display their brilliant parts (or nether parts) by attempting to caricature the literature and philosophy of our order, or by deriding the humble instruments through whom a higher intelligence seeks to communicate a knowledge of the post mortem existence and condition of the so called "dead."

These connoisseurs who prepare the literary salad for the fastidious appetites of book-worms and the dilletanti of upper-ten-dom, frequently "put on airs," and make themselves merry over the defection of those who are better cultured in practical wisdom, perhaps, than in belles letres and scholastic lore. Because those who have won fame on earth and were considered great, may not be able to personate themselves fully through illiterate and imperfect media, these sciences are scar at the claims of those who through more positive and certain tests than style of language gives, have proved the actual identity of the professed "communicants."

With these prefatory remarks we will quote from The Commonwealth a part of an article from "Warrington," that first appeared in the Springfield Republican, as an apology (!) for a mean fling at Wm. Denton, Mrs. Hoadly, and others who participated in the recent Convention of the Massachusetts Spiritualist Association, and that of the free religionists.

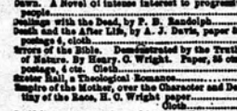
Brother E. S. Wheeler, among the invidious fling while lecturing at Springfield, responded in such a just but caustic manner, that "Warrington" acknowledged his mistake, but transferred his attack upon individuals to our literature and the Spiritualists in general. If that is "his style" of apology, we hope he will not attempt the amende honorable again, for it but added insult to the injuries, in peace and poetry, and on the whole do not know any better test of the usefulness of a sect than its literature. Of course there is a gradual improvement, at least I hope so; and I hope the day is coming when those scandalous communications, purporting to be from those who have departed this life, will no longer be printed in the BANNER OF LIGHT to the infinite disgust (as it must be) of thousands of the relatives and acquaintances of the lamented dead. I write in the interests and behalf of the boy who taunted his conqueror by saying:

"Well, if I can't whip you, I can make up faces at your sister."

He says:

A good deal that goes by the name, and is well recognized as Spiritualism, is a very disgusting superstition. From time to time I have seen considerable of Spiritualism, and have read Spiritual newspapers with contentment. The literature of the sect seems to me of a very low sort, though I do not deny the ability of some of its writers, in prose

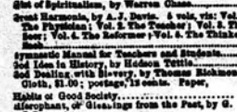
Price-List of Books.



LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books desired, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

	Price.	Postage.
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies.	.75	16
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Johnstone	1.50	20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers,	.50	02
Alice Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker,	1.25	16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase,	.75	20
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Device,	1.50	20
Apocryphal New Testament,	1.25	16
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbot. Paper,	.50	08
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth,	.50	08
A Lecture in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. F. A. Logan,	.15
Arcana of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.25	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child,	.25	04
Arabula, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis,	.50	08
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph, Cloth,	2.00	24
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Aganitha, (translated from the French) by Escaz,	1.75	20
A Similar Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis,	1.50	16
Astro Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor,	2.00	24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. C. Wright, small edition,	.62	12
large do	1.50	12
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Tousley,	.25	4
An Eye Opener, by Sopa. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper,	.50	04
A Hebrew Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story,	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster,	.15	02
Analogy Between the Roots of the Bible and the Roots of modern Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster,	.15	02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H Tuttle,	2.00	24
Biography of Satan, By E. Graves	Price 25 Cents	02
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child,	1.00	12
Blessings of Our Spring, (A Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle,	1.25	16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen,	2.00	24
Book of Poems, by J. Wm. Van Namee. Cloth,
Bunchon of Pains, by Mrs J. B. Adams, a book for



Bloster Family, or the Curse of the Drunkard's Appetite, by Julia M. Friend, with an introduction by E. G. Wright,	1.50	12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M.D.	1.25	16
Christianity No Finality or Spiritualism Superior to Christianity.—Wm. Denton,	.10	02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by H. B. Stevens,	1.00	.16
Descent of man, by Darwin. Two Vols. ($2.00 per Vol),	4.00	.60
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Interesting History,	1.50	20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the ninth edition of 1715,	1.00	12
Devil's Pulpit, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life,	2.00	20
Dawn. A Novel of intense interest to progressive people,	1.75	24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph,	.75	12
Death and Life After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 4, cloth,	.75	12
Errors of the Bible. Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature. By Henry. G. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth,	.50	08
Sister Eli, a Theological Romance,	.50	08
Errors of the Motive, over the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright paper,	.50	04
	.75	12
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen,	1.75	24
Free Thought in Concerning Religion, or Nature v s Theology, by A. J. Davis,	.20	2
Fugitive Wife, by Warren Chase. Paper,	.25	4
Festival Night, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Medium,	.25	2
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase,	.50	04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 4 vols. viz: Vol. 1 The Physician: 2 The Teacher: Vol. 3. The Seer; Vol. 4. The Reformer; Vol. 5. The Thinker.	1.00	80
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students,	.10	2
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.50	16
God Dealing with Slavery, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth, $1.25; postage, 16 cents. Paper,	.75	06
Highs or Good Society,	1.75	.20
Hierophant, or Gleanings from the Past, by G. C. Stewart,	1.00	.08
Health by good Living W. W. Hall M. D.	1.50	20
Herbinger of Health, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper,	.50	4
Cloth,	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper,	.50	4
Cloth,	.75	12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism,	2.00	24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. C. Wright,	.50	08
How and Why I became a Spiritualist, by Hudson Tuttle,	1.50	16
Helen Harlow, By L. Waisbrooker,	1.25	16
How to Bathe, by H. F. Miller, M. D., paper,	.50	4
Cloth,	.75	12
Gadgad'in, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates Ajar,	1.50	16
Hollow Globe,	2.00	20
History and Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy compared,	1.25	16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe

		20
History of the
	1.50	16
Hit. by Dr. Mary H. Wilter,	1.25	16
Intuition, by Mrs. P. Kingsley,	.25	4
Important Truths, a book for every child,	.50	8
Is the Bible Divine? by S. J. Finney, paper,	.50	08
Cloth,	.75	12
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con,	.25	2
Inquirer's Text Book, by Robert Cooper,	1.25	16
Immortality Considered from Spirit Land, Mrs. M. B. Park, Medium,	1.25	16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds,	1.25	16
Infidel, or Inquirer's Text Book by Robert Cooper,	1.25	16
Is it the Despair of Science? by W. D. Gunning,	.15	02
Jesus of Nazareth, by Alexander Smyth,	.50	08
Jehovah Unveiled, or the Character of the Jewish Deity Delineated,	.25	4
Joan of Arc. A Biography, translated from the French, by Sarah M. Grimke,	1.00	12
Kidder's Secrets of Bee Keeping. Price, paper 75 cents. Bound 50 cents. Boards,	.75	08
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale 2 vo. 870 pages, best edition yet published,	4.00	40
Keith. Life of Manifestations. Translated by George Sale, Cont. 12 mo., 478 pages,	1.50	.24
Life Line of the Lone One, by Warren Chase,	1.00	12
Life's Secret, a Book for Young Men,	.50	8
Life of Thomas Paine, with copious extracts and explanatory observations of his writings, by G. Vale,	1.00	16
Life of Jesus, by Ernest Renan,	1.75	20
Love and the Home, by P. B. Randolph,	1.50	20
Logic of the Golden Age, by T. L. Harris,	1.00	20
Lessons Proverbial for Young Men, as a manual for Social Life, by G. B. Stebbins,	1.50	16
Life and Moral Actions of Confucius, by M. L. P. Stedman,	1.50	16
Letters to Elder Miles Grant, by Rev. Moses Hull,	.25	02
Living Present, Dead Past. H. C. Wright. Cloth,	.75	12
Paper,	.50	08
Lyceum Guide. Cloth cover,	.50	08
Boards .75, 16	Paper cover,	.50	08
My Love and I, by Abby M. Laffin Pierce,	1.50	20
Mystery, or Leaves from the Tree of Life, by J. Wm. Van Namee,	1.50	20
Magnetism, by Myron Colony,	1.00	12
Marriage and Parentage, by Henry G. Wright,	1.00	12
Marriage of Joseph Smith, by D. M. Bennett,	.50	08
Midnight Prayer,	.10	2
Moses and the Israelites, by Moncure Mason,	1.00	12
Old Testament Prime Life,	1.00	12

Memoirs of the Bread of Life, by D. S. Gothrell,	.25	02
Manual for Children, (for Lyceums,) by A. J. Davis, Cloth,	.75	8
Paper,	.50	4
Mediums,	.25	2

Nature's Divine Revelations, by Andrew Jackson Davis,	2.50	40
New Testament Miracles and Modern Miracles, by J. H. Fowler,	.10	4
Next Step of Woman, by Lovo,	.10	2
Ordeal of Life. Through Dr. J. G. Grimes, Medium,	.75	04
Orthodoxy False, since Spiritualism is True, by Wm. Denton,	.10	02
Our Planet, Geology by Denton,	1.50	20
Optimism, The Lesson of Love,	.75	17
Origin of Species by Darwin,	2.00	24
Origin of Civilization and Primitive Condition of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock,	2.00	24
One Religion, Many Creeds, by Rev. Wm. Adams,	1.50	20
Origin of species, with Notes and References, by G. F. Kittredge,	.10	.02
Persons and Events, by J. J. Davis,	1.50	20
Poems of Nature, by P. B. Randolph,	1.50	20
Physiology of Woman, by C. Morril, M. D.	1.50	20
Planchette—The despair of Science, by Epes Sargent,	1.25	16
Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. A. J. Davis, Paper 60 cts; postage 8 cts. Cloth,	1.00	.16
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M. King,	1.75	.24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lizzie Doten,	1.25	16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Horace Wood, Medium. Cloth,	.50	08
Paper,	.25	04
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King,	1.00	16
Rules for forming Spiritual Circles, by Emma Hardinge,	.15	02
Sexual Physiology, by R. T. Trall, M. D.	2.00	30
Strange Visitors, Dictated through a clairvoyant	1.50	20
Spiritual Harp,	2.00	24
Abridged Edition	1.00	14
Sequel to The Love Life, by the Spirit of Dr. R. K. Rose,	.25	2
Spiritual Tracts by Judge Edmonds,	.20	4
Self Abnegationist; or the true King and Queen, by H. C. Wright, Paper,	.50	4
Spiritualism, or Directions in Development, by A. M. Ladin Ferree,	.25	2
Soul Affinity, by A. B. Child, M. D.,	.25	02
Sexology or the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. E. O. G. Willard,	2.00	24
Short Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Emma Hardinge, Paper,	.75
Cloth,	1.00
The Bible in India,	2.00	20
The Faithful Guardian, an Inspirational Story, by J. William Van Namee,	1.50	16
The Bible in the Balance,	1.50	16
That Terrible Question, by Moses Hull,	.10	02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. B. Davis,	.5	02
The Dynamic Code, by Leroy Sunderland,	1.50	12
Tale of A Physician, by A. J. Davis,	1.50	16
The Future Life, by Mrs. A. Conant,	1.50	16
The Question Settled, by Moses Hull,	1.50	16
The Gates Wide Open, by George Wood,	1.50	20
The Ghost of Ellis, by Hon. H. Tuttle,	1.00	16
The Orphan's Progress, by Mrs. H. M. Green,	.75
The Pearl Diver by Dr. G. W. Kirby	.15
The Gospel of Good and Evil, by Silver,	1.50	16
The Trance, by Leroy Sunderland,	1.00	12
The Great South-West, by W. Nicolay,	1.00	14
The Merits of Jesus Christ and the Merits of Thomas Paine are a substitute for merits in others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright	.25	2
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire. An American Edition, 576 octavo pages, two steel plates, Largest and most correct edition in the United States. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $10.00,	5.00	60
The Diegesis, by Rev. Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a history of origin, evidence, and early history of Christianity,	2.00	24
The Inner Mystery, an Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten,	.25	2
The Deluge, William Denton,	.15	2
The Voices, by Hon. Warren Barlow,	1.25	16
The Ignorant Schoolmaster, Voltaire,	.25	2
The Woman who Dared, by Epes Sargent,	1.50	20
The Theological and Miscellaneous Writings of Thomas Paine,	3.00	24
Thomas Paine's Pilgrimage in the Spirit World.	.75	.06
The System of Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D' Holbach,	2.00	24
The Psalms of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover,	.50	06
Cloth,	.75	12
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D.	.20	02
The Festivals, by A. J. Davis,	1.75	24
The Yah o, a Satirical Rhapsody.	.70	.08
The Rosicrucian Dream Book, compiled from all ancient and modern Works, by P. B. Randolph,	.50	.06
The Art of Conversation,	1.50	.16
The Arts of Writing, Reading, and Speaking,	1.50	.16
Undercliff on Mesmerism, Post-paid,	1.50
Unhappy Marriages, by A. B. Child,	.25	2
Unwelcome Child, by Mary C. Wright, Paper,	.50	08
Cloth,	.75	12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow,	.25	.02
Voices of Creation,	.75	.08
Vital Force, now wasted and how preserved, by H. F. Miller, M. D. Paper, 50 cts; Cloth,	1.00	12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Sara,	1.00	12
What is Right, William Denton,	.10	.02
What is spiritualism, and Shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? by Mrs. M. M. King,	.25	2
Whatever is, is Right, by A. B. Child, M. D.	1.25	16
Writings of Omahe,	.10	02
Wolf in sheep's Clothing, or God in the Constitution, by Moses Hull,	.10	.02
Your Book of Spiritualism. Cloth,	1.25	20
Paper,	1.00	16

WE ARE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular rates, and, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as MAY BE DESIRED. If sent by mail, one-fifth more than the regular cost of the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. In making remittances for books, buy postal orders when practicable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

H. SNOW,

319 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, Orton's Anti-Tobacco Preparation; Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & o.'s Golden Pens, Pincheties, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. ☞ Remittances in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HERMAN SNOW, P. O. Box 117, San Francisco, Cal.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,

No. 614 NORTH FIFTH ST., ST. LOUIS, MO.,

KEEP constantly on hand all the publications of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular liberal literature, including RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL and BANNER OF LIGHT, Magnolia and Photographs, Parlor Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

THE MAGNETIC TREATMENT.

SEND TEN CENTS TO DR. ANDREW STONE, TROY N. Y., and receive a large, fully illustrated book on this system of vitalizing treatment.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railroad—Council Bluffs and Omaha Line—Depot North Wells street

Ticket Office, south-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Ocean Rapids Passenger	8.30 a. m.	8.00 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10.45 a. m.	8.50 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.30 a. m.	*3.30 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	*10.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	*10.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Dixon Passenger	*4.00 p. m.	*11.15 a. m.

Freeport Line.

Freeport and Dunleith Pass	*9.00 a. m.	*7.15 a. m.
Freeport and Dunleith Pass	*7.45 p. m.	*6.30 p. m.
Rockford, Elgin, Fox River and State Line	*4.00 p. m.	*11.15 a. m.
St. Charles and Elgin Passenger	*8.15 p. m.	*6.45 a. m.
Junction Passenger	5.30 p. m.	8.30 a. m.
Lombard Accommodation	*2.10 p. m.	*9.50 a. m.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukee Mail	*9.00 a. m.	*10.10 a. m.
Day Express	*9.45 a. m.	*6.40 p.m.
Evanston Accommodation	*1.00 a. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Rose Hill, Evanston, and Highland Park	1.00 p. m.	2.40 p. m.
Afternoon Pass	*3.00 p.m.	*11.10 a. m.
Kenosha Pass	*8.10 p m.	*9.10 a.m.
Waukegan Passenger	*5.30 p.m.	*8.30 a. m.
Weekend Night Passenger	*6.00 p.m.	*7.30 a.m.
Milwaukee do	11.00 p.m.	5.00 a.m.

Kenosha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street Depot.

Wisconsin Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street

St Paul Express	*10.00 a. m.	*7.15 p. m.
Night Passenger	*6.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.
Janesville Accommodation	*5.00 p. m.	*10.15 a. m.
Woodstock Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*10.10 a. m.
Barrington Accommodation	6.15 p. m.	7.45 a. m.

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.

H. P. Stanwood, General Ticket Agent

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road,

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. Ticket Office 56 South Clark street.

Mail	*6.30 a. m.	*7.00 p m
Special N Y Express	*9.00 a. m.	*4.00 p. m.
Kinsard Accommodation	*2.30 p m	*10.30 a. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	8.15 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Night Express	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Line.

Day Express	*7.30 a. m.	*7.00 p. m.
Night "	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

F. R. MOORE, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 56 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Railroad—Union Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office Lake St., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

	7.00 a. m.	*9.00 p. m
	9.00 a. m.	*4.00 p. m.
	3.10 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
	5.00 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
	p. m.	*3.00 a. m

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Hinsdale Accommodation	*7.45 a. m.	*8.15 p. m
Mail and Express	7.30 a. m.	3.40 p. m.
Pacific Fast Line	*10.45 a. m.	*4.15 p.m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*1.45 p. m.	*5.50 p. m.
Madison Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Evening Express	*9.00 p. m.	*7.30 p. m
Aurora Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*6.15 p. m.	*8.50 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	9.00 p. m.	7.30 a. m

ROSWELL HANAN, Superintendent.

SAMUEL POWELL, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office in Gt. Cent. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	*9.30 a. m.	*7.45 p. m
Cairo Express	*5.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
Kankak Day Passenger	*2.15 a. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Kankak Night Passenger	*6.30 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.

On Saturdays this train will leave at 4.00 p. m.

Chicago Passenger	4.30 p. m.	*9.00 a. m.
Hyde Park and Oak Woods	*9.00 a. m.	*7.45 a. m.
" " "	*10.30 a. m.	*9.30 a. m.
" " "	*2.00 p. m.	*1.00 p. m.
" " "	*3.30 p. m.	*2.45 p. m.
" " "	*5.00 p. m.	*4.15 p. m.
" " "	*6.30 p. m.	*5.45 p. m.

(St. Louis through Train.)

Day Express	*9.30 a. m.	*8.15 p. m
Fast Line	*12.30 p. m.	*7.00 a. m

M. HOUGHT, Gen'l Supt.

W. F. JOHNSON, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Madison and Canal Street.

Mail	*9.00 a. m.	9.10 p. m.
Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	6.00 p. m.
Atlantic Express	8.15 p. m.	8.00 p. m.
New York Express	9.00 p. m.	9.00 a. m.
Valparaiso Accommodation	*5.30 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.

W. G. CLEMAN, Gen. West'n Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st.

Chicago and St. Louis—Depot, corner Madison and Canal sts

Express Mail	*9:15 a. m.	*9:00 p. m.
Joliet Accommodation	*4:30 p. m.	*9:45 a. m.
Night Express	*9:30 p. m.	*6:00 p. m.
Lightning Express	9.00 p. m.	*2:30 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and sundays excepted. ||Except Monday.

E. B. ELLSWORTH, Pres. & Gen'l Superintendent.
A. NEWMAN, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Office 55 Dearborn st.

CHICAGO, DANVILLE AND VINCENNES RAILROAD.

Milwaukee Depot—Corner Canal and Kinzie Sts., West Side. Freight Office at C., G. A. & L. C. Co.'s Office, corner Halsted and Fulton sts.

Mail Train Chicago time, 8.45 p. m. 9.15 a. m.

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, cor Van Buren and Sherman Streets.

Pacific day Express	10:00 a.m.	4:15 p.m.
Fast Accommodation	*4:30 p.m.	9:50 a.m.
Pacific Night Express	10.00 p.m.	7.20 a.m.

An elegant parlor sleeping car is attached to the 10 p. m. train, running through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

A. H. SWEET, Gen'l Passenger Agent.
R. R. JONES, Gen'l Ticket Clerk.

P. A. HALL, Asst'Gen Superintendent.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

Cincinnati Express	*9:45 a. m.	9:50 a. m
Columbus Express	*9:45 a. m.	*9:50 p. m.
Cincinnati Night Express	11:45 p. m.	*6:50 p. m.
Columbus Night Express	11:45 p. m.

Ag't, Ticket Office Corner Randolph.

CHRISTIANITY:

ITS ORIGIN, NATURE AND TENDENCY considered in the light of Astro-Theology.

By D. W. Hull.

This book is, so far as it goes, a thorough review of the Origin of the Christian system, showing it all to be plagiarized from ancient heathens. Being unlike almost any other work ever written on the subject, it cannot but be deeply interesting to all. Its explanations of Scripture are lucid, and so self-evidently correct that no one can gainsay them.

Price at retail, 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

THE RELIGIOUS PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and Spirit world. By Thomas Paine, through the hand of Horace G. Wood, Medium.

Price 25 cents, postage 4 cents. For sale at this Office

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR PSYCHOMETRIC RESEARCHES AND DISCOVERIES. By William and Elizabeth M. F. Denton.

This valuable and highly interesting work has become a part of the standard literature of the country.

Price, $1.50cts, Postage, 20cts.

LECTURES ON GEOLOGY, THE PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR PLANET. A valuable scientific work.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

COMMON SENSE THOUGHTS ON THE BIBLE. For Common Sense people. Twelfth Thousand, revised and enlarged.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

THE DELUGE, IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

WHAT IS RIGHT. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

BE THYSELF. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

For sale at The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL Office.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW WORKS BY PROF. DENTON.

" ORTHODOXY FALSE,

Since Spiritualism is True."

Price, 10 cents: postage, 2 cents.

THE IRRECONCILABLE RECORDS, OR GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

100 pages. Price: paper, 25 cents, postage, 4 cts cloth, 40 cents, postage 8 cts.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

CONJUGAL SINS

AGAINST THE

LAWS OF LIFE AND HEALTH,

AND

THEIR EFFECT ON THE FATHER MOTHER AND CHILD.

BY AUGUSTUS K. GARDNER, A. M., M. D.

Late Professor of Diseases of Females and Chemical Medical Midwifery in the New York Medical College.

CONTENTS.

I. The Modern Women' Physical Deterioration. II. Local disease in children and its cause. III. At what age should one Marry. IV. Is Continence physically injurious. V. Continence. VI. The pernicious results of Physical Excess. VII. Methods used to prevent Conception and their consequences VIII. Infanticide. IX. Conjugal relations during the period of Menstration. X. Conjugal relations between the old. XI. Marriage between Old Men and Young Girls XII. What may be done With Health in View, and the fearof God before us. Appendix.

Price in cloth, $1.50, postage 16 cents; in paper, $1.00, Postage 8 cents. The Trade Supplied.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 and 189 So. Clark St., Chicago Ill.

THE FUTURE LIFE

As Described and Portrayed by Spirits.

Through Mrs. Elizabeth Sweet.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY

JUDGE J. W. EDMONDS.

CONTENTS.

Chapter I.—The Holy City.
Chapter II.—Spiritual Message.
Chapter III.—The Spirit Echo.
Chapter IV.—Powers and responsibilities of Mind
Chapter V.—Communication from a Spirit.
Chapter VI. Spirit life.
Chapter VII.—A Picture of the Future.
Chapter VIII.—Sacred Writer.
Chapter IX.—Remarkable Words.
Chapter X.—Interview with Pollock.
Chapter XI.—New Desires.
Chapter XII.—John C. Calhoun.
Chapter XIII.—Interview with Webster.
Chapter XIV.—A Second Visit.
Chapter XV.—Another Interview.
Chapter XVI.—Reformation.
Chapter XVII.—The Path of Progression.
Chapter XVIII.—Valley of the Shadow of Death.
Chapter XIX.—A Mirror.
Chapter XX.—The Council.
Chapter XXI.—A Beautiful Lesson.
Chapter XXII.—Retrospection.
Chapter XXIII.—The Suicide.
Chapter XXIV.—The Preacher.
Chapter XXV.—Reception of Spiritualism.
Chapter XXVI.—The Drunkard.
Chapter XXVII.—The Organ-Boy
Chapter XXVIII.—The Man of Ease and Fashion.
Chapter XXIX.—The Self Satisfied.
Chapter XXX.—Natural Development of the Soul.
Chapter XXXI.—Voltaire and Wolsey.
Chapter XXXII.—The Cynic.
Chapter XXXIII.—The Second Birth.
Chapter XXXIV.—The Slave.
Chapter XXXV.—The Queen.
Chapter XXXVI.—A Scene in Spirit-Land.
Chapter XXXVII.—The Miser.
Chapter XXXVIII.—Spiritual Influence.
Chapter XXXIX.—The New City.
Chapter XL.—The Erring One.
Chapter XLI.—The Idiot.
Chapter XLII.—The Beggar.
Chapter XLIII.—Insignificance of Man.
Chapter XLIV.—Spiritual Capabilities of the soul.
Chapter XLV.—The Skeptic.
Chapter XLVI.—Realities of Spirit-Life.
Chapter XLVII.—The Convict.
Chapter XLVIII.—The Soul's Aspiration.
Chapter XLIX.—The Dying Girl.
Chapter L.—The Inner Temple.
Chapter LI.—The Foolish Mother.
Chapter LII.—The Disobedient Son.
Chapter LIII.—Spiritual Sensibilities.
Chapter LIV.—Practical Nature of Spirit-Life.
Chapter LV.—Glimpse of a Higher Life.
Chapter LVI.—Conclusion.
Chapter LVII.—A Word from Voltaire.
Chapter LVIII.—Home of Unhappy Spirits.
Chapter LIX.—Experience of Voltaire.
Appendix.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.
For sale at this office.

LYCEUM GUIDE,

A Collection of

SONGS, HYMNS, AND CHANTS,

Lessons, Readings and Recitations,

MARCHES AND CALISTHENICS,

(With Illustrations,)

TOGETHER WITH

Programmes and Exercises,

The Whole Designed for the Use of PROGRESSIVE SUNDAY LYCEUMS.

By J. M. Peebles, J. O. Barrett, and Emma Tuttle,

The Musical Department by J. G. Clark.

THIS NEW BOOK FOR SUNDAY LYCEUMS contains all the excellent features of previous works, with such improvements as the practical experience of Lyceums during the past six years suggested.

In appendix contains a large number of letters from Conductors of Lyceums and friends of the Institution, illustrating its beneficial influence, and giving such valuable information pertaining thereto.

The book is complete in every particular, and is illustrated with THIRTEEN ENGRAVINGS of Banners, Emblematic Standards for Groups, Guidebearers, &c.

PRICE—In paper cover, 60 cents; postage, six cents. In boards, flexible, strong, and durable, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In cloth, extra, gold-lettered sides, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. From which prices liberal discount will be made on quantities for Lyceums.

39,308 CURES

BY THE

POSITIVE & NEGATIVE POWDERS.

IN the following list, the total number of cures of different diseases, which have been performed by the Great Spiritual Remedy, PROF. SPENCER'S POSITIVE AND NEGATIVE POWDERS, is indicated by the figures which follow the name of the disease. The kind of Powders which should be used in each disease is indicated by the letters "P" or "N" or "P & N," which follow the name of the disease; "P" standing for Positive, "N" for Negative, and "P & N" for Positive and Negative.

Neuralgia, P, 2,137; Dyspepsia, P, 2,074; Asthma, P, 2,215; Catarrh, P, 997; Chills and Fever, P & N, 2,419; Rheumatism, P, 1,313; Painful Menstruation, P, 1,667; Suppressed Menstruation, P, 914; Female Weaknesses, P, 1,661; Fever, P, 2,286; Amaurosis (Blindness), N, 85; Coughs and Colds, P, 1,789; Heart Disease, P, 483; Diarrhœa, P, 1,114; Headache, P, 1,541; Dysentery, P, 1,326; Liver Complaint, P, 760; Pains and Aches, P, 981; Deafness, N, 68; Bronchitis, P, 825; Piles, P, 218; Chorea, P, 112; Worms, P, 280; Inflammations, P, 981; Paralysis, P, 76; Acidity of the Stomach, P, 559; Earache, P, 466; Tooth-ache, P, 505; Flatulence, P, 988; Hysteria, P, 94; Diphtheria, P, 96; Spermatorrhœa (Seminal Weakness), P, 1, 46; Erysipelas, P, 262; Constipation, P, 396; Loss of Taste and Loss of Smell, P, 82; Nervousness, P, 472; St. Vitus' Dance, P, 98; Disease of Prostate Gland, P, 68; Sciatica, P, 52; Neuralgia, P, 1,469; Tumors and Cancers, P, 88; Falling of Womb, P, 317; Involuntary Urination, P, 59; Influenza, P, 270; Dumb Ague, P, N, 201; Scrofula and Scrofulous Sore Eyes, P, 575; Typhoid and Typhus Fever, Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

The Circle for Spiritual Phenomena.

By request we write our views on this subject.

We hold that the Circle is to Spiritualism what the class meetings are to Methodism, the prayer meetings are to the Baptists or Presbyterians, or what Masses are to the Catholics. Where there are two or three families of Spiritualists in a neighborhood, they should meet at least once in two weeks for circle meetings. It would be well for them to have a room in the upper story of the house, dedicated to this special purpose, well lighted, well ventilated, with furniture adapted to the uses of the room. The papering of the room to be in pale blue, violet, peach blossom, or pink, as a back-ground, studded with stars of gold and silver. There should be musical instruments belonging to the room, such as are fully adapted to the use of spiritual fingers, rather than lungs,—such as the harp, guitar, organ, violin, or piano forte. These instruments should not be allowed to be taken out of the room. There should be bells of different tones, made of fine metal—one or two of pure flint glass. The room should be furnished with writing materials, pencils, quills, pens, drawing materials,—in fact, every thing requisite for the soul-culture and the development of the mind.

The place of meeting thus prepared, we would advise those intending to meet in the room, to come together one morning once a month, listening to:

1st. Invocations or Prayer;

2d. Select Readings, either in prose or poetry, on subjects eminently calculated to inspire us unto good.

3d. Thirty minutes conversation on spiritual subjects.

Finale, in music or singing, or both.

This meeting should be called the "Monthly Conversationse for Spiritual Worship," and it would be well to hold it on the first Sunday morning of each month. We would advise the circle proper to adopt the following rules for their government, viz:

1st. To choose one of their number to preside as head of the circle, whose duty it shall be to see that the business of the circle be properly conducted, and to hold his place six months, acting as secretary to the circle, keeping a correct record of every meeting, of those who were present, who not, as well as what transpired.

2d. The circle to meet promptly at, say 8½ o'clock P. M.; that is, each member to be in his or her place in the circle at this time,—the sitting to continue one hour at the least, and never to exceed one hour and a half.

3d. The circle to form around a mahogany table, in cane seated chairs, numbering from ten to thirteen, more or less in numbers as the circle may contain. The table should be made out of clear lumber, free from sap or knot or shake, and should be also free from paint, varnish, or stain. The members should attend carefully to the cleanliness of their persons, studiously avoiding all cosmetics whatever, the use of tobacco, whisky, or intoxicating drinks, or food calculated to excite the nervous system or the passions. They should enter this sanctuary of the angels quietly, in order, and as nearly at the same time as may be.

4th. Taking their places orderly, as follows: the most positive in temperament to sit at the head of the table as number one; then number two, the next positive, and so on until all are seated. We would advise the members of the circle to sit a few minutes in profound and silent meditation, each asking the angels of good to aid, direct, and counsel them in this their circle. After which place the hands on the table, letting them rest lightly and easily upon it, the little finger of the right hand of number one resting on the little finger of the left hand of number two, and so on until the circle is completed.

5 h. Open with selected reading, singing and music, or invocation. Let this part of the service be brief, after which sit in patience, waiting for visitors from the Summer Land.

6th. This phase or portion of the time should not exceed thirty-five minutes in duration, and the circle should close up in the strictest order, by invoking the angels of good through the law, to be with us. Then singing and music. Then separation.

SYMPTOMS TO BE OBSERVED DURING THESE SITTINGS.

1st. Perspiration of the palms of the hands sufficient to wet the table under the hands.

2d. Cold, clammy, or viscous cuticle, extending well up the arm, and frequently affecting all the person. 2 d stage or symptoms may be noted as the warm, viscous condition of the system. The third stage, the dry, husky skin of a silky texture, seldom, if ever, moist.

3d. Lifting of the palm of the hand, under the hand, or pressure upward. We opine that during this stage of the development the table is being charged with the nerve property or force of the human system, from the bodies of those who make up the circle.

4th. We will next notice a tremulous motion or quivering of the fibre of the wood, or table, sometimes so powerful as to be tangible to every member of the circle. This motion is continuous, beginning in the table and extending to the most negative members of the circle, sometimes accompanied with a somniferous tendency, and occasionally producing a sound and healthful sleep. During this stage of the development members of the circle thus affected will frequently be impressed with the ailments of those who are diseased, sometimes with the very thoughts of some one or more of the members of the circle; sometimes clear spirit intuition will develop. We should, however, be very careful how we accept communications thus given as from spirits, for very frequently these impressions are but the reflections of or from the mind of one or more of the members of the circle, hence are to be carefully dissected in order to determine whether they be of the spirit out of the form or of the spirit in the form.

5 h. The next development will be a violent spasmodic action,—such as violent pounding on the table with the open hand or closed fist; stamping of the feet,; shaking of the body; the head in spasmodic action; violent shaking of the whole body, with great effort to speak. Again the subject will grip the hand of the next members to them in a firm, vise-like grip, then suddenly spring to their feet, breaking away from the circle; frequently jumping about several times flaunting, sometimes uttering a wild, incoherent gibberish—an unknown tongue. During this spasmodic stage of development, [illegible] breaks away from the circle, close up and continue its [illegible] the air under the table or [illegible] of the sitters, several degrees [illegible] the region of the hands or heart and head.

7th. We conclude that the phenomena of Spiritualism requires, first, the nerve-force of man—called by Ashburner "Animal Magnetism;" by Reichenbach, "odic or od-force," and which we believe to be the property in our own natures, out of which the spirit body or force has its birth, and should be called the physics of spirits, or spirit property.

8th. The mediums form the magnetic battery; he spirits form the electric battery. This was he material out of which Jacob's vision of the ladder and angels was formed.

Finally, any number of persons, from three to twenty, cannot sit one evening in a week for three months without producing phenomena unaccounted for by science, and only accounted for as yet as spirit or an intelligent force, not dependent on the members of any one of them for its thoughts.

Every circle should guard against vain and idle questions. Never allow foolish things or words to occupy the time of the circle. We have foolish things enough of this life without carrying them into the sublimities of spirit life.

We believe circles may be formed for the following purposes, and with advantage to all concerned:

1st. The divinity of the soul and the worship of God, as well as the communion of angels.

2d. The helps and governments of the family of society and the State.

3d. For educational purposes, social, physical, and mental.

4th. For business purposes of any and all kinds. But we confine all Spiritualists to never ask the angels of God to help them, so long as they can get along without doing so, and then only in extreme cases.

We wish others better qualified than we are would give us their views on this subject.

A Voice from Maine—the Journal—Spirit Artists.

BROTHER JONES: Please publish the following, and greatly oblige your readers in this vicinity, who are more numerous, I believe, than those of any other Spiritualist paper. Your paper deserves a still wider circulation, and I mean that it shall have some new subscribers from this place before long:

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHY AND THE FINE ARTS.

I wish to inform your readers of an occurrence which has lately greatly excited the usually quiet city of Ellsworth, bringing consternation and conviction to some; comfort and consolation to others who receive the most convincing proof that "travellers do return, not one but many, cheering and making the heart glad.

Mr. S. B. Moore, a photographist and a long resident of Ellsworth, became convinced about a year since that he possessed mediumistic powers, and that he was able to take likenesses of departed friends. This fact, at the time, was made known to a few from whom Mr. Moore naturally expected encouragement, but who immediately declared it to be a humbug, and Mr. Moore an impostor. Finding himself thus treated, he allowed it to pass as such, and turned his attention again to his usual business, and the matter was soon lost sight of. Nothing farther transpired until a short time since, when Mrs. E. A. Blair, Spirit Artist, coming into our midst, the subject was again revived, and Mr. Moore was asked and readily consented to pass the scrutiny of this powerful medium, which he was able to do (thanks to the Spirit World) with the most satisfactory results. Mr. Blair sat, and a picture was taken, which was immediately recognized by both as an old acquaintance. Since then, Mr. Moore has taken several, not as a business, although earnestly solicited to make it such, but to gratify his friends, and for which he will take no consideration whatever.

These pictures have given unexceptionable satisfaction; and nearly every one have thus far been recognized. Many of these have been taken under circumstances and in such positions as to positively disprove any attempt at trickery or collusion in the matter, if such proof were needed where one is individually so well known as Mr. Moore.

Mrs. E. A. Blair stopped with us a few weeks, giving some remarkable tests, and is now in Bangor. With the wonderful manifestations of these two remarkable mediums to cheer us on, we feel greatly encouraged and revived, and our numbers have greatly increased. Too much encouragement cannot be given to yourselves and others who are so earnestly advocating our Harmonial Philosophy.

A. P. FARRAR.

Ellsworth, Maine, Aug. 15, 1871.

Letter from Dr. D. P. Kayner.

BROTHER JONES:—Last Sunday morning I attended a lecture at the Christian Church in this place, by our young Brother Dinkelspiel, on the subject, "Were are the Mighty Dead?" There was a good audience assembled, and our brother handled the subject vigorously and well.

After his discourse, I was called upon to make some remarks, and responding, told them, "Two important questions have been presented by our brother—Do our departed friends still live? And can they return and communicate with those still in the form?" These questions I answered by giving facts, which had come under my own observation, in such a manner that even skeptics in the audience came to me after the close of the meeting, and acknowledged as a quiescence therein.

In the evening, I learned that Bro. Dinkelspiel secured to a full house, with good effect, but I could not be present, as I was engaged for a lecture in the Patten School House, in Ogle County, where I spoke on the subjects connected with the Spiritual Philosophy, to a good and attentive audience.

Last evening I again lectured in the Church, in Belvidere, on "Sight-Seeing or Clairvoyances," to a good house.

I am engaged again to speak Sunday morning and evening, September 3 d, at the Patten School House or at a grove in that vicinity, when, if the weather is good, there is a promise of a great turn-out.

On my route I am giving tests in Clairvoyant examinations, that are opening the eyes of the blind, with regard to our philosophy.

Belvidere, Ill., Aug. 20 1871.

THOSE WHO WISH to have this paper discontinued when the time is up to which it is paid for, should notify us of that wish two weeks before such time expires, as it takes that time to get it out of the mailing machine. When an order to discontinue is given by those in arrears, remittance should be made to square up in full, including the two weeks which the paper will be mailed the subscriber after such notice is given.

☞ We are in want of dues for the JOURNAL. When it is not convenient to pay all, let us have a part, as an earnest of a good will. Wake up! we are in earnest.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON.

Testimonial.

L. A. Sawyer, late of Texas, now of North Liverett, Mass, wrote a letter to Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated healing medium—148 4th Ave., Chicago—for a diagnosis and prescription, relating a case which included a complication of diseases and suffering almost unparalleled—his nervous excitability being such as to drive sleep and rest from him.

After receiving the diagnosis and prescription he wrote Mrs. Robinson as follows:

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON—Dear Sister: Your prescription of August 10th came duly to hand. I am shy of yielding to any influence, that it has taken some consideration to decide about acting upon it; but I am now resolved to do so.

* * * * * *

Last night I wore the papers, and had sweet sleep.

Yours gratefully,
LEVERETT A. SAWYER.

It will be remembered by those who know of the nature of Mrs. Robinson's mediumship, that she diagnoses and prescribes entirely while under spirit control, and that a band of spirits who control her, delegate one of their number to attend upon each sick patient until they are healed, and that they get en-rapport with, and heal the same, by virtue of the magnetized paper, or positive and negative powers imparted to such paper, which Mrs. Robinson sends to the sick person by the direction of her spirit guides, together with such other remedies as they order.

However strange this process of treatment may seem to those who fail to investigate or observe the effect produced by spirit power in healing disease through media, nevertheless it is true and of daily occurrence.

As a case in point: Mrs. Margaret Robertson, of Enon Valley, Pennsylvania, writing in regard to her mother, who was treated by Mrs. Robinson for a very bad complication of diseases, and who was a very great skeptic, says: "Mother cannot but admit that she has been worked upon by invisible powers. She felt as if human hands lifted the fallen bowels back to where they belonged, and that they still remain in place. She is fully cured."

Another case, in Minnesota: A lady said that on applying the magnetized paper a spirit materialized himself and conversed with her,—told his name and profession, and time in spirit life (he was a well-known spirit belonging to the band of spirits who control Mrs. Robinson); and that he treated her from day to day until she recovered, "more like a loving brother than any other person would."

In cases where spirits are thus enabled to materialise themselves, the sick persons are mediumistic. In other cases they perform like cures, but are invisible to the senses of the sick person operated upon.

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled THE SUNDAY QUESTION, AND SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.

This work consists of 123 large, closely printed pages. It is an exhaustive review of the so-called Sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL for any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we will send the same work and the JOURNAL for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the JOURNAL three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the JOURNAL will avail him or herself of his generous offer, and thus secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street Chicago, Ill.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

MICROSCOPES.

We are happy to announce to our numerous readers that we have made arrangements to be supplied with the very best LOW-PRICED MICROSCOPES that are manufactured. These we are now handling have none of the defects complained of in most cheap microscopes. They are made of the VERY BEST materials, are finished in GOOD SHAPE, and are not only well adapted for use, but are also ORNAMENTAL.

No. 1855 MICROSCOPE,—Brass body—6 inches high,—One Object Lens:—POWERS 40 DIAMETERS.

Neatly packed in a Mahogany Case, with one prepared object, and sold for the low price of $3.00.

No 1860, The UNIVERSAL HOUSEHOLD MICROSCOPE,—Price $5.50.—The Most Convenient, Complete, and Powerful Microscope ever offered for this low price.

It has the important parts of a first-class instrument, is readily adjusted, and well calculated not only to amuse, but to instruct. It has a firm stand for the eye to rest on, and the facility for inclining to any angle, for convenience of observation; an achromatic glass piece of double-lens, and two object glasses of different powers, with one prepared object, all packed in a neat wooden box with hinges and hooks. It has a magnifying power of 20 to 180 diameters, or 400 to 10,000 times the area.

We can heartily recommend either of the above instruments, and those who cannot afford the higher priced one, need not be deterred from sending for the other, for it will give them perfect satisfaction, though not admitting of so wide a range of observation and close examination.

☞ These Microscopes can be sent only by EXPRESS; they cannot go in the mails. Our friends will please recollect this when ordering and giving shipping directions.

PREPARED OBJECTS.

We have a large variety of objects neatly prepared and mounted on glass prepared all ready for use, and colored or other of the above instruments. Price 50 per doz. or 15 cts. each. Must be ordered by express.

BOOK OF THE MICROSCOPE.

An interesting Book on the Microscope, with over 400 Illustrations, and directions for coloring and preparing objects with the same, will be sent to any address on receipt of 75 cents.

 For any or all of the above goods, address the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

[NEW EDITION]

THE BIOGRAPHY OF SATAN:

Or, an Historical Exposition

OF THE

DEVIL AND HIS FIERY DOMINIONS.

Disclosing the Oriental Origin of the Belief in a DEVIL and Future ENDLESS PUNISHMENT. Also the Pagan Origin of the Scriptural terms, BOTTOMLESS PIT, LAKE OF FIRE AND BRIMSTONE, KEYS OF HELL, CHAINS OF DARKNESS, CASTING OUT DEVILS, EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT, THE WORM THAT NEVER DIETH, ETC., ETC.

By K. Graves.

CONTENTS.

CHAP.
Address to the Reader.
1. Evils and demoralising effects of the doctrine of endless punishment.
2. Ancient traditions respecting the origin of evil and the Devil.
3. A wicked Devil and an endless Hell not taught in the Jewish Scriptures.
4. Explanation of the words "Devils" and "Hell" in the Old Testament.
5. God (and not the Devil) the author of evil according to the Bible.
6. God and the Devil originally twin-brothers, and known by the same titles.
7. Origin of the terms, "Kingdom of Heaven," "Gates of Hell," etc.; also of the traditions respecting the Dragon chasing the woman (see Rev. 12), the woman clothed with the sun, etc.
8. Hell first instituted in the skies. Its origin and descent from above.
9. Origin of the tradition respecting "the bottomless pit."
10. Origin of the belief in a "Lake of fire and brimstone."
11. Where is Hell—ancient notions respecting its character and origin.
12. Origin of the idea of man's evil thoughts and actions being prompted by a Devil.
13. The Christian's Devil—where imported or borrowed from.
14. The various retributive terms of the Bible shown to be of Oriental origin.
15. The doctrine of future after-death punishment proved to be of heathen and priestly origin—being traced to its invention by ancient Pagan priests.

Conclusion—One hundred and sixty-three questions for believers in post mortem punishment.

This little work is deserving of and is receiving a very large sale and extended circulation.

Price, 35 cents; postage, 2 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the publishers, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Publishing House, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

[THIRD EDITION, REVISED AND CORRECTED.]

JUST PUBLISHED!

A Complete and Truthful History of that Good Man and

PRINCE OF MEDIUMS,

Jesus of Nazareth

BY

PAUL AND JUDAS,

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most

REMARKABLE WORK

in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, PAUL and JUDAS, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, usurping all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the colures of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely-printed pages.

PRICE, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St. Chicago.

ROSICRUCIA!!!

THE ROAD TO POWER!! SEXUAL SCIENCE! F. B. Dowd's Private Lessons to Ladies and Gentlemen. A pamphlet of 48 pages, containing principles, ideas, and advice beyond price. Ignorance is the curse of mankind. Price 50 cents. For sale by the author, F. B. Dowd, Davenport, Iowa.

v10 n16 tf.

ABSTRACT OF COLENSO ON THE PENTATEUCH.

A comprehensive summary of Bishop Colenso's argument proving that the Pentateuch is not historically true, and that it was composed by Samuel, Jeremiah, and other prophets from 1100 to 600 B. C. The substance of five volumes in 68 pages. Price 25 cents. AMERICAN NEWS CO., N. Y.

v10 n8 6m

James Brooks,

The Great Developing Medium, will

[illegible]

FOR

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send Circular for circulars. Address [illegible] Co

139 Clark St., Room 10 Chicago

ABRIDGED EDITION

OF THE

SPIRITUAL HARP.

PRICE—$1.50; postage 16 cents.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE,

187 & 189 S. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE

HOLLOW Gglobe;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

[illegible]

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"The central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of those chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture that may be found in the unexplored open Polar Sea, and this opening affords easy navigation by a boat sailing in somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ATTRACTIVE NEW BOOKS.

—o—

ERNEST RENAN'S WORKS.

THE LIFE OF JESUS.—THE LIFE OF SAINT PAUL.—AND THE LIVES OF THE APOSTLES.

These three remarkable books, by the great French Philosopher, are attracting the earnest attention of all readers. "They are of great power and learning, earnestly and beautifully written, beautiful in style, admirable in treatment, and filled with reverence, tenderness, and warmth of heart."

 Price $1.75 each; postage 20 cents.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA;

Or; the Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation. Translated from the French of Louis Jacolliot. A remarkable volume, which is causing a great sensation in Europe, and exciting the profoundest attention of thinking people.  Price $2.00; postage 30 cents.

HABITS OF GOOD SOCIETY.

A hand Book for Ladies and Gentlemen; with hints and anecdotes concerning nice points of taste, good manners, and the art of pleasing one's self and others. The best and most entertaining book on the subject ever published.

 Price $1.75; postage 20 cents.

THE ART OF CONVERSATION,

With directions for Self-Culture. Teaching the art of conversing with ease and propriety, and setting forth the literary knowledge requisite to appear to advantage in good society. A book of real merit and intrinsic worth.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

THE ARTS OF WRITING, READING, AND SPEAKING.

A remarkably clever book that every one, whether educated or not, will find of immense advantage and profit. A capital companion for that ever popular work, THE ART OF CONVERSATION.  Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

☞ These books are all beautifully printed and handsomely bound in cloth covers, with gilt backs.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark street Chicago, Ill.

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1788 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE

BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON,

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskrit, or ancient language of the Brahmins.

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago

THE

Descent of Man,

AND

Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 400 pp. each, Price $2.00 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

BELVIDERE SEMINARY,

FOR YOUTHS OF BOTH SEXES,

Belvidere New Jersey. Fall Term begins Wednesday, Sept. 13th. One of the most liberal institutions in the land, being entirely non-sectarian. It has the superior advantages of a beautiful and healthful location, and the refining and genial influences of a pleasant home, with excellent opportunities for obtaining a practical education in any or all of the [illegible]

[illegible]

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large reduction to agents. Send stamp for Circulars. C. E. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 28, No. 151 Lasalle St., Chicago.

v10 n13 tf

313 RACE ST.

DR. H. BYERSDARFER, of 313 Race St., PHILADELPHIA, [illegible]

HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL

DEVOTED TO THE ARTS AND SCIENCES, LITERATURE, ROMANCE AND GENERAL REFORM.

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] Truth bears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause: she only asks a hearing. [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR. CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 9, 1871. VOL. X.—NO. 25.

From the New Harmony (Ind.) Register.

SPIRITUALISTIC.

Mrs. Robert Dale Owen—Her Death—Funeral Ceremonies—The other World—Comments of the Press on Her Death.

In another part of this paper will be found the record of the death of Mrs. Mary Jane Owen, wife of the Hon. Robert Dale Owen, of this place.

Mrs. Owen was the daughter of Mr. Samuel Robinson, merchant of the city of New York. She was born in Durham, Conn.; and her family, both on her father's and mother's side, was of the old Puritan stock; her ancestors having emigrated at an early day from Great Britain to New England, and having always remained there.

Soon after her marriage, she came, with her husband, to reside in New Harmony; and that has been her residence since, with the exception of a five years' sojourn in Europe, during the time her husband was United States' Minister to Naples.

The testimony borne to Mrs. Owen's private worth and to her public and private usefulness, by those who spoke at her funeral will be heartily endorsed, we feel assured, by every inhabitant of this place, not a few of whom have known her for a life-time. We do not believe there is a person living in this town whose loss would have cast such a gloom over it as did the unexpected decease of Mrs. Owen.

Her funeral was early on Sunday morning last, the weather being most beautiful; and the ceremonies were conducted at the grave.

FUNERAL CEREMONIES.

They were opened by Mr. Owen himself. He said:

"I think it is a commendable custom that, as to funeral ceremonies, the wishes of the departed on that subject, should, as far as possible, be carried out, when these wishes are known.

"During Mrs. Owen's illness, she said nothing in regard to her funeral. But some two or three months ago it chanced, as men say—though there is no such thing as chance—but it happened that my wife and I had a conversation on funerals. She said she would not wish to have any bell tolled at her funeral, especially if there was any sickness near. She thought sick persons sometimes suffered by hearing it, and she did not wish her death to be the occasion of gloom or suffering of any kind. Music, she said, she thought fitting: music serious and appropriate indeed, but also hopeful and encouraging, with nothing of the desponding and sepulchral about it; for gloom seemed to her most inappropriate. And what about a funeral sermon? I asked. 'No,' she replied; 'not an ordinary funeral sermon; for these usually contain unmeaning, and often unmerited, praise. But I should like,' she added, 'that some one, who has the same ideas of death that I have, would express them at the grave.'

"All this was said accidentally, and I think without the least idea in her mind that I might soon have to recall it; for she was in perfect health at the time; and I, being more than ten years her senior, expected to go before her; but it was otherwise ordered.

"Then I sought to fulfill her wishes. I requested that the bell should not be tolled, there being at the time a lady—a dear friend of hers—seriously ill at my house. Then I selected, as suitable for music on such an occasion as this, a poem by Mrs. Stowe, entitled "The Other World;" and I had a few copies printed for distribution here."

[They were distributed accordingly, and Mr. Owen resumed.]

"Some friends have kindly volunteered to aid us. They will now sing a portion of that ode. Afterwards I shall read a few words on the subject of death. Then we will sing the remaining portion of Mrs. Stowe's beautiful verses. And afterwards, if my esteemed friends the Rev. Mr. Mitchell and the Rev. Mr. Erwin—one or both—desire to speak, I am quite sure you will hear them with great pleasure."

The singing was conducted by Mrs. Bella Golden, Mrs. Charles A. Parke, Miss Louise Duclos and Mr. John D. Jones, several other persons joining in. Then Mr. Owen said:

"No article of belief, moral or religious, seems to me so important as the assurance of immortality. You remember the text: 'If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen; and if Christ be not risen, then your faith is vain.'

"Few deny this; but comparatively few feel any absolute certainty about it. Even the most earnest and devout Christians sometimes admit how wavering faith often is."

Mr. Owen then related conversations which he had had on this subject, at one time with a well-known Presbyterian clergyman of New York, at another time with an Episcopal bishop. The former—a wealthy man—declared to Mr. Owen, who had been saying to him that he [Mr. Owen] did not believe more firmly in the existence of the visible world than he did in the invisible—that he [the clergyman] would give half what he was worth in the world to be able to say the same thing. The latter stated to Mr. Owen that, assisting at the death bed of an aged clergyman,—a perfect exemplar, throughout a long life of usefulness, in faith and conduct—and the conversation turning on the evidences of a future state, the dying man exclaimed: "Ah, Bishop, the proof, the proof! If we only had it!" Then Mr. Owen resumed:

"I do not believe—and here I speak also for her whose departure from among us mourn to-day—I do not believe more firmly in these trees that spread their shade over us, in this hill on which we stand, in those sepulchral monuments which we see around us here—than I do that human life, once granted, perishes never more. A death-change there is, often terrible to witness, leaving us behind desolate and forsaken for a few years on earth, but no death. We never go down to the grave. We cannot be confined within the tomb. It is a cast-off garment—sacred, indeed, as are sacred all mementoes which memory connects with those we have loved and lost—but yet it is only a cast-off garment, encoffined, to which are paid the rites of sepulture.

"She believed, as I believe, that the one life succeeds the other without interval, save a brief transition-slumber, it may be of a few hours only. Neither of us could believe in the old idea—almost discarded in modern times—expressed in such lines as these—

> "That man when laid in lonesome grave
> Shall sleep in death's dark gloom,
> Till th' eternal morning wake
> The slumbers of the tomb."

"Such is not Christ's doctrine. 'To-day'—he said to the repentant thief on the cross—'To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise.'

"Again I believe, as she did, in the meeting and recognition of friends in heaven. While we mourn here below, there are joyful reunions above.

"Also that the next world is one of many mansions, to be occupied by those who are fitted to enter therein: and this, because they are fitted; not by any earning of heaven, for which of us is faultless enough for that? Yet there are the prepared and the unprepared, and that determines our lot in the next world.

"I agreed with her also in the belief that there are in heaven duties, avocations, enjoyments even, as various as are those of earth, but far higher and nobler, in scope and purpose.

"Finally, I believed, as she believed, and as is so beautifully expressed throughout the ode we have been singing, in guardian care by the inhabitants of heaven, exercised toward those of earth.

"As to the virtues and the good deeds of her who has left us, if nearly forty years' life and conversation in our village suffice not in witness, any word from me would be worse than worthless. Better to imitate her example than to speak her praise. Well has a great poet and thinker reminded us:

> "'He mourns the dead who lives as they desire.'"

Then the last four verses of the ode were sung. It read as follows:

THE OTHER WORLD.

> It lies around us like a cloud—
> A world we do not see;
> Yet the sweet closing of an eye
> May bring us there to-be.
>
> Its gentle breezes fan our cheek,
> Amid our worldly cares;
> Its gentle voices whisper love,
> And mingle with our prayers.
>
> Sweet hearts around us throb and beat,
> Sweet helping hands are stirred;
> And palpitates the veil between
> With breathings almost heard.
>
> And in the hush of rest they bring
> 'Tis easy now to see
> How lovely and how sweet a pass
> The hour of death may be:
>
> To close the eye and close the ear,
> Wrapped in a trance of bliss;
> And, gently laid in living love,
> To soon to that—from this:
>
> Scarce knowing if we wake or sleep—
> Scarce asking where we are;
> To feel all evil sink away,
> All sorrow and all care.
>
> Sweet souls around us, watch us still,
> Press nearer to our side;
> Into our thoughts, into our prayers,
> With gentle helpings glide.
>
> Let death between us be as naught—
> A darked and vanished stream;
> Your joy be the reality,
> Our suffering life the dream.

[The first four verses, before the above remarks, were sung to the old Scottish melody of "Auld Lang Syne;" the last four, at the close, to the air of "Home, sweet home."]

We much regret that we have been able to obtain but a very brief sketch of the eloquent remarks made on this occasion by the Rev. Tacitus W. Mitchell, Episcopal clergyman of this place. We can only give their substance from memory.

He said that he had listened with pleasure and profit to what his excellent and venerable friend, Mr. Owen, had just said. He could heartily assent to almost all of it. Indeed, he was not sure that he would dissent from any of the opinions expressed by him, if even they are not usually accepted.

Beyond doubt the great article of religious belief is faith in immortality; and the true doctrine is that we never cease to live. The long slumber in the grave which used to be an article in belief with many has been generally discarded in modern times. When our friends pass away from us, they pass at once into another and a better world. And, for their sakes, we ought to rejoice. But yet, to the survivors death must always be a terrible thing. The awful struggle which often precedes the separation of soul and body, the glazed eye, the pallor of death spread over the cheek, the stiffening limbs, these cannot be witnessed without moving the very depths of sorrow in the human heart.

Again, the loss to us who remain is often irreparable. What can ever fill the blank, to the disconsolate husband, caused by the decease of the most estimable lady whom we mourn to-day? What can fill the void left in this community by her departure? Nothing is more true than that what she said of the "unmeaning praise" which fills funeral sermons. And it appertained not to him (Mr. Mitchell) who had known her but a few years to speak of her before those who had been witnesses, throughout a life-time, of the domestic virtues which so eminently graced her character. It should be borne in mind, however, that it was not her private virtues alone which distinguished her. She had begun a career of public usefulness. She was known by expressions of opinion on some of the most important social questions of the day, the organization of domestic labor, education and other topics, not only here in the West, where she spoke on various occasions, but in the Atlantic States also. Her death is a public as well as a private loss.

Under such circumstances of bereavement, the great consolation is that to which Mr Owen has alluded, that while there are sorrowful partings here, there are joyful reunions in another world where partings are unknown. The meeting and the recognition of friends in heaven is doubtless a doctrine as true as it is consoling.

So also is it a doctrine in accordance with the Scripture that guardian care is exercised from heaven on earth. We read of "ministering spirits;" and it is an opinion fraught with comfort that God has so ordained it that, from heavenly sources, influences both protective and instructive may be exerted in our favor and for our edification.

In the above we have attempted (with poor success we fear) a synopsis of Mr. Mitchell's remarks. The reverend gentleman concluded as follows:

"May God, in his mercy, heal the sorrows of the afflicted, and prepare us all for the great change!"

THE DEATH OF MRS. ROBERT DALE OWEN.—It is with sentiments of sincere sorrow that we announce the death of this distinguished lady. She departed this life at New Harmony on Saturday morning, and was buried on Sunday.

Without attempting to give a biographical sketch of this eminent lady, we may safely say that she was one of the most distinguished ladies of the age. During the time that her husband was recognized as a statesman in this country, which ranged over the period extending from 1834 to 1856, Mrs. Owen was justly regarded as a lady of the first literary attainments, and one who made her mark in society. Her demise has removed from us a woman who was one of the first ladies of her time, and one who made her mark upon the civilization of the present age.—Evansville Courier.

DEATH OF MRS OWEN.—We learn with regret that on Saturday morning last, Mrs. Mary Jane Owen, wife of Hon. Robert Dale Owen, breathed her last at her home in New Harmony, after an illness of little more than a week. Her remains were followed to the grave on Sunday by nearly all the citizens of New Harmony, by whom she was held in the very highest esteem. This estimable lady was loved for her deeds of kindness and charity as well as admired for her strength of mind and literary acquirements. Her husband will have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in this, his greatest bereavement.—Evansville Journal

REMARKABLE PHENOMENA.

The Age of Miracles again—Stones thrown by Invisible Beings—Nobody hurt, But Everybody Frightened—Let us Have Peace—There is No Peace.

BROTHER JONES:—We have something more for our side. There has an occurrence taken place in this county which is exciting the people very much. The invisibles are crying, "Life life, immortal life!" Even the stones are crying out that there is a power beyond the mystic river that will shake the dry bones in the churches. The Atheist and Infidel will have their faith shaken. The Spiritualists will have their faith strengthened, and new mediums will be called into the field. I have not been to the scene of action,—but many have been, and all give in their evidence that these things are facts, and some say there is a band of music played by invisible hands. I shall investigate this matter further, and send you an account of it, if it is of importance. I will now send you the account as it is given in the Waushara (Wis.) Argus, printed at Wautoma, August 17th, 1871.

H. S JOHNSON.

For several days past rumors have reached us that the dwelling house and premises of Mr. Willis, near Pine Lake, in the town of Springwater, Waushara county, were the scene of some of the most remarkable transactions ever recorded in this portion of the State. The story goes somewhat like this: A young lady about fifteen years of age, and an inmate of Mr. Willis' family, was in the woods picking berries about two weeks ago, when suddenly she was startled by seeing stones falling around her. They came from various directions, but did not have the appearance of being thrown by any person; neither did they inflict any injury upon her person, although a number hit her. She very naturally became frightened, and left for the house of Mr. Willis, where she informed the family of what she had seen. It was supposed at the time that she was laboring under a delusion, but subsequent events have fully confirmed the accuracy of her statements.

A day or two after the transaction referred to the family of Mr. Willis was startled by seeing a stone of several pounds weight rolling along the kitchen floor, making but little noise, and not having the appearance of being thrown by any person. This was succeeded by others that appeared to come in at the windows and doors, and the women became so frightened that they at once sent for Mr. Willis, who was at work some distance from the house. This occured about 9 o'clock in the morning, and nothing further was observed until about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when stones of various sizes commenced falling on the floor again, doing no damage and making but little noise. Where they came from and how they came there is a mystery which none have been able thus far to solve.

Immediately after the stones ceased coming into the house, a large, heavy cook stove turned partly around, although no one was touching it. Mr. Willis took some large nails and fastened the stove to the floor, but they failed to keep it in place, the stove moving around as easily as before. He then got some straps of iron and strapped it to the floor, since which time we have not learned that it has been moved from its position.

What is most remarkable about this whole matter is that none of the stones do any damage. Several people have been hit by them, and have not felt the least pain therefrom.

The news of this most wonderful manifestation of invisible power spread like wild-fire, and soon the premises were thronged with people eager to find out all about this remarkable case of stone-throwing. For a number of nights guards have been stationed around the house, all armed to the teeth, and so near together that no one could pass in or out, when suddenly they would hear stones falling into the ring formed by the guard. Where they came from none could tell.

On Monday M. S. Colby, Esq., of this village, came from the scene of these remarkable phenomena, and brought with him three stones (the largest weighing four and a half pounds) which he saw come into the house while he was watching. Mr. Colby is unable to account for the matter. The stones were on exhibition at the Grocery and Provision store of Mr. A. L. Trufant, in this village, and were examined by hundreds.

As might be expected Mr. Colby's account of the transaction was the topic on our streets, and in a short time some fifteen of our citizens of respectability and standing, started for the residence of Mr. Willis. Dr. Whitman, L. S. Walker, P. S. Burray and Samuel Phillips returned the same evening; the balance of the party remained over night, and returned the next morning. They fully confirm the reports which have been made, nearly all the party having been eye witnesses to several instances of stone-throwing.

There is certainly something very remarkable about this matter, and, with the investigations that are now being made, we hope to be able to throw some light on the subject in the course of another week.

How old is the World?

MR EDITOR:—If a man had asked this question in "Holy Rome" three hundred years ago, in the presence of "His Infallibility," or even his consecrated priests, he would have been in danger of losing his head, or having himself tried for blasphemy, for it is an insinuation, at least, that it was quite uncertain as to its exact age. Now, nothing was more certain to the priesthood of that day than it was, that they knew just how long it was when "the heaven and earth and all that in them is" was created. Did they not hold the keys to all secular and religious knowledge? Were they not the chosen custodians of the sacred book that revealed to them all the facts? They fancied it was even so.

Did they not bring Grandpa Galileo to his knees and force him to recant his true theory and fact of the earth's diurnal and annual motions, on pain of his life, and then banish him? Yes, verily, they did this. Why? Because his facts completely and forever overturned and annihilated all revealed fancies. It was the universally believed doctrine throughout all Christendom, through all its ages, (until the last 150 or 200 years) that the entire universe of matter was created and put in motion, as we now see it, about six thousand years ago. It was heresy, infidelity, yes, even blasphemy, to hint that the six thousand year's revelation was not infallibly true.

Now let me present a few figures and facts on this point. And I must be very brief and condense both figures and facts, and only present a few that are within my reach, or I would make this article too long.

We will give some figures and facts from two lectures on coal, delivered at the Smithsonian Institution in 1857, by Prof. Le Conte, of South Carolina. The Professor says: "I have taken for my subject one-half of the carboniferous period, and this period is but one of the four great sub-divisions of the paleozoic period, and the paleozoic period, in its turn, is only one of the four great epochs, exclusive of the present, into which the history of our earth is divided.

We see by analyzing this statement of the Professor, that his lecture embraces only the one-half of one-fourth of one-fourth of the earth's history. (N. B. We will let your readers reduce this compound fraction to its lowest denomination, and then they will see how much of the earth's history, in time, is embraced in the Professor's lecture.) Referring to the various coal strata, he says: "Their average thickness is three thousand to four thousand feet. In Wales they are twelve thousand feet, and in Nova Scotia nearly fifteen thousand! How great then must be the lapse of time represented by the coal measurements." More than six thousand years, of course. But let me give you the Professor's figures. He takes a coal seam of only one hundred and fifty feet in thickness, and quoting the opinions of eminent geologists, Humboldt amongst others, he adopts the conclusion with them that not more than one-half inch of coal, in thickness, is deposited in one hundred years. Then to form a seam of one hundred and fifty feet requires a period of three hundred and sixty thousand years. And yet, add the Professor, "the period we are now discussing is probably not one-thirtieth of the entire geological history of our earth—three hundred and sixty thousand multiplied by thirty equals ten million eight hundred thousand years. So much, in brief, do we get from geology, in answer to my question.

Now briefly (for the weather is very hot) let us see what light the science of astronomy sheds on the question. Messrs Wm. and J. F. W. Herschel are good authorities on this subject. Sir Wm. says: "I have seen nebulæ so far off that their light must have been more than a million years in traversing thence to our earth, and if the heavens and earth and all that in them is, was created in the space of six days, our earth and the distant nebulæ are about the same age." Another author says: "The time during which our earth has generated organic beings is small compared to the time in which it was a mass of molten rocks. The experiments of M. Bischoff show that our globe would require three hundred and fifty millions of years to cool down from three thousand six hundred degrees, which is the most intense heat that we are able to produce, to three hundred and sixty degrees Fahrenheit, and with regard to the period during which the first nebulous masses condensed, to form our planetary system, conjecture must entirely cease." Here our author has a period, whose length is entirely inconceivable, that existed before the three hundred and fifty million years the earth has been cooling down from its condition of a "mass of molten rocks."

T. J. MOORE.

Statfield, July 4, 1871.

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHY.

Most Remarkable Results.

The People, a paper published at Indianapolis, Ind., gives the following in reference to Spirit Photography:

Spirit pictures continue to be taken at Doherty & Parsell's gallery, and the wiseacres have not pried into the modus operandi yet. An artist from Paris, Illinois, named Seymour—having had 22 years' practice in the business of photography, came over a few days since to expose the thing and make for himself some notoriety. He asked the artists if they would submit to tests. "Any you are pleased to make," said they. He then examined everything but could find no suspicious indications. Having prepared a plate and placed it in the camera he sat himself for a picture. Mr. D. making the exposure, Mr. S. then took the plate into the dark room and developed it himself, and as his own picture "came out" during the process, another came just above it—a beautiful, girlish face. "My God, my own darling child," exclaimed he, in evident astonishment. His excitement was so great that it was with difficulty he could sustain his emotions sufficiently to finish the picture.

Mr. Seymour can be written to, to substantiate the above. Some amusing as well as affecting scenes occur at the gallery almost every day. One of the latter was witnessed there last Thursday. Three ladies—sisters to each other—called to get a spirit picture. They are not Spiritualists. The unmarried one of the three sat, and a result was obtained which was immediately recognized by them all as the face of Mr. G of Detroit, who died in this city almost six years ago. He was the companion of a brother of these ladies during four years of the war, and upon being discharged came home with him and while visiting him in this city at the house, of the father of the ladies, was attacked fatally with fever and died there. Rev. Mr. Heckman of the Third Presbyterian church preached his funeral sermon. He never lived here nor had a picture taken in this city, and this likeness is recognized by all of the older members of the family. It is to be sent to his friends in Detroit. When first shown them, these ladies went into a joint fit of weeping—whether from sadness or joy we didn't learn.

A few days ago a stranger called for an ordinary gem picture—nothing was said about a spirit one—but when it was developed a very plain face besides the sitter's came on the plate, though it was not desired by the artist. As the result was a good one, Mr. D. ventured to show it to his customer, who immediately became very indignant saying:

"I have heard of taking this kind of pictures before, but I didn't know I'd got into any such a cursed place. It's all the work of the devil. I always thought so, but now I know it; for that picture there, is L. J. who went to h—l long ago. I want nothing to do with it," and he immediately left, refusing to sit again. These pictures frequently come when not called for nor desired by the artists while making ordinary likenesses.

The Photographic Association owe it to themselves to investigate this phenomena, and show up the trick by which it is done, if there is any in it. It is no light matter to pretend to raise the dead and trifle with the feelings and sympathies of the living concerning their loved and lost ones.

—With silent and irresistible flow, forever rolls onward the great, and river of human life. But to what an insignificant tributary does it shrink, when it pours its waters into the vast ocean of being, whose multitudinous waves pulsate forever on the remote shores of the universe.

—It is far better to die nobly than to live meanly.

—Be lenient to the faults of others, but mercilless to thine own.

The Rostrum.

MRS. EMMA HARDINGE BRITTEN.

On the Spirit-Circle and the Laws of Mediumship.—A Lecture Delivered at Cleveland Hall, London, on Sunday Evening, July 2nd, 1871.

INVOCATION.

O thou great Spirit, thou eternal and omniscient Friend and Comforter! we come to thee this night with no vain pre'ence to change thy purpose; we offer not our blind imaginings, our feeble purposes, our insufficient will, as an exchange for thine almighty wisdom. We look back over the ages, and we see that thou dreat all things well—dost give each creature its meat in season, dost deck these blos ms with beauty, feed them with dew and sunbeam, adorn them with loveliness, pencil them with the fairest, sweetest, tenderest care. Are not these a gospel of thy beneficence? Do they not speak with their ten thousand many-colored tongued of light and beauty, and bid us lean on thee, thou All-Sufficient, All-Sustainer, All Provider? Though we walk in mystery and darkness, thy light is enough for us. In the darkness of the past ages thou hast brought us out of the Egypt of superstition and bondage to the god of fire—thou hast piloted us across the mysterious waters of life, and with a high hand and a stretched-out arm thou hast shown us the Canaan of eternity. We gaze on the Promised Land where the never-setting sunlight of thy love shall compensate us for all our struggles in the wilderness. It is enough for us that we ask thee to let our eyes be opened to the pillar of fire by night and the pillar of cloud by day that thou hast sent us, in the ministry of angels; to guide us to this promise land. Give us light—give us light, O thou Angel of our salvation, to see our way, and strength to do it! That, that is the only petition that we put up to thee this night and reverent thankfulness for all we are and all thou hast made us, and for the footprints of wisdom and goodness in which thou hast led us, do we dedicate to thee the service of this hour.

To-night it is our purpose to show—first, something of the spirit teaching concerning the nature of mediumship; next, the necessity and value, the uses and abuses, of the spirit-circle. When first that revealment was made of which we spoke to the Salvation Army,—when first in the remote part of the State of New York the disturbances popularly called hauntings took their place in the regular order of a direct spiritual telegraphy, it was found that not to the place, but to to the persons inhered the force through which spirits communicated. At first we were so profoundly ignorant that we had to spell our way step by step. At first we deemed that children, who were the first subjects of the manifestation, must be essential to the production of the phenomena; then they were repeated in the aged. Then we began to attempt the classification of temperaments; but no sooner did we attempt to stake our opinion to a fixed point than we were immediately removed by a great variety of temperaments being included in the phenomena. Then we determined that there must be some peculiar quality of mind. We looked for that perfection in our mediums that we so vainly and impiously attributed to the mediums of old; but at last we made the discovery that mediumship is a physical, and not a moral, intellectual, or mental endowment.

We now invite you to consider the teachings of the spirits themselves. Spirits inform us of that which Physiology has but glanced at—that we are triune beings; that our outer casement, or the mould in which the inner man is formed, grown, and developed, is matter; that we are a portion of that vast and illimitable realm of being that is formed into suns, and systems, and satellites, worlds and earths, all of which are composed of the element called matter. But the second element in our being is Life, that same element which causes motion; which enables the gravitating mass of the sun to draw towards him the satellites which have been shot off by repulsion from his heated surface, causing them in their paths and orbits by the power of the second or counter movement, repul-ion, holds them perpetually in equilibrium. We see that this second element of life has two modes—attraction and repulsion. One always prevail over the other. When attraction is the strongest, objects are living, growing; when repulsion attracts over attraction, the object is dying, wasting, decaying; when repulsion ultimately sets in and counteracts attraction, that is death—the atoms are disintegrated and scattered, and must be gathered up again in other forms. Thus you will perceive that life is not only the attribute of the human organism, but of these blossoms, of the ground beneath ye, the garments ye wear. Every atom of matter, every grain of dust, every particle of being is living or dying beneath the action of this universal element of life. And there is a third element which we call Spirit—that which is not life—that which is not matter—that of which the Materialists only observes the effect, and being unable to comprehend this element, he denies it or attempts to explain it away. We have nought to say in defence of this position. Better a negative founded in fact than wild affirmatives that have no basis in truth. Nevertheless, we, who have advanced one step in demonstration beyond the mere observations of this earthly existence, know that as spirit does the elaboration of matter, as it does exist when the chemistry of the outer form is broken up, we have the right to assert that there is this third element of spirit. And this, friend, sceptic, materialist, freethinker—which is the true word after all, this we do not assert as a mere theory, but because we know it to be a real fact—because the spirit friend has stood by our side, aye, within the the last few hours has grasped our hand, has spoken words of consolation to our ear, has brought to us messages and tokens of identity from the bright world beyond, and, though invisible to our outward eye, has proclaimed the sublime truth, "I still live, and thy spirit shall live for ever." And, therefore, we follow out, upon the basis of these demonstrated facts, the assertion of the spirits that we are a trinity—a triune organism. Now, the spirit furthermore undertakes to show that the second element of life is precisely the same which causes these blossoms to grow—which manifests itself in their perfume, and their color, and their speciality. Ages and ages ago, when this planet of ours was but chaos and void, when it was a vast cauldron of central fires, in which in the laboratory of matter, like an enormous crucible, every room was being used and prepared for finer forms—these beautiful gospels were not, they had no existence, nevertheless they were in germ; latent within the yet undeveloped possibilities of these burning, fusing, cooling, transforming atoms were all these many colors, and all this perfume, and all this variety, and through the various processes of life, and death have been [illegible] of the simple element of the earth. Life was [illegible] nd repulsion, in various [illegible] eformations; was the means by w[illegible]ce was born out of the crustaceous [illegible] e primeval ratiles. And thus we shall see that this is this various and infinitely wise Spirit moving upon the face of the void, and calling up order from its chaos, that at last has produced the different forms of life, this culminating apex of which is the glorious creation of humanity. Now, in humanity our spirit friends declare that all the varieties which we observe in the human family, like all the varieties in these blossoms, are produced by the energy of life working in different degrees through the same atoms of matter. Thus life is the tool that carves out these original atoms into all their variety.

Our spirit-teachers further go on to show that this life exerts its energy in one organism—in the muscles, and this produces the strong man; in another, in the adipose tissue, and this produces that large, good-natured organism; that it clusters around certain organs of the brain; that when it is strongly developed in one direction or organ, there is the proclivity to music—in another, to art—in another, to language; and just as the atoms attract to themselves a larger or smaller quantity of this life principle, so does the phrenologist observe on the cranium those prominences that speak of character, and behind these observations, as the cause of character, and that cause is the energy with which the life-principle is attracted to certain atoms of the brain being the great steam-engine, the mighty motor that, distributing throughout the nervous system the power of life, creates and developes the special characteristics of the organism, and thus it is that we are led to the great principle of life for all the varieties of character which we observe. Now to classify more closely these characters. We find that there are some organisms that generate a large amount of nerve-force or life principle, and where this is of the positive or repulsive quality it passes out through the organism and produces the magnetizer. Such persons are purely physical; they are strong psychologists; they influence all who surround them; they project their sphere, either in healthful force upon the sick, or in magnetic force upon the weak. Where the strength is especially manifest in the brain, such persons are psychologists. We have again and again pointed to the specialty of those mighty masters of the human intellect—the great statesman, the great generals, the leaders of public opinion, the mighty Napoleon Bonapartes of the world. —those who by psychological power compel, influence, and control multitudes to the leadings of the invisible General that sits enthroned in the brain; and this is one quality of the magnetic force.

But there is yet another, which the spirits describe thus: Where this magnetic force exists in excess, but instead of being of the positive or repulsive quality is of the negative or attractive quality, where it passes out of the organism in great abundance, and perpetually draws unto itself the force from other organisms, these persons are spirit-mediums. And wherefore? Because they are the subjects of others; because the negative quality of their magnetism attracts the force from others, and renders them subj c's of others' control. This quality of life may exist with any quality of mind, any degree of morals, any status of intellect. It is naught but an indication of the physical combinations of matter, and though it is always associated, observe, with special qualities of mind and of morals, even as our organism is always associated with some special characteristic of mind, nevertheless it is not the cause of character, but it is the effect. They point to our mediums frequently as imbecile, as lacking that force of individuality which should give them constancy of purpose, courage of mind, resolution to resist evil influence; but they do not know that it is not the mediumship that produces these disabilities—it is the natural physical organism which is unable to form a strong and highly individualized temple for the spirit to express itself in, and the result is that such persons are inevitably the subjects of the will and the influence of others. We do not say this in any excuse for the shortcomings or failings of our spirit-friends, but as a psychological and physical fact which those who scorn us, those who tax home upon us our many deficiencies, would do well to investigate. We stand in precisely the same category as the saint, on the one hand, who is exalted for his virtues; and the sinner, on the other, who is restrained, and punished by bolts and dungeon-bars for the exuberance which the influence of disincarnate the false and pernicious influences of a bad state of society. Even so the spirit-medium is a result.

And now we propose to classify the gifts a little more in detail. There are two qualities of mediumship which may embrace all the varieties of gifts that we observe. The one is of a physical and the other of a intellectual character. Where the life-principle exists in the greatest amount of energy in the physical regions, in the back brain, in the department of the organism which tends mostly to the earthly or animal qualities, there we find the result is attained in physical mediumship. It is, in a word, a quality of mineral life, a quality of earthly life, which gives forth a corresponding degree of magnetism, and attracts spirits of a corresponding nature. Last Sabbath, in the reading to which you were indulgent enough to listen, it was stated that the corporiety or grossness of certain spiritual bodies enabled them to produce these strongly earthly manifestations. The rappings or movements, the spirit-lights, and all the feats that are performed through the mineral physical force mediumship, are all produced through the emanations of the human body of that peculiar quality that clusters most around the back brain and the physical organs. Where the atoms of the life-principle cluster most around the intellectual organs, there is a different quality of control, and by the same token a superior quality of the drawing, the musical, the impressible medium. The two forms of manifestation are effected thus: With the physical medium, the spirit, as we have frequently before stated, stands related to the medium as the copper to the zinc in the simple galvanic battery. Just as the galvanic action is produced by the copper, the zinc, and the solution, so do the spirit, the spirit-medium form a battery, whilst the atmosphere is the solution, and this being characterised by the magnetisms of those around us, gives occasion for all the variety of the unreliable manifestations that we observe. We bring into the atmosphere some quality of magnetism that neutralises the whole battery, and we cause no manifestations because we do not have the manifestations. I shall explain more fully this neutralizing principle, but I here state, for the benefit of any who dare challenge our position, that they will find, the more carefully and faithfully they investigate these phenomena, the more surely does it resolve itself into a spiritual electric battery, in which spirit and medium stand related precisely as the copper and zinc of the battery, and the failure to produce manifestations is only attributable to some failure in the imponderable intensity of the copper, the zinc, or the solution. On the other hand, the entire of the intellectual manifestations are produced on the same principle as electric telegraphy. By the psychology the magnetizer compels his subject to see, hear, taste, feel, and act out his will; his will is for the time being present in the organism of his subject, and therefore that subject-spirit is for the time held in abeyance, and the will of the operator takes its place.

And now only one question remains for us to mention. If this spiritual body survives,—and here we stand, capable of lifting certain bodies, of performing chemical experiments, of producing sounds, of effecting transformations in bodies, and by the aid of our living spiritual bodies, engrafted as they are into this mortal body, all the cises that we have built, the work that we have performed, are effected—does that power exist beyond the death? We have hoped it, we have dreamed it, we have talked it, we have asserted it, we have never yet demonstrated it until the presence of one embodied spirit has proved it; and let but one whom we call a pilgrim from the land from which no traveler returns—a beautiful phrase in poetry, but not to be removed from truth as Spiritualism is from Materialism—let but one such traveler return to us, and wherefore should he no more rap on our tables, move our furniture, perform chemical feats, and all the various acts which he represented in life, represent over again when the conditions are favorable for his contact with matter? It is through the battery that we have spoken of that such feats are performed, and being performed, they prove the fact that a spirit does survive the shock of death and carries his spiritual body with him. And the rest of the manifestations, which I have called the intellectual manifestations, being performed on the principle of electro-biology, only demand of us the proof that the magnetizer lives beyond the shock of death, that the electro-biologist survives the chemical dissolution we call death. Can we question this? How often have I asked your attention to that strange and stupendous mystery that is presented now by the living man—the man burning with energy, full of life and power, beneath the glance of whose eagle eye a whole army is marshalled forth to battle, beneath the control of whose single voice the whole nation goes and comes at his command. Behold him as he stands in all the panoply of power, in all the majesty of mind, in all the glorious control and sovereign influence of life; and behold him the next moment less than these blossoms, less than the dancing butterfly, less than the crawling worm, less than the burning insect, a clod of clay, that we may spurn and crush, a thing with neither life nor motion, and only waiting for the decomposing action of time to become nothing—not to leave a single fragment of dust behind. No power can arrest the decay that has now set in; the crumbling action of the mysterious principle of repulsion is there; it is but a question of time, and that mighty power, that strong man with ruling and controlling influence, shall not leave a fragment of dust or ashes to prate of its whereabouts. What, then, is it that has passed out of the man, if not the power that made the man? If we find that that power still exists—if we find that the same intelligence, the same genius, the same energy, the same thought, memory, affection, and revelation, all are proved to us at the spirit-circle, how can we question that magnetizers, biologists, chemists, electricians, and all that have ever performed the phenomena of life, are with us still, and are able to repeat those phenomena? And therefore it is that I assert that the two classes of which we have just spoken form the whole ground of the mystery that we have called spirit-mediumship.

And now I would ask, am I not justified in presenting to the physiologist a fresh leaf in his science? I do not merely make the assertion that there is a new and undiscovered force, that there is a new revealment of physiology, but I do prove it. With every rap that sounds—with every motion of matter indicating intelligence, though they may not be accounted for—with the monition of the mind that speaks the unpremeditated word, that writes the message from the grave, that repeats the intelligence known only to the buried dead—we have a new page of physiology; we have an evidence that there is a force that the physiologist has not discovered—that there is the element of a new science, upon the threshold of whose temple we are now standing, the portals of which open our view into the vistas and corridors of eternity.

Again I will call your attention, very briefly it necessarily must be, to the fact that there is another disclosure made by the study of spirit-mediumship. It not only proves that the world may become instruments or wires upon which the life-lightnings from another and a better world may play, but it opens up a new field of research, a new question. It proves that we are possessed of powers that we have not dreamed of. There are many powers which are not attributable to the spirits alone. The power of clairvoyance belongs to you—it is an attribute of your spirits. When the mask of clay is thrown off, there will be no time, no space to your spiritual sight; and that spiritual sight is now within you, and under certain conditions which we have described, the influence of clairvoyance makes itself manifest in certain individuals of the human species. Then there is the power of psychometry—the power of reading character by touch. That power does not necessitate the action of a disembodied spirit to produce these phenomena. You all possess the power. When you are unbodied spirits, the mask of clay will be thrown off, you will see, not as you now behold, in a glass darkly, but face to face; you will perceive not as you now do in part behind the veil of matter, but you will prophesy in the grand and glorious fulfilment of spiritual knowledge. Psychometry is a power that is an attribute of your every soul. Behold, I lay this fragment down, and the next hand that touches it shall feel a thrill of my inmost nature; my character is impressed there,—I have written my secret thoughts and my wishes about. Every atom of my body is charged with my magnetic life; that is the vehicle of my secret soul, which, as it passes out through my magnetism, stands in the walls around me, the ground beneath me, the air I breathe, and the winds of heaven bear it sweeping through the entire realms of infinity. Every portion of the universe is made more or better because I live,—every moment of my life and thought with influence,—every breath that passes my lip is giving forth bane or blessing —every moment of my existence becomes a revelation of the whole of my mind. Though words never pass my lips, though my thoughts find no expression, the silent winds of heaven shall prate of them, and the entire of the stones on which I tread shall preach sermons of my secret guilt or my secret virtue. Behold this psychometry is an attribute of you all, that I ask you to assemble yourselves together localised by a common purpose. Though never words shall be breathed by the lips, the spirit will speak to have met together will distribute itself throughout your assembly, the purpose that brings you to one point shall become the winds of the day of Pentecost, and the tongue of an invisible fire shall sit on each one's head, and shall go forth streaming, and the Comforter shall be in your midst whenever ye meet with one accord, because this psychometrical power of mind upon mind and magnetism upon magnetism is a power that is of you, being spirits as ye are. And the power of healing is another of your own gifts. Each one carries the reservoir of life within himself, and when that life is projected by benevolence, by love, by desire, when it is adapted to the subject who receives it, it becomes the power of health,—it becomes the power of miracle, like the laying on of hands of old,—it communicates yourself, your character, your life, and your physical and spiritual nature to him who receives your touch. And this is your power, embodied spirits as ye are, and therefore it is that these are some of the phases that the study of spirit-mediumship opens up before us. They call us together—they call us swindlers, fools, and idiots; but, friends, when we stand before the altar which the invisible hands of our spirit-guardians have reared up for us,—when by number of the grits that they have laid upon that altar, the revealments that they have shown to us, the dignity, the elevation, the grandeur of soul which they disclose, we may well endure to be the targets of public opinion, we may well stand firm in the faith of the mighty, the glorious knowledge that has been revealed to us, and, like Paul of old, we may afford to become "spectacles to angels" for the sake of the light and the holy gifts that have been vouchsafed to us.

In closing, I must speak but briefly of the spirit-circle. It has ever been found, in ancient as in modern days, that where two or three are gathered together, the spirit that they invoke is in the midst of them. That spirit is the large liberty of spiritual existence is like the sea of heaven,—it shines upon many at the same time; its force leaps over a vast radius of influence at the same moment. Therefore, when we thought for ourselves apart from you in material space, as ye assemble yourselves together with one accord, the spirit circle becomes the day of Pentecost. That is the meaning and the reason why spirits invite us to assemble ye come together with one accord, and when ye come together, with one accord, ye do "take the kingdom of heaven by violence." But more than this. If ye come together with one accord to take the lower kingdom by violence it will answer you also. Whatever ye seek, whatever is the focal point of the attraction that brings ye together, will surely respond to you. Your thoughts are magnetic tractors, each one of which draws from the sphere of spiritual influence some response that corresponds in exact affinity to your thoughts.

Question not, therefore, why the character of your spirit-circles differ in different places and with different persons. You create that character. Whatever responds to you is the reflex of your own thoughts and your own natures. Time does not serve to elaborate more fully the abuses or the uses of the spirit-circle, but this one fundamental point is enough, that as we come together with our collected magnetism, whether in the public assembly or in the private gathering, we come as in the day of Pentecost. If we put our own selfish purposes before us as our test—if we focalise our thoughts upon one point, and that point be good, be high, be holy, the old day of Pentecost may be ours again; and if this night there are no mighty rushing winds fraught with the spiritual vision of fire to sit on each one's head—if the gifts of a common language that all can understand, though their speech may be various, is not yours, it is because your spirits have not descended with sufficiently unselfish singleness to the great, the holy and holy object of good to the entire race. Let that good be the coming of the kingdom,—let it be the presence of the Comforter,—let it be the determination of light for yourselves, light for the universe, light not only of immortality but of your own darkened path of life, and every one of your meetings, public and private, may be a day of Pentecost; and the spirit-circle is the means to the great, shall know of that God whose name people have spoken, and whose ways have not been fully comprehended by man. So when we understand the true God through all nature, we shall find no contradiction in his laws. We shall find that all he wants of us is to have the purpose of life filled in the most perfectly and purely natural manner. We find many earnestly striving to do right, but they say, Do you believe that religion is natural? In this I believe what you say in regard to other things, but it does not seem to us that Christianity is natural, for are we not told that the human heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked; that there is no man who lives but sinneth; that the human heart is naturally at enmity with God.

We know that in the olden times men did not understand God fully, so, looking just at the surface of things, they ofttimes jumped at conclusions, and were very often profoundly mistaken. Men of science will tell you how they erred on matters of science; they did not understand the shape of this earth; they judged by its surface as it appeared to them, and it was the best that they could do. Looking upon the surface of things, they saw their sin, and they said, the human heart is naturally at enmity with God; and so it was with the old idea of God. You cannot admire the character of a man or woman that you think is base and impure. You may admire all that is lovely, but you cannot go any further. In this you are obliged to obey the law. So when men were told of a God that committed acts which if committed by men would consign them to infamy, he was always looking for something wrong, feeling angry and always finding what he looked for They were told of him as an angry and revengeful God, who made man, and then when he had found his mistake, tortured him for the error he had discovered in his own work. They could not love such a God, and they said, the human heart is at enmity with God. It was at enmity with their idea of God; but mankind has never had enmity with the true God.

There is always that in the human heart that aspires after God as naturally as the earth looks up to the heavens—as naturally as the flowers look up to the sun. When we come to understand the true God, we shall not need to go to the Bible and say we want you to admire this God and to love him. We shall not need to use all our efforts to force religion upon the people. It will be like the sunshine that only has to touch the earth when the earth responds in flowers and fruits. So when the right idea of God penetrates the human soul, it will respond naturally with adoration, because it cannot help it.

When we speak of Spiritualism, it is not necessary to tell you how beautiful it is,—all we want is, that you should understand it, and when you do this, you will admire it; you will love it because you cannot help it. There are thousands of people who fail to understand this to-day. When they come to understand what religion is, they will find it is always natural. Religion is that which is tending to make man spiritual,—not only to increase his happiness here, but to uphold it forever hereafter. Happiness comes from good, and good only. Men do wrong, not because they love the wrong, although they may fancy they understand just what they are doing. When they do wrong, they do it to increase their happiness; and when that happiness is not added, they begin to feel their mistake. If men would only take the Golden Rule, which is to us the heart of true religion,—if the whole world would receive it,—if each one would abide by it,—do as he would be done by,—the world would be full of happiness.

Persons wish to build up their own character, and ofttimes they fancy that the best way for them is to pull down the reputation of some other person. They think the world has its model of excellence, and they wish them to see how much brighter their character is in contrast with that which they have exposed to view. It is like a person building a palace of marble upon the white drifts of snow; it will melt away and the building will fall into the mud.

In this work of building up character, we should take what yours is to-day, and make it better to-morrow; then will be a contrast that the world shall see. Thus we can see heaven, as the soul makes the future brighter than the present.

How wonderfully beautiful life may be, and how glorious is this work! But, whenever a person speaks bitterly of another, and fancies that by pouring out the tide of his own anger he shall bring peace to himself, he will be mistaken; he will never do this, for Peace, with her pure, white, tender feet, will not walk over the stony path where man has thrown down the bitterness of his anger. Her path is love with thornless flowers, and man finds when he speaks bitterly that he only adds to his suffering, for he has self-condemnation. So with any wrong that you may do; you may fancy that you can cover it up, and imagine that it will gratify you, but when it is done, you are more miserable.

Whenever men have sinned, the voice of condemnation goes forth. When people find nothing to pity in the soul of the wrong-doer, we say to humanity, if you could only look beneath the surface of that soul, you would find bitter condemnation there; you would indeed say, only from good comes forth happiness.

We believe that all that God requires of man, is that he shall be good; that he should do right as far as he knows. Some say, but he requires something more. He requires that our natures should be changed. Now, the only change that we need, must take place through good deeds, purifying the soul through good deeds. All that is evil is like the excessive outgrowth of some plant, that Nature would not have to perfect without. All that man has to do is to bring up the harmony within himself, and let no one plant in the garden of his life, usurp the place of others; he must learn to prune and trim, and shape them rightly, and then his nature will be rounded out into perfection.

True religion tends to harmonizing the life, in good deeds, in rightful actions, that shall make life beautiful. In seeking to know what is the purpose of life, the end and aim of existence, we find that man is not to make his nature unnatural, but simply to make it natural, to let his growth be as beautiful and natural as possible. Thus life is rounded out and developed through its natural growth into the most perfect and beautiful form.

Some persons in studying the purposes of life, imagine that there is no special purpose in their existence—it seems to them that their path is so narrow that it is lost in the great world. They think it will never be known that they have existed, and when they pass away, their memory shall pass from the earth. Now, full as the world is of human beings, there is not one too many—countless as is the multitude, there is not one life, however small and contracted it may be, but has a purpose of its own.

A writer who has studied deeply into the mystery of life, refutes the idea that the poor should die off, and thus decrease the surplus population. He says:

"Full as the world is, there is room enough for all, work enough for all to do."

Through all this world, among those who are poor and ignorant, bond or free, there is a purpose in their being,—one that they all will some day understand.

We look at this earth, and there are certain portions of it that seem to exist in vain. Some years ago, in the State just separated by a shining river, men discovered a fine green sand—it seemed to them it was worthless. Now they have discovered that it is a very valuable fertilizer, and in many places there is a beautiful growth of blossoms and fruit as the result of this.

In all the history of human disappointments, and the thousand wrongs and failures that appear to us in human life, there is always some good to be found out.

Sometimes you point to a wrong, and ask what that means? It means a protest against the mistakes of society. You say, here is a murderer—show us in this some hidden good. It can be done, by showing the parents in this land, that when certain feelings are indulged in that are wrong, an impression may be stamped on a child, so that it will walk forth in the blood-stained path of crime, and in time the voice of humanity shall cry out against the wrongs that are so common to-day. Humanity sometimes when crimes seem to have multiplied, when they show themselves more plainly in contrast with what the world has hoped for, and prayed for, when the world has grown wiser by the repetition, then it will say it will not do—"If we would destroy a tree, we should not take off here a branch and there a branch, but we must lay the axe at the root of the tree, and take it away—then in its place may grow that which is beautiful and useful." So when the world has grown wise enough to rectify these things, we will not say then, let us have the branch taken off—let us imprison the criminal for life—take away his liberty. They will begin at the root of the matter, and work as men and women should, to root out all the evils which grow down deep in the depths of humanity, and not wait for the poisonous growth to show itself upon the surface.

Wrong may be compared to a rock out upon the sea. When they are above the water, they may be seen; when they are not, ships are often wrecked upon them, and men may know where they are by the scattered fragments that remain. When we see the rock, we may know how to avoid it, unless out there by a storm,—but if it is all cleared away, then we may go there in safety. So let us take this lesson, and work out rightful purposes in our lives. This life of ours is like a garden, in which the Great Spirit, who rules all things, has implanted the germ of everything that we shall hereafter require, and it is our duty to go into this garden, and take all the germs which are implanted there; and be given the sunshine, the breeze, and the gentle dew, and thus is life beautifully unfolded in the growth and development, and thus do we work out and realize its purpose. We shall then find how good and how wise the Father is, that requires this of us. It is a work that is not difficult to do. When a person takes one step after another, there is always light enough for the one that is to be taken—in this way do we lay the foundation of everlasting happiness.

So we believe that as God is the spirit of Nature, so Nature knows just how to praise God. She does it by opening the gates of night, and letting down the golden floods of the morning light. She does it by all her beautiful voices from mountain and forest, from the blossoms, the waving meadow grasses,—all these give praise to God and enjoy him forever.

Now just as Nature praises God so should we, by being natural and true. The meadow grasses and flowers do not complain that they are not like the forest trees. The smallest bodies are recognized by her—Nature never scorns such objects. She does not say to the blade of grass, you are so small that it is not worth while to bring you up; she brings out the grasses, and makes the carpet for the meadows.

Just in this way are we to work out the purpose of life. You must never cherish within yourselves the poisonous plants of evil. You may imagine your efforts are lost, but a good and true effort is never lost. Kindness and charity and love are blessed. So by doing right at all times and withholding nothing,—do you not see that in this way shall you praise God, and enjoy him forever?

Do you say some things that we know to be wrong are natural? No: Nature makes her plants, some tall and some low, and if you seek to repress that which is intended to be tall, you are taking so much from the beauty of Nature. God, who lives in all things, calls through your spiritual nature, and says, bring up all the attributes of your nature, and then shall you work out the purposes of your lives; then shall life become fair and perfect like a beautiful garden, in which the angels shall ever walk by your sides, and so in the purposes of life in your soul made known, and worked out.

BENEDICTION.

O Thou whose purposes are perfect in all things, aid us so far by thine inspiration, that our own may be marked out more purely, and more perfectly.

UNDERHILL ON MESMERISM.

WITH

Criticisms on its Opposers,

AND A REVIEW OF HUMBUGS AND HUMBUGGERS, WITH PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXPERIMENTS IN THE SCIENCE—FULL DIRECTIONS FOR USING IT AS A REMEDY IN DISEASE—HOW TO AVOID ALL DANGER.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF ITS CURATIVE POWERS;

How to develop a good Clairvoyant

THE PHILOSOPHY OF

SEEING WITHOUT EYES.

THE PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY DERIVED FROM THE UNFOLDING OF MESMERISM—EVIDENCE OF MENTAL COMMUNION WITHOUT SIGHT OR SOUND, BETWEEN BODIES FAR APART IN THE FLESH—COMMUNION OF SAINTS, OR WITH THE DEPARTED.

BY SAMUEL UNDERHILL, M. D., L. L. D.,

LATE PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY, ETC., ETC.

Price $1.38. Postage 12 cents. The Trade supplied.

Address S. S. Jones, Chicago, Ill.

First Enlarged Edition.

Death and the After-Life.

EIGHT LECTURES ON THE SUMMER LAND.

By Andrew Jackson Davis.

This edition contains more than double the amount of matter in any previous edition, with only a small advance in price. Bound in cloth, 75 cts, Postage, 12cts; in paper, covers, 50cts, Postage 4cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

New Books.

Dr. P. B. RANDOLPH'S WORKS.

DEALINGS WITH THE DEAD. The human soul, its migrations and its transmigrations; 268 pages, bound in cloth.

Price, 75cts., Postage, 12cts.

AFTER DEATH, OR DISEMBODIED MAN. The Location, Topography and Scenery of the Supernal Universe; its Inhabitants, their Customs, Habits, Modes of existence; Sex after Death; Marriage in the World of Souls; The sin against the Holy Ghost, its fearful penalties, &c., &c. Being the Sequel to Dealings with the Dead.

Price, $1,00; Postage 8cts.

PRE-ADAMITE MAN, demonstrating the existence of the Human Race upon this Earth 100,000 years ago. Fourth Edition, well bound in cloth and containing over Four Hundred Pages.

Price, $1,25, Postage, 20cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

By Hudson Tuttle.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. PRICE $2.00; Postage 24c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is waking the world to new hopes and aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.

 Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE BIBLE IN THE BALANCE,

A Book for the Age and the Times,

and one that should be in the hands of every liberal man and woman in the land.

You want it for your own instruction, that you may be furnished with acknowledged authority to meet the arguments of the theologian, historian, chronologist and scientist man with his own weapons.

It discusses the matter of Bible canons, versions, translations and revisions with ability, citing none but authors in the highest repute, and those that are above criticism.

The book is printed in excellent style, 12 mo., on new type and fine paper, with beautiful illustrations of the mounds and mound-builders of the Mississippi Valley. It is substantially bound in cloth and contains three hundred and twenty pages.

The interest felt in the work is so great that orders were received for nearly the whole of the first edition before it was published, one party alone having received orders for over three hundred copies.

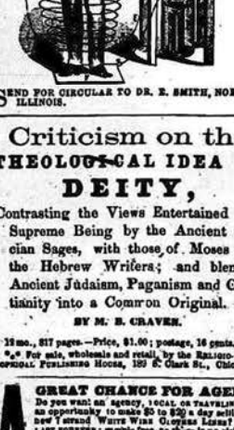
Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

Address: RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

v8 n26 tf.

THE Science of Evil; OR FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.



BY JOEL MOODY.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the PROBLEM, and unveils the MYSTERY of Evil, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be the SEVEN WHICH ROUSE THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo., of 342 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1.75; postage, 20 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

The Great MAGNETIC CURE.

SEND FOR CIRCULAR TO DR. E. SMITH, NORMAL, ILLINOIS.

Criticism on the THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY,

Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.

BY M. B. CRAVEN.

12 mo., 317 pages.—Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

A GREAT CHANCE FOR AGENTS.

Do you want an AGENCY, LOCAL OR TRAVELING, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our new 7 strand WHITE WIRE CLOTHES LINE? THAT LASTS FOREVER; sample free, to show to responsible. Address AT ONCE HUDSON RIVER WIRE WORKS, cor. Warren and Malden Lane, N. Y., or 16 Dearborn st., Chicago, Ill.

P. O. Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, for sale at the office Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street.

MEDIUM'S DIRECTORY.

[PUBLISHED EVERY OTHER WEEK.]

The Religio-Philosophical Journal being an especial friend to all true mediums, will hereafter publish a complete Directory, giving the names of all professional mediums, so far as advised upon the subject. This will afford better facilities for investigators to learn of the location of mediums, and at the same time increase their patronage. Mediums will do well to advise us from time to time, that we may keep their place of residence correctly registered.

 It is a lamentable fact that some mediums so far forget their self respect as to speak evil of other mediums, not unfrequently even of those who are for their service. The names of such persons will be dropped from this Register so soon as we have evidence conclusive of their indulging in such unkindness.

It should be borne in mind that professionals visiting mediums carry conditions with themselves—so to speak—which aid or destroy the power of spirits to control the medium fully. Hence it is necessary for a medium's true success to certain persons, another better or others—all having their virtues, and justly so, too, and all equally honest and useful in their sphere.

CHICAGO.

Bangs children, 227 S. Morgan St. ‡
Mrs Hitts Brown, 148 W Washington St.
Dr. W. Cleveland 511 Wabash Avenue
Mrs. A Crocker, 179 W Madison st. *
Mrs. S. E Coles, rear of 521 State st. on Victoria Ave. ‡
Mrs. Dr Wells, 148 W Madison St. ‡
Dr. B. Dwyer, 235 West Madison St. Chicago
Dr. E. P. Griggs, 229 W Medison street, cor. Peoria.*
Mrs. Burgess, 78 Parlors 24 and 25 Honore Block ‡
Mrs. M. Jenks, 176 W. Van Buren street.*
Rev. J. T. Lewis and wife, To Three Avenue.
Dr. & Mrs. H. Forbes and Wife, 343 W. Madison St.*‡
Mrs. C. Moody, 106 12th street. * ‡
Mrs. Phebe Goffin Norwood, 63 No. Halsted st. * ‡
Mrs. A. H. Bonsner, 148 W Madison Avenue.* ‡
Madame Ritter, 301 S. Clark St. ‡
Mrs. M. Smith, 141 S. Clinton St *
Dr. Burgess, 78 Third St.
Dr. M. L. Sherman and Wife, 147 West Van Buren St.*†
Dr Samuel Wade hill, 189 S Clark street.*
Mrs. T. P. Vibber, 589 Indiana Ave.*
Dr. J. Wilbur, 460 W. Randolph St. *
Mrs. M. S. Weeks, Room 80 Haven Block, Chicago.

BOSTON.

Dr. H. B. Storer.*†
Mrs. Julia M. Friend, 116 Harrison Ave.
Mrs. S. J. Hickney, 383 Tremont St.
Dr. Main, 226 Harrison Ave.*
Mrs. A. C. Tatman, 392 Washington St.
Persons Watch 8 Revere Place.
Mrs. L. W. Letch 97 Salisbury St. †
Mrs. Marshall, 32 Kilsboro St.
Mrs. H. Morse, 170 W. Springfield street. ¶
Mrs. A. S. Eldridge, 1 Oak St.‡
Mrs. M. M. Hardy, 156 W. Concord St.‡
Samuel Grover, 25 Dix Place.
Mrs. F. O. Baxter, 291 Tremont St.‡
B. O. Littlejohn, 26 Hanson street. boston, Mass.

PHILADELPHIA.

Mrs. Sarah A. Anthony, S. W. cor. 7th & Catharine st. ‡
Miss M. Sulver, 1253 So. 11th st. ‡
Mrs. A. Reynolds Hankle, 1029 No. 8th st. ‡
Peter Beitel, 229 No. 12th st. *
Mr. Bentley Dick, 823 Race st. ‡
Mrs Sarah M. Hockwalter, 1027 Mt. Vernon st.*
David S. Cadwallader, 1005 Race st. * †
Miss Emily Dick, 823 Race st. ‡
Mrs. E. Foy, 1106 Button wood st. ‡
Mrs. Glanding, 1712 Warnock st. ‡
Miss Leade N. Goodly, 1516 Christ st. ‡
Mrs. Annie Gooslflow, 412 Enterprise st. ‡
Mrs. Gleisiger, 1230 Catharine st. ‡
Dr Wm Clinton Hough, 813 Race st. ‡
Edward Keene, Marlboro' below Girard. ‡
Mrs. Mary Lamb, rear of 1317 No. Front st. ‡
Mrs. Lawrence, 1223 So. 6th st. ‡
Mrs. Miller, 717 Erie st. ‡
Mrs. L. T. Mann, 240 So. 12th st. ‡
Mrs. H. Meeker, 1009 Federal st. ‡
Mrs. E. McNeil, 1018 Richmond st. ‡
Miss Mitchell, 234 Spruce st. ‡
Mrs. C. A. Marshall, Moyamensing above 11th. ‡
Mrs. Mock, 612 No. 10th st. ‡
Mrs. Jennie Martin, 1315 No. 10th st. ‡
Mrs. Mary Mellard, S. W. cor. 7th & Catharine t. ‡
Mrs Maria Mc. 1456 No. 11th st. *
Joseph L. Paxson, 1027 Mt. Vernon st. *
Mrs. Powell, 429 Spruce st. ‡
Samuel Phillips, 1106 Girard st. ‡
J. Jefferson Reilly, 919 Cross st. ‡
B. F. Richardson, 638 No. 7 th st. ‡
Mrs. Rex, 1009 Federal, 2150 Brandywine st. ‡
Prof. J. B. Rogers, 234 so. 7th st. ‡
Mrs R. R. Stoddard, 843 Race st. ‡
Isaac Taylor, 105 Laurel st. * ‡
Mrs. Taylor, 105 Laurel st.
Mrs. Xavier, 1220 Fulton st. *

NEW YORK CITY.

Jennie Danforth, 84 Lexington Ave.†
Miss Hannah Foley, 624 Third Ave.
Mrs. H. Seymour, 140 Bleeker St.
Mrs. J. Cotton, 247 E. 31st St.
J. William Van Namee, 250 Fourth Ave.*†‡

AURORA, ILL.

Mrs. A. C. Smith, Aurora, Ill. ‡
Mrs. A. Swift, Aurora, Ill. * ‡

BLOOMINGTON, ILL.

Mrs. Helen Grover.
Mrs. M. E. Gotchell, 413 N. Main St. ‡
Dr. Mary Lewis, Bloomington, Ill.‡

CAYONNE CITY, N. J.

Mrs. E. White.

GREEN GARDEN ILL

Mrs. Calkins †‡

GENESSEE, WIS.

Mrs. E. W. Belcher. * ‡
Mrs. J. A. Logan

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

A. B. Severance and Mrs. J. H. Severance. M. D. 457 Milwaukee street Milwaukee Wis.†‡
W. W. Herring, 121 Spring street, Milwaukee, Wis. *
Mrs. Carrie E. Wright, 440 East Water st. ‡

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Samuel Smith, Box 1211 Rockford, Ill. *
Mrs. M. J. Colburn, S. Rockford, Ill. ‡

RICHMOND IND.

Francis S. Haswell, 26 N. Marion street.
Dr. Samuel Maxwell, 72-3. 6th street.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Wm. H. Hatch, 128 Kearney St.

ST. CHARLES, ILL.

Mrs. Leonard Howard.*‡
D. P. Keyser, M. D. *

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Mrs. Mary E. Beach.

WHITEWATER, WIS.

Mrs. A. B. Severance †‡

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mrs. Orvin Abbott, Minneapolis Minnesota. *
Lizzie Acker Salt Lake City, Iowa. ‡
Jonatnan Allen, Geneseo, Ill.
L. Gene Atwood, Lake Mills, Wis.
Mrs. Mary A. Ahl 81 Dayton, Ohio. *
D. Atkinson, Marietta, Ohio ‡
Mrs. Jennie Adams, Box 1202, Kansas City, Mo. *
Mrs. A. J. Blair, 102 Ridge st., Salem, Mass.
Dr. H. Butler, Wellsboro, Tioga Co., Pa.*
H. N. Chamberlain, 185 Bruce street, Newark, N. J.*
Mrs. J. P. Currier, Cleveland, Ohio.‡
Mrs. J. A. Drake, 24 Hoffman Block, Cleveland, Ohio.
Doherty & Purcell, Indianapolis, Ind. ¶
George M. Dutton, Algona, Iowa. ‡
J. W. Kitts, Atlanta, Ga. †
Mrs. S. E. Everal, Spring field, Mo. ‡
David S. Fuller, Davenport, Iowa. *†
Alonzo Fairchil, Schenectady N. Y. *
J. B. Fayette, Girard P. O. †
Dr. B. W. Frost, 116 High st, Columbus, Ohio *
Mrs. Wm. L. Gay, Canastota, New York. *
Dr. J. M. Holland, 208 Upper Broadway, Council Bluffs Iowa. ‡
Judge D.L. Hoy, Mobile, Alabama.
T. S. Hazel, Beloit, Wis. *
Dr. B. Heal, 62 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga.*
Mrs. Jennie Ferris, ‡
Minnie Jefferson, } Traveling. †
Dr. P. T. Johnson, Ypsilanti, Mich. *
J. W. Kenyon, Watertown, Wis
Mrs. C. Lathrop, 37 East Harrison street. *
Dr. & Mrs. D. A. Leland, Tuscola, Mass. †
Mrs R. E. Moore Care W. Chase & Co., 401 North 5th treet, St. Louis, Mo. *
J. H. Noble, Waterville, N. Y. ‡
Mrs. A. Nesbit, Cunnensburg, Mich.*
Mr. John D. Odell, Waterloo, N. Y. *
Dr. Alonzo Leaf ramee, New Castle, Ind. *†‡
Mrs Metti Pike, 8 6th Bend Ind. *
Mrs. M. E Robbins Evansville, Ind.
Dr. E. Sias, Port Huron, Mich. ‡
Isaac Jackson, Alden, Covington, Ind.‡
Mrs. P. W. Stephens, east side of 4th street, between I & J, Sacramento.
H. E. Sherman, Gabaurg, Ohio. ‡
Annie C Torrey, Houston Texas. ‡
A. Thomas, Lynden Station, Ohio. ‡
Warren Wight, Waterloo, Seneca Co., N. Y. *
Mrs. Fanny Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas. ‡

* Healer.
† Speaks Artists.
‡ Psychometrist.
§ Business and Test.
¶ Writing and Speaking.
‖ Physical Manifestations.
Answering Sealed Letters.
 Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

Health by Good Living,

BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,

Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."

This book is to show how high health can be maintained and common disease cured by "good living," which means eating with a relish the best food, prepared in the best manner.

The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game, fruits, and the grains which make bread.

The best cookery preserves the natural tastes and juices. As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get this great blessing without money and without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down town:" What shall a man do? What shall fat men eat? How to get fat: Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Spring diseases: Children's eating: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' eating: Cold feet and headache: Biliousness: A lazy liver: Mistaken tonics: The out-door air: Why are we dyspeptic? Discomfort after eating: Cole slaw: Certain cure of neuralgia: Nervous debility: Ale and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

It tells

How to cure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure biliousness: How to cure nervousness: How to cure exhaustion: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean. How to get good sleep: How to maintain high health. How to avoid disease: And all these without medicine: without money; without price, and pretty.

It tells about

Luncheons and how to take them: Late dinners and how to take them: How drunkards are made at eating-houses: How girls are spoiled at boarding-schools: How health is lost: How long to eat: How short a time to eat: How fast to eat. How love of dress is instilled: How young men are talked about: How bad matches are made: How good wives are made at home: How home is made attractive, pretty.

Price $1,50 Postage 16 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF

Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after stalking the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the venerable soil of India, unfettered and stifled by the altar that substituted for intellectual life a semi-neuter existence of dreaming impotence.....

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost wastes, in unfolding testimony of our origin, bequeathed as the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.....

To religious despotism, imposing speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....

.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I forshrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

 PRICE $2.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

A REVELATION!!!

of the

EXTRAORDINARY VISITATION of

DEPARTED SPIRITS!

Of Distinguished Men and Women of all Nations, as Manifested through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers."

The Spirits of WASHINGTON, FRANKLIN PENN, GIRARD, ST. PATRICK, NAPOLEON, JOHN WESLEY, BYRON, GEO. FOX and Hosts of Celebrated Characters of the Past, who take Possession of and Discourse through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers," of New York, giving Wonderful Information respecting the Events of their Lifetime, and their Opinions of Present Criticisms concerning those Events, as well as their immediate Condition in the World of Spirits.

PRICE:—35 cts; postage, 2 cts. Liberal discount to the trade.

ADDRESS:—RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE. 187 and 189 S Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

THE VOICE OF PRAYER,

A Poem by W. S. Barlow, Author of "The Voices."

This little poem is fully equal to any of Mr. Barlow's best efforts, and should be read by everybody.

Printed on fine tinted paper with blue line border. Price 25 cents; postage, 2 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

Exeter Hall! Exeter Hall!

HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL.

THE following are extracts from a few of the notices of Exeter Hall, the Theological Romance:—

"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—[Public Opinion, London, England.

"It is indeed a wonderful book."—[New York Mail.

"We commend it to the widest popular approval."—[Banner of Light, Boston.

"We have no hesitation in declaring this a great work."—[Universe, New York.

"The book is well and powerfully written. * * * The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason.'"—[Liberal, Chicago.

"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—[Democrat's Magazine, New York.

"Convincingly illustrative of the errors of Theology."—[Investigator, Boston.

"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—[Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.

Price, 60 cents. Postage, 4 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,

BY C. L. JAMES.

An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce legislation. For sale by the author, Louisiana, Mo Post paid for 25 cents.

v9 n18-tf.

WOOD'S HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE

contains in every number one complete prize story valued at $100. Forty pages of other matter. Yearly, $1. Sold by news dealers, or 10 cents per copy. Splendid premium. $1000 cash to be awarded for prize club. Specimen copy free. Address S. S. WOOD, Newburgh, New York.

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

S. S. JONES, EDITOR, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR.
J. R. FRANCIS, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE
Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1—4 mo.
☞Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Order, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN cents, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names RETURNED on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the expiration of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due for the coming year, with or without further reminder from this office

NEWSPAPER DECISIONS.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not—is responsible for the payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount,—whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is PRIMA FACIE evidence of intentional fraud.

[redacted]

Upon [redacted] will be [redacted] term more. For example, if [redacted] 10th, 1870, it will be mailed, "Smith 3m-10 Dec.—0." The 0 means 1870. If he has only paid to Dec. 10th, 1869, it would stand thus: Smith 3.—10 Dec.—0, or perhaps, in some cases, the last two figures for the year, as 70 for 1870, or 69 for 1869.

☞The preceding money to this office for the JOURNAL should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 9, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER LV.

Animated with fresh hopes and anticipations of realizations that will gratify us, we press forward in search of the Divine Architect of the universe. Since we commenced this series of articles, anxious eyes have been peering heavenward among the moving, throbbing worlds of space,—among those aerial cars which move onward with automatic regularity, endeavoring to find something that would detect the immediate presence of God. On all sides the desire is manifested to solve this question,—to so present it to others that the existence of a God can be easily recognized. Ah! a strange world,—superstitious, ignorant,—so blind that glorious truths escape its notice! While some worship, bow in humble adoration to the unseen, unknown, incomprehensible God, others, failing to recognize him, refuse to join in reverencing that of which they know nothing. The imagination is prolific in the pictures it forms, in the Gods it creates, in the devils it brings into existence. Behind the flashing lightning, the moaning thunders, the murky clouds, the eccentric comet,—yes, behind them, as the moving impulse, there is supposed to be a God! If man was created by God, there was a time when there was a first man. If constructed by him, did he use exclusively matter and its laws? If he used anything outside of them, as we have said before, he certainly used himself. Could he use himself without waste? If waste is connected with his organic structure, there must be recuperation, and if recuperation, it must be obtained from matter. Then matter, when appropriated by him to supply the waste, becomes a part of God, when a moment before it was entirely independent of him. God, then, if he made man did it independent of himself, for we cannot conceive of a being appropriating himself to carry out any project. Again, if God is infinite, would he not cease to be infinite the moment he used himself in the physical structure of man? The idea that God is manifested in man is unthinkable—is impossible, and calculated to make man reckless and sinful. Why? If God is manifested in man, please tell me what part of him. Where is the dividing line between God, and matter and its laws? If no dividing line, no distinction, then God is supreme in man, and when man acts, God acts. If a God exists, he is supreme. Is he not supreme in man as well as outside of him? If he rules outside of man exclusively, why not inside? Can God be supreme in his government and not control man? If he created him it was with the intention of governing, or not; if not, then man is still the subject of design. But here, then, is the grand question: If God created man, and used only matter and its laws, then he is wholly subject to them, and is an automaton just as much as the earth is, which moves forward in its orbit with systematic regularity. How can it be otherwise? If God did not use himself in the fabrication of man, he only appropriated matter and its laws, and is not man a subject of these materials and laws from which he is created? But would it not be impossible for God to create from matter and its laws an intelligent entity, and he possess every characteristic of God in a finite degree? Could God take matter and its laws, and eliminate therefrom his attributes, unless they possessed those characteristics? Could God find in matter attributes like his own and mould them into a finite creature? If so, then why can not God change the whole material world into sentient beings?—What part of matter is especially adapted to such building? and if God used himself, how many beings would he make? If man was organized from matter, what evidence have you that he will stay organized? Are you willing to risk immortality on such an exceedingly slender basis? But it would be impossible, even for a God, to fabricate, construct, or mould a human being from matter, that possessed characteristics like himself. Why? If he, possessing all power, could make a finite entity from matter, why not an infinite entity? But does not an infinite being and one finite being make more than infinity itself? The infinite possesses all power, and the finite finite power; unite the two if you can. It is utterly impossible for an infinite being and a finite, to exist at the same time,—they constitute a contradiction in terms.

Listen then to the voice that speaks: In attempting to solve this question, we are led to inquire what are the relations of man to God, if one exists, or in other words, is it possible for an Infinite, omnipresent, omnipotent God to create finite man? At the first glance, you would ejaculate, of course, it is possible for a God of that character to create a finite creature—man. In performing this grand work, he would stand in the relation of a mechanic to the house he is constructing, or the machinist to the engine that he is preparing for the railroad. In all the operations of the material world, we do not find that man uses himself in the creation of any work. He uses matter and its laws, renders them subservient to him, makes them his willing servants, but in no case does he use any portion of his own organic structure, in the work in which he is engaged.

Glance around you, and on all sides you see nothing but effects, and they in grandeur and sublimity far transcend in appearance the material that produced them. Look at the green-carpeted earth, at the majestic tree with its twining branches, at the vast bodies of water with their mountain waves and myriads of living life—all are effects—they are the real, tangible expression of certain forces.

The flower is an expression, which comes forth from the cold, damp earth, far transcending in beauty, the causes that generated it. Glance at that planet in process of formation—it rises forth in stately grandeur. See the forces at work—they build up a mighty, moving, throbbing world in the fields of space, an aerial car, that travels among the stars, and holds converse with distant worlds—it is an effect, and as such, is far grander than the forces that caused it, that were set in operation by some master mind. All effects in beauty, in grandeur, and utility, rise far above the causes that produced them, for they are the tangible, living reality, presented to the senses. An effect is generally the result of a combination of causes, and as such presents to us that which is calculated to excite within the mind emotions of delight. Present an effect in the material world with its teeming, active life, that is not more grand, more beautiful, than the forces that generate it. The cold, damp soil—within it is a seed, and it germinates—it buds—blossoms and sends forth its fragrance on all sides. It is an effect—rising in princely grandeur above the forces that produce it. On all sides effects greet us. The causes that produced them are important, but to man, to humanity, they eat effects; they regale the eyes on effects as they glance at flowers in the gardens; and feast their ears on effects as they listen to the beautiful strains of music that greet the ear from the piano or organ. But man is not an effect. If a part of God, however, he certainly would be, and if the rule holds good, should be more grand, more intelligent more beautiful, and better in every respect than God himself. What benefits can be derived from effects, if they cannot be rendered more useful than the forces that produced them? The engine that moves the ponderous wheel, is within itself more useful, and more powerful, than the material it was made from. The ship that rides on the mountain wave, contending with the wind and storm, as an effect, is far more useful than the material from which it is constructed. An effect must be superior to the causes, to the elements that brought it into existence, or it would be comparatively useless.

If man is an effect of some creative energy, he is as superior to the forces that created him, as the flower is to the cold soil from which it springs. But man is not an effect. If so, he is not immortal. All effects that we observe in the material world, are of a temporary character—they have three stages of existence—youth, maturity, and decay, when comes final dissipation. An effect is the result of organized causes, and that which organizes is required in all cases to sustain. If man is an effect of one or more causes, they are required to sustain him, and on them alone he depends for immortality. If man, however, is not an effect, but eternally existed, then he is not dependent on anybody or anything for immortality, but is just as important a phase of existence as matter itself.

[To be continued.]

Minnie Myers.

The above-named young lady of sixteen summers, has recently been developed as a trance and physical medium. She resides with her parents, at the north-west corner of Polk street and Fourth Avenue.

Miss Myers with kind and encouraging treatment, will doubtless soon become an excellent medium for several phases of spirit control. We are informed that she gives very good satisfaction as a business medium to several business men, who are in the habit of consulting her.

Widow's and Orphan's Fund.

Bro. A. L. Beeler, of Philadelphia, donates one dollar to aid in sending the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL to poor widows and orphan children. We get about one cent on a dollar thus expended. Bro. Beeler is a self-made man, and knows what the rough-side of life is. He has been there. Bro. L. D. Benjamin, of Wautoma, Wis., donates twenty-five cents to the same fund. Angels will bless you, my brothers, for your kindness. Every dollar helps.

Crucify Him! Crucify Him!

Give us Barrabbas, the robber, but crucify the crazy, erratic old doctor. He teaches pernicious doctrines!—set the police after him!—aye, mob him!—kick him out!—lynch him!—he is a dangerous man!—he corrupts the morals of the people!—his doctrines are pernicious, and there is great danger that the City of Chicago will become corrupted by the ugly old wretch!—he is crazy!—Landlord, put him out! Such were the sentiments of a knot of men collected on the curbstone in front of a gambling saloon a few evenings since.

There has been a tempest in a teapot, or something quite analagous to it in Chicago, within a few days past. Old Dr. McFadden, who has traveled quite extensively for some years past, is an erratic religionist, and, in some particulars, not unlike Geo. Fox, John Knox, Martin Luther, Oliver Cromwell and others, in his way of pitching in, without mercy, into popular creeds and customs. He, his household, and the Chicago Republican, constituted the centre point and moving elements, of the tempest referred to.

Of his eccentricities we have for many years heard much—many remarkable tests of spirit power have been given through him, which have confounded skeptics.

We can not give details in regard to his mediumship, never having attended one of his seances, but from the reports of many who have (which, by the by, are open every evening to all who see fit to attend), we have no doubt but what the tornado referred to was a legitimate result to be expected from causes existing, inherent in the elements referred to.

Nearly twenty years ago, as we are informed, he was pronounced an insane man, and confined in chains or a strait-jacket as such. Afterward he was found to be harmless, and if mad, there was method in his madness—and many thousands have since met him in his public seances, some pronouncing him insane, others sane, and a teacher not very much unlike very many others, who have been persecuted unto death in this life and sainted afterward.

The articles published in the Chicago Republican are beyond doubt libelous in a high degree, and but for the well-known non-resistant doctrines of McFadden, would never have found a place in the columns of a journal that had a responsible proprietor—in other words, no man but McFadden and his school of non-resistants would allow such libels to be perpetrated, without resorting to a court of justice for a legal redress.

We do not purpose in this article to attempt to redress the wrongs of the parties so grossly slandered in the articles referred to. If parties have not the stamina to resort to a mode of redress which is open to the most humble citizen as well as to those more fortunately situated, but prefer to literally obey the injunction to resist not but to return good for evil, we candidly confess we have not got to that plane, and will leave it to them to fight their own battles on the non-resistant plan, "on that line," in their own way. But it is but justice to say, that neither McFadden nor his friends ask us to interfere in the matter.

But in conclusion we will say that while the foul slander of the Republican may be extolled by enemies to the truths of spirit communion, and the scandalous articles may be copied into other papers, for the purpose of bringing reproach upon Spiritualists, it should be remembered that extremes right themselves; that the foulest and most corrupt means are often wisely made to play their part in eradicating a foul condition, even as a corrosive and loathsome plaster is applied to the cancer to cure it.

The world will by and by learn the great lesson that each person is true to himself and his surroundings, and acts in accordance with his light and understanding; that the agitation of thought is the beginning of wisdom.

However unpleasant it may be to those who know of the truth of spirit communion to be derided and have such articles flouted in their faces by bigoted, biased ignoramuses, in lieu of arguments against the truth of spirit communion, yet they have this consolation, that however eccentric and impolitic may have been the conduct of Mc Fadden, it is no more the legitimate fruit of Spiritualism, than is the teaching of Noyes, of the Oneida Community, Mother Ann Lee and her priesthood of the Shakers, Brigham Young of the Mormons, the Perfectionists, and hundreds of other recognized sects of Christians the legitimate fruits of the teachings of Christ.

From our standpoint they may all be classed together as extremists. We fellowship none as sound in philosophy, but God and good angels forbid that our souls should ever be dwarfed by the spirit of intolerance. We are not our brother's keeper.

It is but justice to say that a great number of good citizens have called at this office who have visited McFadden's seances, and pronounce the articles referred to gross and cruel libels in every particular; that McFadden and wife were never in Vineland, and that in all their visits to his house they have not witnessed a single act of impropriety on his part or on the part of a single inmate of his house that would outrage the moral sentiment of the most chaste and fastidious. That he is positive and eccentric in his expressions is admitted, but seldom utters a profane word, unless he believes himself tantalized with insinuating inquiries, then he is easily excited and says a great many foolish things, like most other crazy religionists under similar circumstances.

Great Secret Discovered at Last.

A knave who dubs himself Dr. A. Chapman is out with a handbill headed as above, and professes to have discovered the secret of spirit manifestations. He admits fools to his exhibition at thirteen cents a head, descends half price, and priests free. Spiritualists generally know enough not to be humbugged by him.

An Orthodox Editor.

The Democrat, published in Cumberland County, Ill., having published a notice of a spiritual meeting, comes forth with the rank poison of its nature in the following language:

"Our advice to the people is, to 'touch not, handle not this unclean thing,' but let these black spirits and gray, these motley spirits and blue, eat of their own repast, and participate in their orgies alone, for the Lord knoweth them not!"

If the editor of the Democrat is not a worse compound than can be found in the lowest dens of vice in this city, he could not give expression to such foul language. He is neither a Christian nor a gentleman; is as corrupt as Solomon, and as dirty and filthy as old Job. If he desires to find corruption, he can detect its presence everywhere in the orthodox churches. He can find houses devoted to licentiousness there; ministers who have "fallen from grace," and gambling hells without number. Rev. James Debois, of New York, had four wives. Dr. Fuller, a local preacher of Kokomo, Ind., by his ill treatment, made his wife insane, and then was tarred and feathered, and rode on a rail. The Rev. Mc. Williams while preaching, was arrested for horse stealing. If the editor of the Democrat will turn his attention to his own church, he will have no occasion to slander Spiritualists.

"The Little Cussed Organ."

A man of Sparta, Wisconsin, wishing to present an organ to a church, wrote to a friend in New York to know what it would cost to get one. He received a reply that he could get a "little cussed organ" for $1,500; "but," added his correspondent, "if you expect to go to heaven on the organ dodge, you had better invest about $3,000."

He took the high-priced organ; and by his generous donation he has secured a seat in heaven, which will be reserved for him until his arrival. If he had bought the "cussed little organ," he would have been compelled to take a seat in the gallery, where all who donate "little cussed organs" are condemned to go. He may congratulate himself that he had the means financially to perpetrate the organ dodge, and thus place himself in such a conspicuous position.

This dodge to secure a seat in paradise, near the throne, and that, too, by donations to the church, are becoming quite common. Everything is now on a financial basis, and it is much better to be a rich religious villain than a poor pious Christian. The man who can secure a pew in Beecher's church and aid in paying his $20 000 per annum is familiarly considered as "coming the Beecher dodge," in order to be numbered with the sheep; but he who aids the "little (cussed?) church 'round the corner," is supposed to have only about one-tenth of the piety and grace of the former, and it is probable that he will be numbered with the goats.

In the Days of Hoop Skirts

It came to pass that a Missionary dressed himself in the attire of a tall, cadaverous looking woman in black, and thus disguised, gained admission to one of Mrs. Ferris' seances, he having once before been ejected for conduct unbecoming a gentleman. In spite of his disguise, he was recognized a second time and ejected. Then to carry out his original plan of falsifying the truth about Mrs. Ferris' mediumship, he published what he called an expose in a Chicago daily paper.

His expose was a tissue of falsehood, and so denounced by every one present (some thirty persons), excepting the cadaverous woman who furnished the suit for the Missionary.

In the last issue of the Crucible he rants and tears amazingly, and proposes to break things to pieces in the columns of this paper,—indeed, he reminds one of the fable of the "ball in the china store."

Owing to his extraordinary missionary services we refrain now from mentioning his name. The readers of the last number of the Crucible will readily recognize him, and that will be sufficient for a Missionary who puts on ——— to disguise himself and gain admission to a seance for the express purpose of falsely defaming a lady medium.

Letter of Fellowship.

The Religio-Philosophical Society granted a letter of fellowship and ordination to Anna M. Middlebrook, of Bridgeport, Ct., on the 20th of August, 1871, which authorizes her to solemnize marriages among the Puritans as well as elsewhere, according to law.

We hope our friends will make it a point to see that perquisites resulting from such official acts, go into the hands of our worthy lecturers, who are qualified to thus officiate, where the same can be done by a reasonable effort.

The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY also granted, on the 20th of August, 1871, a letter of fellowship, constituting in legal form, Brother Isaac Farley, of Foote, Iowa, a "regular minister of the gospel," which authorizes him to solemnize marriages in accordance with law. May all who want the silken cord tied, procure his services on such occasions,—especially Spiritualists.

THOSE WHO WISH to have this paper discontinued when the time is up to which it is paid for, should notify us of that wish two weeks before such time expires, as it takes that time to get it out of the mailing machine. When an order to discontinue is given by those in arrears, remittances should be made to square up in full, including the two weeks which the paper will be mailed the subscriber after such notice is given.

☞We are in want of dues for the JOURNAL. When it is not convenient to pay all, let us have a part, as an earnest of a good will. Wake up! we are in earnest.

Letter from Laura Cuppy Smith.

BROTHER JONES: Some weeks since, while sitting for the first time in a circle of that very wonderful medium, Mrs. Maud Lord, I was quite occupied and deeply interested in noting the effect of the manifestations upon others, and in observing the genial, artless, and confidence-inspiring manner of the medium, as she described various spirits present with an accuracy unsurpassed, at the same time inviting investigation in a spirit so cheerful, obliging and honest, that I am sure it must satisfy the most hardened sceptic of her absolute integrity, and while thus engaged, scarcely expecting to receive anything myself, I was startled by Mrs. Lord exclaiming, "Why, Mrs. Smith, there stands a beautiful, blue eyed, curly haired little boy near you, who passed to the Spirit World when a very little baby, and is now, I should think, eight or nine years old. He says he is your little 'Rose Bud.'" Mrs. L. then turned to others in the circle, describing what she saw for them, while I recalled a day in the summer of 1863, when I sat in my house in Dayton, Ohio, mourning over the premature transition of a beautiful baby boy, whose sacred dust had that day been consigned, (covered with exquisite flowers) to the grave, and questioned of my spirit friends what was my darling's "angel name?" and the response came, "We call him our Rose Bud." Amid all the trials, sorrows and divine recompense of a lecturer's life, in the Atlantic States and beneath the shadow of the Sierra Nevada, I treasured and never for a moment lost the secret of my baby's "new name," and from time to time I saw him as he grew from month to month more beautiful, yet I regarded his visits as among the things too sacred almost to be named; and when Mrs. Lord so unexpectedly described my child and gave his name, the test was as welcome as unexpected.

While lecturing a few Sundays since at Fort Huron, Mr. Starr, the spirit artist, who resides in that place, and is beloved and cherished there as he deserves, came up to me at the close of the lecture and enquired casually, whether I had ever lost a baby boy who would be now about nine years old? I replied in the affirmative, without having an opportunity of questioning Mr. Starr; and on last Sunday afternoon Mr. S. brought me a large parcel or package, and in taking off the various folds of paper I found an exquisite portrait in oil, of my angel boy, and in the peculiar arrangement of the curl on the forehead, to which with uplifted finger he seemed to call my attention, was a test that I only refrain from explaining, because from its sacred significance I cannot give it to the world. No words can express my emotions as I contemplated my treasure or depict my gratitude to the artist. All bereaved mothers will comprehend the divine joy that filled my soul,—suffice it to say the wealth of the world could not buy that picture. As a work of art it is unsurpassed, and would of itself establish the fame of Mr. Starr, if he had not already achieved it. May angels guard the dear old man, and preserve him to those who so judge his inspired work. It seems that before the morning lecture, the day that he asked me about my child, while I was reading a poem of Kate Hill's, in which occur these lines:

> "There are faces there divinely fair
> That the earth lost long ago;
> And foreheads white, where curls lay bright,
> Like sunbeams over snow," my child came and stood beside me and looked at Mr. Starr, and he felt that he should get his picture.

Am I excused for occupying your valuable space with this poor tribute to mediumistic worth,—this page of heart's history? I think I need not ask.

Chicago, Aug. 30, 1871.

Fay and Von Vleck.

The Cincinnati Commercial has over a column devoted to the above named personages. It seems that Fay and Von Vleck had an arrangement to work together, Fay professing to be a medium, and Von Vleck acting as detective. A full house and full pockets was the result. The opposers of Spiritualism turned out in large numbers to witness the exposure by Von Vleck, and some Spiritualists to witness manifestations through Fay's pretended mediumship. According to a secret programme Fay was worsted; Von Vleck, as was intended, triumphant. The devotees of old theology were jubilant.

About this time those friends who took stock in F. Melville Fay, who oftener holds forth against Spiritualism than for it, and has been so published repeatedly, found themselves sold! Hundreds of thousands of believers in spirit communion who never subscribe for a Spiritual newspaper, would find it for their interest to do so.

—Brother L. Smith, of Aurelius, N. Y., writes in high terms of Mrs. Anna Middlebrook as a lecturer and medium.

—A. J. Seely sends $3 to apply on subscription. Letter posted at Portland. No state given. Can any one favor us with his address.

—A Japanese heathen begs his old teacher to "rise and explain" why the Christian Church in this country is divided into so many branches, having conflicting doctrines and usages. His mind is confused, and he fears that he might not select the true church, in making his choice among them, and miss heaven at last.

When the heavenly archer draws his bow, no one knows who is the arrow that may be sent. If it be thou, O Soul, deviate not, tarry not by the way.

—Many families, says the New York Mail, who reside in elegant stone fronts, and appear very wealthy, after marrying off their daughters, move into smaller dwellings in a less fashionable part of the city.

—Mrs. Gildersleeve Longstreet, who wrote the pretty poem of "Mrs. Lofty and I" (which was set to music by the Hutchinsons and sung so sweetly by Abby), is now the editress of a fashion magazine.

A young lady of Montgomery, Ala., on being told that her lover had been suddenly killed, cried: "Oh, that splendid gold watch of his! Give me something to remember him by."

Several beautiful Polish ladies are the sensation at Newport. They dress their hair in the "classical" style, which consists of a small coil high on the head, from which drop two or three curls.

—The sister of Delescluse, the famous Communist, now in her sixty-fifth year, is to be tried by a council of war at Versailles, on various charges. She is said to have been a Petroleuse, and to have murdered several of the troops of Thiers.

Personal and Local.

—Mrs. Wilcoxson lectured at Bloomington, Ill., on Sunday last. The paper published there gives her the following notice: MRS. WILCOXSON'S LECTURES.

—That a woman should lecture is nothing new, in fact it is becoming very common. It is also true that, taken altogether, they succeed quite as well as those who have for a long time monopolized that field of labor and profit. More recently they are securing admission to the liberal pulpits of the country. The doors of the churches are thrown open to them, and they minister in sacred things, sometimes to good acceptance and to edification. The pulpit of the Free Congregational Church was occupied yesterday, morning and evening, by Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson of Chicago. The attendance was large and the audience mis-cellaneous, many attracted no doubt from curiosity. The speaker is a plain, unpretentious woman, and enunciates nothing new to those who have attended that church from its beginning. But her simple, natural eloquence, and the direct manner in which she enforces the obligations of the people to obey the demands of love, justice, mercy and purity, reach the heart and conscience of her hearers. Her freedom from abstinence toward those who differ from her, and the charity to her opponents, contribute to the usefulness of her lectures. Charity among radicals is a commendable virtue. Her lectures were so well received yesterday, that we understand she has been engaged to speak from the same pulpit next Sunday.

—Brother A. F. Barker, of Ellsworth, Maine, writes that the Spiritualists have commenced holding weekly meetings, and that the cause is in a flourishing condition there.

—Our friends who are looking for a good school for their children will do well to investigate the merits of Belvidere Seminary. See advertisement in another column.

—Our friend N. Kinney, of Waverly, N. Y., is turning out some fine work in carriages, buggies and wagons.

—The Christian Crucible, Rev. L. F. Andrews, editor, Macon, Ga., has lately been started in the interests of the Universalists.

—We shall in a few days be able to fill all orders for the Bhagvat Geeta. The demand has been so much greater than anticipated that we have got behind, but have a large edition now in the binder's hands.

—Brother L. F. Cummings having been laboring efficiently in Wisconsin, writes to us as follows: I cannot refrain from alluding to the kind friends at East Delaware, Wis., with whom I was privileged to remain a few days. They have a pleasant house, a good choir, and a respectable number of regular attendants, which are rapidly increasing under the ministration of Bro. E. W. Stevens, one of the best and most inspirational speakers, and a thoroughly devoted man. While traveling the lone pathway of life, which is the portion of most mediums and speakers, it does one's soul good to meet with such a man.

—Mrs. L. A. Pearsall lectures at Disco, Ill., once in four weeks. She is doing a good work.

—Brother J. L. Davis, writing from Princeton, Ill., says: Mr. E. V. Wilson gave us some excellent lectures and a good many tests. It stirred up the whole town.

—Brother E. Sprague sends the following:

GREENSBO, Ill., Aug. 29, 1871.

REV. ELIJAH WOODWORTH.—Sir: As no one else accepts your challenge, I will, if you please, meet you at Quincy or Coldwater, Mich., at your early convenience, and debate it.

GENTLEMEN: I will debate with you, if you wish, the following: Resolved, That Spiritualism is the only religion of the Bible; and that the churches have no claim to be the church of Christ.

—Brother A. E. Doty writes: We have a clairvoyant medium in Disco, Ill. N. Y., is a member of the Methodist church, and holds seances on call for the most prominent members of said church. D. W. Hull gives us the first lecture here on the 29th, and we mean to hold every inch gained.

—William F. McCrary, of Boken City, Oregon, is entitled to our thanks, as are all others who aid in circulating this paper.

—Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith, who lectured in this city with great success, and who is one of the most eloquent advocates of our cause, holds forth at Port Huron, Mich., for September, October and November; Louisville, Ky, for December, and Memphis, Tenn., for January.

—Dr. O. W. Curtiss and wife, of Flushing, Mich., are regarded as excellent clairvoyants.

—Dr. Samuel Underhill is doing a good work in Wisconsin. He not only lectures on Spiritualism, but temperance and kindred reforms. He has lectured at Dayeville, Byron, Winnebago, Geneva, and several other places.

—Brother C. Barnes writes as follows from Chauncey, Ohio: I feel to drop you a few lines, to inform you that I, Chauncey Barnes, am in the earth form as yet. I was not one that shot the young lady, then shot myself. It was another Barnes of the same name. I appreciate woman too well for that kind of work. I am here; it I was over the other side I would come to you; but now I cannot. I am here on a mountain called Mount Nebo, town of Chauncey, Athens county, O. We have, by spirit directions, come here to commence a higher spiritual work, through angelic directions or by the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth, all one and the same with me. We have built one house on the five acres purchased, and have the timber furnished, and have commenced erecting a tabernacle expressly for meetings, to prepare them for their apostolic mission, and to organize the true government; the new dispensation, as we see the old is about to terminate; even the so-called spiritual dispensation.

—Mrs. E. B McIntire writes us, enclosing $2, but gives no post-office address.

—Mrs. Bell A. Chamberlain has been actively engaged in Iona during the past few months. She has lectured at Lacona, Charlton, Ottumwa, Eddyville, and at several other places, giving excellent satisfaction. She intends to start for California soon. Her address after Sept. 19th will be Eureka, Cal. She now proposes to visit Davenport, Rock Island, Dubuque, Cedar Rapids, Cedar Falls, Waverly and Chester City, preparatory to her visit to the Pacific slope.

—A. E. Doty, after the lapse of several years, is again in the field lecturing on the philosophy of Spiritualism, when opportunity permits.

—Brother Isaac Farley, writing from Foot, Iowa, states that the three days meeting at Scaze Hollow was a grand success. The meeting was addressed by D. N. Henderson, A. M. Miller, L. Campbell, P. S. Lawrence, Dr. Sanford and J. Farley.

—Brother John P. Hebler writes as follows from St. Louis: Perhaps you have heard from some source or other the rapid strides our great city is making towards moral greatness. If not, hear them. They, the city council, have made an effort through one of their members, a Mr. Bein, (raise base to humanity) to suppress mediums and stop [illegible] ual communion, and legalized prostitution, [illegible] ng the gambling hells. [illegible] ll so, publish it all to the [illegible] laborer, Dr. H. F. Fairfield, lectures at Farmington, Ohio, during September, and at East Saginaw, Mich., during October. Address him as above.

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

Statuvolence.

[NUMBER III.]

MOTION AND CONSCIOUSNESS.

We have spoken of two classes of nerves,—those of motion and sensation. There is a third called the sympathetic. The two anterior bundles of the spinal chord, A M, send out the branches of the nerves of motion; while the two posterior bundles, P M, send out those of sensation. The nervous system is also divided into the voluntary, or those influenced by the will,—the involuntary, or those not influenced by the will, and the mixed or those which are partially subject to the will, and yet act independent of it.

It is a beautiful provision in the economy of the human system, and of all living beings, that certain functions are entirely beyond the influence of the will,—thus the circulation, digestion, and the various secretions which require to be kept in constant action, and would be very liable to suspension if they depended upon the action of the will entirely.

Digestion, circulation, and the secretions are entirely beyond the direct action of the will, and are carried on without it. Respiration is very properly placed partially under the influence of the will, being essential for the use of the vocal organs. The will, therefore, exercises considerable control over this function, and thus enables us to regulate the voice and to accelerate or retard the respiration, but we cannot suspend it. There is, as the French call it, a "besoin du respire,"—a necessity for respiration, which overleaps the power of the will, and no person can drown themselves by holding the head under water, or by holding the breath. There comes at a time when the demand for air breaks over the restraint of the will, and a fury the chest will be expanded. Through the mixed functions we may aid or restrain the movements of the bowels to a certain extent. How do these nerves produce motion?

Physiologists and anatomists, with all their researches, have not yet reached a solution of this question. Clairvoyantly, we see that the involuntary motions are produced by the regular and uniform action of the muscles, stimulated by a continued and beautiful flow of undulating waves of light, which passes out through these nerves.

In the nerves of voluntary motion this aura or life force consists of a light somewhat different in color, and the motions of the waves are not regular. When there is no action of the will there are gentle currents flowing continuously through the nerves, which give tone to the muscles. When the will is aroused, we perceive a wave-like motion commencing in the brain, passing down the spinal chord and through the particular nerve which excends the muscle that the will designs to call into action. When these waves reach the muscles, we perceive the light accumulating there until there is a certain amount, and then the muscles are thrown into action. We can judge of the celerity of this action by the rapidity of the waves. If there be any interruption in the flow of these waves, there will be a spasmodic action, such as is exhibited in cold persons with shaking palsy, in which the current is not sufficiently strong to keep up a regular and uniform action. In epilepsy and convulsions, from other causes it is fearful to witness the storm in these waves. The will having no power over them, they are lashed into fury, and the fearful contortions which result from irregular and spasmodic muscular contractions are witnessed. Such convulsions have the tendency to destroy the proper action of the will over the muscles, and once established in the system, the habit is very difficult to overcome. It is liable to result in permanent contraction of the muscles, ignorance of the will, and mental weakness, which may go on to imbecility.

We have gone one step farther than science had reached, through the aid of clairvoyance, but the means by which the will is enabled to set in motion these waves is still beyond our ken. We present these facts as they are shown to us. One of the most wonderful and beautiful phenomenon that clairvoyance has presented to us is that of speaking. We see at first a luminous portion of the brain stimulated by the particular faculty that is evolving thought, then waves of light flow out with great rapidity to the muscular apparatus of the vocal organs and the chest, and each intonation of the voice is telegraphed to its proper muscle with the requisite force to produce the exact sound.

If this were all to exclaim that man was so fearfully and wonderfully made, how much more should we when thus admitted into the inner temple of life, to witness the wonderful and beautiful phenomena that are going on there, and such thoughts must ever fill the soul with high reverence for God and man. The same will power which sets all this beautiful machinery in motion, and regulates it so nicely and so well as to produce its desired results, can arrest all these motions, not by withdrawing the power, but by an actual effort; hence the statuvolent fixes the muscles of any part of the body in any position, and can hold them there by a positive power, and present the phenomenon of rigidity which is so common in this state.

There may also be in this state a wonderful increase of power, and some slender and delicate persons have been known to exhibit immense strength when in this state. This is done by concentrating accumulated waves of force upon certain muscles, but we would caution persons against experiments in this direction, as they are almost always injurious, and sometimes very seriously so, leaving permanent effects.

Sensation is also influenced, as we perceive, by waves of light, differing in color from those of motion, and originating at the extremities of the nerve instead of the brain, and passing up through these into the brain, in order to complete the sensation. Hence this function requires not only the proper condition of the terminal extremities of the nerve, and of the nerve which conveys the current, but also brain, and any disorder in either of these will interfere with this.

There are many highly interesting phenomena connected with these wonderful functions; for instance a small foreign body lodged in the nostril irritates the membrane, and a sense of uneasiness is created, an alarm is at once sent to the brain by the nerves of sensation. This is immediately transmitted by the nerve of motion to the head, and the phenomenon of sneezing is produced, a violent current of air being forced through the nostril for the purpose of removing the foreign body.

Again, we see a disgusting object, an unpleasant sensation is conveyed from the eye to the brain, a feeling of sickness is produced, and another set of nerves are acted upon, and the muscles which produce vomiting are immediately set in motion, and the whole of the contents are thrown out.

The lining membrane of the air tubes, or bronchii, is very sensitive, and the presence of a foreign body will not be tolerated there without violent resistance, and when the natural secretions of these tubes are very carefully watched, and as soon as anything accumulates, a sensation of uneasiness occurs, and notice is telegraphed to the brain, with a request that it shall set the motor nerves in action, and cause a spasmodic motion of the chest, which we call coughing, and which is simply an effort to impel a strong current of air through the tube, and expel the foreign body or the accumulated secretion. Coughing may be entirely involuntary, though it is often aided by the will, and may be produced to a certain extent entirely by this. As a general rule, it is better not to check the involuntary action much by the will, and there are many cases where an effort to suppress coughing by the will, will be beneficial, as the violent motion has a tendency to irritate the lungs. In those cases statuvolence, by enabling the individual to allay the irritability of the lungs, may be highly beneficial, and many cases of incipient consumption may be cured entirely by this means.

"A sick body, like a broken limb, needs rest," and one of the greatest difficulties in the way of treating the lungs, arises from the fact that they must be kept in constant action. If, however, the co asionscess can be removed without interfering with their motion, if we cannot only withdraw that portion of the power which comes from the will, but also remove the sense of pain, we have the most efficient means for restoration to health that can be devised.

Fatigue results from over exertion, mostly of some portion of the physical body, and Statuvolence is the very best and most rapid means of producing rest by establishing an equilibrium in the system, making the body passive, and removing the consciousness of pain, and when this is done nature has much better facilities for establishing an equilibrium. During the first ten days after we had placed our hand in that condition, there was a gradual diminution of the swelling and redness. The pain left immediately, at least while the hand was still. At the end of this time, we were able to move the hand and fingers without any pain. After this, however, a new attack of inflammation and swelling occurred, painless, however, when the hand was kept quiet. This was but a recurrence of a condition that had become constitutional, and was the result, as we are told by our spirit guides, of an accumulation of the poisonous influence which produced these conditions, and were thrown off. The facts exist; such theory seems probable. As this is not painful, we are very hopeful that there will be an end to the trouble. This attack passed off sooner than any we have had for a long time.

One of the most important lessons of life is to cultivate the power of controlling the will, so as to use it in the best manner.

In early life there is a want of co-ordination in the muscles, because the will has not yet learned to train them to act together.

We notice the difference in the perfection with which this is done by different children. The graceful movements that distinguish one person from another, are dependent upon the well-trained action of the will. We are influenced in this by our surroundings and associates, especially in the early and susceptible periods of life. Children imitate the motions of their parents and those around them, and also of the animals that they associate with, and are affected by the scenery and surroundings of their lives. The graceful and easy motions of birds, greyhounds, and well trained horses, have a very powerful influence over those who associate with them, in producing beautiful motions,—while the influence of swine and the awkward and clumsy animals are injurious, and lead to similar motions.

Self training is of the highest importance, and this should always be aided by all the external surroundings which we can arrange for ourselves; and so all through life we should study to use our wills so as to produce the best results, not only upon the outward plane of artistic work, but inferiorly for the unfoldment of all our faculties. In our next we shall speak of clairvoyance.

A Prophecy Fulfilled.

Seven years ago a spirit told us that the time was near at hand when spirits would be able, in the presence of certain mediums, to make themselves visible and tangible to their friends. We felt that it was true, and are glad now to know that that prophecy is fulfilled. In the American Spiritualist we find a letter signed C. E. Williams, setting forth the facts which we had heard from various sources. We should be glad to witness the phenomenon ourselves, or at least have some of our more skeptical friends witness what to us is a daily reality,—the presence of our friends who have left their mortal tenements.

This phenomenon occurs at the house of a Mr. Keeler, at Moravia, Cayuga county, N. Y., and not very far from Rochester, where the first intelligent communications by the raps were received. The medium is a married lady named Mary Andrews. The correspondent says:

"Mr. Keeler is almost always in attendance, and helps to conduct the circle. At first we proceeded in darkness, but the spirits would not so have it, and with their presence made that part of the room in which the cabinet is placed as light as noonday. Brother Keeler said that was the first time when that remarkable manifestation ever took place in his house. Spirit lights were to be seen floating about the room overhead, two, three and four at a time. The brilliant light spoken of was more like the flashes of lightning on a summer evening, but more soft and beautiful.

It must be seen to be realized. Spirits talked right out by the aid of the trumpet, and pitied me frequently after which the medium went into the cabinet, and the lamp was ignited in the room, and three of my departed friends came, so that to myself and daughter, they were as real as when in the flesh. Such a scene here,—two beloved companions and a brother. Strangers to myself, sitting in the room, could see the family resemblance to me, and I have no doubt but it was my brother. To myself and daughter it was as real as life.

I would recommend all who would like to see spirits of those called dead, that they may see and know them again, if it were but for a moment or two, to go to friend Keeler's and see the wonders for themselves.

This is but the beginning of these manifestations, which we have no doubt will ere long be witnessed in other places, and in the presence of many other mediums. It is cheering to know that not only are all the old, so to speak, forms of manifestation increasing in many places, but new one's are being presented.

Take Notice.

To the Delegates to the American Association who go through Philadelphia:

I have made arrangements with the Railroad and Steamboat Companies for the round trip to Troy, from Philadelphia and return, for $7. Tickets to New York and return, $4,—to be obtained of me. Please send in your names, that I may know how many to purchase. Will be good on any train from the 10th to the 21st of September. From New York to Troy, on the day boats, from Vestry St., the fare is $3 to go and return, good for the same time.

HENRY T. CHILD, M. D., 634 Race St.

C SUBSCRIBERS TO PETERS' MUSICAL M
H MONTHLY get all the latest and best Mu- U
E sic at one and two cents a piece. Every num- S
A ber contains from $4 to $5 worth of new Music; I
P and it can be had for 3 cents. The July and C
August numbers contain Thirty Pieces of Music, (75 pages, sheet music size,) and will be mailed for 50 cents. Address J. L. PETERS,
P 599 Broadway, New York. C
v10 n24 3t

James Brooks,

The Great Developing Medium, will send printed instructions, which never fail to develop in full those who have any mediumistic powers. Send for them at once. Test your spiritual gifts. Inclose two dollars.

Address 306 S. Clark st, Chicago.
v10 n19 tf

A BOOK FOR EVERY HOUSEHOLD.

The Chester Family,

OR

The Curse of the Drunkard's APPETITE.

BY JULIA M. BRIGHAM.

Moderate Drinking is the Source of all Drunkenness

This author has given her life, for twelve years as a CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN, to the healing of diseases. The various incidents of the story are taken from real life, with but a slight coloring of fiction.

Price, $1,00, Postage, 16cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago Ill.

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

GROVE MEETING.

The Spiritualists of Sterling and vicinity will hold a Grove Meeting in Prickett's Grove, 3½ miles east of Birmingham, Michigan, on the first Saturday and Sunday in September (2d and 3d).

Good speakers will be in attendance. A general invitation is extended to all.

CHARLES H. HUTCHENS, President.
HIRAM SMITH, Secretary.

OMRO, WISCONSIN.

The Friends of Human Progress will hold a Mass Meeting at Putnam's Hall, Omro, Winnebago Co., Wis., on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 9th and 10th, 1871.

Mrs. Mattie Hulette Parry, of Beloit, Wis., and the Rev. Mr. Stone, of Berlin, Wis., will be present on the occasion.

Iowa State Association of Spiritualists.

This Association will hold its Third Annual Convention at Iowa Falls, Hardin Co., Iowa, commencing Friday, Oct 6th, at 10 A. M., and continue three days.

As important business will come before this Convention, it is earnestly requested that all liberal minds in the State will come out and make this the most interesting time ever held in the State.

Good speakers and test mediums will be present, and no pains will be spared to entertain friends from abroad.

Speakers wishing to attend the Convention are requested to correspond with the President and Secretary, at Anita, Cass Co., Iowa.

J. M. BLAKESLEY, President.
EDWIN CATE, Secretary.

VINELAND CONVENTION.

The Spiritualists and Friends of Progress,—the Friends of Equal Rights and Justice to all Humanity, have decided to hold a Convention in their Hall and Grove, at Vineland, N. J., on Saturday and Sunday, the 9th and 10th of September, 1871.

It is resolved to devote the first day of the Convention to the question of Legal Equality and Justice, with special reference to Universal Suffrage, as advocated by the advanced minds of the nation.

The second day will be devoted to Spiritualism and the Interests of Children, the Progressive Lyceum, etc.

We hope to obtain the assistance of some of the ablest speakers among Spiritualists, and outside of them.

Invitations are extended to all speakers and other friends who feel able to come to Vineland and aid in pleading the glorious cause of Liberty.

Thomas Gales Forster, Mrs. V. C. Woodhull, and Col. Blood have agreed to be present. Dr. Slade, the noted medium, intends to come if possible, and is expected.

We invite, with hope of securing assistance from, Mrs. Lucretia Mott, Julia W. Howe, Mary A. Livermore, Lucy Stone, Mary F. Davis, A. J. Davis, H. B. Blackwell, T. W. Higginson, and others. Mrs. H. F. M. Brown and Dr. H. T. Child, from special invitations, are confidently expected, and a good time may be expected, and we trust all will return happier, wiser, and better.

Per order of Committee.

MARY E. TILLOTSON, Cor. Secretary.

Obituary.

GONE HOME.—On the 23d of July, Noah Tyler, of Solsville, Madison Co., N. Y., joined the spirit band who came for him, and an immense concourse of people gathered to leave their tribute of respect, and assist in depositing his earthly casket beneath the soil. The discourse was delivered by the writer, in the grove fronting his residence, from 1st Cor., 15: 49, and was listened to by members of different churches with the closest attention, never before having heard the true gospel on the resurrection.

Mr. Tyler was an intimate friend of Gerrit Smith's, and a co-worker with him in every reform, and a spiritualist to the last.

A. E. DOTY.

WE WILL GIVE YOU

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS,

If by following the directions we send, you do not Make Your Children a Star. Direction and Ample Means with which to do it sent for only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. No more capital or expense required. Men and Women, Boys and Girls. Now is the time. Address,—ADAMS & CO, PUBLISHERS, 25 BROMFIELD ST., BOSTON. v10 n22 3t

MATRIMONIAL.

A GENTLEMAN 30 YEARS OLD—A SPIRITUALIST, of good habits and fair education, medium stature, light complexion, blue eyes and brown hair, desires to correspond with ladies for the purpose of a better acquaintance, and marriage. Those who feel favorably impressed by this notice, and wish to correspond, may rest assured that their letters will be received in confidence and treated with honor. Address GEORGE HARDCASTLE, Quincy, Ill. v10 n21 4t

The Tenth Thousand!

Prof. Howe

Has already Published the Tenth Thousand

OF HIS

SEVEN-HOUR SYSTEM OF GRAMMAR.

Price $1 Bound; Fancy Paper 50 cents.

 For sale wholesale and retail by the Religio Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE CAREER OF THE CHRIST-IDEA IN HISTORY.

A COMPANION VOLUME TO

"THE CAREER OF THE GOD-IDEA,"

BY HUDSON TUTTLE.

CONTENTS.

I Introductory; II Career of the Christ-idea in Hindostan and among other Races; III Prophecies of the Advent of Jesus; IV Conception and Genealogy; V Birth of Jesus; VI John the Baptist—his relation to Jesus VII The sermon on the Mount; VIII Miracles; IX sending forth the Apostles; X The fatal journey; XI Burial and Resurrection; XII The Descent into Hell; XIII The Gospels; XIV Resume of the Life and Character of Jesus; XV Causes of the Extension of Christianity; XVI The ultimate of the Christ-idea.

Price $1.25. Postage 16 cents.

The demand for these new works of Hudson Tuttle both in this country and Europe, is unprecedented.

For sale at the Religio-Philosophical Journal Office.

MEMORANDA OF PERSONS, PLACES AND EVENTS,

Embracing authentic Facts, Visions, Impressions, Dreams in Magnetism, Clairvoyance, Spiritualism. Also quotations from the opposition. By

ANDREW JACKSON DAVIS.

With Appendix, containing Rochester's Great Story of "Hornedom," vividly portraying the wide difference between the ordinary state and that of Clairvoyance.

Price, $1.50; Postage, 20 cents.

Address S. S. JONES,
185 South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

HEALING MEDIUMS.

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph or from lock of hair, readings of character; marked changes past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those [illegible]

[illegible] S. SEVERANCE,
[illegible], MILWAUKEE, WIS.
v1a10t.

DUMONT C. DAKE, M.D.,

ANALYTICAL PHYSICIAN FOR CHRONIC DISEASES.

Patients at a distance successfully treated. Medicines sent by mail or express. Send a simple statement of condition, age, and sex; occupation, temperament, (if not known, send photograph). Address P. O. Box 80, Chicago, Ill. Send for ANALYTICAL HEALTH JOURNAL.
v10 n8 tf

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer.

BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS.

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYAN

PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by likeness, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future—advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $3.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.
n1 v10 tf.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium

148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago,

Mrs. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, through the POSITIVE and NEGATIVE forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be perfectly applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, but in case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controlling her accomplish the same, is done as well who the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $1.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $1; answering Business Letters, $3. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

DR. SAMUEL MAXWELL,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN.

TREATS the sick by magnetic touch, and the use of appropriate magnetized remedies. Also makes clairvoyant examinations. Patients to be treated by letter should send age, sex, and leading symptoms. Board in private families if desired. Come to, or address,—SAMUEL MAXWELL, M. D.
72 SOUTH SIXTH ST., RICHMOND, IND.
10 vn17

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS.

Madison Doherty, having severed his connection with A. D. Willis, at Chicago, has opened a Gallery, at Indianapolis, Indiana, where he will sit for spirit pictures.

Parties at a distance wishing these pictures can get the same result as if present, by inclosing a lock of hair, a picture, and the fee of three dollars, and post office stamp, stating the day and hour they wish a trial. Money refunded if no result is obtained.

DOHERTY & PURSELL, PHOTOGRAPHERS,
Nos. 94 & 96 East Washington street,
Indianapolis Indiana.
v10 n17 3m

DR. S. L. MCFADDEN AND WIFE, MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 848 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago.

They invite all who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, give news from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law unto themselves,—to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors and preachers. All Mediums are invited to attend free of charge. The Outcasts line of the Bible, Lying Spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of disease, and private communications, from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not excepted.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.
v10 n12 12t

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Deo hominem externum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN HELMONT.

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS,

The most safe, salutatory, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Test or trial packages mailed free for 25 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M. D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 73 I St., Washington, D. C.
v10 n11 tf

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL HOURS, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services.
v9 n8 5t

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

ITEMS.

From Louis Waisbrooker.

Interm'ny in Our Ranks—Settled Speakers—Snow-Birds—Helen Harlow's Vow—The German Girl—M rmonism—Susan B Anthony—J. S. Loveland—Interesting Statistics—Thomas Paine, Etc., Etc.

Have been absent ten days; visited Waterloo, Waverly, and Independence, sold a few books, made some new acquaintances, and, altogether, had a very pleasant time.

Everywhere there is a spirit of thoughtful inquiry among the masses, which needs only to be rightly met, and mighty inroads upon old institutions would soon be visible. In the meantime, there seems to be such a lack of harmony in our own ranks, that it is disheartening to those who see the folly of wasting powder upon one another; I can say powder, for I do not think there is anything used that amounts to shot or shell.

Still, settled speakers, or sensational speakers, settled sensations, or whatever else may be called for, the time to rear the temple has not come. We may have single workmen or organized bands; but may have the sensation which comes from the fall of the giant oak, or the more settled labor of chipping and hewing; we may —must have—places of business, but we cannot build the temple in any of these workshops, and and the greatest noise may attract the greatest crowd, but this is not proof of the most successful work. But I appeal to Ideas, and I will give you the first, in the shape of a couple of or, at least, they came in a snow-storm, both brought and left upon the doorsteps of those who now shelter them with all Spiritualism's care.

SNOW BIRDS,

One came seven years ago last winter, and a bright-eyed child she is, one that any parent might be proud of. She says that God sent her to her mother in a snow-storm. The other is a sweet darling of sixteen months, or a little more. The home to which the first snow-bird went, had one child, the second none. "Nothing strange in all this," you say; "children are frequently forsaken by their unnatural mothers."

Ah, but does society permit them to be natural?

UNNATURAL.

A western editor in criticising "Helen Harlow's Vow," calls Helen's character an unnatural one; thinks that there are but few, if any such in real life, and that it is for the best good of society that there are not.

A story was related to me during the past week by a lady residing in Independence, and one whose heart beats truly for humanity,—the story she told me, proved that there is at least one Helen Harlow in real life.

Some few years since,—six or seven,—a German girl in that city became disgusted with her lover, and notwithstanding the fact that her situation was such that as soon as known, the inevitable disgrace must follow, she utterly refused to marry him. It was he instead of she, was it usual in such cases, who did the pleading; but it was of no avail. He had disgusted her in the closer relation, had shown his grossness and worthlessness, and she bravely decided to bear disgrace with one child, her own brave spirit so stamping itself on that child as to overcome or greatly modify inherited tendencies from the father's side. She chose this rather than an honorable though hateful union. She was attending school at the time, and continued to do so, and unsuspected, until two weeks of her confinement, seeming to have a perfect mania for study. She cared for her babe till weaned, and here the parallel ends, for she did not, like Helen Harlow, continue to keep it with her, but gave it to a family, who are to-day fastly proud of it, while she went with her parents still farther west.

MORMONDOM.

Susan B. Anthony writing to the Revolution, from Salt Lake City, under date of Aug. 5th, says in reference to the liberal movement:

"The transition of this people into the new life is complicated—is heartrending. Remember that when these men began their rebellion against Brigham, it was simply a protest against his tyranny, his exorbitant tithing system, mere refusal to render tribute unto him, not at all a disavowal of the Mormon religion or polygamy. But as band after band has burst from their heads, this last, strongest, and tightest one of plurality of wives begins to snap asunder. To illustrate:

"One man, a noble, loving, beautiful spirit, nothing of the sensualist, with four lovely wives, three of whom I have seen, and in the houses of two of them I have broken bread, with thirteen loved and loving children in three of these houses, wakes up to a new idea. Four women's hearts breaking, three sets of children must leave father and husband, that the one wife system may be realized. I can assure you my heart aches for the man, the women, and the children, and cries,—'God help them one and all!'"

Take care there, Susan, what admissions you make. You claim equality for man and woman; do you believe it possible that a woman could be a "noble, loving, beautiful spirit" and yet be the wife of four different men?" Do you believe that this could be possible, and yet she be "nothing of a sensualist?"

Again, where is the need that this man, with the "beautiful, loving spirit" and those lovely women and loving children should separate? There is no need unless they can be made happier and better by it. If they are contented, are happy, and do not interfere with the happiness of others—are making no one any worse as men, women, or citizens, it is nobody's business but their own, and the conscience which presses them to break these ties at the expense of breaking hearts, is the result of a "Thus saith the Lord" dictatorship, instead of a calm study of the needs, of the rights, of humanity. Sister Severance said in her recently published lecture that we had need of strong, brave souls, and so we have.

How many, suppose you, Mr. Editor, who read the above words will find their hearts beating a full Amen? Not a few, I can assure you, and yet who will dare to say it aloud?

I do not say by the above that I want a half dozen husbands, or that I should be willing to share with half a dozen others in the conjugal affections of the man who called me wife, but I do say that domestic regulations belong to the parties concerned, and if they are happy, "noble," and "loving," and "beautiful spirits," it is none of our business if their ideas of conjugal life do not accord with ours.

But I have said enough for the present upon this point—enough, I presume, to provoke the attack of some good brother or sister who may think my views dangerous. Well, I am ready, and I care not which beats, if conflict ensues, so that good comes of it.

[illegible]

den folly of putting new wine into old bottles. The new religions are passing away, or they are not."

The most of Spiritualists profess to believe that they are, and having turned about in their boats, are looking in an opposite direction; oh, but they are only looking, they still float upon the old tide instead of launching upon the new. When they become sick with rioting backwards, perhaps they will be ready, that is, if not too dizzy, for decided action, and that must come, if the signs of the times mean anything. A lady told me the past week that the trials which I made "Alice Vale" pass through because of her Spiritualism seemed to her unnatural—that she had never witnessed such bitterness. Ah, indeed! Then Mrs. Packard's experience was unnatural, and when one of the best of men, an old gentleman living with his children, says to me, "I wish I could have the privilege of inviting my friends home, and feel that they would be made welcome." And why could he not? He and his friends are Spiritualists, and they are church-members. This, too, is unnatural, I presume; and still further, when a lady makes the acquaintance of another lady, likes her very much, and is upon the point of giving her full social recognition, it is unnatural that she gets very glad all at once that

DECIDED ACTION

SHE HASN'T CALLED.

And what has she learned? Why, the stranger takes the Banner of Light! Awful! (She deserves social ostracism. Yes, these things are unnatural: they are the result of an unnatural religion, and why should they not be like their source. Yes, they are unnatural, but they are none the less real, as thousands of suffering souls can testify.

And now I will close, by giving you, while the recent outbreak in New York City is fresh in the minds of your readers, some statistics taken from a circular issued by the New York Union League, in January, 1870, under the head of "Table of Moneys Voted from the Public Treasury of the City of New York for Sectarian Institutions in 1869," we have the following startling exhibit:

To the Protestant Episcopal Church,		$29 335 09
" " Reformed (Dutch)	"	12 630 86
" " Presbyterian	"	8 363 44
" " Methodist E.	"	3 073 63
" " Baptist	"	2 460 34
" " German Evangelical	"	2 027 24
" " Roman Catholic	"	412 62 26

Comment is unnecessary; but though promising to close with this quotation, I cannot forbear adding the following which I find in the Mitchel County Press, under the head, "Methodism Coeckes es Infidelity;" the editor quotes from an article in some paper not named, in which the writer says, "Such was the tremendous logical power of Mr. Paine's works that with all the drawbacks I have mentioned, they would have completely revolutionized the sentiment of the American people on the subject of religion, but for the influence of George Whitefield and John Wesley. * * * These two men started the evangelical wave at the close of the last century, and it rolled on, overwhelming the 'Age of Reason,' and everything else of the kind." It is well known that the principles advocated by Thomas Paine are represented under the form of a woman, the 'Goddess of Liberty,' and one cannot help wondering if the statement made in Revelations 12 h chapter, 15 h verse, has any reference to the "evangelical wave" above spoken of. "And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that she might be carried away by the flood." Be that as it may it is certain that the evangelical waves are even now laving the feet of our beautiful goddess, and it needs constant watchfulness to keep her from being swept from her pedestal.

DOUBTFUL COMPLIMENT,

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

Plain Questions for Plain People to Answer.

FOR THEY WHO ARE WISE IN THEIR OWN CONCEIT KNOW ALL.

Questions, both simple and profound, may be considered as natural for the human mind, as it is for lemons both great and small to grow upon trees.

All questions either have, or have not, within themselves, the elements of their own solution. The more comprehensive the intellect, the more profound the questions; but the less wise and unthinking ask fewer questions and seldom answer any, except those that may call them to dinner or the whiskey shop.

It has been said that the New England Yankee is the most prolific in presenting a perpetual series of revolving questions, for his answer to one, is usually given by his asking another. In imitation of the Yankee, I now propose to fill up the remainder of this sheet with a series of metaphysical and theological questions.

Is no every person's organization and mental capacity a little different from any other person's? If so, will not everybody differ from everybody else in their mode of acting, feeling, and thinking?

Hence we may have the liberal and illiberal, thinker, as well as the slothful and vivacious man. But which should we emulate, and imitate? Is it the liberal or illiberal thinker of the present age, who really perceives the vast amount of theological mud through which the sectarian world is perpetually floundering?

Why do many good people, even in a land of religious liberty, fear to entertain new and radical ideas, or even plain questions, that lie outside of the old beaten path? Is it the fear of a fabled Hell, or a mythical Devil, or is it a lack of confidence in themselves and a knowledge of the true divinity of Nature? O fearful man! O timid woman!

Is it proper to ask from whence, and where, and who is God? or from whence is man, and whither is he bound?

Does not a search after truth, presuppose a truth to be? Does not a search after God presuppose the existence of that which is sought for? If not, is not the search a useless one on the part of him who runs a race to catch a myth? Is it not absurd to suppose a first cause, and yet another cause before that? But is it absurd to suppose a self-existent prime cause, or in other words, to suppose the existence of an uncaused, or causeless causator? Is it proper to use the term infinite, so long as the full import of its meaning is by us incomprehensible? Is it logical and, prim, for any man to put what he does not know, and comprehend, into the balance, to outweigh what another does know, and wisely comprehends?

If what a man knows, and what he does not know, were written in a book, which think you would be the largest?

In mathematics the rule of supposition is proper and legitimate, and both true and wise; answers are reached therebye—why not in logic? In the supposition (if we please so to term it) of the existence of God, is it wise to suppose a pigmy, a fool, or a half-God; or in the supposition that he has attributes, is it wise to make them conform to human whims; or should we not make them mountains high, far exceeding human comprehension, and from thence work out all logical theorems in their highest and noblest results?

"Come, now, let us reason together," saith the Lord, who is in all, through all, and above all. "If I am but infinite, only in part can I be comprehended by that which is finite; if I am but finite, then none can place in me an infallible trust. If I am changeable, then are all, all future events uncertain, and the present but a system of wild confusion; but if I am unchangeable, and my laws immutably fixed in their purpose, then will results be certain; and if my wisdom is infinite, must not all results be grand, be glorious, be divinely triumphant, and terminate in endless beatitude and truth?"

But questions, human questions, will forever arise. For the benefit of humanity it is well they do. Hence we ask, If in Nature or God there exists an attribute of wisdom, infinitude, whence came foolishness? If in God there exists an attribute of love, self-existent, and infinite, whence came the feeling of hate?

If he has an attribute of knowledge, self-existent and infinite, whence came ignorance?

Or, if he possess an attribute of goodness, infinite, and absolute, whence came evil?

Is that which we call evil, self-existent or derivative?

If self-existent, is God perfect, absolute, and infinite, in the attribute of goodness?

If evil is not self-existent, is it not dependent on some cause for existence?

And again: If evil is an effect, a result, forever dependent on some self existent cause for its derivation and continuance, in whom and where, lies the fault for its existence and continuance?

Does not the admission of real evil in any form, destroy the very idea of infinite goodness?

If the element or attribute of goodness in God is only finite, and not infinite, wherein would be the impropriety in saying, woe be unto God, and final chaos unto man?

Is it compatible, is it conformable, is it consistent, is it legitimate, and wise in the sight of Infinite Goodness, that "evil," so-called, should exist? If so, in the name of reason and common sense, how can it be evil?

Can God be affected by the frosts of winter, or by the burning heat of the summer's sun? Can darkness blind his vision, or age disturb his hearing or sin his happiness? Can God cease to be God? If not, the answer is no.

Is there a prime author and controller of events? If not, are all events the results of erring, and blind chance?

If all events are the result of a law, and a cause divine, why curse a barking dog, or cry over spilled milk? But is not the cursing, and crying too, the fulfillment of law—the legitimate effects and results flowing from an infinite fountain of causation?

To say otherwise, were to make would be your Infinite God—your omnipotent and omnipresent controller of all events?

Why is it that all Christian denominations admit the above predicates respecting the attributes of God, and yet deny almost every conclusion to which their admitted premises would lead? Ah, why is it that cripples need attention, and priests desire a fat salary?

Why pain, why grief, why sorrow, on earth, if good, infinite good, pervades the universe?

Why did a writer in the New Testament say, "No chastening for the present is joyous, but grievous, yet, nevertheless it worketh the peaceable fruits of righteousness to them that are exercised thereby?"

Or why was it that Pope was inspired to say "All partial evil is universal good?"

Why the clash of armor, and the crimson gore in time of war?

Ah, why not all men born adults, and endowed with wisdom unerring at birth?

Why is it that men,—good men and women, —so oppose the law of spirit communion and the wisdom of angels that seem constantly to be outpouring from the land over the river?

Ah, why did all the world oppose the voyage of Christopher Columbus in the discovery of a new world? Why but one quixe, who with heart and soul could sell her jewels, and bid him go forth upon the rolling sea?

Why do not angels and spirits visit me? Ah, why did not Peter's vision of the sheet appear unto the world?

Or why did Jesus appear unto his disciples, and leave all the rest of mankind in doubt respecting his spirit life and celestial home? Or why is it that men close their eyes in the full blaze of the midday sun, and declare that all is dark?

Why is it that many scientists and philosophers refuse to see and investigate the claims of Spiritualism?

Ah, tell me why potatoes have eyes and see not, or why grain cradles have fingers and feel not, or why it is that the New Testament recommends that the seemingly wise should become fools, in order to be wise?

E. B. WHEELOCK M. D.

Letter from D. M. Drury.

M. K. CASSIEN

ANSWERS SEALED LETTERS without charge during the month of August. Enclose envelope and three stamps. 185 Bank street, Newark, N. J.

EDITOR OF THE JOURNAL: Seeing the above advertisement in the Banner, last the sincerity of the advertiser, I answered him, inclosing three stamps and a sealed letter to a spirit friend. In a few days after, I received a letter from the medium, inclosing his card, with terms, namely, $2.00 and four stamps.

This letter used but one of my three stamps. I sent him another letter, saying if he could answer my sealed letter, he would have his usual fee, and at the same time I inclosed a stamped envelope for reply, which still left my two stamps in his possession.

In a few days I received the following reply, my sealed letter being returned unanswered.

"Owing to the many letters constantly being received, I cannot undertake to answer but one letter apiece to each."—Same, you will see, failing to do as he advertises, unless it be "the many letters he constantly receives"—containing postage stamps.

I wrote Mr. Cassien, again telling him he failed to do as he advertised, and would thank him to return my two stamps—not on account of their value, but on account of his failure to do as he advertised.

Please publish this, so that your readers may judge who is right, remembering, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Williamsburgh, L. I.

REMARKS.—We give place to the foregoing, because it bears the semblance of truth. Our columns are open for a reply by M. K. Cassien, and if he has been wronged, he can set himself right, and this correspondence may serve as a good advertisement.—[ED. JOURNAL.

[illegible] who have graduated [illegible] University (Methodist [illegible] Ohio, 110, or a little [illegible] become ministers.

Original Poetry.

LOVE I THEE?

BY M. J. S. GILHAMS.

Love I thee? Oh, yes, I know 'tis love.
No other spell could hold my soul
In sacred trust for years, and waver not.
I know 'tis love: else why these silent
Whisperings, when others come to throw the Mystic garb of love's array about me.
Thou lovest me, I know, else I could not love;
Coldness would repel, indifference kill
A sentiment like this, so true.
I doubt it not that others may attract thee,
But me thy soul hath chosen best;
With this assurance, sweet, I rest,
Feeling that no jealous thought of mine
Should ever curb thee.

But now, alas! must I say the bitter word
Farewell? One word, one look of love, then part,
Perhaps for years to wander on without thee,
Tho sigh really never parted;
A deep and yearning tenderness will Often greet thee, though miles between our Spirits intervene. Though months and years
Spread out their broad intensity before me,
I know beyond these years I will love
Thee still.

Oft I've looked into thine eyes, and saw there
Throbbing, moving worlds innumerable,
Where thoughts lie sparkling like the
Restless tide beneath the glowing sunbeam,
And life's fair hues were pictured there
In rainbow hues of living dreams.
Think you, these all are lost to me?
Have I raveled in their glorious sunlight
Only to be submerged in deep forgetfulness?

No, oh, no; too deep has been the fountains
From which my soul has quenched its Thirst. Too many times my pledge of Never-ending trust was given in silent
Heart throbs. Too oft the tender music
Of thy tones has rocked my soul to Calm repose. Too beautiful the dream
To ever fade and die.

Letter from Dr. Thomas J. Lewis.

BROTHER JONES—The controversy between Drs. Underhill and Fahnestock as to whether it be a fluid or the will that produces the entranced state and makes cures, leads me to give you the opinion of the spirits through the planchette. I said to the spirits, that I would call Dr. Underhill's fluid theory, No. one; and Dr. Fahnestock's will theory, No. two. "Will you please to tell me which is right?" In an instant it wrote, number one, followed by the word "angel." I then said, "Do you wish me to understand by that word, 'angel,' that a fluid emanates from the spirit on to the person to be entranced or cures," and they wrote, "Yes."

The fact that there are many well-authenticated cases of wonderful cures being made by spirits without any medium being present, and the patient sees and feel one or more spirits healing them, goes to prove Dr. Underhill's fluid theory to be correct.

I seldom or never fail in developing persons to become mediums for spirit control, and I believe my success to be owing to a fluid emanation from the angels, through my organism on to the person that is being developed. Clairvoyants can see a magnetic fluid flowing from the hands of the healer on to his patient. In those cases of cure where there is no medium present, and the spirit puts the patient in a semi or wholly unconscious trance state, would still further go to prove that will or mind has nothing to do with the case.

I have had wonderful success in curing disease by my original mode of practice, yet I hold that all man-made systems of cure are quackery in comparison to the angel's method of cure.

After taking away the sectarian rubbish with which mediums have covered the beautiful spiritual teachings of the man medium, Jesus, we shall see that he grandly taught us the best methods of becoming mediums and true men and women—in order that we may be always under the protection of our angel guides, and thereby rid ourselves of lawyers, doctors, priests, creeds, policemen, and such like civilized nuisances. I have never yet seen a priest or layman in or out of the pulpit, who had the moral courage to put in daily practice the teachings of Jesus. This I admit is a genteel way of telling them they are hypocrites to his angelic teachings.

I visited the celebrated Bangs family. My daughter, Jenny, now enrolled as a member of the angel army in the Summer Land, too young to write her name, came back through one of the children, and made her mark. What an eloquent test and sermon to prove that there is no death, and what a rebuke to all Orthodoxdom, who have taught the false doctrine of "Infant damnation" unless dipped or prayed for by a fat, salaried priest.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 18, 1871.

Letter from S. D. Pace.

BROTHER JONES:—We are at present in the midst of a revival,—not of that sensational, hysterical kind so common to the churches, but a real genuine revival; that is, we are being refreshed spiritually in listening to the soul stirring eloquence of Laura Cuppy Smith. We first engaged Mrs. Smith for two Sundays in August, but she has finally consented to remain with us three months. Mrs. Smith as a speaker takes rank with the ablest advocates of our faith. She is unyielding, uncompromising, and logical. She speaks the truth regardless of time honored dogmas, and the unlucky creed that happens to stand in her way, is morally sure of a drubbing. Unlike some other pretended advocates of Spiritualism, she does not seek to gain popularity by "whining appeals to God" or by toadying to Methodism, or Catholicism. Spiritualism is good enough for her, and that exceedingly idiotic bundle of inconsistencies called Orthodox Christianity is politely pointed to a back seat.

Mrs. Smith was formerly a resident of this city. She delivered her first public speech to a Port Huron audience. It was here that she first commenced to labor for humanity, and now after an absence of eleven years—spent principally in California—she returns to the scene of her early labors—to the friends of other years, and as those friends gather about her there is written upon each smiling face a hearty, well-defined welcome.

We have a hall of our own—its walls are decorated with most beautiful paintings given to us by the angels through the instrumentality of N. B. Starr. These paintings are gems of art and we are proud of them.

Port Huron, August 22nd, 1871.

Ben Butler is a grandfather as well as a candidate for Governor of Massachusetts. His daughter, Mrs. Senator Ames, at present sojourning at Lowell, became the mother of a fine boy one day last week.

Voices from the People.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Mrs. N. L. Fay writes.—BROTHER JONES:—I enclose $1 for the JOURNAL, as I see my time has expired. I love the JOURNAL, for it is my weekly companion, and I cannot do without it. I think if some of those persons that read the "Search after God," if they would only set aside all their preconceived opinions in regard to Deity, and allow reason to be seated upon her throne, then and not until then will many of your readers of the "Search" comprehend the great and the grand truths that are being given through Brother Francis. From my childhood I have been clairvoyant, seen and conversed with many loved ones that have passed to the Summer Land; and in all the knowledge that I have ever sought, or all the answers that I have received from the Spirit World, I have never had one satisfactory reply, as it regards who is, and where is God, until I commenced reading the "Search," and there I found that which has fed my soul to the full. I presume Mr. Fowler would say that my veneration was not very large, for I have never in all my life venerated either the orthodox or the Spiritualistic God. But I like the Deity, love to go deep into the soul of things, and profit by the truths there revealed. In looking over the Banner of Light, July 16, No. 18, 1871, these questions were given to the controlling influence through Mrs. H. M. Conant:

Question—Do spirits have a greater knowledge of Deity than we have in the form?

Answer—No; they do not.

Question—One would naturally suppose that the advantages in the Spirit World would be greater for searching and finding out God than here.

Answer—Yes, the advantages of the soul are greater in all things in the Spirit World, and yet speaking in the absolute, the soul knows no more of God in the other life than here. Here the enlightened soul understands God to be the power that preserves it, in which it lives, moves, and has its being. There (in spirit life) it can understand no more, for God, forever, is a power that surpasses soul. It may theorize concerning him, and philosophize and speculate, but that is all.

Now, Brother Jones, if spirits are compelled to philosophize and speculate in regard to God, and if the soul knows no more of God in the other life than here, I for one feel thankful that Bro. Francis is receiving such grand intelligence from the higher spheres, that will enlighten those souls of inquiring minds, who have asked the question time and again, Who is the supreme power that ruleth all things.

VOLCANO, CAL.—H. W. Harmon writes.—If at any time I should not send you the money at the appointed time, "never fear" it shall always come to you, while I have my health. While the JOURNAL all "good angels" would desert me. It is my only companion in the spiritual faith in this far west.

SCRANTON, PA.—Mrs. Frank Thacher writes.—We have failed to get No. 21 of the JOURNAL. Will you please send us another? It is always a very long week if the JOURNAL does not come. I am sorry to trouble you to send it twice, but I don't want to miss a single article of the "Search after God." I have not been afraid of being deprived of a God, but am willing to follow wherever Mr. Francis leads, and shall be ever grateful for the privilege. We have not received No. 7 yet. We miss them very much, for there are no Spiritualists in the place except my husband and myself. This city has a great many saloons and beer gardens, where the poor people sit on one side, and the rich on the other. They are continually holding fairs and festivals, where the young ladies as well as the old one's resort to many kinds of trickery to extract money, even from children. I think they are serving the Lord. I wish something would happen to let a little light into the community. I buy all the books I can afford, and lend them to all persons that I can induce to read them, but I can't see much good result from it. We have a spirit-picture, taken by Willis, of a child that we lost. It is so dim, that it is not sufficient evidence to convince a skeptic of the immortality of the soul, though it is satisfactory to me. Will the death of this child that made Spiritualists of us. Our minister prayed that the attraction which God had placed in heaven for us, would lead us the right way. I attended church a few times in search of the truth, and I mean no disrespect to our kind minister, when I say I could see no reason in the doctrine he taught. I could have joined the church to please him, in order that he might feel some reward for his exertion in my behalf, but I could not accept a religion without philosophy.

CHESTER HILL, O.—Enoch Parker writes.—I hear of one E. V. Wilson that is going about the country lecturing on Spiritualism, who can describe one's deceased friend standing by a person. Now the question with me is, does he not see this departed friend? Perhaps the friend does—he seeing what they see in their minds? Such, I believe might be done,—mind acting on mind. I am open to conviction, and wish all the information I can get.

EAST SAGINAW, MICH.—A. Farnsworth writes.—As a trial subscriber my time must be nearly expired. Please continue to send me the JOURNAL. I am following closely the "Search after God." Brother Francis will fail to find any personal God. God is invisible as a spirit. The remaining chapters are anxiously looked for.

GALENA, ILL.—Mrs. M. A. Cutler writes.—Inclosed please find $3 to pay for our dear JOURNAL, from April 27, 1871. Excuse the delay. We have taken your excellent paper from its first publication, and shall continue to take it as long as it is the fearless advocate of truth it now is.

BUFFALO, KAN.—S. F. Nagle writes.—Your "Search after God" keeps up an unflagging interest. Mr. Francis' deductions are perfectly logical, and his arguments irresistible. It is high time that thinking people should turn their minds to the investigation of the subject; and they will be astonished at the slender base their (popular) idol occupies in reason and logic.

NORTHFIELD, MINN.—R. C. Masters writes. Inclosed you will find $3 post-office order, to apply on payment for the JOURNAL, from Oct. 15, 1870. Accept my thanks for the JOURNAL after time expired. The JOURNAL is indispensable.

CLEVELAND, O.—S. Graves writes.—You will see by the superscription that I am a trial subscriber. I have been a reader of many other spiritual paper since its first publication, and I could not think of parting with it. It is like an old friend, but its style has not that bold and fearless principle manifested in it that the JOURNAL has. I am pleased with the JOURNAL. It has no fear of deep water. It takes hold of great subjects, and reasons with an unsparing hand. I like it, and could not think of stopping it until it finds God, which I rather expect it will do; but in connection with all matter, but even if it fails, it will be no more than all thinkers and investigators have done before.

HAVANA, N. Y.—N. S. Thompson writes.—I do not know what I would do without your valuable paper. I think it the best paper I ever have taken.

EAGLE, IOWA.—F. A. Coe writes.—I would recommend your paper to the public as a fearlessly independent journal, established upon scientific principles, and devoted to "truth, justice, and common sense."

BISHOP CREEK, CAL.—L. Hutchinson writes.—I fail to see that Mr. Francis is any nearer to finding God than when he first began his "Search." However, your reasoning is good for much, and must clear away the mists of superstition, even if it fail to reveal the unknown, so long ignorantly worshipped.

ROMEO, MICH.—S. H. Ewell writes.—We have been having an awakening in the good cause in our place a short time since. Mrs. Cartwright, of Detroit, trance and test medium, stopped with us ten days, during which time she gave many the unmistakable fact of spirit existence, and of the presence of their loved ones that have gone before. She gave those that had seances with her—believers, and those that were not, tests that confirmed the doubtful, and gave the unbeliever a subject for thought that he never before dreamed of. It is far beyond my limited time to report a small portion of the interesting manifestations that occurred while she was here. Our numbers here are but a few, but I think I can get a few subscribers to your paper.

Price-List of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books desired, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies	75	16
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Fahnestock	1.50	20
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers	25	03
Alice Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker	1.75	16
Abstracts Orrie, by Warren Chase	25	02
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Device	1.50	20
Apocryphal New Testament	1.25	16
A Peep into Sacred Tradition, by Rev. Orrin Abbot. Paper	.50	02
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth	1.50	08
A Lecture in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. F. A. Logan	.15
Arcana of Nature, or History and Laws of Creation. Vol 1, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World. Vol 2, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child	.25	02
Apollo, or the Divine Guest, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph	1.00	06
Cloth	1.50	20
Approaching Crisis, by A. J. Davis	.75	10
Apostles, (translated from the French) by Renan	1.75	20
A Stellar Key to the Summer Land by J. Davis	1.50	16
Astro-Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor	2.00	24
A Rise for a Blow, a Book for children by H. C. Wright, small edition	.25	02
Large	1.75	12
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Toulmin	.25	2
An Eye Opener, by Zope. Cloth	.75	08
Paper	.50	.04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster	.15	.02
Analogy Between the facts of the Bible and the facts of so-called Spiritualism, by G. G. Forster	.15	.02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle	2.00	.36
Biography of Satan, By Rev. Dewey Price 35 Cents
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child	1.00	12
Blossoms of Gold, (a Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle	1.25	16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen	2.00	24
Book of Poems, by J. Wm. Van Namee. Cloth	.75	8
Branches of Palm, by Mrs J. S. Adams, a book for children. Paper	.75	04
Brief Spiritualism	1.25	16
Reflexeii, by Professor W. Denton	.10	2
Bhagvat-Geeta, or Hindoo New Testament	1.25	.16
Blossoms of Gold, by Lizzie Doten	.75	10
Bible Sanctioned by the Laws of Life and Health, by A. K. Gardner, A. M. M. D. Paper	1.00	08
Cloth	1.50	16
Comber' Constitution of Man	1.75	20
Common Sense Thoughts on the Bible, by William Denton	.10	02
Common Sense, By O. W. Ramsey, M. D	1.25	20
Common Sense, by Thomas Paine	.20	02
Christ Idea in History, H. Tuttle	1.25	16
Chester Family, or the Doctor of the Drunkard's Apostate, by Julia M. Friend, with an Introduction by H. C. Wright	1.00	12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M.D	1.25	16
Christianity, or the Morality of Spiritualism Superior to Christianity, —Wm. Denton	.10	02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by M. H. Craven	1.50	.16
Descent of man, by Darwin. Two Vols. ($2.00 per Vol)	4.00	.48
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Interesting History	1.50	20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other poems, from the standpoint of 1	1.00	12
Devil's Pulpit, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life	2.00	20
Dawn. A Novel of intense interest to progressive people	1.75	24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph	.75	12
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 50, postage 4, cloth	.75	12
Errors of the Bible. Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature, by Hosea, G. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage, 4 cts. Cloth	.50	8
Easter Hall, a Theological Romance	.50	08
Empire of the Mother, or the Character and Destiny of the Race, H. C. Wright paper	.50	04
Cloth	.75	12
Scottdale on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen	1.75	24
Free Thoughts Concerning Religion, or Nature vs Theology, by A. J. Davis	.20	2
Fugitive Wife, by Warren Chase. Paper	.25	4
Festival Night, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Medium	.2	2
Gamaliel, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Tuttle	1.25	16
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase	.20	04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 5 vols, viz: Vol. 1 The Physician; Vol. 2 The Seer; Vol. 3. The Reformer; Vol. 4. The Thinker.	1.50	20
Gymnastic Manual for Teachers and Students	1.25	2
God Idea in History, by Hudson Tuttle	1.25	16
God Destitute with Slavery, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth. 75 cents, 12 cents. Paper,	.75	06
Habits of Good Society	1.75	.20
Hierophant, or Gleanings from the Past, by G. C. Stewart	1.00	.08
Hand-book of Life, by W. Hall M. D	1.00	10
Hartinger of Health, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper	.50	8
Cloth	.75	12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism	2.00	24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. C. Wright	.25	02
How and Why I became a Spiritualist	.10	2
Helen Harlow's Vow, by Waisbrooker	1.50	20
How to Bathe, by R. T. Miller, M. D., paper	.25	4
Cloth	.75	12
Hedged In, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, author of Gates Ajar	1.50	16
Hollow Globe	2.00	20
History and Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy compared	1.25	16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe, by J. W. Draper, M. D., L. L. D., Cloth	2.00	20
Human Physiology, Statistical and Dynamical, or the Conditions and Course of the Life of Man, by J. Bovee Dodds, M. D. L. L. D. 600 pages, cloth 12.50 sheep 4.00	00
History of the supernatural, (2 Vols., 830 pages each)	3.00	.48
Hit, By Dr. Mary R. Walker	1.50	.16
Intuition, by Mrs. F. Kingman	1.25	16
Important Truths, a book for every child	.20	2
Is the Bible Divine? by S. J. Finney, paper	.50	8
Cloth	.75	12
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con	.25	4
Isa'ah's Book of Wonderful Words	1.25	16
Inspirative Communications from Spirit Land, Mrs. M. H. Park, Medium	1.25	16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds	1.25	16
Infidel, or Enquirer's Text Book by Robert Cooper	1.25	16
Is it the Despair of Science? by W. D. Gunning	.15	.02
Jesus of Nazareth, by Alexander Smyth	1.50	20
Jehovah Unveiled, or the Character of the Jewish God Examined	.25	4
Jesus or Are—A Biography, translated from the French, by Sarah M. Grimkee	1.00	12
Gilded Age, by Mark Twain and C. D. Warner. Price, paper bound 50 cents. Board bound	.75	08
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale 2 vo.	3.00	40
Koran, abridged edition, by Sale. Published	1.00	08
Koran, with Life of Mohammed, Translated by George Sale, Gent. 12 mo., 479 page	1.50	.24
Little Lizzie of the Lone One, by Warren Chase	1.00	12
Life Line of the Lone One	.50	08
Life of Thomas Paine, written and republished by other editions of his writings, by G. Vale	1.00	16
Life of Jesus, by Renan	1.75	20
Love and its Hidden History, by P. B. Randolph	1.50	16
Lyric of the Golden Age, by J. L. Harris	1.00	12
Legalized Prostitution, or Marriage as it is, and as it should Be, by C. S. Woodward, M. D	1.00	16
Life and Moral Actions of Confucius, by H. R. K. Wright	.25	02
Letters to Rider Miles Grant, by Rev. Moses Hull	.25	.02
Living Present, Dead Past. H. C. Wright. Cloth	.75	.06
Paper	.50	.04
Lyceum Guide. Cloth cover	1.00	.16
Boards .75, .16 Paper cover	.50	.04
My Love and I, by Mrs. M. Lucite Bowen	.25	4
My Self, or, an Autobiography of A. J. Davis	1.75	20
Memoirs, by Myron Colony	1.50	12
Mediums and Powers, by Uriah Clark	1.25	16
Ministry of Angels Realized, by A. E. Newton	1.50	16
Midnight Prayer	.10	2
Marriage and its Laws, by Marvin Hoxsie	.25	4
Mrs. Partington's Prison Life	1.50	.24
small edition	1.00	.08
Memoirs of the Bread of Life, by D. S. Cadwallader	.10	.02
Manual for Children, (for Lyceums,) by A. J. Davis, Cloth	.25	4
Manuscript, Gift	1.00	4
Abridged edition	.50	4
My affinity, and other Stirring Incidents	1.50	20
Mediumship, its Laws and Conditions, also, with Instructions for the Formation of Spirit Circles, by J. M. Peebles	.25	02
Man a Trinity, by T. G. Forster	.25	.02
Man a Reformer. A sermon by T. G. Forster	.15	.02
Modern American Spiritualism 1848 to 1868, by Hon. Emma Hardinge	2.00	24
Man's Rights, or how would you like it, by Annie Denton Cridge	.25	2
Morning Lectures (Course by Sermons) by A. J. Davis	1.75	20

Man not his relations, by Professor S. B. Brittain	1.00	08
Nature's Divine Revelations, by Andrew Jackson Davis	2.50	40
New Testament Miracles and Modern Miracles, by J. H. Fowler	.10	4
Night Side of Nature, by Crow	1.25	.20
Ordeal of Life, Through Dr. J. G. Gelnaul. Medium	.25	04
Orthodoxy False, since Spiritualism is True, by Wm. Denton	.10	02
Our Planet, Geology by Denton	1.50	20
Optimism, The Lesson of Ages	.75	.10
Origin of Species Darwin	2.00	.24
Origin of Civilization and Primitive Condition of Man, by Sir J. Lubbock	3.00	.24
One Religion, Many Creeds, by Rosa Winans	1.25	.25
Origin of Species, with Notes and References, by G. F. Kittredge	.10	.02
Persons and Events, by J. J. Davis	$1.50	20
Pre-Adamite Man, by Randolph	1.50	20
Physiology of Woman, by O. Merrill, M. D	1.50	20
Planchette—The despair of Science, by Epes Sargent	1.25	16
Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. A. J. Davis. Paper 60 cts; postage 8 cts. Cloth	1.00	.16
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M. King	1.75	.24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lizzie Doten	1.25	16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Horace Wood, Medium. Cloth,	.35	04
Paper	.25	02
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King	1.00	16
Rules for forming Spiritual Circles, by Samuel Harding	.25	02
Rational Physiology, by R. T. Trall, M. D	2.00	20
Strange Visitors, Dictated through a clairvoyant	1.50	20
Spiritual Harp	2.00	24
Abridged Edition	1.00	16
Sequel to The Love Life, by the Spirit of Dr. R. H. Paine	.50	2
Spiritual Tracts by Judge Edmonds	.20	4
Self Abnegationist; or the true King and Queen, by H. C. Wright, Paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	12
Spiritualism, or Directions in Development, by A. E. Ladin Farnee	.20	2
Soul Affinity, by A. B. Child, M. D	.20	02
Sexology as the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. E. O. G. Willard	2.00	24
Six Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Emma Hardinge, Paper	.75
Cloth	1.00
Soul of Things, by William and Elizabeth Denton	1.25	16
Spirit Manifestations, by Adin Ballou	.75	12
Spirit Mysteries Explained, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Supernatural Beauty, by Moses Hull	.10	.02
Social Evils by Mrs. M. M. King	2.00	.20
Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism, by Mrs. M. M. King	.35
Sense and Nonsense, S. M. Landis, M. D	2.00	20
Songs of Life,—S. W. Tucker	.50	04
Spiritual Songs,—S. W. Tucker	1.50	.12
Spirit Life of Theodore Parker, through the Mediumship of Miss S. Ramsdell	.40	02
Seven Hour System of Grammar, by Prof. D. P. Howe.	1.00	.06
Paper	.50	.04
Science of Evil, by Joel Moody	1.75	.20
Seership, Randolph	2.00	.20
Spiritual Manifestions. by J. S. Rumer	.10	.02
Sunday Question and self-contradictions of the Bible	.50	.00
Syntagma	1.00	.12
The Fountain, by A. J. Davis,	1.00	.12
The Irreconcilable Records, or Genesis and Geology, by Wm. Denton, Cloth,	.50	06
The Bible in Islam,	5.00	.24
The Faithful Guardian, an Inspirational Story, by J. William Van Namee,	1.50	16
The Bible in the Nineteenth Century,	1.50	16
That Terrible Question, by Moses Hull	.10	02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. J. Davis	.5	02
The Dynamic Cure, by Leroy Sunderland	$1.00	12
Tale of A Physician, by A. J. Davis	$1.00	16
The Present Life, by A. J. Davis	.75	12
The Question Settled, by Moses Hull	1.50	16
The Gates Wide Open, by George Wood	1.50	20
The Gates Ajar, by Miss E. S. Phelps	1.50	16
The Orphan's Struggle, by Mrs. H. N. Green	.15
The Pearl Diver by Dr. G. W. Kirby	.15
The Gospel of Good and Evil, by Hiver	1.50	16
The Trance, by Leroy Sunderland	1.50	16
The Great South-West, by W. Nicolay	1.50	24
The Martin of Jesus Christ and Merlin of Theosophy	.10	2
Paine as a substitute for merits in others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright	.25	2
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire, American Edition, 976 octavo pages, two steel plates, Largest and most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $10.00	3.00	60
The Diagnosis, by Rev. Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a history of the origin, evidence, and early history of Christianity	2.00	32
The Inner Mystery, an Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten	.20	02
The Deluge, William Denton	.10	2
The Deluge, by Warren Chase. Paper	1.25	16
The Ignorant Philosopher, Voltaire	.75	12
The Woman who Dared, by Mrs Gaylord	1.50	20
Theological and Miscellaneous Writings of Thomas Paine	2.00	24
Thomas Paine's Pilgrimage in the Spirit World	.75	.06
The System of Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, by Baron D' Holbach	2.00	24
The Psalms of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover, Board cover	.50	04
Cloth	.75	12
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D.	.10	02
The Present Life, by A. J. Davis	1.75	24
The Tah-o, a Satirical Rhapsody	.75	.08
The Restorative Dream Book, compiled from all Standard Works, by P. B. Randolph	.50	.04
The Art of Conversation	1.50	.16
The Arts of Writing, Reading, and Speaking	1.50	.16
Underhill on Mesmerism, Post-paid	1.50
Unhappy Child, by H. C. Wright	.25	4
Unwritten Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow	.75	.06
Vestiges of Creation,	1.75	.20
Vital Force, how wasted and how preserved, by M. P. Miller, M. D. 60 cts.; Cloth	1.00	12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical notice by Count Dare	1.00	12
What is Right, William Denton	.10	2
What is Spiritualism, and Shall Spiritualists Have a Creed? by Mrs. M. M. King	.25
Whatever is, is Right, A. B. Child, M. D	1.00	16
Writings of Swedo,	1.50	16
Wolf in sheep's Clothing, or God in the Constitution. Moses Hull	.10	.02
Your Book of Spiritualism. Cloth,	1.25	20
Paper,	1.00	16

WE HAVE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular rates, and, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as may be desired. If sent by mail, one fifth more than the regular cost of the book will be required to prepay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. Its united promptness in filling orders will render them profitable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

H. SNOW,

513 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, Orton's Anti-Tobacco Preparation, Spence's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & co.'s Golden Pens, Planchettes, Dr. Storer's Nutritive Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. Agents Wanted in U. S. Currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, HERMAN SNOW, P. O. Box 117, San Francisco, Cal.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,

No. 614 NORTH FIFTH ST, ST. LOUIS, MO.,

KEEP constantly on hand all the publications of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular liberal literature, including RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL and BANNER OF LIGHT, Magazines, Photographs, Parlor Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

PARKER'S
BREECH LOADING DOUBLE BARRELED
SHOT GUN
BEST IN THE WORLD
PARKER BROTHERS WEST MERIDEN CONN.
SEND FOR A CIRCULAR
New York Office, 27 BEEKMAN ST.

THE MAGNETIC TREATMENT.

SEND TEN CENTS TO DR. ANDREW STONE, TROY N. Y., and obtain a large, fully illustrated book on this system of obtaining health.

v9 n26 tf.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railroad—Council Bluffs and Omaha Line—Depot North Wells street

Ticket Office, south-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Cedar Rapids Passenger	8.30 a. m.	6.50 p. m.
Pacific Past Line	*10.45 a. m.	2.40 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.30 a. m.	*2.40 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	11.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	*10.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Dixon Passenger	*4.00 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.

Prospect Line.

Prospect and Dunleith Past	*9.00 a. m.	*7.15 a. m.
Prospect and Dunleith Pass	*2.45 p. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Rockford, Elgin, Fox River and State Line	*4.00 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.
St. Charles and Elgin Passenger	*8.15 p. m.	*8.45 a. m.
Junction Passenger	5.30 p. m.	8.30 a. m.
Lombard Accommodation	*8.10 p. m.	*8.45 a. m.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukee Mail	*9.00 a. m.	*10.10 a. m.
Day Express	*9.45 a. m.	*4.0 p.m.
Evanston Accommodation	*12.00 a. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Rose Hill, Evanston, and Highland Park	1.00 p. m.	2.40 p. m.
Afternoon Express	*2.45 p. m.	*7.40 p. m.
Kenosha Pass	*4.10 p. m.	*9.10 a.m.
Waukegan Passenger	*5.30 p.m.	*8.35 a. m.
Woodstock Accommodation	*5.30 p. m.	*10.10p.m
Milwaukee do	11.00 p. m.	5.00 a.m
Kenosha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street Depot.

Wisconsin Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street

St. Paul Express	*10.00 a. m.	*7.15 p. m.
Night Passenger	*8.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.
Janesville Accommodation	*2.00 p. m.	*1.00 p. m
Woodstock Accommodation	*5.30 p. m.	*10.10 a. m
Barrington Accommodation	5.15 p.m.	7.45 a. m.

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.
H. P. Stanwood, General Ticket Agent.

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road.

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. Ticket Office 56 South Clark street.

Mail	*8.30 a. m.	*7.50 p m
Special N Y Express	*9.00 a. m.	*4.00 p. m.
Richards Accommodation	*2.30 p.m.	*10.30 a. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	5.15 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Night Express	*12.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Line.

Day Express	*7.30 a. m.	*7.50 p. m
Night	*12.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

P. B. MOSES, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 56 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Rail-road—Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office Lake st., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

Mail Train	*8.30 a. m.	*6.05 p. m
Mail for New York Express	*9.00 a. m.	*4.00 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	12.15 p. m.	*7.00a. m
Night Express	*12.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m
Kalamazoo Accommodation	*4.10 p. m.	*12.30 p. m

Cincinnati and Louisville Trains

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*6.30 p. m
Through Express	14.30 p. m.	6.30 a. m

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*11.30 a. m
Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*8.05 p. m

HENRY C. WENTWORTH,
General Passenger Agent.

H. B. RAMSDELL, Gen'l Superint' Detroit, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Hinsdale Accommodation	*7.45 a. m.	*6.10 p. m
Mail and Express	7.30 a. m.	5.40 p. m
Pacific Fast Line	*10.45 a. m.	*4.15 p.m
Hinsdale Accommodation	*1.45 p. m.	*6.30. p. m.
Aurora Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*4.15 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	12.00 p. m.	7.30 a. m

ROSSER HANAN, Superintendent.
SAMUEL POOLE, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office 63 St. Clark. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	*9.30 a. m.	*7.45 p. m
Cairo Express	12.15 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.
Keokuk Day Passenger	*2.30 a. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Keokuk Night Express	*6.30 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.

On Saturdays this train will leave at.....*4.45 p. m.

Chicago Passenger	*4.45 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Hyde Park and Oak Woods	*9.30 a. m.	*7.45 a. m.
do	*2.30 p. m.	*12.30 p. m.
do	*3.30 p. m.	*1.45 p. m.
do	*4.30 p. m.	*2.15 p. m.
do	*5.30 p. m.	*3.15 p. m.
do	*6.30 p. m.	*7.30 p. m.
(St. Louis through Trains.)
Day Express	*9.30 a. m.	*6.15 p. m
Fast Line	12.15 p. m.	7.00 a. m

M. HOARIET, Gen'l Supt.

W. P. JOHNSON, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago—Depot, Corner of Madison and Canal Streets.

Mail	*8.00 a. m.	6.10 p. m.
Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	6.00 p. m.
Atlantic Express	5.15 p. m.	3.00 p. m.
New York Express	9.00 p. m.	9.00 a. m.
Valparaiso Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	7.30 a. m.

W. G. CLEMANS, Gen. West'n Pass. Agt., 66 Clark st.

Chicago and St. Louis—Depot, corner Madison and Canal st.

Express Mail	*9.15 a. m.	*8.00 p. m.
Joliet Accommodation	*4.40 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Joliet Express	*3.30 p. m.	*10.50 a. m.
Lightning Express	9.00 p. m.	*8.35 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and sundays excepted. §Except Monday.

T. B. BLACKSTONE, Pres. & Gen'l Superintendent.
A. HUTCHER, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Office 86 Dearborn st.

CHICAGO, DANVILLE AND VINCENNES RAILROAD.

Milwaukee Depot—Corner Canal and Kinzie Sts., West Side. Freight Office at G., C. & I. C. Co.'s Office, corner Malcolm and Carroll sts.

Mail Train Chicago the	8.45 p. m.	9.15 a. m

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad. cor Van Buren and Sherman Streets.

Pacific day Express	10.00 a.m.	4.15 p.m.
Accommodation	*4.30 p.m.	*9.50 a.m.
Pacific Night Express	12.00 p.m.	*7.00 a.m.

An elegant parlor sleeping car is attached to the 10 a. m. train, running through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

E. H. SAWYER, Gen'l Passenger Agent.
R. R. CABLE, Ticket Agent.
P. A. HALE, Asst'Gen Superintendent.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

Cincinnati Express	*9.45 a. m.	9.40 a. m
Columbus Express	*9.45 a. m.	*2.20 p. m.
Columbus Night Express	*12.01 a. m.	*6.35 p. m.
Columbus Night Express	†7.45 p. m.
Leaving Accommodation	4.40 p. m.	9.35 a. m.

H. B. KINSEY, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Ticket Office Corner Randolph and Dearborn streets.

Goodrich's Passenger Steamers.

For Milwaukee and West Shore ports *daily at 9.00 a. m.
For Grand Haven and East Shore ports *daily at 7.00 p. m.
For St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, *daily at 10 a. m.
Grand Rapids, Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 p. m.

*Sundays excepted. †Mondays excepted. ‡Saturdays excepted.

CARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.

Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, with or without top. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of stock used, and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

N. KINNEY.

v9 n26 tf.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and embracing the Philosophy of Man, Spirit, and Spirit world. By Thomas Paine, through the hand of Horace G. Wood, Medium.

Price 75 cents, postage 4 cents. For sale at this Office

Prof. Wm. Denton's Works.

THE SOUL OF THINGS; OR PSYCHOMETRIC RESEARCHES AND DISCOVERIES. By William and Elizabeth M. F. Denton.

This valuable and highly interesting work has become a part of the standard literature of the country.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

LECTURES ON GEOLOGY, THE PAST AND FUTURE OF OUR PLANET. A valuable scientific work.

Price, $1.50cts. Postage, 20cts.

COMMON SENSE THOUGHTS ON THE BIBLE. For Common Sense people. Twelfth thousand, revised and enlarged.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

THE DELUGE, IN THE LIGHT OF MODERN SCIENCE.

Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

WHAT IS RIGHT. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

BE THYSELF. Price, 10cts., Postage, 2cts.

For sale at The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL Office.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW WORKS BY PROF. DENTON.

"ORTHODOXY FALSE,

Since Spiritualism is True."

Price, 10 cents: postage, 2 cts.

THE IRRECONCILABLE RECORDS, OR GENESIS AND GEOLOGY.

160 pages. Price: paper, 25 cents, postage, 4 cts cloth, 50 cents, postage 8 cts.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark Street, Chicago.

NEW EDITION—REVISED AND CORRECTED.

THE VOICES

Three Poems.

VOICE OF SUPERSTITION.
VOICE OF NATURE.
VOICE OF A PEBBLE.

By Warren Sumner Barlow.

THIS volume is startling in its originality of purpose, and is destined to make deeper inroads among sectarian bigots than any work that has hitherto appeared.

THE VOICE OF SUPERSTITION takes the creeds at their word, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defined by Satan, from the Garden of Eden to Mount Calvary!

THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—in His unchangeable and glorious attributes. While others have too often only demolished, this author has erected a beautiful Temple on the ruins of Superstition. Judge Baker, of New York, in his review of this poem, says: "It will unquestionably cause the author to be classed among the ablest and most gifted didactic poets of the age."

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality in matter and Mind, fraternal Charity and Love.

The book is a repository of original thought, awaking noble conceptions of God and man, lucidity and pleasing in style, and is one of the few works that we'd grant with its 2 yes and naught with the counter-ies. It is already admired by its thousands of readers.

Printed in beautiful type, on heavy, fine paper, bound in beveled boards, in gold style; nearly 200 pages. Price $1.50, postage 16 cents. Very liberal discount to the trade.

For sale at the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

LYCEUM GUIDE,

A Collection of

SONGS, HYMNS, AND CHANTS,

Lessons, Readings and Recitations,

MARCHES AND CALISTHENICS,

(With Illustrations,)

TOGETHER WITH

Programmes and Exercises,

The Whole Designed for the Use of PROGRESSIVE SUNDAY LYCEUMS.

THIS NEW BOOK FOR SUNDAY LYCEUMS contains all the excellent features of previous works, with such improvements as the practical experience of Lyceums during the last six years have suggested.

Its appendix contains a large number of letters from Conductors of Lyceums and friends of the Institution, illustrative of the Lyceum's influence, and giving much valuable information pertaining thereto.

This book is complete in every particular, and is illustrated with THIRTY FINE ENGRAVINGS of Banners, Emblematic Standards for Groups, Calisthenics, &c.

PRICE—In paper cover, 60 cents; postage, six cents. In boards, neat, strong, and durable, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In cloth, extra, gold lettered sides, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. From which prices liberal discount will be made on quantities for lyceums.

MRS. MARIA M. KING'S WORKS.

THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURE, as discovered in the Development and Structure of the Universe: The Solar System—Laws and Methods of its Development; Earth—History of its Development; Exposition of the Spiritual Universe. Price reduced to $1.75; postage, 24 cents.

REAL LIFE IN THE SPIRIT LAND,—Being Life Experiences, Scenes, Incidents, and Conclusions, Illustrative of Spirit Life and the Principles of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

SOCIAL EVILS: Their Causes and Cure,—Being a Brief Discussion of the Social Status, with reference to Methods of Reform. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY VS. DIABOLISM. In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM? and SHALL SPIRITUALISTS HAVE A CREED? In two

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS.

Result of a Sworn Test in Harry Fowler's Room on Friday Morning.

"I AM NOT A SPIRITUALIST."

Below we give our readers the results of a trial to take a spirit picture in an anti-Spiritualist photograph gallery. It speaks for itself. Thus point after point is gained, and we demonstrate man's immortality.

We know Bros. Doherty and Pursel, and are satisfied that they mean business in this matter of photography of Spiritualism. Call on them at their office in Indianapolis, Ind., and try the spirits.

It has frequently been charged that the spirit photographers, Doherty and Pursel, could not take spirit pictures in any other than their own gallery. But it would appear that such is not the case, as is indicated by the following proceedings, held at the office of Peter Smock, a Justice of the Peace in this city:

Be it remembered that on this 11th day of August, 1871, before me at my office in Indianapolis, appeared Harry Fowler, and, having placed in my hands a so-called spirit picture, at the request of Mr. Doherty, who was also present, I administered to said Fowler the following oath:

"Do you solemnly swear that you will true answers give to such questions as may be asked you touching the manner of making the picture now in my hand, so help you God?" to which he answered, "I do."

The following questions were [illegible] by him under said oath:

Question.—What is your name and occupation?

Answer.—Harry Fowler, a photographer in this city.

Q.—Where was this picture taken and when?

A.—At my gallery, this morning.

Q.—Who took it?

A.—Mr. Doherty, here, and I.

Q.—Give the mode of taking it.

A.—I took a new plate, and having prepared it as far an ordinary ferreotype, I placed it in the tablet, and thence into the camera. I then set before the camera for my own picture while Mr. Doherty made the exposure, after which I followed him into the dark room and witnessed the whole process of development, and my picture, and that other one above it, both came out simultaneously. The whole process was done by me or in my presence.

Q.—Wherein did the process differ from the taking of an ordinary picture?

A.—In nothing whatever, except that during the exposure, Mr. Doherty held his hand above but near to the camera.

Q.—What transparencies, negatives, or other means of deception, were used to produce this result?

A.—None whatever. The whole process was the common one of all photographers in taking ordinary ferreotypes.

Q.—Whose picture was on the plate over yours?

A.—I do not know.

Q.—Who was before the camera during the exposure of this plate beside yourself?

A.—No one.

Q.—What examination of Doherty's person did you make just before this picture was taken, in order to find evidences or means of any trickery?

A.—I examined him all over; had him take off his boots and his coat. I examined all his pockets and his pocket-books, under his vest, shirt, and pants, and found nothing.

Q.—What arrangements had you with Mr. Doherty to take this picture this morning?

A.—None whatever. I did n't know he was coming until he came.

Q.—What trickery was used to produce this upper picture?

A.—None whatever, that I could detect.

Q.—Are you a Spiritualist?

A.—I am not.

[Here the examination closed.]

Witness my hand and seal the day and year above written; and I am not a Spiritualist either. PETER SMOCK, J. P.

The Bondage of the Pulpit.

We commend the following bold thoughts to our readers.

"We should not allow scientific difficulties to perplex us on this subject." We clip it from a Leavenworth, Kan., paper.

In a sermon delivered by the Rev. Dr. Rosser, last Sunday evening, upon the "Origin of Species," a sentiment was uttered so remarkable, so insulting to all common sense, and yet so peacefully swallowed by his congregation, that it is worthy of more than passing notice. The Rev. gentleman stated the opinions on his subject entertained by Agassiz and two distinguished French philosophers, and ended by giving a wonderful summary of Darwin's theory. He then without the slightest difficulty proved from his Bible that they were wrong, and mentally knocked them down with that truly scientific work. The closing words of his sermon were precisely these, and I wish they could be handed down for future generations to see the narrow mind of a Christian minister of the 19th century:

"We should not allow scientific difficulties to perplex us on this subject."

This reminds me, not of a story, but a historical fact, which will bear repeating to every Christian on the face of the earth.

Some few hundred years ago, one Galileo, after much study and patient brain-labor, became convinced that the earth was round and revolved, and as he happened to be a prominent person in those times his opinions received great celebrity. But thousands of priests, armed with the infallible Bible, without difficulty proved that the earth was flat, stationary, and rested on foundations.

It can be proved to-day by the same book; yet what Christian dares to utter this belief? Galileo was forced to retract, and the priests preached to their followers, "We should not allow scientific difficulties to perplex us on this subject." In plain words—you must surrender your reason to this paper God, and be satisfied with its science only.

Scientific difficulties—and they are absolutely insurmountable—are perplexing Bible-believers to-day, upon the origin of man, and though our reason tells us that the Bible is wrong.

A professor of the nineteenth century stands up and tells us to surrender our reason and innate convictions to the writings of ignorant men in a barbarous age. A fit disciple of Calvin, the murderer of Servetus, and a worthy compatriot of the persecutors of Galileo, who fought truth, reason, and science with that rusty weapon whose terror is fast disappearing,—the Bible.

The fact is well known to all Egyptologists, that the negro and other races existed in Northern Africa on the upper Nile, 2300 years B. C., or only 48 years after the Deluge, and in the face of this, how sober people can believe, and ministers preach, that the inhabitants of Africa were descendants from Noah's family, is most wonderful indeed.

The fact is, and it is said with no intention of shocking its supporters, that there is no absurdity too absurd for the Bible; no wonderful story too wondrous for its believers, and no intolerant doctrine too intolerant for its ministers to preach.

E. V. Wilson's Appointments for September, 1871.

Will speak in Lake City, Minn., on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday,—Sept. 1st, 2d, and 3d,—four lectures.

At Hastings, Minn., on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday,—Sept. 5th, 6th 7th and 8th,—four lectures,—commencing at 8 o'clock in the evening.

At St. Paul, Minn., on Sundays—Sept. 10th, 17th, 24th, and October 1st—eight lectures. We will give a matinee on each Monday evening during our stay in St. Paul, if desired.

We expect to speak in Minneapolis, on the evenings of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday—Sept. 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th. Will the friends make the arrangements as per my letters.

We will lecture at Princeton, Minn., on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday—Sept. 19th, 20th, 21st, 22d—four lectures.

We were asked to attend the State Convention at Fairbault, on the 27th, 28th, and 29th, and set aside these days for that purpose, but have since learned that the Convention will not meet on those days; therefore we are open for engagements for four lectures, on the evenings of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday—Sept. 26th, 27th, 28th, and 29th.

We will be in Iowa during October.

The Executive Ability of Brigham Young.

The Mormon who is faithful to his obligations delivers, each season, at the tithing-house, one-tenth of all the labor of his hands, the growth of his acres, the result of his ventures, generally small, or the increase of his flocks and herds. No system of taxation ever devised provides for exactions so enormous; and perhaps no set of tax payers on the earth submit so cheerfully, and meet their demands with such scrupulous integrity and punctuality. For twenty years, one-tenth of the earnings of a community—now numbering more than one hundred and twenty thousand souls, and averaging from an early date in their organization here more than half that number—has been poured into the treasury of a church of which Brigham Young is the spiritual President and sole temporal Trustee in charge. None save his associates and himself can correctly estimate the amount received or the amount disbursed. Perhaps both have been over-estimated. It has been currently reported and generally believed, that Brigham Young has eight or ten millions of dollars deposited in the Bank of England. A hundredth part of that sum would probably be a more accurate estimate. The concentrated wealth, however, of this Church of Latter-day Saints will not, in my opinion, be found in unproductive accumulations anywhere; but ultimately, unless thwarted by special interposition, in railroads and steam-wagons, in woolen factories and cotton mills, grist mills and paper manufactories, newspapers and co-operative stores, cattle and horses and sheep, irrigating-ditches, mortgages on farms, and advance funds to emigrants. In these, and a hundred unnamed industries, extending all the way from Bear River to the Colorado, the accumulated capital of the church will be scattered, as it is already to a great extent, in irrigating, fertilizing and ever-swelling streams. No public or private enterprise, not based upon sound, financial principles, can engage the attention or receive the endorsement of the Mahomet of the West. No public or private enterprise of approved merit need go abroad for capital. The manager of the great overland railroad find in the head of the Mormon Church a prompt and responsible contractor for millions of dollars' worth of railroad constructing. The Scandinavian or English emigrant who desires to purchase a cow, or a plow, or a bushel or two of seed, on credit, can find the necessary accommodation at the same unfailing and ubiquitous fountain of advice and assistance. So absolute is the general confidence in this Mormon prophet, that he is able at any moment, without the investment of a farthing, to wield a labor-force equal to that of ten millions of dollars. For he can place and keep in the field ten thousand men, who will toil for years at any avocation whatever upon his bare indorsement of ultimate profit. Unlike prominent leaders of political rings in the East, this man invests in power alone those gains which they squander in flashy libraries which they never read, and in pictures and jewels, and articles of virtu, of the value and quality of which they are alike ignorant. His daughters' dowries are not displayed in their wedding-trains. He was visit the Atlantic States without a lounge at Saratoga or Long Branch, and tarry for months in Europe without acquainting themselves with the mysteries of rouge-et-noir, or trente-et-quarante.—Overland Monthly.

SPIRITUALISM.—Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith, (nee McAlpine) is revisiting her former home, and upon the past two Sundays has lectured on Spiritualism, morning and evening, at Spiritual Hall, to large audiences. Her greeting by her old friends was warm, and she has made many new ones, since her return. Her lectures during the time she has been here have been largely attended, and have given such general satisfaction that at a meeting of the Society, held on Sunday evening, after the lecture, it was unanimously decided to tender Mrs. Smith a three months' engagement, which has been done, and the lady has signified her acceptance. In consequence notice will be held in the Hall to-morrow Sunday for the ensuing three months. She is an exceptionally fine speaker, and will doubtless draw large houses during her entire stay in the city.—Port Huron Commercial.

Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote.

The most certain and perfectly harmless antidote for the poisonous effects, and remedy for the tobacco appetite, is known by the above name.

It is compounded by Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated medium of Chicago, while entranced by a celebrated chemist, long in spirit life. This antidote is warranted to break the habit of using tobacco by the inveterate lover of the weed, when the directions (on each box) are followed.

Agents for selling the same throughout the country are wanted. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office. Price $2.00 per box—sent by mail free of postage, on receipt of the money.

—A ray of divine compassion in the heart of man, shrinks the vast mountain of human crime into a molehill of pitiable error.

—Jesus Christ—an expression understood to arrest an effect, while the cause is still in operation.

A Card.

DEAR EDITORS AND SYMPATHIZING FRIENDS GENERALLY: The Spiritualists and friends of progress of Vineland, N. J., send you kindly a hopeful greeting. We are as happy and earnest in our labors for human enlightenment; as firm in the faith of our angel-given religion and philosophy as ever; and as sure that the enemies of our cause will regret the wrongs they do it, as we are that we are founded on the rock of science, and canopied by the radiant dome of truth.

Our Progressive Lyceum is prosperous, and we hope much from its good results.

Our Society is encouraged by many things, and especially by the rapid spread of mental light. We meet Sundays at the hall, and when no lecturer from abroad is with us, listen to one of our own members, or hold a conference of them all.

Speakers at a distance whose journeyings make it convenient to take us in their route, will confer a favor by writing the Corresponding Secretary when they can do so.

We publish notice of appointments, and are in the habit of paying speakers 50 per cent. of admittance receipts; or, when deemed better, give free doors, and contribute.

The present officers are

President—Mrs. Ellen Dickinson.
Vice President—John Gage.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. L. D. Ladd.
Treasurer—C. B. Campbell.
Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Mary E. Tillotson.

Vineland, Aug. 25, 1871.

LITERARY.

The Herald of Health for September contains a very carefully prepared article by Rev. J. C. Holbrook, D. D., on the "Wine Question;" one translated from the French on "How to Take Care of the Teeth," which will be worth a great deal to every young person; also "How to Cure Rheumatism," and more than fifty other articles. Price $2.00 a year. October, November, and December numbers free to new subscribers. Wood & Holbrook, Publishers, 15 Laight Street, New York.

The National Bee Journal is invaluable to every bee-keeper. Published semi-monthly by Moon & Mitchell, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Overland Monthly for September.—This racy and original magazine has its usual variety of instructive articles. We notice that in future issues the publishers intend to occasionally illustrate one or more articles, and "only such places and articles will be illustrated as will have special interest for readers on both sides of the continent." Published by John Carmany & Co., 409 Washington Street, San Francisco. $4.00 per annum.

The Ladies' Own Magazine for September contains numerous well-written and interesting articles. Mrs. M. Cora Bland, Editor, Indianapolis, Ind.

Eclectic Magazine.—The Eclectic for September is just out, and presents us with a very striking portrait of Max Muller, the distinguished linguist and scholar. Tasse portraits, one of which embellishes each number, are a special feature of the Eclectic. Published by E. R. Pelton, 108 Fulton St., New York. Price $5.00 per year; two copies $9.00; single numbers 45 cents.

Peters' Musical Monthly for September is a splendid number. It would seem almost impossible to improve this excellent work, and yet each succeeding number seems to be better than the last. It contains a total of fifteen pieces, printed from thirty-six full size music-plates, and you can get all this choice music for thirty cents. Vol. VIII. commenced with the July number, and the publisher offers to send the July, August, and September numbers for 75 cents. Address J. L. Peters, 599 Broadway, New York.

The Radical for September comes to us replete with well-written articles from the pens of the oldest reformatory writers in the country. The list of contents embrace topics on all live issues of the day, comprising in part, "The Paris Commune;" "The New Protestantism—its Relation to the Old;" "A Drifting Soul;" and "The Skepticism of Bayle." It should be in the hands of all liberalists.

The Phrenological Journal is always interesting, but the September number, just received, is particularly so. Most of the articles are illustrated, some elaborated. We confess ourselves highly pleased with this number, and commend it to the public favor generally. Price, 30 cents. $3 a year. Address, S. R. Wells, Publisher, 389 Broadway, New York.

The Atlantic Monthly for September is a superb number, containing many articles of special interest.

The Nursery still continues to grow in favor with young readers. It is especially adapted to them.

Good Health contains much valuable information in reference to promoting bodily vigor and life to a good old age.

Our Young Folks comes to hand, and is beautifully illustrated. It is an especial favorite of the young.

—A spark of divine love in the heart transforms the earth.

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled THE SUNDAY QUESTION, and SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.

This work consists of 123 large, closely printed pages. It is an exhaustive review of the so-called Sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of an Infinite God! This work, which would for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL to any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we will send the same work and the JOURNAL for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the JOURNAL three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the JOURNAL will avail himself or herself of this generous offer, and thus secure those books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street Chicago, Ill.

ROSICRUCIA!!!

THE ROAD TO POWER!! SEXUAL SCIENCE! F. B. Dowd's Private Lectures to Ladies and Gentlemen. A pamphlet of 60 pages, containing principles, ideas, and advice beyond price. Ignorance is the curse of mankind. Price 50 cents. For sale by the author, F. B. Dowd, Davenport, Iowa.

[illegible]

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

[NEW EDITION.]

THE

BIOGRAPHY OF SATAN:

Or, an Historical Exposition

OF THE

DEVIL AND HIS FIERY DOMINIONS.

Disclosing the Oriental Origin of the Belief in a DEVIL and Future ENDLESS PUNISHMENT. Also the Pagan Origin of the Scriptural terms, BOTTOMLESS PIT, LAKE OF FIRE AND BRIMSTONE, KEYS OF HELL, CHAINS OF DARKNESS, CASTING OUT DEVILS, EVERLASTING-PUNISHMENT, THE WORM THAT NEVER DIETH, ETC., ETC.

By K. Graves.

CONTENTS.

CHAP.
1. Address to the Reader.
2. Evils and demoralizing effects of the doctrine of endless punishment.
3. Ancient traditions respecting the origin of evil and the Devil.
4. A wicked Devil and an endless Hell not taught in the Jewish Scriptures.
5. Explanation of the words "Devils" and "Hell" in the Old Testament.
6. God (and not the Devil) the author of evil according to the Bible.
7. God and the Devil originally twin-brothers, and known by the same titles.
8. Origin of the terms, "Kingdom of Heaven," "Gates of Hell," etc.; also of the traditions respecting the Dragon chasing the woman (see Rev. 12), the woman clothed with the sun, etc.
9. Hell first instituted in the skies. Its origin and descent from above.
10. Origin of the tradition respecting "the bottomless pit."
10. Origin of the belief in a "Lake of fire and brimstone."
11. Where is Hell—ancient notions respecting its character and origin.
12. Origin of the ides of man's evil thoughts and actions being prompted by a Devil.
13. The Christian's Devil—where imported or borrowed from.
14. The various retributive terms of the Bible shown to be of Oriental origin.
15. The doctrine of future after-death punishment proved to be of heathen and priestly origin—being traced to its invention by ancient Pagan priests.

Conclusion—One hundred and sixty-three questions for believers in post mortem punishment.

—:o:—

This little work is deserving of and is receiving a very large sale and extended circulation.

Price, 35 cents; postage, 2 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the publishers, the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Publishing House, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

[THIRD EDITION, REVISED AND CORRECTED.]

JUST PUBLISHED!

A Complete and Truthful History of that Good Man and

PRINCE OF MEDIUMS,

Jesus of Nazareth

BY

PAUL AND JUDAS,

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most

REMARKABLE WORK

in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, PAUL and JUDAS, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, usurping all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely printed pages.

PRICE, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St. Chicago.

MICROSCOPES.

—:o:—

We are happy to announce to our numerous readers that we have made arrangements to be supplied with the very best LOW-PRICED MICROSCOPES that are manufactured. These we are now handling have none of the deficiencies complained of in most cheap microscopes. They are made of the VERY BEST materials, are finished in GOOD STYLE, and are not only well adapted for USE, but are also ORNAMENTAL.

No. 1655 MICROSCOPE,—Brass body,—6 inches high,—One Object Lens:—POWER 40 DIAMETERS.

Neatly packed in a Mahogany Case, with one prepared object, and sold for the low price of $3.00.

No. 1660, The UNIVERSAL HOUSEHOLD MICROSCOPE,—Price $5.50.—The Most Convenient, Complete, and Powerful Microscope ever offered for this low price.

It has the important parts of a first-class instrument, is readily adjusted, and well calculated not only to AMUSE, but to INSTRUCT. It has a firm tripod base of cast iron, and the facility for inclining to any angle, for convenience of observation; an adjustable eye-piece or draw-tube, and two object glasses of different powers, with one prepared object, all packed in a neat wooden box with hinges and hooks. It has a magnifying power of 90 to 100 diameters, or 600 to 10,000 times the area.

We can heartily recommend either of the above instruments, and those who cannot afford the higher priced one, need not be deterred from sending for the other, for it will give them perfect satisfaction, though not admitting of so wide a range of observation and close examination.

 These Microscopes can be sent only by EXPRESS; they cannot go by the mails. Our friends will please recollect this when ordering and giving shipping directions.

PREPARED OBJECTS.

We have a large variety of objects neatly prepared and mounted on glass-papered slides, well calculated for either of the above instruments. Price $1.50 per doz., or 15 cts. each. Must be ordered by express.

BOOK OF THE MICROSCOPE.

An interesting Book on the Microscope, with over 400 Illustrations, and directions for collecting and preparing the objects will be sent to any address on receipt of 75 cents.

 For any or all of the above goods, address the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE

HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF

M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,

AND WRITTEN BY

PROF. WM. F. LYON.

—:o:—

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"THIS book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence of Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth.

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgment concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the teachings contained in this work are infallible, either as they are presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be ably and logically reliable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, that tend to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"THE central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of these chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and naturally formed aperture that may be found in the unexplored open Polar Sea, and this opening affords easy navigation by a broad and deep channel leading from the one surface to the other, and that the largest ships or steamers may sail or steam either way, with as much facility as they can pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12 mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ATTRACTIVE NEW BOOKS.

—OF—

ERNEST RENAN'S WORKS.

THE LIFE OF JESUS.—THE LIFE OF SAINT PAUL.—AND THE LIVES OF THE APOSTLES.

These three remarkable books, by the great French Philosopher, are attracting the earnest attention of all readers. "They are of great power and learning, earnestly and honestly written, beautiful in style, admirable in treatment, and filled with an irrepressible and rare warmth of heart."

 Price $1.75 each; postage 20 cents.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA;

Or; the Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation. Translated from the French of Louis Jacolliot. A remarkable volume, which is making a great sensation in Europe, and exciting the profoundest attention of thinking people.  Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

HABITS OF GOOD SOCIETY.

A hand Book for Ladies and Gentlemen; with hints and anecdotes concerning nice points of taste, good manners, and the art of making one's self agreeable. The best and most entertaining book on the subject ever published.

 Price $1.75; postage 20 cents.

THE ART OF CONVERSATION.

With directions for Self-Culture. Teaching the art of conversing with ease and propriety, and setting forth the literary knowledge requisite to appear to advantage in good society. A book of real merit and intrinsic worth.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

THE ARTS OF WRITING, READING, AND SPEAKING

A remarkably clever book that every one, whether educated or not, will find of immense advantage. Prof. Orr. A capital companion for that ever popular work, THE ART OF CONVERSATION.  Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

☞ These books are all beautifully printed and handsomely bound in cloth covers, with gilt backs.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark street Chicago, Ill.

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1788 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE

BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON.

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskreet, or ancient language of the Brahmins.

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on heavy tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago

THE

Descent of Man,

AND

Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 600 pp. each. Price $2.50 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

 For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

BELVIDERE SEMINARY,

FOR YOUTHS OF BOTH SEXES,

Belvidere New Jersey. Fall Term begins Wednesday, Sept. 13th. One of the most liberal institutions in the land, being strictly non-sectarian. It has the superior advantage of a healthful and beautiful location, added to the comforts and genial influences of a pleasant home, with excellent opportunities for obtaining a practical education in any or all of its several departments, English, Classical, Literary, and Scientific. Pupils graduate in each department in Gymnasium.

For catalogues, address MISSES BUSH, Principals. v10 n17 9t.

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large profits to AGENTS. Send Stamp for Circulars. O. H. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 18, No. 121 Lasalle St., Chicago. v10 n12 tf

EXPRESS!

THE "EXPRESS" and other Rubber Goods FOR

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send stamp for circulars. Address: "EXPRESS" Co. 181 Clark St., Room 19 Chicago

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL

HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY

DEVOTED TO THE ARTS AND SCIENCES, LITERATURE, ROMANCE AND GENERAL REFORM.

$3,00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause: she only asks a hearing. [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR. CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 16, 1871. VOL. X.—NO. 26.

From the Medium and Daybreak, London.

SPIRITUALISM IN ENGLAND.

Answers to Questions by Tien-Sien-Tie—The Strolling Player—A Seance—Character of Spirit Voices—John King—Interesting Particulars.

[A seance is held every Friday evening, at eight o'clock, at the office of the Medium; J. J. Morse, Trance-Medium. By our reports of these or other circles we do not endorse or stand responsible for the facts or teachings given by the spirits. Our desire is, in brief, to give a faithful representation of what takes place, for the benefit of those who cannot attend.]

March 10.

(The questions were answered by Tien-Sien-Tie, the guide of the medium.)

Q. Do you know of any sphere in which spirits reside who have been incarnated on other earths?—A. Each and every planet that has human inhabitants hath its spirit-zones, to which those of who have passed through the process of death.

Q. Could the spirit give us any guage by which to admeasure the reliability of low and undeveloped spirits?—A. By practically investigating the statements made.

Q. Is there a possibility of the physical manifestations becoming dangerous to life or limb?—A. Only in cases where the phenomena are produced by a revengeful or malevolent spirit, as motives guide our actions in both worlds.

Q. Is not the physical form the direct result of the spirit which inhabits it?—A. The form which the atoms comprising the human body assume is the result of certain mathematical principles inherent in those atoms. The spirit or self-conscious principle which inhabits that body is thus surrounded by the only means whereby it can express itself externally.

Q. Swedenborg has a theory that the exterior memory retains material things, while the interior memory retains ideas?—A. This is absolutely true.

Q. Do the Chinese form a distinct society in the spirit-sphere?—A. National peculiarities are manifested some considerable time after disembodiment. Nations are but families on a larger scale. Association is a family principle, and the association of a nation lasts until its various members have outgrown its national idiosyncrasies.

Q. Did Swedenborg, after being intromitted into the spiritual sphere, return to the human and the temporal prior to writing out his recollections, and, consequently, are his revelations, as we have them, tinctured and modified by his external surroundings?—A. The writings of Swedenborg came from the plane of the external memory. Intromission and inspiration depend for their perfection upon the adaptility of the organic formations, and these are modified by education and position. Hence it would be idle to suppose that the revelations of any seer were absolutely true.

Q. What is the philosophy of the human spirit leaving the body in sleep or otherwise?—A. A quickening of the spiritual perceptions, dependent upon the developments of the spirit-body of the individual.

Q. Should we be justified in defining creation as the dream-thought of God?—A. Metaphorically considered, yes.

THE "STROLLING PLAYER"

entertained the company with some very suggestive thoughts on the matter of diet. On being questioned as to the nature of truth, he replied "Truth is the philosophers' stone that comes out of the heterogeneous mass of things thrown into the crucible of experience." He afterwards referred to the splendid oration given by Mrs. Emma Hardinge, on the previous Wednesday, on "Joan of Arc;" and in speaking of the future welfare of Germany, he made the following remarks, that it was one thing to be elected as the sword of retribution, but woe to the nation or individual that exerted an undue pressure upon that sword.

Q. Had the spirits which animate our bodies a previous existence, and if so, in what form?—A. The principle—the Ego, the man himself—hath ever been, but before entering the human body it was not in an individualized form. The spirit of man is a "monad" or spiritual atom, if we can thus assign it any shape. There are two classes of existence, the controller and the controlled. We see that animals and man are capable of voluntary acts. These are the result of this spiritual element operating through matter, by the peculiar relations which exist between the spiritual monad and matter. In the lower forms of life the spirit is educated, or developed, or assimilated to the conditions of existence, and thus prepared to be incarnated in the human form.

Q. Is there a future state for inferior animals, so as to recompense them for [illegible] which they endure in earth-[illegible]

—each has an [illegible] body, but the [illegible] between the spiritual principle and the physical body is not perfected in the lower animals, so that at death they have not a continued existence, but this intelligent principle is set free and is inspired into higher forms till it becomes the spirit of a human being. When the spirit proper assumes the human form it is then repaid for [illegible] which are animated [illegible] control. The medium [illegible] gently forward, and [illegible] covered with the fingers of the right hand. The medium spoke in gentle, measured tones. "Free from all trouble and anxiety, existence in the world of spirits is one of uninterrupted happiness and bliss. It is strange indeed that we do not understand more clearly and fully the nature of the world we are hastening onwards to. If I had realized it, many anxious doubts would have been saved—many idle speculations would have been spared; but I am thankful to say now that all doubts have cleared away, having passed through the valley of suffering to be at rest. My name was Eleanor Bartlett, Melbourne Terrace, Penge. I left the earth in September, 1869, 50 years of age."

Q. Can spirits who have lived on other planets of the solar system visit the earth and communicate with its inhabitants?—A. That spirits from other planets can visit earth is absolutely true, but we cannot answer for the number that do so, as it is not often in accordance with their inclinations. In the present state of spiritual science it would not be useful for them to communicate with man, as even among Spiritualists nine out of ten would doubt the source of the communications. We must make more progress before we can become cosmopolitan enough to receive visitors from other planets.

Q. What are the punishments of the spirit-world? Are they of a physical or a mental character?—A. They are of a mental character, because of the fact that the part of our nature which is external in the spirit-world was internal in this world, and yet when viewed from the position of the spirit they partake more of a physical character than they do to mankind from the earth side. Punishments in the spirit-world are altogether such as to elevate the subject of them, and rectify the wrong committed, and are of three kinds. First—By causing them to return to the scene of their former life and labor, to remedy the wrongs they have committed. Secondly—The agony of remorse and moral compunction, which is faintly foreshadowed in earth-life, but brought forth in its fulness in the spirit spheres. Those who know anything of the pangs of regret and the stings of conscience have some allght idea of the exquisite sufferings resulting from this cause in the spirit-land. Third—Repentance, and the desire to seek forgiveness. To receive love and kindness when we are entirely unworthy of its being bestowed upon us is unutterably painful. This is the most severe ordeal of spirit-life, and we think there is scarcely need for any more methods of punishment.

VIOLENT DEATH.

After a humorous conversation with the "Strolling Player," which elicited much laughter, a strange spirit was introduced without waking the medium out of the trance. As soon as the control became a fact, the medium uttered a sudden exclamation indicative of deep suffering, and at the same time held his head with his hands as if to keep it together. His manner exhibited indications of pain and astonishment. After awhile he gasped out the following words, making considerable pauses at some times, and again speaking very hurriedly:—"It's so strange—so strange. Can't make anything of it. Yesterday afternoon—boiler burst—and I do n't remember more. William Mitchell, fifty years of age; was at work at Whitnash, near Leamington—Mr. Reading was my master's name—I drove his thrashing machine—blowed up yesterday—I have a wife and three children—can't stop—no more!"

The "Strolling Player" again controlled the medium to dissipate the bad effects left by the previous spirit, and she had much difficulty in restoring the brain to a condition in which he could use it. After a deal of magnetizing the medium was restored to external consciousness, and suffered simply from a pain in the head. We may here observe that Mr. Morse is usually affected with the symptoms peculiar to the spirit just before physical dissolution. Mr. Morse is hoped under considerable indisposition, which the control of the spirits partly removed. While in the trance he visited the spirit-world, and remembered drinking the juice of some flowers which was prepared and offered to him by the spirits.

A SEANCE AT MR. ALSOP'S.

DEAR SIR.—Last Thursday evening a circle met at Mr. C. P. B. Alsop's, 13, Lamb's Conduit Street, consisting of his own family, Mr. Herne and Mr. Williams as mediums, and seven visitors, most of whom had not previously enjoyed the opportunity of spending an evening at Mr. Alsop's. The seance commenced at seven o'clock, and, with the exception of half an hour for refreshment, continued till nearly eleven; and during the whole time there was an unbroken succession of most varied and interesting manifestations.

Immediately on the light being extinguished, after all had taken their seats at the table, the piano was played; the company were greeted by the tubes being carried round and tapping their heads or shoulders. Voices spoke in response to the opening prayer, and addressed several individually. A large quantity of liquid scent was poured over the tables and the company. Bright lights, followed by wreaths of luminous smoke or vapor, were seen moving about overhead. Oranges were brought on to the table from another part of the room (afterwards one was peeled). Candlesticks, heavy desks, and a phrenological bust were also brought on to the table. A tambourine and an accordeon floated above our heads, seeming to call all round the room, often in concert with the piano and harmonicon. Several voices were constantly speaking through the tubes, principally that of "John King." At one period of the evening, after "John King" had requested Mr. Alsop to ascertain that the door was not only shut but locked, a deep voice was heard, and on a light being struck Mr. Herne was discovered in his chair on the table. On the light being extinguished, he, still sitting in his chair, was carried up to the ceiling. His feet were, during the ascent, gently placed in the hands of Mr. Clark, one of the strangers present, and, as he felt them go up as high as he could reach, he was able positively to testify to the fact of Mr. Herne's rising to a considerable height above the table.

A sheet of paper was placed on the table, which was examined and initialled by the strangers present during one of the light intervals. Very shortly after darkness recommenced it was thrown into the hands of Mr. Clift, who was told to keep it. Afterwards it was found that on the paper was written "God bless you all—Jack King," and on the other side of it part of the name of a sister of one of the visitors who had recently entered the spirit-world.

Voices were constantly audible joining in singing; and after two or three of the company had offered each a short prayer, the voice of "John King" was heard over our heads in a few solemn sentences, asking for a blessing on those present and that the petitions made might be granted, to which no less than three or four "voices" responded "Amen" in varied modulations of tone.

But, if possible, more conclusive than any of these manifestations were the numerous mental requests made by the visitors, which were at once responded to. Mr. Alsop asked "if our spirit-friends would take and interchange the rings from the fingers of the company." The answer was "Yes." Mr. Clark asked for his ring to be taken away. The writer asked mentally that Mr. Clark's ring might be placed on one of his fingers. A ring came and was placed on his left thumb. When light was produced, that ring was owned by Mr. Clark. Mr. Alsop's and Mr. Clift's rings were interchanged, they sitting at the extreme ends of the table. An orange was placed in Mr. Clift's hand. He held it up and mentally asked for it to be taken out and replaced again, which was done. The fruit, before mentioned, was carried across the table twice, exactly in obedience to the mental requests of the visitors. Towards the close of the seance, Mr. Clark, in whose mind a vestige of skepticism still remained, held the accordion high over his head, away from the table, and mentally asked "John King" to take it from him. "John" replied, "Would it convince you?" Mr. Clark said, "I think it would." "John" said, "I will try." After two or three efforts the instrument was gently but firmly taken from Mr. Clark's hand, upwards.

It is important to remark that there was no "fumbling" or "groping" in anything that was done. All the mechanical movements were made with gentleness, but with great firmness and precision. The essential point to be taken hold of is, that these things seem to prove that an intelligent power was at work, that this power was independent of the minds of any of the company, and was able to read their thoughts, and that darkness presented no obstacle to that intelligent power carrying out its designs.

All the company were touched and caressed many times by fingers and hands. The hands felt soft like human flesh, moist and perfectly shaped, and either melted away with contact or were gently withdrawn upwards. The piano and harmonicon were moved from their places, and a number of minor phenomena occurred, a description of which could occupy too much space.

To several of the party it was a most wonderful evening, and they felt greatly indebted to Mr. and Mrs. Alsop and to Messrs. Herne and Williams. As to any imposture or trickery, or even self-delusion, the idea is simply absurd, and must be felt to be so by all who were present who brought any ordinary powers of mind to reflect on the circumstances and events of the evening as a whole.

The writer of these notes and two of his friends whose names have been mentioned above, have much pleasure in subscribing their names as a testimony to facts which they witnessed, and to the truthfulness of this account.

EDWARD T. BENNETT, Batchworth.
JOSEPH CLIFT, Dorking.
W. W. CLARK, Dorking.

MEDIUM IN YORKSHIRE.

DEAR SIR.—Knowing your readiness to insert in the columns of your valuable paper anything worthy the notice of your readers, I desire the insertion of the following lines. On the 5th July, we held a seance at the house of one of our mediums, for a few friends to consult our spirit-doctor. One of the investigators, on being told that his leg, which is shortened from his having a hip disease, could be lengthened to its proper length, was rather doubtful; but to convince him, the medium's hand was elongated; but another investigator was not satisfied, on account of their not being much light in the room. However, on the day following, Sunday, July 16th, whilst the same medium was entranced in the broad light of daytime, hand again became elongated, when a number of our friends examined both hands of the medium, and then measured them, fully satisfying all present that the elongation was a [illegible], this is another phase of [illegible] to us, and I can assure you [illegible] ring to us all, after the means that have [illegible] thrown out at, and the contempt poured upon us. We have persons who call these the modern and deceptive days, and a phrenological bust were also brought on to the table. A tambourine and an accordeon floated above our heads, seeming to call all round the room, often in concert with the piano and harmonicon. Several voices were constantly speaking through the tubes, principally that of "John King." At one period of the evening, after "John King" had requested Mr. Alsop to ascertain that the door was not only shut but locked, a deep voice was heard, and on a light being struck Mr. Herne was discovered in his chair on the table. On the light being extinguished, he, still sitting in his chair, was carried up to the ceiling. His feet were, during the ascent, gently placed in the hands of Mr. Clark, one of the strangers present, and, as he felt them go up as high as he could reach, he was able positively to testify to the fact of Mr. Herne's rising to a considerable height above the table.

A sheet of paper was placed on the table, which was examined and initialled by the strangers present during one of the light intervals. Very shortly after darkness recommenced it was thrown into the hands of Mr. Clift, who was told to keep it. Afterwards it was found that on the paper was written "God bless you all—Jack King," and on the other side of it part of the name of a sister of one of the visitors who had recently entered the spirit-world.

Voices were constantly audible joining in singing; and after two or three of the company had offered each a short prayer, the voice of "John King" was heard over our heads in a few solemn sentences, asking for a blessing on those present and that the petitions made might be granted, to which no less than three or four "voices" responded "Amen" in varied modulations of tone.

But, if possible, more conclusive than any of these manifestations were the numerous mental requests made by the visitors, which were at once responded to. Mr. Alsop asked "if our spirit-friends would take and interchange the rings from the fingers of the company." The answer was "Yes." Mr. Clark asked for his ring to be taken away. The writer asked mentally that Mr. Clark's ring might be placed on one of his fingers. A ring came and was placed on his left thumb. When light was produced, that ring was owned by Mr. Clark. Mr. Alsop's and Mr. Clift's rings were interchanged, they sitting at the extreme ends of the table. An orange was placed in Mr. Clift's hand. He held it up and mentally asked for it to be taken out and replaced again, which was done. The fruit, before mentioned, was carried across the table twice, exactly in obedience to the mental requests of the visitors. Towards the close of the seance, Mr. Clark, in whose mind a vestige of skepticism still remained, held the accordion high over his head, away from the table, and mentally asked "John King" to take it from him. "John" replied, "Would it convince you?" Mr. Clark said, "I think it would." "John" said, "I will try." After two or three efforts the instrument was gently but firmly taken from Mr. Clark's hand, upwards.

It is important to remark that there was no "fumbling" or "groping" in anything that was done. All the mechanical movements were made with gentleness, but with great firmness and precision. The essential point to be taken hold of is, that these things seem to prove that an intelligent power was at work, that this power was independent of the minds of any of the company, and was able to read their thoughts, and that darkness presented no obstacle to that intelligent power carrying out its designs.

All the company were touched and caressed many times by fingers and hands. The hands felt soft like human flesh, moist and perfectly shaped, and either melted away with contact or were gently withdrawn upwards. The piano and harmonicon were moved from their places, and a number of minor phenomena occurred, a description of which could occupy too much space.

To several of the party it was a most wonderful evening, and they felt greatly indebted to Mr. and Mrs. Alsop and to Messrs. Herne and Williams. As to any imposture or trickery, or even self-delusion, the idea is simply absurd, and must be felt to be so by all who were present who brought any ordinary powers of mind to reflect on the circumstances and events of the evening as a whole.

The writer of these notes and two of his friends whose names have been mentioned above, have much pleasure in subscribing their names as a testimony to facts which they witnessed, and to the truthfulness of this account.

EDWARD T. BENNETT, Batchworth.
JOSEPH CLIFT, Dorking.
W. W. CLARK, Dorking.

MEDIUM IN YORKSHIRE.

DEAR SIR.—Knowing your readiness to insert in the columns of your valuable paper anything worthy the notice of your readers, I desire the insertion of the following lines. On the 5th July, we held a seance at the house of one of our mediums, for a few friends to consult our spirit-doctor. One of the investigators, on being told that his leg, which is shortened from his having a hip disease, could be lengthened to its proper length, was rather doubtful; but to convince him, the medium's hand was elongated; but another investigator was not satisfied, on account of their not being much light in the room. However, on the day following, Sunday, July 16th, whilst the same medium was entranced in the broad light of daytime, hand again became elongated, when a number of our friends examined both hands of the medium, and then measured them, fully satisfying all present that the elongation was a [illegible], this is another phase of [illegible] to us, and I can assure you [illegible] ring to us all, after the means that have [illegible] thrown out at, and the contempt poured upon us. We have persons who call these the modern and deceptive days we know not of; so we can afford to be accounted as the "lowest of the low," while our spirit-friends take such pains to encourage and cheer us; and that is not all. When we are ill, we do not apply to the medical men as we used to, but we visit our mediums, and, am glad to say that we are soon put to rights, and no doctors' bills to appear against us. In your earliest friend, Mrs. E. A. Britt, whose hand was elongated; and such is the healing power of which she is possessed, that she is sought after by many outside the ranks of Spiritualism.

Since writing the above, we have held another seance, when the same medium's arm was elongated three inches according to the measurement taken by D. Richmond, of Darlington, who had come to visit us. JOHN KITSON.

HEALING BY PRAYER.

In the year 1814, Robert Shaftoe, grocer, from Whitby, took up his residence in Durham. His name was placed on the "Plan," commencing for that year; he was a good man, and an excellent local preacher. He was a man of great faith; his preaching was plain, practical, earnest, and peculiarly calculated to arouse the impenitent; he was well acquainted with the great and popular William Dawson, and they seem to have had strong affection for each other.

On one of Mr. Dawson's visits to Durham to preach, Mr. Shaftoe was lying ill—on the point of death, as it was thought, for the doctor had given him up. When Mr. Dawson arrived, he was told of his friend's state, and at once proceeded to his house that he might see him once again before his departure for a better world. He found the suffering preacher surrounded by weeping friends. After speaking to him, he requested these in the room to kneel down, as he was going to pray. In this prayer he uttered this remarkable expression:—

"Lord, lay thy warm hand upon him;" this he repeated three times, and then added: "from it he must feel health and strength flowing through his system." Mr. Shaftoe said each time he repeated the words he felt the disease leaving him, and health and strength returning. When the doctor called a short time after, to his surprise, instead of being dead, Mr. Shaftoe was sitting up almost well. He recovered, and went forth again preaching, and died March 10, 1840, in the seventy-third year of his age. Mr. Shaftoe was the grandfather of Mrs. Lightfoot, now living at 70, North Street, Leeds.—From the Durham Chronicle of June 9, 1871.

SEANCE WITH MR. ALSOP AND FAMILY.

DEAR SIR.—Spiritualism has now become an established fact. It is no more to be doubted by those who have bestowed any attention upon the investigation of its phenomena, than are electrical experiments or the marvels of chemistry. Its law may as yet remain enshrouded in gloom; the forces it displays are always occult, and frequently incomprehensible; but it is nevertheless based upon facts as certain as those of the most natural and palpable character that fall within the experience of every-day life. To disbelieve in Spiritualism at the present time, is not to have doubts about a speculative theory, but to oppose the evidence of one's sober senses. By this principle skeptics must soon be judged. Spiritualism is no longer a question of logical deduction, but of sense, knowledge, and experience. These facts place the phenomena beyond the verge of doubt, but at the same time bring them into the field of criticism. My experience leads me to the conclusion, that not only does the character of the manifestations depend largely upon the frame of mind in which we sit and write for them, but that the spirits themselves are greatly influenced by the conduct of mortals at a seance. Hence the great importance of having unanimity and harmony of thought amongst all present. One opposing mind will frequently very considerably interfere with—perhaps destroy—all manifestations. Not only should there be a kind of mental union with all who meet at a seance, but there should also pervade the entire circle a fitting frame of mind to receive the great truths frequently communicated on these occasions. Asking absurd questions, joking, treating the matter with levity, should be entirely avoided. The subject is a solemn one, and should be dealt with in a serious frame of mind. These matters are always attended to most strictly and most religiously at the seances held at the house of Mr. C. P. B. Alsop, at Champion Hill, where I have frequently attended; and the result has been in the highest degree satisfactory to all who have been present. By this means we avoid violence and outrageous conduct on the part of the spirits, and bring about a harmony and peace of mind that must be experienced to be believed. The joy and quiet repose of soul that pervades the circle on these occasions is really and truly a foretaste of heaven; and when the time has become so far advanced that we are compelled to wish our spirit-friends good night and retire to our respective homes, we do this with the greatest reluctance of feeling as though we had left some part of ourselves behind.

On Sunday, the 23rd of July, I attended a seance of this character at the house of Mr. Alsop, when there were present Mr. and Mrs. Alsop and their daughter Mrs. Cheney, Miss Reeves, Mr. Whitby, Mr. A. Taylor, of Nottingham, myself and daughter Ada. We had not been sitting long before flowers and other articles were brought and thrown upon the table; amongst other things thus conveyed by the spirits was a bouquet which had been locked in a portmanteau at my house at Ealing, and was brought to Champion Hill, a distance of about ten miles. Mr. Taylor is a medium of great power, and what may be called, for want of a better term, a carrying medium. In his presence articles are fetched from great distances. On the occasion in question he was himself tied, seated in his chair to the ceiling, very much against his own wishes, and not without producing in him a considerable feeling of nervousness. Spirit-lights were seen in great abundance; they passed from one part of the room to another in large clusters, looking like small showers of meteors; spirit-hands were also seen by many of those present. These were described [illegible] was floated into the air and tunes played upon it while no human fingers touched its keys. It was held and played upon exclusively by spirit-hands. A duet was sung by Mr. Whitby and Miss Alsop, and an accompaniment was played on the accordion and the piano by the spirits, no human being touching either of the instruments the while; the music thus performed was grand in the extreme. Very many phenomena occurred of the character of moving things from place to place, such as conveying a hassock to another part of the room, raising the accordion from the table, etc.; but all these sink into insignificance beside the playing on the musical instruments by the spirits. Five distinct voices, each preserving its own identity, were heard by all present, and there was no more danger of confounding one of these with the others than there would be in the case of the same number of voices from human beings still in the flesh. The spirits themselves named the hymns that they wished to have sung, and joined most enthusiastically in the harmony. The singing brought to each one present a frame of mind such as perhaps many had never before experienced. The hymn, called "Holy, holy," really penetrated to the depths of the human soul, and produced a condition of mind so tranquil, so peaceful, so happy, that the desire would naturally arise that it could be for ever. This was indeed an earnest of that glorious state to which all of us are hastening. Here is the true mission of Spiritualism.—I am, my dear Sir, yours ever,

HENRY SMITH.

24 Windsor Road, Ealing, W.

A SPIRITUAL SPRING.

How a Valuable Spouting Spring was Discovered by the aid of Ralston Spirits.

The origin of the famous boiling spring which bears the name of Benjamin Franklin, is well known to our readers. Eighteen years ago the spirit of the departed Franklin announced through a spiritual medium that a vein of mineral water could be found by boring on the spot where the spring is now located. Since that time the spirit of the benefactor of mankind has turned its attention from heavenly pursuits, and occupied itself by locating sites for mineral fountains.

Soon after the Franklin was finished, Benjamin announced that by boring to a depth of 656 feet on a spot a little to the northeast of the first well another vein of water might be developed. This fact was stated to a citizen of the village, who is not a believer in Spiritualism, and he marked the figures "656" on the wall of the spring house, where they still remain.

Soon after this time the work of boring commenced, and proceeded steadily and quietly with no remarkable incidents until one evening, when the required depth was nearly reached, the proprietor went into the derrick and found the man who was boring sitting directly over the well, drilling away as though the spirits had no control of the internal fountain, which was so soon to develop itself according to announcement. He advised the man to be cautious and get away in time, but the unbeliever scoffed, and the regular thud of the drill still kept time to the careless whistling of the faithless borer. Just as the last fraction of the six hundred and fifty-sixth foot was drilled away, there came a roar and rush of mighty waters, carrying everything before it. Stool, man, whistle and all, went up and came down with a torrent of water and gas. The burly, bearded man of the drill looked like the mythical Santa Claus as he came down through the derrick and landed on terra firma, a firm believer in spiritual manifestations.

The well was tubed, and ever since it has spouted daily. On last Tuesday afternoon it was announced that the building would be open to the public, and hundreds of people gathered to witness the strange phenomenon.

At 5 o'clock the cap was removed from the tube, and the water commenced flowing into the tank; this continued but a moment, when the water began to recede, and its descent could be heard until it was about one hundred feet from the surface, where it rested, as if concentrating its powers for the mighty effort which was soon to astonish the waiting spectators. Soon the babbling and rushing of the ascending waters was heard, and at five minutes past three the water again flowed over the column of the tube, gradually ascending and receding alternately for about five minutes.

When the liquid column had reached a height of thirty feet the spectacle became beautiful. The stream of gas and water spouted upward in a solid column in the centre of the building, and upon reaching its greatest height gracefully turned, and falling, formed a circle of snow-white spray, which, wherever it was touched by the sunlight, displayed all the colors of the rainbow.

At a quarter past three the column shot up to the roof of the derrick, as if propelled by a force which it would be impossible to attain by artificial means. It seemed as if the mighty mystery must have exhausted itself, and that this must be the final throe of the great veins which were being drained of their precious mineral fluid. But the beautiful column, now nearing sixty feet in height, continued spouting, as if the great heart of the earth itself were throbbing out its life-blood.

The grand display continued until half past three, when Mr. Mitchell, with much difficulty,

From the Brooklyn Union, July 30.

THE SLEEPLESS GIRL.

Five Years Without Food or Drink—A Remarkable Case—Interesting Facts.

Several years ago the papers were full of the particulars of the strange and distressing condition of a young lady of Brooklyn, who, by a series of misfortunes, had been brought to a state of almost living death. The assertions made at that time were discredited by a great many because the authors themselves had not been permitted the privilege of personally seeing or conversing with the invalid, and the statements made at a later date that she had not tasted food in the interval was received with universal discredit. The subject created no little excitement at the time, and the house in which the family resided was visited by hundreds of curious people who, it is needless to state, were refused admittance. So persistent were some of the callers that the aid of the police was required to prevent their forcible entrance.

As time rolled on, and nothing more of a public nature was said of the case, it passed out of the minds of many, and in the great whirl of public cares and private trials, and the ever varying change taking place about us, the interest of the multitude died out. But for all that the phenomenon has continued to exist, and to attract the attention of scientific and medical men everywhere.

During all these years the poor sufferer has lain in the same painful position, save when distorted by spasms, sightless, in a measure dumb, and without nourishment of any kind. As she yet remains with us as great a mystery and unsolved problem as when almost six years ago she was afflicted, the interest in her is revived, and many and earnest are the prayers offered by loving ones for her ultimate recovery.

THE STATEMENTS made at the time of the occurence were substantially correct, and from the many files of newspapers before us, and from the family and herself, we have gleaned the following particulars, withholding the names of all concerned:

UP TO 1863—

the age of fifteen—she was a healthy girl, although delicately organized, and possessed of a nervous temperament, indicative of spirituality and refinement. Although fragile in figure, and what might be termed a delicate frame, her constitution was strong and capable of great endurance. At the time above mentioned dyspepsia set in from excessive application to study, superinducing sickness, faintness, and a feeling of despondency. Up to this date she had been a bright student, and stood deservedly high in Professor West's school. In a few months she was to graduate, and, neglecting her physical health, thought only of her books. Early and late she studied, until her nervous system was prostrated, and she was compelled to leave school. This was a cruel blow to her, and her spirits sank until her symptoms became aggravated, and horseback exercise was advised as a means of restoration. In riding one day she was thrown from the horse and severely injured. For nine days and nights she suffered intensely, without rest, and it was very many months before she was sufficiently recovered to be out again. In June, 1865 on leaving a street car in Fulton avenue, her crinoline caught upon the step; she was thrown violently down and dragged a long distance, injuring the same side of her head and body that had been hurt before.

SINCE THAT DAY

she has never moved. A day or two after the accident she was seized with spasms, of which she has been a victim almost constantly up to the present time. The entire body is afflicted by the spasms, and the contortions are violent; at times she cannot be held. One by one her faculties deserted her; first sight, then hearing, and then when the power of deglutition had departed, she could neither speak nor swallow. During the time that has elapsed since the spasms began, a period of nearly six years, she has not

SLEPT A MOMENT.

This is stated by the physician and attendants, who are persons entitled to credit.

THE TRANCE

is the nearest approach to rest her body ever knows. While in this condition she experiences pleasurable emotions, and often talks with her mother in heaven, and seems to be refreshed and calmer after each one. They usually follow spasms, some of which are so violent that it has taken two or three physicians and three female friends, six persons in all, to hold her. So violent would they sometimes be that her body would be thrown in the air, and while held up as high as their heads by the many hands of her pitying and faithful attendants, the patient would turn somersaults, and make violent contortions, suspended in the air on their hands; sometimes she would be thrown from the bed, bruising herself and disordering her face painfully. Sometimes she would roll up like a hoop—forward or backward. Her lower limbs are twisted entirely around each other, the right and left feet changing places, and the toes pointed towards each other.

AT FIRST NOURISHMENT was sought to be administered by enema and nourishment, but for years they have not been applied. Her system has maintained a loathing for food and even the odor of it.

SUCH WAS THE CONDITION of the unfortunate sufferer nearly six years ago, and to-day her situation is but little changed. Through the agency of a friend of the family we we were admitted to an interview with her, and are thus enabled to place before the readers of the Union the following interesting account of the visit.

IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD of Clinton and Washington avenues, in a quiet, secluded street, we found the house, and in company with this mutual friend were invited to her presence.

THE SECOND FLOOR

is devoted to the patient, and a prettier suit of [illegible] be found in the city. From the [illegible] vines and plants to [illegible] can be pillow, [illegible] and taste. Large folding doors separate the rooms, which, we judge, are always thrown open. In the front parlor are wax flowers, crosses of purest white, wreaths and cushions, all made by her, and are indescribable [illegible]

[illegible] ings of white and blue, and about her shoulder and arms were draperies of the same colors. The pillows at the head of the bed, and the diminutive one farther down near the center, upon which rested the head of the child-woman, were immaculately fresh and pure. A musical box placed near her was discoursing its low, sad tones; and a small work table stood near by, covered with articles wrought by her own distorted, though deformed, hands. Taking a seat beside her bed, she extended her left hand, the right being twisted around her neck and immovable, and expressed in the outward manner her pleasure at the meeting.

HER FAITHFUL AUNT

is her sole nurse, and to her unwearied devotion and strong and well disciplined mind does the sufferer owe her life. When the blow first came upon her, and her house was besieged by the curious public, who desired to crowd the chamber and satisfy themselves, she protected herself from intrusion, and claimed that the sorrows and misfortunes of her household were sacred. In this decision she has been sustained by the attending physician, who is regularly and carefully noting every new development, in the hope of being able at some time to detect something that shall afford him a clue to the mystery of his patient's existence.

NONE BUT A WOMAN,

and that one this devoted aunt, could so graduate light and shade in that sick room, and arrange draperies in waves and folds so as to screen from the casual observer the outlines of the poor, distorted body. But she is and has been a mother to this motherless sufferer, and in her great love has made of the sick room a beautiful temple, where only physical pain mars the perfect harmony and peace of its inmates. The only brother of the invalid shares with his aunt the mournful pleasure of caring for their charge. Although younger than his sister, he has a more mature face than she, and is in feature very like her.

THE APPEARANCE

of the sufferer is most pleasing. Aside from the marble pallor and the rigidity of the muscles about the sightless eyes and closed mouth there is nothing to indicate the terrible seasons of pain through which she has passed. The eyes are simply closed, not sunken, and no contraction of the lids is apparent. She lies on her right side, the right arm under her head, the appearance is a natural one, and to glance at her position it seems that of a comfortable convalescent. But the drapery deceives; the arm is hopelessly twisted, and the hand resting on the back of the neck is never withdrawn. In this condition she lifts the left hand, which is tightly closed and very small, to her neck, and with her work behind her creates out of wax those perfect representations of flowers seen in the parlors.

HER TEETH

are nearly all sone, but the mouth has lost none of its former beauty; the lower jaw is set like that of a corpse, and it is impossible to open it but slightly even with force. And here we may remark that if a trick were attempted to be practiced in one instance, as has been alleged, it would not succeed at all, for it is not a particular feature in the extraordinary, but the case is one of extraordinary combinations.

Her neck is small, while the throat is solid, and utterly dead to feeling; when struck it gives back a hollow noise, and the blow is not felt by the patient.

NEARLY EVERY FUNCTIONAL OPERATION.

is in abeyance, and all the avenues of the body are closed. She could not eat, even if she had a desire; nothing but fluid could be forced into the stomach, and a hand laid in it readily distinguishes the spinal column in the back. In fact, there are no bowels, for the skin alone represents this portion of her body. Evacuations never take place, and there is no evidence in the lower portion of the body that life remains. Altogether she is a strange problem, and one that has to be solved.

A WOMAN IN YEARS,

her frame as small as that of a little child, and although bed-ridden, blind, for a long while, deaf, and dumb, and but occasionally able to utter a sound now, she is yet possessed of a strong, active intellect, that has triumphed over bodily ailments and disease, and is strong to-day, and more intelligent than when she was first taken.

BUT FOR HER STRONG WILL

and splendid mind she would have long ago ceased to live. These have triumphed over every shock her physical nature has endured, and unless some unforseen change for the worse overtakes her, there is no reason why she should not ultimately recover.

Recently she had begun to articulate, very little and indistinct, it is true, but nevertheless the effort has been and is being made every day by her to express herself in this way. In the meantime she writes with a pencil placed under the cramped fingers of her left hand, and her chirography is clear and beautiful.

THE RAPIDITY

with which she writes is astonishing. Her sentences are well formed, her words well chosen, and her ideas are always bright. The perfect refinement of manner and gentle dignity that characterize her slightest motion, are evident in her writing. It is utterly impossible for one so sensitive to lend herself to any kind of deceit. After looking into her face we felt ashamed that we had ever entertained for a moment any doubt as to the reality of her condition. She is as great an enigma to herself as to others, and is glad to hear any opinion advanced as to her possible recovery. While she is not opposed to being questioned in regard to the strange, unnatural state in which she lives, her means of conveying replies are limited to writing with her left hand, which, as has been remarked, is greatly deformed. Occasionly she can speak so as to be understood, but generally it is difficult to catch her meaning, and evidently wearisome to her to make the effort. Several times there was a sad, disappointed look on her face after she had tried and failed to express herself.

HER DOES NOT SLEEP

any; the only rest she has is when entranced. In this respect her symptoms have not changed. Without any effort on her part, in the midst of her work or writing, they come upon her, and invariably at her accustomed hour.

While we were near her she was thrown into the trance state, and for more than ten minutes was rigid and unconscious, and, as far as we could tell, painless. Her awakening was signified by a movement with her left hand.

THE ASSERTION

has often been made that she was a tool for designing persons, and that money was the motive. This is false in every respect. The family are in comfortable circumstances, far above want; and even were they destitute, money could not be made out of this child. The presence of unwelcome strangers, who, for mere curiosity, could find it in their hearts to pay for a sight of her, would throw her into convulsions. Were it not for the tender, watchful care of aunt, brother, and physicians, she could not survive. Even an hour passed in the presence of visitors exhausts her, and it is not probable that she will ever be exposed to the momentary gaze of any but those who by reason of a past friendship find it their great privilege to converse with one who is scarcely of this earth.

SO SPIRITUAL

is her nature that she lives almost altogether in the realms of the beyond, and perceives with her unsealed spirit-eyes the forms of those who are dead to us. Yet she is not wholly absorbed in this happiness; hers is a strong, loving nature, and gifted with a self-denial and patience remarkable under the most favorable circumstances.

SHE HAS USED,

in making afghans, nubias, and crochet work, three thousand ounces of worsted, and forty thousand beads. Aside from this she has constructed a large quantity of wax flowers and other fancy articles. The most remarkable of her work are the leaves she has cut. They are clipped with the precision and regularity of machine work, are usually cut from velvet, and are then veined with white silk thread. A pincushion of white and pink satin, ornamented with these leaves and pearl beads, and adorned on the top with a diminutive slipper attached to the cushion, and trimmed with the leaves, is the handsomest article of its kind we have ever seen. She crochets and knits with the greatest rapidity, and most beautifully, all manner of shawls, baby sacques, and stockings, and embroiders on canvas with more skill than any person in health could do.

Her patience is as wonderful as her taste is faultless, and in the artistic blending of shades and colors she has no superior. Were it not for her shrinking timidity she might make this talent a source of revenue to herself, and the profits arising from the sale of such handicraft would tend to relieve her mind of the regret she has that she is a care to her aunt.

IT IS NOT ALWAYS

that she can amuse herself with her work; much of the time she lies motionless and silent. In warm weather she is not so comfortable as in winter, and the thunder and lightning affect her keenly. The noise of a door shut loudly startles her, and any atmospheric change is predicted before it occurs, and generally causes her to tremble violently.

IT IS NATURAL

that the great majority of the busy outside world should deny the almost supernatural powers of this person; reasonable that they should judge of the conditions and gifts of others by their own weights and measures, but it is shameful to impugn the veracity of the many who have testified to her mental and physical powers.

SHE IS A CLAIRVOYANT, is gifted at times with a marvelous power of reading sealed letters, of foretelling events, of predicting the coming of persons, and of describing the personal appearance of individuals she has never seen.

In the years to come, when science shall have superseded superstition, and common sense illuminated religion, the case will be understood and explained. To those who have the mind to see and perceive great truths, she is an interesting study, proving beyond a doubt, the existence of mind independent of matter.

WHAT THAT CHILD

sees, and hears, and experiences, it is impossible to know. Her spirit is not able to commune with the outer world clearly, confined as it is to her body, and yet it is nevertheless so much stronger than the material that she cannot control its action. When in a trance it is with the beings of another sphere, and when by herself in a room out of life it is recalled, and she is cognisant of what is going on around her, the body is capable of much mental exercise.

She is the least material of any living human being, and her spiritual perceptions are therefore clearer and more distinct. What is dormant in others is intensely developed in her, and the veil that separates the visible and the invisible world has been rent by her partially enfranchised spirit.

Though she is hopelessly blind, she yet possesses the faculty of sight, and as an instance of her quickness of perception, a chair was about being moved by a visitor, which was broken, when she showed signs of alarm, and by her motions and efforts to speak, called the attention of her aunt to the fact. Then the aunt remembered that it had been broken only a day or two before.

HER FEELINGS

are acute, and she is alive to the contradictory views held by physicians in regard to her case; yet she is hopeful and at times happy, though she has had heavy sorrows to bear apart from her physical sufferings. She recognizes the fact that her misfortunes have fitted her for the perfect bliss of a higher life, and she longs with intense desire for the change that in the twinkling of an eye shall release her from the body, and render transformed the deformed.

AND SHE IS

a warning to others, and her condition should be a lesson to those who would urge forward immature children. Perhaps a long life of usefulness would have been the portion of this poor child, but for the mistaken ideas of her teachers and others. She was gifted with great talent, and the cultivation was continued long after the inroads of disease had unfitted her for any kind of effort, and most of all for mental work. She erred through ignorance then, and the world is guilty of the same weakness to-day in denying her the possession of the same mind she was once applauded for developing. Her body is a distorted thing, the victim of her too powerful intellect. The one is all but dead to use; the other is strong and clear, and rapidly unfolding for another existence beyond the confines of this world.

Mrs. H. M. Shaw.

BRO. JONES:—Allow me to introduce to the notice of your readers Mrs. H. M. Shaw, a trance lecturer who has been for [illegible] months lecturing at various points in this state with acceptance to the people. I have attended seven of her lectures in this place, and am happy to affirm that the character of those discourses were adapted to the condition of the mental audiditment of the people. The controlling influence seems to understand what is most needful in a community, and she is used to meet those needs. While on the rostrum, and under control, her manner is prepossessing, her enunciation clear, and her delivery pleasing. Under her personal appearance is attractive; all combining to make her a most interesting and impressive. Her appointments seem to be directed by her invisible guides, while entranced. Her field of work seems to be widening since she has given herself up to the control. Her lectures, so far as I have noticed, are well calculated to elicit the consideration of those who have not investigated the phenomena of Spiritualism. It seems highly proper that her mediumistic powers should receive a more public notice than for merly. Her guides are disposed to put her forwards, and to give an increasement to further the purposes of the spirit world in removing erroneous views in church and in state. Her home address of Mrs. Shaw is "Chicago, Ill." At present she is in the Western Reserve, and at points nearer the capital of our state. She is to be present at a Grove Meeting near Cardington, on Saturday and Sunday, the 9 h and 10th of September, at which point letters will reach her at that time, or from there can be forwarded to her future address. T. M. E.

Cardington, Ohio, Aug. 23d, 1871.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

THE LAWS OF SPIRIT COMMUNION.

By D. F. Kayner, M. D.

Spirits not only approach and in fill with their magnetic aura, so as to move upon ponderable solid bodies, or to make concussions in the presence of suitable mediums, as we have seen in a former article, but also under certain conditions come en rapport with the nerve aura of the medium, and concentrating their will power upon certain molecules of the brain and their specific nerves of motion, the hand of the medium is by them controlled, independent of the consciousness of the medium, and made to write what the spirit controlling desires.

Under other circumstances the vocal organs, with their attendant nerves and molecules, are controlled to utter what the spirit controlling desired to say. This may be done without the consciousness of the medium, as the controlling spirit may for the time being have taken entire possession of the organs of the medium, through which the intelligence of the in-dwelling spirit takes cognisance of the actions of its physical structure; or may be conscious of the control, and be as the Scotlish poet has expressed it, "A chiel among them takin' notes."

In July, 1866 while speaking in the hall at the Mechanics Institute in Cincinnati, O., I had a remarkable experience of this kind. The control was surveying the deep recesses of Nature's unfoldings, tracing the law of evolution, and showing how from combinations of the inferior and their recombinations with new forces or influences, a superior was evolved or unfolded; while I seemed to myself to stand about four feet back of the speaker, taking notes as a reporter of the discourse. Here was a consciousness of a double consciousness—a knowledge that while my physical organs of speech were active and influenced under control to work out the problems in the deep researches of metaphysical science, and imparting the result of the investigations intelligently to the audience, my own spirit was an interested listener to the discourse. In this case a part of the molecules of the brain were evidently under the complete influence of the control delivering the address, while those through which the spirit would act to listen, criticise, and report the discourse, were left free to act.

The mind acting through the physical brain sees physical objects because they are reflected through the brain, or as they are photographed upon the retina, and hence when the molecules acting in concert with the optic nerves and physical apparatus of vision in any way become impaired or deranged, the true reflection of the object becomes correspondingly deranged, and, in case of dropsy of the brain, objects are reflected double, and, in delirium tremens they are distorted into serpents, devils and hideous forms. This is not imagination, but a derangement of the instrument through which the diseased is telegraphed, and gives to the mind an inverted, double or distorted image corresponding therewith. In a psychological subject the will of the operator takes control of the brain magnets of the subject, and controls or perverts their functions to suit his own mind. The operator, in this case, acts on the brain, something as chloroform acts upon the brain, to produce anæsthesia. We hold that the only way chloroform acts to prevent pain is by suspending the connection between the nerves of sensation and the psychical centers, as the ground wire along a telegraph line. The body suffers just as much from the shock, but the mind is as free from its effect as the memory is of the spirit's doings in a superintended dream.

Again, a mesmerizer takes control of a medium, as the leader of a band, and for the time holds them in an unconscious state, so far as the external is concerned, and then not only holds control, but takes cognisance of the thoughts and ideas of other disembodied spirits, and imparts their thoughts to those with whom they desire to communicate, or aids them in the control of the instrument to express their own thoughts and ideas. The knowledge of the laws of control and their own abilities will enable them to express them through that medium; but also, many times, will enter into sympathetic relations with those in the form, and impart to them such information it is important for them to know.

In this state, the medium's brain is in the same condition it sustains to the physical world in a clairvoyant state, but instead of the medium's own spirit's mind that sees and holds control of the brain-magnets, and hence, to all intents and purposes, is again "made man fast in the flesh."

But, suppose now that the spirit controlling was while in the form highly intelligent, and cultured and refined, and the medium is illiterate and unrefined, can the control under all circumstances manifest the great scholastic talents it would have exhibited while in the form in physical body? To this answer that the brain, molded first by ante natal conditions beyond our control into certain natural proclivities, is developed by after influences, modified to a greater or less extent, by those inherited tendencies, and by social and physical surroundings and educational influences becomes shaped or unfolded. The brain must be attuned to certain actions or vibrations to give expression or form to thoughts, and ideas, and ideas to ideas. Without this culture, it can not give them that rhythmical expression or graceful polish that proper conditions and education would impart. Just so with spirit control. The communicating intelligence can not at all times so operate upon the molecules of the brain-magnets as to express in the most eloquent and grammatical manner the thought it desires to communicate, and yet will use the instrument to so express it to the every candid and unprejudiced mind of the truth of what it says.

It would be just as reasonable to ask an unlettered individual to explain the rules of grammar or to solve the problem of Euclid as for such a spirit to control an uneducated brain in every direction in a perfect manner. And yet, profound truths are uttered through these comparatively ignorant, and, in the direction of the natural aptitudes of the mind and brain of the medium, the most remarkable proficiency is manifested, as in the case of that wonderful musical precocious, Blind Tom.

Such spirits, where conditions are made favorable, can educate their mediums, and so act upon and through the brain as ultimately to give utterance to the highest thoughts in the sublimest manner. And this we consider the highest and most conspicuous mission in life—that the mind shall be educated in this manner, and raised into an individual knowledge and comprehension of those sub-[illegible] the spirit control, [illegible] the vision through [illegible] using the physical [illegible] and their surroundings of those with whom they communicate. But being that brain continuously, ultimately acts in motion the magnetic molecules of the different organs acted upon and through, and hence is made in some degree able to the entire, natural conditions of the spirit-control. This is one mode of educating mediums, and where there is a natural clairvoyant state it is not a very difficult task to complete the development.

These laws and principles of clairvoyance will form the subject of a future chapter.

St. Charles, Ill., Aug. 26th, 1871.

Voices from the People.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—S. W. Parker writes.—I notice comments on Mr. Francis' "Search after God," by many of your readers. Some seem to have found Him, and others seem afraid of losing the little of Him they appear to have. Now we think a God so easily lost need not be missed very much. I have found a God without any long continued search,—one that answers my purpose very well. I regard the sum of all intelligence—intelligence—in the form or out—as our Heavenly Deity, from the wisest sage to the simplest child—each being parts, even as a single grain of sand is a constituent of the seashore. All are in God, and God in all. Now it is "on this line" that I found my God. Standing on the other side of the River of Life, is a sweet little angel child, who is reaching out her arms and calling great'pa. To say that I loved that child, will but poorly express my feelings. I worshiped her as my idol my god,—and cold-hearted, savage old theology told me it was wicked to worship my little pet. Well, if this was sin, I knew that I should be a great sinner as long as memory lasted. But intuition, or something else told me in less time than it takes to write it, that she was in that I should worship; and so when a strange man resides with God and will not let him go, even so I prayed to that little child for some token of her spirit presence; nor was the prayer in vain, for in response to this great longing of my soul came the most blessed answer, patent to my physical senses, and her little hands daily strive to brush care away from my aching brow. Verily, I have a God who can and does answer prayer, and am not afraid of losing that God.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA.—Jacob Simpson writes.—Did not receive the JOURNAL of July 1st—if you have any copies of that date, please send one along, for we want to read them all, as we take more comfort in reading the JOURNAL than all the other papers we have seen; it is by far the best paper we ever read, and may the good God and the Saviour bless her God, and the good spirits of this world and the world which is to come, assist you now and forever.

TROY, WIS.—Prof. Kellett writes.—Have been a careful reader of the JOURNAL for several months and have been much gratified by the talent and ability displayed in the various departments. The theories advanced and principles advocated in its columns from time to time, I have most cheerfully given my entire approval. Have been much interested in the "Search after God," and await the finale with the same impatience that the inveterate reader of serial fiction awaits the concluding chapter, "to see what the end is." My profession calls me into various parts of the country, and on every hand I find men "coming to a knowledge of themselves," not being any longer willing to accept as truth all that orthodoxy teaches, but desirous to know for themselves, to prove all things and hold fast only that which is good. Whilst visiting in this town, I made the acquaintance of Mrs. Major Meacham. She is a lady some forty years of age, of bright intellectual powers, and with all her faculties in a surprising state of preservation She is literally out of us, and a few hours spent in listening to her eloquent advocacy of the principles of belief, passed swiftly and profitably away. She is a thorough progressionist, and is doing a good work in quietly yet intelligently propagating the principles which shall aid us in attaining a higher attitude on the platform of human progression. I have pleasure in thus publishing tribute to her worth and usefulness. Mrs. Smith, of Chicago, a lady of high culture and intelligence, was visiting Mrs. Meacham, and was induced to speak in public, my visit was doubly interesting. Mr. Stevens is doing a good work in this district, and is, in short, the man for the times. In my journeyings I usually embrace every opportunity of expounding, both publicly and privately, those ideas and truths which have become the pole stars of our being, and have been received to see the lively interest which men evince in our propositions and arguments. Shall expect myself to send you some more valuable paper to all homes wherein it is yet a stranger.

MIDDLEBURY, VT.—J. H. Steele writes.—We can not do without the JOURNAL, "your bible," as we say. We are surrounded by the orthodoxy, and my business and family relations are such that I am in justice to myself, let my light shine as it ought to. And as the JOURNAL is the paper to do it, is scarcely a phase of spirit manifestations of which we have not seen something. God bless you, and the good work in which you are engaged.

WATERLOO, IOWA:—H. F. Homer writes.—I see that my subscription is more than three months in arrears. Enclosed find $3 for the same, all the orthodox people of this section to read it, and after having, am going around to introduce it to many old fogy church members, and see if I can not stir them up with a long pole, to take the hell-fire and brimstone out of them.

MILLWOOD, OH'O.—H. Wilson writes.—The glorious JOURNAL has been the bold pioneer that has opened the way of progress to our souls in this isolated locality, coming here to unbelievers a few years ago, but now we have several out-spoken Spiritualists, which is owing to your able paper, and to medians whose names are as a tidy to food. The Sherman brothers have been here, giving us some wonderful tests, such as describing spirits and giving traits of character.

EAU CLAIRE, WIS.—B. Chamberlain writes.—You will find two dollars inclosed, which you will apply to my credit. You can continue sending the JOURNAL as before. I like your liberal teachings, most of them—have been a Thomas Paine man for many years, consequently that "Search after God" don't square with my ideas, it go on No grumbling—if Friend Francis will show me the end of space I will show him that old gent he is looking for. We are look to comprehend either. If man created all things, who created man. The starting is the point we would like to know. The assertion that Nature's laws always existed, is no proof to me that we see in Nature, Nature's God. So I be considering, I will drive the right of ownership to all liber-ls, hoping you may drive old theology out of existence.

APPLETON, WIS.—George Knowles writes.—I made up my mind a while ago to stop taking the JOURNAL, but after a short summing up, saw how much I had learned from it, and that a great deal would be lost from discontinuing it, so resolved to let you trust me a little longer for the balance due, and make it up another time. That time has come, and please find inclosed money order for five dollars, to put to my credit for renewal of subscription.

The sober second thought came from your higher faculties. The first determination was from the selfish plane, which invariably tries to starve the soul. Thus there is a daily warfare going on with almost every one. The first thought upon all higher subjects is bad. The first thought [illegible] selfish plane should never be [illegible] worked by the me[illegible]

Your first conclu[illegible]

ADONIRAM PODGE.

Adoniram Podge was lank and lean
As a withered up stalk of corn:
And his face was solemn as ever was seen
Since the days when Adam was born.
He lived on a farm on the edge of the town,
And he managed to keep on his legs
By hoarding up money and eating it down
When he sold his butter and eggs.

His face was long as a piece of chalk,
And his eyes were little and gray;
And he backed when he opened his mouth to talk,
And twitched in an awkward way.
His voice was sharp as a steel-spring trap,
And his head was minus of hair;
But he covered it up with an old fur cap
That his grandfather used to wear.

Adoniram Podge got a liberal price
For the truck that he took to town;
The top of his measure was always nice,
But shallower deeper down;
And the wood was straight on the top of the load,
And crooked all 'round below;
But the heavier part, on a rainy road,
Will always shake down, you know.

Adoniram's Bible was worn and old
From the usage that it had got;
But a piece of knowledge that never was told
Was whether he used it or not;
If so his memory served him wrong,
For no was not much of a doer
To the needy and friendly who came along
With the story that their were poor.

A capital man in church was Podge—
To groan when the minister prayed;
And he knew in a trade the collection dodge,
And how much money he paid:
And he had, in a frame, in his old front room,
Eight cents and neat by his wife,
A paper which stated a certain sum
Had made him a member for life.

Adoniram Podge kept a hired man,
And he fed him on cabbage and beans,
Which were by no means cooked up in an old tin pan
Along with some pig-weed greens;
And he made him work from the break of day
Till the sun took its final turn,
And docked him item of a quarter his pay,
That the savings might go to the church.

Adoniram finally died one night,
And left the farm to his son,
Who follows as near as one can might
In the course his father had run;
And to daily drive to the market town
With the meats and her sparkled legs,
And to hoards up money and sells it down
By selling his butter and eggs.

And he keeps the Bible, so worn and old,
And he reads it, without a doubt;
But the leaf containing the Rule of Gold
Is somehow or other torn out.
And printed are all the verses which speak
Most kindness of the Master dear,
And 'twixt its covers 'twere vain to seek
For a word of cheer to the poor.

WISCONSIN.

Grove Meeting at Reedsburg.

Reported for the Journal by Samuel Montross.

According to appointment, our Grove Meeting came off on the 26 h and 27th of August, with fine weather and fine results to our cause. It was a feast to all lovers of free speech on a free platform. A glance over the audience (such as few villages can boast of for frankness) showed with what pleasure the whole was received. A very large, promiscuous audience, yet not a clouded brow, a sneer, or curl of the lip, found a place in all that shady grove, which was very beautiful, for the hallowed spot was by strong and fair hands converted into a natural temple perfumed with flowers, printed into large letters of such mottoes as the following: "The Problem of the 19th Century," in curves and lines over the speakers' stand. "Let Us Have Truth," over the audience. "Death is Immortal Life," and "It Does Move",—all of which pointed directly to the object, of the meeting, for all of which we are indebted to the kindness of the villagers, among whom I would mention, Mr. and Mrs. Hillsrood and Mr. Worthy; the latter furnished and helped to put up planed boards for seats, as well as the mottoes; the former furnished the grounds, and all jointly, in heart and hand, worked to make the grove beautiful and comfortable,—all of which manifested the kindness of their natures, the more as they were not professed Spiritualists, for all of which they have our many thanks.

MORNING SESSION—FIRST DAY.

Bro. Higbee was appointed Chairman, and Miss Nettie Hazeltine, Secretary. The speakers as advertised, were J. O Barrett, of Wis., State Missionary, Dr. E. C. Dann, of Rockford, Ill., and Mrs. Mattie Hulett Parry, of Beloit, Wis. Saturday morning was devoted entirely to remarks and conference.

AFTERNOON SESSION

opened with conference, after which Mrs. Parry gave an interesting lecture on the necessity for a new religion, as a demand of the age, in accordance with its developing intelligence as progressing in arts, science, and religious experience; that as all these pursuits had traveled from vague ideas to practical uses, so would they continue to march upward and onward in spite of all opposition.

Adjourned till Sunday morning.

SUNDAY MORNING SESSION.

After conference, J. O. Barrett, who carries the interests of Wisconsin Spiritualism on his broad and able shoulders, gave a thrilling lecture from the motto over his head, "The Problem of the 19th Century," which flowed wave after wave over the audience, baptizing it into devotional feeling for the great, the noble, and the true. He showed conclusively that the grand problem of the age was to solve spirit communion, and he brought evidence to prove that it was spirit that communed with spirit whether in or out of a physical body, and that the communion of the living with the loved ones gone before, was the greatest of all earthly consolations.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

In the afternoon, Dr. Dann canvassed the objections to Spiritualism. He answered the accusations of critics and slanderers in such a masterly and humorous manner; his comparisons and illustrations were so well directed, that spiritual truths shone out in all their glowing beauty, while the objections seemed silly and frivolous if not contemptible, suggesting the audience into spells of admiration, devotion, and mirth.

He was followed by Mrs. Parry, whose text was, "Infidelity of the Ages." It was handled in a masterly manner, showing conclusively that the infidelity of one day was the fidelity and devotion of another in the discovery of science and progress in religion, and that the ruling churches never pardoned or sustained a solitary progressive step in the march of progress, from Moses to Moroa. It was not only [illegible] of infidelity, but it demolished the cavil, that through woman they have to shelter the ex[illegible]fossil antiquarians. It was gratifying to many of her sex, who never before heard a female lecture, to see her power to the highest.

The meeting was then adjourned, to meet in Kellogg & Wheeler's Hall, at 7: 30, P. M.

SUNDAY EVENING SESSION.

At the hour appointed the Hall was promptly filled, for it had been announced that Dr. Dann would speak of "The Nazarene—Who was he, What was he, Whence came his power?" And with all the boasted "love of Jesus" that I ever heard from an orthodox stand-point, I never heard so beautiful a description of his life, so enchanting, so lovely, so pure, so much to be admired. He said:

"Go back with me to the mountains of Judea. Seat yourselves on the ground at midnight in its stillness, and listen to the flap of the angel's wing as he comes to bring the glad tidings of great joy."

And thus he made us feel as though we were there, and following him through his teachings, his trials, and persecutions, to the cross, and seemingly heard the heavy hammer, in the strong hand of the soldier, strike the nails, driving them in his quivering flesh. He left him there, and then denounced the Atonement, as Christians explain it, to be one of the most productive engines or licences for wickedness that ever existed. Its injustice was illustrated by many parallels of punishing the innocent for the guilty.

I must not forget to say that the audience were delighted with the sweet music discoursed to them by Miss Nettie Hazeltine, her father, and sister, throughout the meeting.

Mrs. Parry gave an invocation and the meeting ended.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

The other Side of the Question.

In the JOURNAL of Aug. 19, is to be found a communication under the above title by M. L. S., in which the writer wishes to "offer a few thoughts in favor of the good book" we have been taught to love and reverence in our childhood—the book our dear mother loved. Now I would like to ask are we to consider ourselves bound to believe and support a theory or principle only because we were taught to love and reverence it in our childhood, or because our mothers loved it. M. L. S. say be governed by such a notion, but it will never do for the masses of the Spiritualists of our day. The great thinking class of humanity demand something greater. Undoubtedly our mothers believed and said many fine things; undoubtedly there was connected with their religious belief some grand and noble truths, but let us as rational and intelligent human beings, judge for ourselves the path which we shall walk, and let us continue to look forward instead of backward, for more light and more truth. Will M. L. S. please let us know how the world can improve in anything if all are to follow the ideas and notions which were given them in childhood.

Our writer then goes on to speak of the pure spiritual teachings of Jesus and his devoted Apostles, and of "the highest standard of morals which are found in the "good book," and further the writer says, "In the teachings of Jesus and his Apostles there is nothing which the most highly developed, refined, and intellectual Spiritualism of this age could object." Then may we be saved from the highly developed and refined Spiritualism of the age. We do not deny that in the history and doctrines of Jesus are found noble teachings, and there too, are found teachings, which, if followed, would sink man below the most degraded of humanity.

Jesus is represented as saying, "If any man come to me and hate not his father and mother and wife and children and brother and sister yea and his own life also he can not be my disciple.—Luke 14 26 Does M. L. S. call this pure spiritual teachings? Let us go a step further—1 John 3, 15, we find "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer." Then in order to be a disciple of Jesus, we must become a murderer—a high standard of morality indeed.

Furthermore, Jesus positively declares that he did not come to send peace on earth but a sword—Matt. 10 34. Surely this is not the doctrine of Spiritualism. There is no doctrine taught plainer by Jesus and his Apostles than Vicarious Atonement. (See Matt. 26 28.) And yet we are told that the intellectual Spiritualists of the age could not reject their teachings. Then the advanced Spiritualists should be classed with the most rank Orthodox.

"Why should Spiritualists fight against it." says M. L. S.—an easy question to ask, and an easy question to answer, for who that could be called human would not fight against wrong. Wrong should be opposed, wherever it is to be found; yes, if possible it should at once be totally destroyed, and give room for the more rapid advancement of truth, and truth should be as earnestly contended for,—let it come from where it may. J. C. S.

The Most Interesting Relic and Curiosity in the Christian World ever Discovered.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED

BY

THE AMERICAN ENGRAVING CO.,

40 & 42 Main St.,

BRIDGEWATER, CONN,

Price, $2.50.

A finely-executed Engraving,

THE ONLY TRUE LIKENESS

OF

Our Savior.

TAKEN

From one cut in an Emerald by command of Tiberius Cæsar and which was given from the Treasury of Constantinople, by the Emperor of the Turks to Pope Innocent VIII for the Redemption of his Brother, then a Captive to the Christians.

The following Extract in proof of the Authenticity of the above Portrait, is translated from the Latin contemporary Historians of the period:

"News to the Senate of Rome concerning JESUS CHRIST, in the days of Tiberius Cæsar the Emperor, as the governours of sundry provinces under the Senate and people of Rome used to advertise the Senate of such news as chanced in diverse countries.

"Publius Lentulus, being at that time president in Judea wrote an epistle to the Senate and people of Rome, the words whereof were these:

"There appeared in these our days a man of great virtue, named JESUS CHRIST, who is yet living amongst us, and of the Gentiles is accepted for a Prophet of Truth, but his own disciples called him the Son of God. He raiseth the dead and cureth all manner of diseases. A man of stature somewhat tall and comely, with a very reverend countenance, such as the beholders may both love and fear; his hair of the color of filbert full ripe, and plain almost down to his ears; but from the ears downward somewhat more orient, of a deeper color, with a certain resplendent in the midst of his head (doth a seam, or partition of his hair, after the manner of the Nazarites); his forehead very plain and smooth, his face without spot or wrinkle, beautified with a comely red; his nose and mouth so formed as nothing can be reprehended; his beard somewhat thick, agreeable in color to his hair, not of any great length, in the midst of an innocent and mature look; his eyes grey, clear, and quick. In reproving, he is terrible; in admonishing, courteous and full of speech; in speech, mixed with gravity. It cannot be remembered that he hath been seen to laugh, but rather to weep; a tall and straight body; his hands and arms delectable to behold; in speaking, very temperate, modest and wise. In fine, such shall be found the Son of Man, as far as the condition of humanity can receive the similitude of Divinity."

SEND CIRCULAR TO DR. E. SMITH, NORMAL,

New Books.

Dr. P. B. RANDOLPH'S WORKS.

DEALINGS WITH THE DEAD. The human soul, its migrations and its transmigrations; 268 pages, bound in cloth.

Price, 75cts., Postage, 12cts.

AFTER DEATH, OR DISEMBODIED MAN. The Location, Topography and Scenery of the Spiritual Universe; its Inhabitants, their Customs, Habits, Modes of existence; Sex after Death; Marriage in the World of Souls; The sin against the Holy Ghost, its fearful penalties, &c., &c. Being the Sequel to Dealings with the Dead.

Price, $1,00; Postage 8cts.

PRE-ADAMITE MAN, demonstrating the existence of the Human Race upon this Earth 100,000 years ago. Fourth Edition, well bound in cloth and containing over Four Hundred Pages.

Price, $1,25, Postage, 20cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 187 & 189, South Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

ARCANA OF SPIRITUALISM.

A MANUAL OF

SPIRITUAL SCIENCE AND PHILOSOPHY

By Hudson Tuttle.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR. PRICE $2.00; Postage 56c.

This work embodies the results of the author's researches and experience during the past twenty years, and is, without doubt, the most thorough presentation of the subject of Modern Spiritualism before the public.

Dealing, as it does, with a question in which the interest of all mankind is centered, it cannot fail to command universal attention.

While the experience of thousands will repudiate some of the conclusions the author arrives at, they will still be able to obtain much invaluable information from the book. It is a good book to place in the hands of every person who would know more of what it is that is making the world to new hopes and aspirations, and planting a tree of life beside every man's door.

 Price, $2.00; postage, 24 cents. For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE BIBLE IN THE BALANCE,

A Book for the Age and the Times,

and one that should be in the hands of every liberal man and woman in the land.

You want it for your own instruction, that you may be furnished with acknowledged authority to meet in argument of the theologian, historian, chronologist and scientific man with his own weapons.

It discusses the matter of Bible canons, versions, translations and revisions with ability, citing none but authors in the highest repute, and those that are above criticism.

The book is printed in excellent style, 12 mo., on new type and fine paper, with beautiful illustrations of the mounds and mound-relics of the Mississippi Valley

It is substantially bound in cloth and contains three hundred and twenty pages.

The interest felt in the work is so great that orders were received for nearly the whole of the first edition before it was published, one party alone having received orders for over three hundred copies.

Price, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

THE TRADE SUPPLIED.

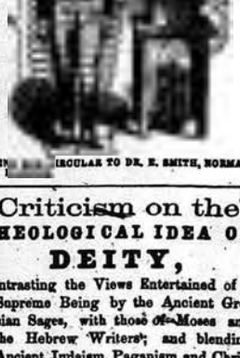
Address: RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

THE

Science of Evil;

OR

FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION.



BY JOEL MOODY.

THE SCIENCE OF EVIL is a book of radical and startling thought. It gives a connected and logical statement of the FIRST PRINCIPLES OF HUMAN ACTION, and clearly shows that without Evil there can be neither Morals, Science, Knowledge, or Human Action on earth. In fact, without Evil, man could not exist. This work fully solves the PROBLEM, and unveils the MYSTERY OF EVIL, giving it a scientific meaning, and shows it to be THE LEVER WHICH MOVES THE MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL WORLD.

The book is a large 12 mo., of 343 pages, printed from large, clear type, on fine, heavy paper. Price, $1,75; postage, 20 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 & 189 S. Clark St. Chicago.

The Great MAGNETIC CURE.

Criticism on the THEOLOGICAL IDEA OF DEITY,

Contrasting the Views Entertained of a Supreme Being by the Ancient Grecian Sages, with those of Moses and the Hebrew Writers; and blending Ancient Judaism, Paganism and Christianity into a Common Original.

BY M. B. CRAVEN.

12mo., 217 pages.—Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

A GREAT CHANCE FOR AGENTS. Do you want an agency, local or traveling, with an opportunity to make $5 to $20 a day selling our NEW AND NOVEL WORK? Or more Liberal Terms TO PERSONS sample free, so there is no risk. Address at once Stinson & Co. Portland, Maine, or 54 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

LIST OF LECTURERS.

[PUBLISHED EVERY OTHER WEEK.]

HEREAFTER we shall keep a standing register of such speakers as are furnished to us AT THE FOLLOWING INVARIABLE with a pledge on their part that they will keep us posted in regard to changes; and in addition to that, REPEATED INdicate a willingness to aid in the circulation of the Journal, both by words and pen.

Let us hear promptly from all who accept this proposition and we will do our part faithfully.

J. Madison Allen, Ancora, N. J.
C. Fannie Allyn, Stoneham, Mass.†
Adin L. Ballou Address Chelsea, care of RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.†
Dr. A. Davis Versailles, N. Y.†
Dr. J. K. Bailey, box 294 Logansport Ind.*†
Rev. J. O. Barrett, Glen Beulah, Wisconsin.
Mrs. A. P. Brown, 4 J. ... Cedar, Ill.†
Dr. Wm. B. Brown, ... Madison st Chicago.†
Eli F. Brown, Richmond, Ind.
Miss Susie A. Brown ... Washington St., Chicago.†
Henry A. Cleach, Spring Valley, N. Y
W. H. Bancroft, Madison, Wis.†
Mrs. Estella Chamberlain, Medford, Minnesota.†
Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Calkins, Green Garden, Ill.††
H. F. Child, M. D., 634 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.*
Mrs. A. H. Colby Winchester, Randolph Co., Ind.†
F. B. Dowd, Rochester, Davesport, Iowa.*
Lewis F. Demmings Address care of the Journal.*
Dr. Cleveland, 511 Wabash Ave.
John Cowen, Five Corners, N. Y.
Andrew Jackson Davis, Orange, N. J.
Levi Dickerson, Box 299 Decatur, Ill. †
Dan T. Edwards, Outer Creek, Mo. ‡ ♀
Mrs. M. A. Ellis, Indianapolis, Ind. *
Mrs. Dana Forster, care Banner of Light, Boston. ♀
Rev. J. Francis, Ogansburg, N. Y.
H. H. Garretson, Richland, Iowa.*
Mrs. E. A. Gibson, 13 Burroughs Place, Boston, Mass. ♀
R. Graves, Richmond, Ind.*
Miss Helen Grove, Bloomington, Ill.
Mrs. M. Hayden, Waterloo, Wis.†
Lyman C. Howe, Fredonia, N. Y. *
Joseph F. Hamilton, Sedalia, Iowa,
Thomas Harding, box 301, Sturgis, Mich.
Samuel S. Harman, Goshen, Ind.
U. A. Hamilton, Beloit, Wis.*
W. N. ...ridge, Great Valley, (Ca.) ♀
O. S. Haselton, Mazomanie, Wis. ♀
H. H. Houghton, Stowe, Vt. ♀
L. D. May ... A.*†
Mrs. S. O. Hoag, Mercere, Mich.
Mrs. F. O. Hyzer, Baltimore, M. D.
S. S. Jones, 189 S. Clark St. Chicago. ♀
Dr. P. T. Johnson, Ypsilanti Mich.* ♀
D. P. Kayner, W. D. ... Co. Ia. ‡ ♀
Mrs. M. M. King, Hammonton, N. J.*
L. Lewis, Vaupersin, Ind.
P. E. Lawrence, Ottumwa, Iowa.*♀
Geo. W. Lent, 8s on Rapids, Mich.*
Wm. F. Lyon, 206 S. Clark St., Chicago.*
O. S. Lent, Pine Island, Minn. ♀
Mrs. F. A. Logan, Geneseo, Wis.
J. Mansfield, Cortland, Ohio.*†
F. O Matthews, Fond du Lac, Wis. ♀
Mrs. M. M. Macomber, Vineland, N. J.*
L. Lewis, Vaupersin, Ind.
P. E. Lawrence, Ottumwa, Iowa.*♀
Geo. W. Lent, Su on Rapids, Mich.*
Wm. F. Lyon, 206 S. Clark St., Chicago.*
O. S. Lent, Pine Island, Minn. ♀
Mrs. F. A. Logan, Geneseo, Wis.
J. Mansfield, Cortland, Ohio.*†
F. O Matthews, Fond du Lac, Wis. ♀
Mrs. M. M. Macomber, Vineland, N. J.*
J. S. Mansfield, Vancouver, Washington Territory.
Mrs. S. A. Pearsall, Disco, Mich.*
Mrs. M. J. Quinby, St. Louis, Mo. ††
Dr. S. Perkins, Ken sa City, Mo.
Harriet N Pope, Sycamore, Illin.*
Isaac P. Ayres, Woodhull, Ill. ♀
Thos. S. A. Pope, Mound City, Kansas. ♀
M. S. R. ... Peavey, Secord, Wis. †
J. H. Rouse, Cleary, Ill.
Mrs. S. A. Rogers. Address in care of A. J. Grover, Rock Island, Ill.*
Russell Smith, Rockford Ill.*
Warren Smith, Alexandria, Madison Co., Ind.
Job Smyth, Hallsport, N Y.
Mrs. Mary Landon Stacy, Washington, D. C. ♀
Mrs. J. H. Stillman severance, M.D., Milwaukee Wis.††
Mrs. Laura Cuppy Smith, care of the office, Chicago,
H. W. Sharpless, Historian, chronologist and scientific man with his own weapons.
It discusses the matter of Bible canons, versions, translations and revisions with ability, citing none but authors in the highest repute, and those that are above criticism.
Mrs. L. A. F. Swain, Union Lake, Rice Co., Minn
D. G. Shryock, Lawrence, Kansas. †
Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon.
Mrs. Benjamin Todd, Portland, Oregon.*
Mrs. Sarah E. Thompson, Cleveland, Ohio. *
M. H. Tuttle, Lake Mills.
Mrs. E. B. T. Trego, Oil City, Pa††
J. B. Tuttle, Farmington, Ill. ♀
Hudson Tuttle, Berlin Heights, O.*†
Dr. Samuel Underhill, Tonica, Ill.*
J. William Van Namee, Elmira, N. Y. †
Mrs. M. J. F. Wheeler, Care of Journal, Chicago, Ill.*
Mrs. C. W. Keeson S. Jose, Cal. to Sep. Ohio. *††
B. V. Wilson, Lombard, Ill ‡
A. E. Watkins, Albion, Mich. *†
Elijah Woodworth, Leslie, Mich.
Dr. E. B. Wheelock, Pleasanton, Kansas.

* Inspirational.
† Trance.
‡ Clairvoyant.
♀ Missionary.
§ Solemnizing Marriages and Attending Funerals.

THE FUTURE LIFE

As Described and Portrayed by Spirits

Through Mrs. Elizabeth Sweet.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY

JUDGE J. W. EDMONDS.

CONTENTS.

Chapter I.—The Holy City.
Chapter II.—Spiritual Message.
Chapter III.—The Spirit Echo.
Chapter IV.—Powers and responsibilities of Mind
Chapter V.—Communion of the Spirit.
Chapter VI. Spirit-life.
Chapter VII.—A picture of the Future.
Chapter VIII.—Margaret Fuller.
Chapter IX.—Reasonable Words.
Chapter X.—Interview with Pollock.
Chapter XI.—New Desires.
Chapter XII.—John C. Calhoun.
Chapter XIII.—Interview with Webster.
Chapter XIV.—A Second Visit.
Chapter XV.—Another interview.
Chapter XVI.—Reformation.
Chapter XVII.—The Path of Progression.
Chapter XVIII.—Valley of the Shadow of Death
Chapter XIX.—A Mirror.
Chapter XX.—The Book of Life.
Chapter XXI.—A Beautiful Lesson
Chapter XXII.—Retrospection.
Chapter XXIII.—The Mechanic.
Chapter XXIV.—The Preacher.
Chapter XXV.—Reception of Spiritualism.
Chapter XXVI.—The Drunkard.
Chapter XXVII.—The Organ-Boy
Chapter XXVIII.—The Man of Ease and Fashion.
Chapter XXIX.—The Self Satisfied.
Chapter XXX.—Natural Development of the Soul.
Chapter XXXI.—Voltaire and Wolsey.
Chapter XXXII.—The Cynic.
Chapter XXXIII.—The Second Birth.
Chapter XXXIV.—The Slave.
Chapter XXXV.—The Queen.
Chapter XXXVI.—A Scene in Spirit-Land.
Chapter XXXVII.—The Miser.
Chapter XXXVIII.—Spiritual Influence.
Chapter XXXIX.—The New City.
Chapter XL.—The Erring One.
Chapter XLI.—The Miser.
Chapter XLII.—The Beggar.
Chapter XLIII.—Insignificance of Man.
Chapter XLIV.—Capabilities of the soul,
Chapter XLV.—The skeptic.
Chapter XLVI.—Realities of Spirit-Life
Chapter XLVII.—The Convict.
Chapter XLVIII.—The Soul's Ascension.
Chapter XLIX.—The Dying Girl.
Chapter L.—The Lower Temple.
Chapter LI.—The Foolish Mother.
Chapter LII.—The Disobedient Son.
Chapter LIII.—Cardinal Richelieu.
Chapter LIV.—Practical Nature of Spirit-Life
Chapter LV.—Glimpses of a Higher Life.
Chapter LVI.—Communication.
Chapter LVII.—A Word from Voltaire.
Chapter LVIII.—Home of Unhappy Spirits.
Chapter LIX.—Experience of Voltaire.
Appendix.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.
For sale at this office.

A BOOK FOR EVERY HOUSEHOLD

The Chester Family,

OR

The Curse of the Drunkard's

APPETITE.

BY JULIA M. FRIEND.

Moderate Drinking is the Source of all Drunkenness

The authoress has given her life, for twelve years as a CLAIRVOYANT PHYSICIAN, to the healing of disease The various incidents of the story are taken from real life, with but a slight coloring of fiction.

Price, $1,00, Postage, 16cts.

For sale at the Office of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, 187 & 189, South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

Health by Good Living.

BY W. W. HALL, M. D.,

Editor of Hall's "Journal of Health."

THIS book is to show how high health can be maintained at common diseases cured by "good living," which means eating with a relish the best food, prepared in the best manner.

The best food includes meats, fish, poultry, wild game fruits, and the grains which make bread.

The best cookery preserves the natural tastes and juices.

As there can be no "good living" without a good appetite, how to get this great blessing without money and without price, is pointed out, and, it is hoped, in very clear and plain terms.

Some of the subjects treated are:—

The object of eating: Power to work: Early breakfast: Dinner-time: Luncheon: Eating "down town:" What shall a man do? What shall fat men eat? How to get fat: Bad blood: Diet for the sick: Spring diseases: Children: Feeding: Forcing children to eat: Young ladies' eating: Cold feet and headache: Biliousness: A lazy liver: Mischievous toxics: The outdoor air: Why are we dispeptic? Dinner after eating: Cole slaw: Certain cure of neuralgia: Nervous debility: Air and exercise: Food cure, etc., etc.

How to cure

How to cure dyspepsia: How to cure neuralgia: How to cure biliousness: How to cure nervousness: How to cure exhaustion: How to get a good appetite: How to get lean. How to get good sleep: How to maintain high health. How to avoid disease and all these without medicine: without money; without price.

How to talk about

Luncheons and how to take them: Late dinners and how to take them: How drunkards are made at eating-houses: How girls are spoiled at boarding-schools: How health is lost: How home love is lost: How nerve reading ruins them: How love of dress is instilled: How young men are talked about: How bad matches are made: How good wives are made at home: How home influences purify.

Price $1,50. Postage 16 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189, So. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Bible in India.

HINDOO ORIGIN OF

Hebrew and Christian Revelation.

TRANSLATED FROM

"LA BIBLE DANS L' INDE."

BY LOUIS JACOLLIOT.

EXTRACTS FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE:

"I come to show you humanity, after attaining the loftiest regions of speculative philosophy, of untrammeled reason on the venerable soil of India, what tranmeled and stifled by the altar that substituted for intellectual life a semi-brute existence of dreaming impotence.....

India is the world's cradle; hence it is that the common mother in sending forth her children even to the utmost west has, in satisfying testimony of our origin, bequeathed us the legacy of her language, her laws, her morals, her literature, and her religion.....

To religious despotism, imposing, speculative delusions, and class-legislation, may be attributed the decay of nations.....

.....Aware of the resentment I am provoking, I ye shrink not from the encounter.....We are no longer burnt at the stake."

 PRICE $2.00; postage 24 cents. For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago.

A REVELATION!!!

of the

EXTRAORDINARY VISITATION

of

SEPARTED SPIRITS!

Of Distinguished Men and Women of all Nations, as Manifested through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers."

The Spirits of WASHINGTON, FRANKLIN PENN, GIRARD, ST. PATRICK, NAPOLEON, JOHN WESLEY, BYRON, GEO. FOX

and Hosts of Celebrated Characters of the Past, who take Possession of and Discourse through the Living Bodies of the "Shakers," of New York, giving Wonderful Information respecting the Events of their Lifetime, and their Opinions of Present Criticisms concerning those Events, as well as their immediate Condition in the World of Spirits.

PRICE:—35 cts; postage, 2 cts. Liberal discount to the trade.

ADDRESS:—RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 187 an 189 S Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

THE

VOICE OF PRAYER,

A Poem by W. S. Barlow, Author of "The Voices."

This little poem is fully equal to any of Mr. Barlow's best efforts, and should be read by everybody.

Printed on fine tinted paper with blue line border. Price 20 cents; postage 2 cents.

 For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark St., Colcago.

Exeter Hall!

Exeter Hall!

HAVE YOU READ EXETER HALL

THE following are extracts from a few of the notices of Exeter Hall, the Theological Romance:—

"The plot and passion in Exeter Hall show an experienced hand in their delineation. Exeter Hall proves that the author has something to say and knows how to say it."—[Public Opinion, London, England.

"It is indeed a wonderful book."—[New York Mail.

"We commend it to the widest, popular approval."—[Banner of Light, Boston.

"We have no hesitation in declaring this a great work."—[Universe, New York.

"The book is well and powerfully written. * * * The most scorching work ever published in America since the 'Age of Reason.'"—[Liberal, Chicago.

"One of the most exciting romances of the day."—[Democrat's Magazine, New York.

"Convincingly illustrative of the errors of Theology."—[Investigator, Boston.

"The humane and charitable tendencies of the book must receive the approbation of every friend of humanity."—[Daily Telegraph, Toronto, Canada.

Price, 65 cents. Postage, 4 cents.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark st. Chicago.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE,

BY C. L. JAMES.

An exhaustive argument in favor of liberal divorce legislation. For sale by the author, Lochiston, Mo Post paid for 25 cents.

9,nl5-tf.

HOUSEHOLD MAGAZINE

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

Office 187 and 189 So. Clark Street.

Religio-Philosophical Publishing House.

☞All letters and communications should be addressed to S. S. JONES, 189 South Clark Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS OF THE

Religio-Philosophical Journal.

$3.00 per year, $1.50—6 months, $1.—3 mo.

☞Fifty cents for Three Months on Trial

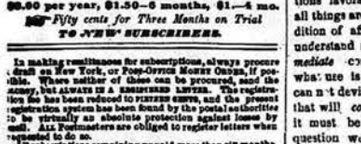
TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS.



In making remittances for subscriptions, always procure a draft on New York, or Post-Office Money Order, if possible. Where neither of these can be procured, send the money, but ALWAYS IN A REGISTERED LETTER. The registration fee has been reduced to FIFTEEN CENTS, and the present registration system has been found by the postal authorities to be virtually an absolute protection against losses by mail. All Postmasters are obliged to register letters when requested to do so.

All subscriptions remaining unpaid more than six months, will be charged at the rate of $3.50 per year.

PAPERS are forwarded until an explicit order is received by the Publisher for their discontinuance, and until payment of all arrearages is made, as required by law.

No names ENTERED on the subscription books without the first payment in advance.

SUBSCRIBERS are particularly requested to note the time of their subscriptions, and to forward what is due, with or without further reminder

...d stand thus: Smith J.—16 Dec.—0, or perhaps, to some easier, the last two figures for the year, as '70 for 1870, or '00 for 1900.

☞Transmitting money to this office for the JOURNAL should be careful to state whether it be a renewal, or a new subscription, and write all proper names plainly.

CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 16, 1871.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD.

NUMBER LVI.

God or no God—If God has Attributes like Man, why not Work like Him?—Immutable Law—Law Mixed with Omniscience, a Patent Nostrum—Reasonable Conclusions in Regard to Matter and God—The Law of Affinity—Re-absorption—Power of Man—The Spirit's Benediction.

It is now time that we commenced gradually summing up this grand question, and bringing our ideas to a focus. In our long and somewhat tedious search, we have unveiled many facts in connection with the Divine Architect of the Universe heretofore unknown, and given a new impetus to thought among the people. Not aspiring to leadership, not wishing to be deemed dogmatical in the assertions we have made in reference to Deity, we have quietly pursued the even tenor of our way, presenting the ideas as given us from time to time, and we verily believe that the world has been made better thereby. Having failed as yet to present our readers with a God to worship, it may be well for us to pause and consider the situation in which we have placed humanity. To-day, amidst the grand achievements in literature, science and art, is it possible there is no God to whom humanity can reverentially bow? No Deity! No Architect that has charge of the moving, pulsating heavens! No God that superintends the growth and development of worlds! No God that numbers the hairs of our head and notices the little sparrows that fall to the ground! No God that controls the lightning, the thunder, the hurricane, the atmosphere, the development of animal life on each planet! No God to build up and tear down; to aggregate and disintegrate! Amidst the grandeur of the nineteenth century, when the artist's pencil and brush, the ingenious devices of the mechanic, the wonderful skill of the sculptor, architect, and engineer, are adding so much that is useful and ornamental to the world,—is there no God? Stay thy cruel hand! Back, Iconoclastic Spirit,—touch not the teachings of the sacred divine, or try to brush away the cobwebs of antiquity! Back! the cry is heard that you are an atheist, a vile innovator, and with a ruthless hand, an avenging nature, a heartless desire, are dashing to pieces all the idols of creation! The old and gray, the venerable man in his vestry cloak or the pulpit garb frowns upon you, and 61,000 voices, from as many steepled buildings, curse you! Away, then! Why venture here to this lower sphere among the children of earth, where in carpeted churches men and women and children bow to a god! Oh! Iconoclastic Spirit, deprive the world of a God, would you? Look around you. See that half-starved woman on bended knees; tears are in her eyes, and an expression of sorrow glistens on her features, indicating a storm within her soul! Her hands are clasped, her eyes look heavenward—how devout, how earnest, how sad in appearance! Why, her fingers are worn nearly to the bone—she is a "needle woman"—she makes shirts for ten cents apiece for an up-town merchant. Ah, how earnest her prayers!—she asks relief from her suffering, her daily toil. That merchant's coffers are full, made so by the sighs and moans, the flesh and blood of a hundred like her. He lives in a palatial residence. It is made from the hearts and bones of human beings, and from it comes in solemn accents their suffering, their agony, their privations! Would you, O spirit, deprive those suffering ones of a God? Gaze at them,—at the pale, wan cheek, fingers worn to the bone, famished bodies and suffering spirit—gaze at the spectacle—then visit the house that up-town merchant has built—place yourself in rapport with it, and hear the agonizing cries that come forth—yes, no need of a God! Would you inculcate such views, introduce such damnable doctrines as this—no God?

But now, then, reader, listen! Would we deprive the world of a God! You would chide us for being so iconoclastic, and point to the millions who are suffering all the agonies of a horrible life! We would not blame you. But a God who possesses the attributes that you claim, and having eternally existed, is very slow to introduce reformatory measures among his people, and if such a character does exist, it is very doubtful in our mind whether he should be worshiped or not. A God who possesses omniscience and all power, could make conditions favorable for humanity's happiness. If all things are ascribed to him, the present condition of affairs he is responsible for. Now, understand me—if all power can not induce immediate conditions for man's happiness, of what use is it to any being? If omniscience can not devise, plan, or arrange a system of life that will constantly redound to man's happiness it must be a useless attribute. Ponder this question well. The conditions of affairs on earth are a direct contradiction of the oft-repeated assertion that there is a being who is omniscient and all powerful, who created all things, and governs all things.

On all sides is sorrow—the widow's cry and orphan's moans constantly greet us, and in suffering, especially, the attention is always turned heavenward. On the mountain wave—in that ship, tossed to and fro, there is the stalwart, iron-hearted captain and crew on their knees praying. What a horrible night! How black the skies! What thunders in the heavens! Glance at the chain-lightning,—at the moving, threatening clouds! What avails their prayers? The winds in mockery still blow! The waves, to deride them, still roll! The lightnings, to render the scene more dismal and heart-rending, move from cloud to cloud! Prayers are useless—the ship is struck with lightning, and all perish, the entreaty of the crew sounding off on the breeze in mockery of an all-wise, overruling Father. Is this an indication of an all-wise, all-powerful being? Perhaps you will say, yes! and assign as a reason, that he rules by law! Bosh! See that frail craft off on the lake. The winds are blowing fiercely, and the waves dash it to and fro. They run up a signal of distress, and a dozen boats push off from the shore to assist them. Infinite God could not save them—he works by law—but finite man, steps outside of law—does he, and saves them? Infinite attributes created man in accordance with law—you assert; then is not man a creature of law? If it would be going outside of law for God to quiet the storm, cage the lightning, silence the thunders, subdue the wind, and smooth the surface of the water, is it not an infringement of law, for man to try to save his brother man who is in immediate danger? An infinite God working in obedience to law, can not save! but finite man, does he step outside of law when he saves an unfortunate creature from distress? The moment you assign attributes to God similar to man, he can operate like him. To assert to the contrary is foolish in the extreme. Law—law, law! God works through the direct agency of law! Finite man the creature, then, of law, how does he operate? God, possessing omniscience and omnipotence, operates through the instrumentality of law; man, possessing finite wisdom, and finite power, can hear the heartrending appeals for assistance on the raging waters, or listen to the solicitations for aid that emanate from the garret or cold, damp cellar, and can devise means for assistance. If your God possessing omniscience and all power cannot do as much, it shows a contradiction of terms, and that his boasted sovereignty does not exist. Glancing at this subject in all its bearings, does it not show conclusively that such a being does not, can not, from the very nature of things, exist? To assert that he operates through the instrumentality of law, and in those operations countless millions are starving, does it not show a weakness, an inadequacy on the part of the law—boasted law! supreme law! infallible law! unchangeable law! law! law! Glance around you. Omniscience, O God, is your mind; omnipotence your support. Why trifle with humanity? Why sow a bed of thorns and thistles for them? Why strew broken glass to cut their feet? Why allow poor girls to make shirts for ten cents apiece? Why permit that woman to starve in that cold, cheerless, damp cellar? Why all this? Behind you, within you, all around you, you are encircled, it is said, by omniscience and omnipotence. Yet suffering exists. The very breeze echoes the sorrow of untold millions; and the walls of poor tenement houses groan with the pain of their inmates. Could law, perfect law, be instrumental in devising this? Impossible! Law under the direction of Omniscience should make all conditions of life subserve wise ends, and all should be contented and happy. Away with this idle talk! Law mixed with omniscience is a patent nostrum; it belongs to the days of superstition and ignorance; it is a relict of barbarism—of the churches; thousands have taken it—have drank it down; millions regale themselves in the presence of its imaginary atmosphere, and bend the knee in the presence of the imaginary being it envelops. Life has its conditions. If an infinite God, he could, and would, change them. But it is well there is not. From the very nature of things, an infinite, intelligent, all-powerful being is an impossibility. Why? As we have repeated before, if God in the fabrication, construction, or formation of a human being did not use matter and its laws exclusively, he used himself. If he used himself, how many finite beings would he make, and how soon would he be completely exhausted and disappear? If he used matter, which part of it is especially adapted to man building? If all of it, then the whole universe could be changed to sentient beings—an absurd proposition. That which proceeds from matter is a part and parcel of it—belongs to it, and the law of affinity will operate until it returns. What springs from matter that does not return to it and become a part and parcel of it? If man is a part and parcel of matter,—was eliminated from it by a God, he will return to it the same as all productions of the earth do. You cannot destroy the law. All that proceeds from the earth returns to it—becomes a part of it in some of its many multiform conditions. The law of affinity, is such that nothing can be retained from the material world. To suppose that man is an offshoot of matter, is only to admit his final absorption by it, and such would be the case. If man is an off-shoot from God the same law of affinity would rule, and eventually he would be re-absorbed by him. The physical organization only springs from matter, and that is re-absorbed by it eventually; but the germ of man eternally existed; the soul never grew, it was never generated; it comes in contact with matter, clothes itself with it, but gives back eventually all it obtains. Matter only loans to man its qualities; it claims all it gives; he can use it as long as the necessity of the case demands.

There is suffering on earth—heart-rending, cruel. The philanthropist; the kind, generous, and true of all classes have witnessed it with sorrow, but all conspire to make it. The wealthy must buy their goods cheap. The merchant in order to get them so, must extract the life blood from the poor sewing woman. But all this is a necessity, because there is no omniscient being to devise differently. Matter and its laws controlled by intelligences that have lived eons of ages, yes, through all eternity and who unite their energies in the spirit world to better the condition of humanity,—their wisdom is not omniscient. They operate successfully in proportion to their knowledge there the same as mortals here. They can learn wisdom only by experience. If man, possessing finite attributes, is compelled to learn wisdom by experience, reasoning from analogy, is not an infinite God, if one exists, compelled to do the same thing?

OUR GUIDE SPEAKS.

Ah, the voice comes that I am an atheistical spirit. A barrister at law on earth, and a devout Catholic, I went to spirit life, expecting to realize the teachings of those whose wisdom I reverenced. On all sides the Spirit World displayed its grandeur; new scenes greeted my vision; my mind became grandly illuminated, and I resolved to solve this question which I have been critically examining for over a year in this journal. Now, devoted to humanity, with a heart that beats in warm sympathy for the afflicted of all classes, I see none but spirits interested in their welfare. Would I destroy your belief in an infinite, intelligent personality or principal, if it would introduce discord into the world? Ah, could you glance at the work I have done for humanity, witness the seeds I have sown, the anxiety I have always manifested for the suffering ones of earth, you would not see one who is tearing down to ruin the prospects of mankind. How grand the machinery of the heavens! How sweet and melodious the music that emanates from the moving worlds around me! How wonderful the forces that elaborate from the negative matter of space a world! Puny child of earth, knowledge is power! And as one of earth's philosophers, standing in New York, could, with a battery no larger than a lady's thimble and a drop of water no larger than a tear, raise a piece of iron (the hammer to the battery) in England, and through the ticks thereof communicate his thoughts, so shall man, now on earth, in eons of ages, in quintillions of years, be able as easily to control the formation and development of nebulous matter in the heavens, and evolve a body similar to life earth therefrom. As the chemist in his laboratory can cause the miniature shower, generate a rain, imitate the flashing lightning, which is followed by thunder, when he shall have progressed sufficiently, so shall he be able to control those forces which operate in a like manner in our atmosphere. As man with an ounce of chemicals can move a dead weight of a hundred tons, by and by, as he advances on progression's ladder he will understand the nature of those forces that enable him to move a planet. With my vision clear, mind unclouded, and aspirations that yearn to serve humanity, I would unfold the true destiny of man, and while doing so, you, O child of earth, I would exhort to sow seeds of benevolence; assist the needy; wipe the tears from the eyes of the sorrowing; build asylums for orphans, the aged, the unfortunate. Ever remember that you will be blessed in proportion as you bless others, and that you cannot progress on a purely selfish plane. He who would try to advance in the Spirit World, to outstrip all others, not caring for their progress, will soon find himself powerless to move. While, then, we would banish all devils, all fictitious gods, all false notions in the minds of the people, we would diffuse in the world a grander idea of man's destiny. If that is atheism,—if my teachings will not make the world wiser, better, and adapt each one for his advent in spirit life, then I, too, will suffer untold agonies for what I have done.

HIS BENEDICTION.

With my eyes on the celestial glories of the higher sphere, I would invoke the presence of those wise sages whose minds are towering, and whose knowledge enables them to comprehend the machinery of creation. Invisible to me, as I am invisible to you, they move the forces of creation, as the spirits on my plane move and influence the minds of the children of earth. Before you, high and holy ones, whose garments are too bright for my eyes to behold, I would bow down, not as an abject slave, but as one who admires, venerates, and loves the purity, intelligence, and grandeur of your souls. Gaze, then, O holy ones, on the teeming millions of earth, and let thy blessings flow forth upon them.

[To be continued.]

☞We are in want of dues for the JOURNAL. When it is not convenient to pay all, let us have a part, as an earnest of a good will. Wake up! we are in earnest.

Intolerance Worse than Know Nothingism.

Know Nothingism in its day was calmly rejected by the people on account of its intolerant spirit and its subversion of the fundamental principles of our institutions. In its strenuous efforts to ostracise foreigners, it met with signal defeat, and to-day, no such party has an existence; yet it has broken out in a worse form in New York City, and exhibits a malignant character heretofore unknown. Its secret workings proclaim, "Only Irish Catholics shall hold office—Protestant Americans, stand back!" With the single exception of the Mayor, every department of the city is headed by or under the control of an Irish Catholic. The list is restricted to the high offices; no one disputes the fact that the inferior places are monopolized by Catholic Irish. There can not be less than 25,000 of these "Know Nothings" on the city and county pay-roll of New York, supported by the tax-payers, who are mainly Protestant natives and Germans. Here is the list of Roman Catholics holding the head offices at this time:

P. B. Sweeney, President Park Commissioners; Richard B. Connolly, Controller; Bernard Smyth, Receiver of Taxes; Richard O'Gorman, Corporation Counsel; James B. Nicholson, Commissioner of Charities; Owen W. Brennan, Commissioner of Charities; William Hitchman, President Fire Department; John H. Williams, President Board of Exchange; Mathew T. Brennan, Sheriff; Michael Connolly, Register; J. H. McCunn, Judge Superior Court; J. Brady, Judge Supreme Court; C. P. Daly, Judge Court Common Pleas; James M. Sweeney, Clerk Superior Court; L. Clancy, Clerk Marine Court; Thomas J. Barr, Police Commissioner; Robert C. Kutchings, surrogate; Richard O'Gorman, Pres. Com. Emigration; Thomas J. Creamer, Tax Commissioner; John Galvin, President Board Assistant Aldermen; Wm. H. Maloney, Clerk Board Assistant Aldermen; Thomas Cuman, President Board Aldermen; John J. Bradley, Chamberlain; Edward Hogan, Police Judge; E. J. Shandley, Police Judge, Thomas A. Ledwith, Police Judge; John McQuade, Police Judge; Dennis Quinn, Civil Judge; Thomas Kivlin, Civil Judge; Joseph McGuire, Civil Judge; Wm. J. Kane, Civil Judge; Bernard Smith, President Department Public Instruction; John Mulaly, Health Commissioner.

Not Unlike the Packard Case.

Many of our readers remember our report some five years ago of the facts of the Rev. Packard's imprisonment of his wife as a lunatic, under the iniquitous laws of this State (since repealed, through her exertions and the denunciations of this paper), for the reason, and only reason, that she successfully combatted his Calvinistic doctrines of infant damnation in particular, and endless hell torments in general.

Now we have before us the record of a case where a dutiful but sick wife went to a healing medium in the western part of this State for treatment, whereupon the husband (?) advertised her in the county paper as a "strayed or stolen crazy Spiritualist."

It is a long record of cruel wrongs which a pious orthodox devotee of old theology has for months perpetrated against a virtuous wife and mother, to vent his pious spleen against her because she is convinced of the truth of spirit communion and the power of intelligent physicians in the higher life to heal her of the diseases which he, the lawful husband, has brought upon her.

We refrain from publishing the record, in hopes that the couplet may be verified in this case,

"And while the lamp holds out to burn,
The vilest sinner may return."

The "Holey Gost."

The National Camp Meeting at Urbana, seems to have exalted one poor sinner to an extraordinary height. A letter without stamp and bold for postage at the Columbia office, is addressed to "Wm. P. Tomlinson the Lords anointed Just from Camp ful of the holey Gost and power to save." We presume the "holey Gost" alluded to would furnish the postage currency requisite to forward this letter, if informed of the fact. But why should not the "Lord's anointed" be allowed to "frank" their letters the same as members of Congress. But alas! the followers of the "holey Gost," in free America, are not allowed any more privileges, than those who follow any other kind of ghost, whether reliable or not. But we presume that the pious Wm. P. Tomlinson will be as much surprised when he receives the letter as the clergyman was at a recent wedding in Rhinebeck,—when he reached the part of the ceremony, "I pronounce you—," a fish peddler in the street shouted "bull heads! bull heads!" to the amusement of some and the consternation of others present on the occasion.

Spirit Power in Healing the Sick.

On the 30th of July last, Thomas Snape, of Sacramento, California, wrote to Mrs. A. H. Robinson (the celebrated medium, who treats the sick while she is under spirit control, in all parts of the world, by letter), requesting treatment of his mother for a severe case of sickness. He desired her to diagnose her case and prescribe.

Mrs. Robinson did as requested, and on the 29th day of August, Mr. Snape reported to Mrs. Robinson: "Mother followed your directions, and I am happy to say she now is in good health."

Mrs. Robinson treats from ten to thirty similar cases per day, with similar results, in all curable cases—many of which have been given up as incurable by the regular physicians.

READ the advertisement of that most wonderful work, JESUS OF NAZARETH.

Another Church 'Round the Corner.

Valparaiso, Indiana, seems to be making an effort to outdo New York in the production of dirty, mean things. The following, taken from the Messenger, says:

The delirium tremens has snatched a victim from us in the prime of life. We understand that the wife of the unfortunate man after his death, went to a certain minister of the gospel in our city to procure his services for the funeral. But, strange as it may appear to the outside barbarian world, the minister peremptorily declined, saying, we are told, that the soul of her departed husband had gone to hell, and that he would not preach the funeral sermon. The heart-stricken widow then left the presence of the minister, to return home. To its credit be it said Valparaiso has a "little church round the corner," presided over by the Rev. Robert Beer, Presbyterian, who, like a Christian gentleman preached the funeral sermon. We have no comments to make upon the conduct of the minister who refused to preach the funeral sermon, but leave him to the remorse of his own conscience and the judgment of the public.

Why did the Messenger withhold the name of this divine? Did it so respect his feelings, fearing to wound them, that it screened from the public gaze and subsequent execration a name that should sink as deep in ignominy as that of the Rev. Mr. Sabine of New York City, who refused to officiate at the funeral of George Holland because he was a theatrical performer? This man died of the delirium tremens; it was a horrible death, but the "sorrowing mourner" desired to pay the last tribute of respect over his grave, such as custom sanctions, but she was met with the assertion that he "had gone to hell!"

While the name of Rev. Robert Beer, who kindly consented to officiate, will stand forth grandly beside that of Rev. Dr. Houghton of "the little church 'round the corner," that of the one who consigned his soul to hell will sink into everlasting disgrace in company with that of the Rev. Mr. Sabine.

"How could they have read what the Master said,
And have turned from the sorrowing mourner,
With, 'Excuse me, I pray, 'tis more in the way
Of the little church 'round the corner.'"

Our Paper.

The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL is rapidly winning the favor of all classes of people. It speaks plainly and distinctly on all subjects that concern humanity. Its circulation is rapidly increasing, and in the North, South, West, and East—in every State in the Union, in England, China, Germany, and the "Islands of the Sea," the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL may be found. Under the supervision of its angel friends, it has won success, and will continue to increase in circulation and influence as long as communication exists between spirits and mortals. We aim to make a paper for all classes of Spiritualists, and while the reasoning and speculations may be received by some and rejected by others, we believe they will always be instrumental in agitating thought, which is the beginning of wisdom. While some Bible Spiritualists complain bitterly of our disparaging remarks on certain statements made in the Old and New Testaments, and would make a sort of orthodox paper of the JOURNAL, others, just escaped from the Christian church, desire to still worship the orthodox God, and advise us to say nothing against him. Thus we are constantly receiving letters of advice, as to how we should conduct the JOURNAL, none of which up to date have had the least influence to change the course we have marked out.

While the JOURNAL is in a prosperous condition, with an extensive circulation, bear in mind, friends, that there are thousands who would be benefited by reading it, who have never seen its soul-elevating pages; therefore, we would ask you to aid in extending its circulation, and by so doing assist the angel world in the promulgation of truth.

The Bhagvat-Geeta.

The second edition of the "Bhagvat-Geeta" will be ready for delivery by the time this paper reaches our readers. We will then speedily fill orders received and such new orders as shall come to hand.

We had no expectation that there would be such a demand for the work when the first edition was printed. But it seems that everybody wants to read this wonderful book—the oldest book in the world; a book that contains the moral precepts as taught by Kreeshna—the Christ of the Brahmins.

The book is neatly bound in magenta muslin, gilt back. Price $1.25; postage 16 cents. Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

A Bushel, More or Less.

Bro. G. G. Briggs, of Dixon, California, has our sincere thanks for the delicious white grapes so kindly donated to us,—and which have just come to hand through his consignees in charge.

Perhaps it was from the same source that we received a donation, last year, of a crate of twelve boxes of most delicious grapes—the donor's name we never learned, and it was by mere accident that we learned that these are from the vineyard of Bro. G. G. Briggs. However delicious the fruit, we love to know who is the donor, that we may be enabled to express our gratitude for such tokens of regard. It gives additional zest when we partake of the fruit.

Widow's and Orphan's Fund.

Sister L. S. Bowens, of Franktown, Nevada, donates $1 50 to the above-named fund, for which, in behalf of those who will receive the benefit, we tender our friend thanks.

Our friends should remember the poor unfortunates in their neighborhood, who desire to receive the bread of life through the columns of the JOURNAL, and when they can not afford to give them the paper for a few months, advise us of their wants, and we shall cheerfully send the paper free, as we have heretofore done, trusting to the good angels to inspire the more fortunate to make a good use of surplus means.

Personal and Local.

—Attention is called to the appointments of Dumont C. Dake, M. D., for September and October, to be found in our advertising columns.

—Prof. W. H. Chaney, of Portland, Oregon, will answer calls to lecture.

—A learned German theologian has discovered that there are more than 44,000,000 devils. What we admire most in this inquirer into devilry is his exact economy in the number when he could just as easily have made it larger.

—Brother E. S. Walker, of Columbus, Ohio, asks, "what is the difference between infallibility and Methodist sanctification?" Will some of our correspondents answer his query.

—Brother F. B. Dowd is now a resident of Missouri, and has been lecturing with good success. His address is Wellaville.

—Brother J. L. Potter makes the following report for August: "Places visited—Kingston, Hutchinson, New Auburn, Glencoe, Darrel Medina, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Stillwater. Number of lectures given—sixteen. Number joining association —seven. Amount taken in collections and dues—$43 60. Expenses, $5 45. The cause is prospering in all parts of the state. C. H. Read is giving his manifestations to the skeptical at different places; has just left Stillwater. Mrs. Abbott is here developing media for future work. Come friends, to the feast at Faribault in October, ready to defend the right. The above is respectfully submitted to the Spiritualists of Minnesota."

—Lizzie Doten's new book, "Poems of Progress," will soon be issued.

—S. M. Baldwin, Esq., and many others, are entitled to our thanks for special efforts to circulate the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

—D. W. Hull speaks in Lockport, N. Y., Sept. 16 and 17; in Monroe, Ohio, Sept., 23, 23 and 24; in Joliet, Ill., Oct., 1, and six miles north at Covington, Ind., Oct. 7; will answer calls for the balance of October. The Higginsville meeting will attend the Covington meeting. This place is also the home of Mrs. Jennie Cartmer, the wonderful trumpet medium.

—Brother R. B. Jennings informs us that the regular quarterly meeting of the Nunica, Mich. Spiritualists will be held at the Bartholomew school house the third Saturday and Sunday in September. Mrs. S. A. Pearsall is engaged as speaker. A general invitation is extended to all.

—Mrs. Emma Hardinge will lecture in Westford, Mass., Sunday, Sept. 24; in Music Hall, Boston, the Sundays of October, and in New York during November. For the Sabbaths of other months apply by letter, care Mr. Rooney, 251 Washington street, Boston, Mass. Eorsagements in Massachusetts and vicinity preferred.

—Dr. J. K. Bailey is in Pennsylvania again. He will reach Troy, N. Y., lecturing by the way, in season to attend the National Convention.

—"The RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL. An able and fearless exponent of modern Spiritualism. It is a large, eight-page, closely printed paper, containing more valuable and instructive matter each week than any other paper in the country. Terms, three dollars per year, in advance, three months to new subscribers for fifty cents. Specimen copies sent free. Address Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 189 South Clark street, Chicago, Ill."—The Monthly (N. H.) Miscellany.

—See advertisement of microscope. We are sure we can suit you if you want one, and every family should own one.

—We now have in press the second edition of Dr. Wm. B. Fahnestock's work, "Artificial Somnambulism."

—Brother A. C. Donohoe would like to have a good test medium visit Marietta, Ga.

—Do not fail to read Mrs. Wilcoxson's fourth article upon "Spiritualism and Sorcery," on the sixth page of this paper. They will be continued.

—People of contracted or bigoted ideas, who imagine that they are following the only road which leads to paradise, will do well to reflect upon the following statistical facts: At the present day all the Christian sects together comprise a membership of 330,000,000, while the benighted heathen number over one billion, including 340 000,000 of Buddhists. Of the Christians, 195 000,000 are Roman Catholics, and only 68,139,000 Protestants of various denominations. When we come to reflect how, in the midst of these existing proportions every passing minute has its scores of births and deaths, we can form some idea of what a select and exclusive place the bigot's heaven must be.

—Let the reader carefully read the article by Dr. Fahnestock, entitled "Statuvolence; or, Artificial Somnambulism," to be found on the sixth page of this paper, and remember that his book teaching the above art is for sale at this office. Price, $1.50, postage 16 cts.

—Brother E. G. P., of South Farkman, Me. writes: "I have been taking the JOURNAL as a trial subscriber, Mrs. S. A. Rogers sending you my address, and can truly say that I find it all that you claim or represented it to be. So please send it along, as it is all the real genuine food my soul gets." Our brother speaks in high terms of the efficient services of Sister Rogers. Her address for the future is Dexter, Me.

—"The Science of Evil," by Joel Moody, continues to attract the earnest attention of the thinking public.

—Brother Nathan Smith writes from Rushford, Minn., speaking in high terms of the mediumship of Charles H. Read. He says: "This truly wonderful medium gave one of his seances at Adams' Hall, on the evening of August 18th, to a large and attentive audience. The tests performed were truly of a nature and character to set thinking men to studying. He gave every opportunity for all to see that he was not the man that was doing the work. At each lighting of the lamps he sat precisely as when left, tied securely, with no agitation of nerve or muscle. While he was tied, both his hands, arms, head and feet, his coat was taken off in less than one minute."

He also speaks in high terms of Mrs. Lou Finch as a medical and business clairvoyant and test medium.

—Hayward's "Book of all Religions, Including Spiritualism," is a valuable book for reference.

—It is said that there are more animalcules in the mill of a codfish than there are men on the earth, and that a grain of sand is larger than four millions of them.

—An Indiana clergyman tells this: One of his parishioners dreamed that in walking through a certain pasture he came upon a rattle-snake at the foot of a particular tree, and that it bit and killed him. He told his dream in the morning, concluded to go to the pasture, and there, beside the path, at the foot of a half-rotted tree, lay coiled a large rattlesnake. Stepping a stick, he struck at the snake, but his foot slipped, and he fell, and the reptile bit him upon the cheek. He hastened home, nearly a quarter of a mile distant, and there, two hours later, he died in great agony.

—Daniel White, M. D., who has been located at Du Quoin, Ill., has removed to St. Joseph, Mo. He is an active and efficient reformer.

Philadelphia Department.

BY.....HENRY T. CHILD, M. D

Subscriptions will be received, and papers may be obtained at wholesale or retail, at 634 Race street, Philadelphia.

Statuvolence.

[NUMBER IV.]

CLAIRVOYANCE.

This term signifies clear sight, and is composed of these two French words. It is, in reality, soul vision. Although very much has been written upon this subject, yet it is very little understood, and the phenomena are very imperfectly described. Whether we shall make it any clearer, remains to be seen. We think soul vision, or the perception of material objects by the soul does not exist until after it has been associated with a physical, and on this account most persons fail to recognize the anterior existence of the soul, which is to us a reality. Physical vision, as it may be termed, results from impressions made upon the physical, and transmitted to the mental plane, wherein consciousness exists.

We have frequently spoken of man as a triune being, having a physical nature, a mental nature, which is the connecting link between the former and the soul nature, but not a part of it respectively, as has been thought by some. Clairvoyance results from impressions made upon the soul, but in order that we may have conscisance of them here, they must also be transmitted to the mental plane. Hence the vision of the clairvoyant is mingled more or less with impressions from the external. It is also constituted of direct impressions from the soul and of psychological impressions or pictures presented by the action of other minds, either in or out of the form, and the superficial observer who confounds these will always be making mistakes.

The first conditions of clairvoyance are experienced while the soul still remains in the physical body, the latter being rendered passive and thus permitting the soul to act almost independent of it. In these cases the impressions are mixed, the knowledge which is already stamped upon the mind forms a part of the vision, false impressions established in error will be mingled with it. This will explain many of the difficulties which surround this subject.

If on the external plane, vision is easily modified by surrounding conditions, it is still more so in the interior, and this form of clairvoyance, while it may often aid us in our investigations, can not be fully relied on. It is more important as a step toward the higher forms. Clairvoyance should not be relied on without the aid of all the knowledge that we can bring to bear upon the subject. Medical examinations are often very valuable, and their prescriptions may be very useful, but care should be always taken in the use of these. We have had clairvoyants describe diseases, and have done it ourself often, but we always desire to know the nature of the remedy and its adaptation. There are three sources of knowledge to resort to in this condition, first the clairvoyance to which we have referred, and which we consider the lowest form of this condition; second, the impressions of positive minds upon the spirit which is in a negative condition and is unable to distinguish between these and its own impressions, and thirdly, sympathy, which has been supposed to be a part of clairvoyance, when in reality it is only a physical condition.

It is well known that if two musical instruments be near each other and you strike a chord upon one, the chord of the corresponding note of the other will be thrown into vibration. We see clairvoyantly that pain results from a disturbance in the orderly motions of the waves of life force through the nerves, which may be acute or continuous, according as the motion is sudden or continuous, and we see too that when a person with pain in any locality comes in sympathetic rapport with a highly susceptible person, the latter will experience pain in the corresponding part of the body, and may thus be enabled to describe very accurately the condition of the former without any clairvoyance at all. We have diagnosed sympathetically hundreds of cases, although we are glad that we can not always do this, for it is a painful experience, although we can not say that any injury has resulted therefrom.

True clairvoyance is experienced when the soul is so far separated from the body that it can go forth free, and it is also removed from the psychological influences of other minds, and from physical conditions. Vision then comes in much more extended and perfect, the accuracy with which it can now be measured depends upon the power which the individual has of stamping the impressions received in this state upon the mental nature so that they may be brought out into the external consciousness. We feel confident that most of the impressions thus received can not be thus transmitted to the exterior, and that most of them can be perfectly so. The soul in these conditions, revels in the enjoyment of those things which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive of on the external plane.

Every clairvoyant has experienced an ecstacy of feeling which no language can possibly describe, and they have found that this pleasure increases as they were enabled to preserve this condition and become more familiar with it by proper repetitions.

A very important part of that will training is to cultivate the power of bridging over the two states and bringing the consciousness of one into the other. Our external impressions require to be carefully analyzed and compared with each other, that we may not be deceived. All the senses cooperate beautifully in conveying truth to the mind, and the same is true with the interior sensations and impressions, and hence the clairvoyant and the experimenter who seeks for knowledge will find this, should be exceedingly cautious in drawing conclusions and adopting theories.

Having had this experience at times, from our earliest recollection, we ought to know something about it, and yet after more than fifty years' experience we feel very cautious about laying down propositions in regard to it.

We saw varied and beautiful scenery and human beings, as we supposed, early in life, and were told when we described these that it was imagination, and that it was wrong to encourage it. Long years after, when Spiritualism came, we understood something of these visions, and now realize that we saw our spirit friends. One of the most difficult problems was to settle the question whether the impressions we had were psychological and produced by other minds acting upon us, or whether they were real visions, for both these may be true. We have realized the fact in our own experience and observation, that the soul can leave the body and mental at will. When it does this, however, it very seldom brings its impressions to the external plane, hence most of its journeys are for its own special benefit. We believe that clairvoyant examinations at a distance are more frequently psychological impressions than actual observation. For instance, some years since, our friend, Robert Dale Owen, requested us to prescribe for a distinguished lady in New York city, well known as a poetess. His handed us a letter from her, and we requested him to say nothing to us about her case, as we desired to see what our usual morning seance would bring us. Sitting down at six o'clock in the morning, we saw a picture of a human stomach, with certain diseased conditions marked upon it, and we were told what remedy would relieve the trouble. On opening the letter which are held in our hand, we found the description to correspond exactly with the psychological condition seen by us. We prepared a homœopathic tincture of nux vomica and sent it to her by express; and in a short time received a statement from her that she was entirely cured.

On inquiring of our friends in spirit life, with whom we conversed freely, they informed us that they "had examined the case and made a psychological impression upon our mind," which we saw in the room, and we did not have to travel nearly one hundred miles to see the body.

This case will illustrate many of the phenomena which are common in clairvoyance.

We shall close this article by endeavoring to describe our sensations. On entering this state we first lose the consciousness of the body, and then as we pass out of this we may look upon it, just as though it belonged to another. We begin to see the interior nature of things, animate as well as inanimate; the external forms gradually fade away, and the vision of the interior shines forth more and more brightly, until we are lost to all external consciousness. First we have dim and uncertain impressions of our surroundings, gradually the light breaks forth upon certain objects, and they become clear to us. Time and distance seem to be lost; objects far away and events of the future come before us as present realities. If undisturbed we select only those things which are pleasant and attractive, and enjoy these with feelings that are indescribable.

The power of memory seems to be changed, and it only requires a certain effort of the will to enable us to retain the impressions of many things which are received in this state. Still we are always impressed with a consciousness of our inability to describe these things to others. Sometimes the scenes seem to be confined to earth, and are very similar to those we have left. At others, we are introduced into the circles of spirits who are congenial to us, and from these we learn many important lessons. We wish it understood, however, that the reception of spiritual impressions which are experienced by mortals from spirits in the ordinary conditions of life, and in the earlier stages of clairvoyance, are entirely different from those which we obtain in the higher clairvoyant conditions.

In the former we are the recipients of thoughts and impressions from other minds, which may be stamped with more or less clearness upon ours; in the latter we are as invited guests in the temples of truth and wisdom; are permitted to see for ourselves many things. It is also given us to ask those spirits who are around us concerning the things which we see and hear. This higher condition of clairvoyance, or pure soul vision, is a rare attainment, but it is one that we should all aspire after, as it gives the best foretaste of the realities of spirit-life that mortals can possibly have.

In conclusion, then, we say that clairvoyance is soul vision; first, while the soul is in the body, and afterward in certain conditions in which the soul is temporarily freed from it. Its fulness alone can be realized in the future life, when the soul has not only left the body permanently, but has passed beyond the influence of earth-life, which remain around it for a time after it leaves the form on earth. That it is a state natural to all, and into which all must and will come sooner or later, and that it is in our power to do much to help ourselves and each other to the attainment of it.

PARTING OF A MOTHER AND SON.

How the ministers are disposed to fall into the line, is illustrated by the following closing remarks of a sermon, which, with a poem, we think worthy of a place in the JOURNAL, was preached a few weeks ago in this city:

Our Christian friends departed have only crossed the river. They wait us on the other side. Let us be trustful still. And what sweet words are these,—how true that they are, as the loving boy said in the desolate mother thus touchingly plead and part:

"Yes, mother, I loved in the sunshine to play,
And talk with the birds and the blossoms all day;
But sweeter the songs of the spirits on high,
And brighter the glories that meet in the sky.
I see them, I hear them, they call at my heart;
My mother, my mother, oh, let me depart!"

"Oh, do not desert us! Our hearts will be drear,
Our dear home so lonely when you are not here;
Your children still wish that your pilgrimage end say,
'I wonder dear brother so long can delay.
These feet like the wild wind, that glance like a star,
Oh, what will this world be when they are afar?'"

"My mother, my mother, oh, let me depart!
Your children and your pilgrimage are swords to my heart;
I hear gentle voice that chides my delay:
I see lovely visions that woo me away.
My spirit is broken, my trials are o'er!
O mother, my mother, detain me no more!"

"Well, go, my beloved! The conflict is o'er;
My pleas are all selfish. I urge them no more!
Yet by chain your bright spirit down here to a clod,
So thirsting for freedom, so ripe for its God!
Farewell, then, good-by, till we meet at the throne,
Where love fears no parting and tears are unknown."

"Oh, glory! oh, glory! what music! what light!
What wonders break in on my heart, on my sight!
I come, blessed spirits! I hear you from high!
O frail, faithless nature, can this be to die?
So near, what, so near to my Savior and King?
Oh, help me, ye angels, his glories to sing."

That which is a pillar of fire by night to the humble seeker after truth, may be only a pillar of cloud to him who lives in the day of his own self-conceit.

Spots of beauty lie all along life's pathway.

The good we have done will be remembered by others, the evil by ourselves.

The consciousness of continued life is an ever present feeling with the soul. The doubts in regard to this exist only upon the superficial plane of humanity.

"To be" is "the question," not to be "never!"

Spiritualism is constantly erecting light houses along the shores of time and in its channels, in order to enable man to steer his bark safely through these and out into the gold ocean of eternity.

M. M. JONES.

Obituary.

Gone home to dwell with the angels, from his residence in Pine Island, Minnesota, on the 25th of August, 1871, John Harper, aged 74 years and 4 months.

Consent, Ohio, papers please copy.

Passed across the silent river, June 29th, 1871, Mrs. Mary Temple, wife of David A. Temple, aged 31 years. She was a kind, loving wife and mother, and a woman who had no enemies, but who was beloved by all. She was not a Spiritualist, but her husband is a firm believer, and thinks of her as yet present to comfort him in his loss. She once said to him, "If spirits can come back, I shall try very hard to do so, and make you conscious that I am with you. That promise has been fulfilled. He has heard from her, and another link is thus added to his chain of evidence to strengthen him in his belief.

Died, in Hampshire, Kane County, Illinois, Sept. 5th, Lida J. Aber, of consumption.

NOTICE OF MEETINGS.

Iowa State Association of Spiritualists.

This Association will hold its Third Annu l Convention at Iowa Falls, Hardin Co., Iowa, commencing Friday, Oct. 6th, at 10 A. M., and continue three days.

As important business will come before this Convention, it is earnestly requested that all liberal minds in the State will come out and make this the most interesting time ever held in the State.

Good speakers and test mediums will be present, and no pains will be spared to entertain friends from abroad.

Speakers wishing to attend the Convention are requested to correspond with the President and Secretary, at Anita, Cass Co., Iowa.

J. M. BLAKESLEY, President.

EDWIN CATE, Secretary.

Appointments for Dumont C. Dake, M.D.,

The Analytical Healer of Chicago,

For the months of September and October.

MICHIGAN.

Jackson, Sept. 1st, to the 18th.
Albion, Goodson House, Sept. 14th.
Battle Creek, Sept. 16th and 17th.
Hall. Battle Creek, Sept. 16th and 17th.
Malamazoo, Sept. 18th to the 27th.
Three Rivers, Sept. 28th.

INDIANA.

Goshen, Vincennes House, Sept. 30th.
Elkhart, Oct. 1st and 2d.
South Bend, Dwight House, Oct. 3d and 4th.
Laporte, T. Garden House, Oct. 5th.

ILLINOIS.

Chicago, Madison House, Oct. 6th, 7th and 8th.
Migo, Oct. 9th and 10th.
Rockford, Fox, Holmes House, Oct. 11th to 15th.
Joliet, National House, Oct. 17th and 18th.
Bloomington, St. Nicholas Hotel, Oct. 19th and 20th.

THE PSALMS OF LIFE,

A COMPILATION OF

PSALMS
HYMNS, ANTHEMS,
CHANTS,
ETC.,

Embodying the Spiritual, Progressive, and Reformatory element of the Present Age. By John S. Adams. This work has been prepared with special reference to the large and increasing demand for a volume expressing the sentiments and views of the advanced minds of the present time, and meeting the requirements of every species of Reform. It is entirely free of Sectarianism, of all the theological dogmas of the past, and fully recognizes the presence and ministration of Spirit, in every condition of life on earth.

This book contains five hundred and twenty-two choice Selections of Poetry, with suitable music on each page from Handel, Hadyn, Mozart and Other Distinguished Composers.

It combines the advantage of "Hymn" and "Tune" Book. It is printed with a Classification of Subjects, and Complete Indexes of First Lines, Tunes and Metres; and being of convenient size, is generally accepted as the Standard Music Book of Spiritualism, Radicalism and General Reform.

alike desirable for the LECTURE-ROOM and the HOMES OF THE PEOPLE.

"I think there is in the book a greater proportion—say I think I ought to say a greater AMOUNT—of beautiful and truly spiritual poetry than in any other collection I have seen, whatever the size of the volume."

Rev. John Pierpont.

PRICE:—Paper cover, 50 cents; Postage, 8 cts. Board cover, 65 cents; Postage, 12 cts. Cloth-bound, 90 cents, Postage, 16 cents.

☞ For Sale at the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL BOOK STORE,

187 and 189 South Clark St.,
Chicago, I

v9n18 tf.

HERMES MERCURIUS TRISMEGISTUS:

(Ter Maximus! King of Egypt! MELCHISEDEC!)

HIS DIVINE PYMANDER.

His First Book; Pymander—The Spirit from the Far Heavens; The Holy Sermon; The Key; That God is not Manifest, and yet Most Manifest; God; The Song; Truth; The Crater; The Divine Mind.

This most ancient and glorious book ought to be in the house of every Christian, more so if religious person in the land—especially ministers. Also in those of scientists, doubters, infidels, and skeptics, for it contains what can nowhere else be found. This rare and superb volume also contains the world-famous Asiatic Mystery—the singular and astounding belief and secret doctrines of the Rosicrucians, Alchemists, Hermetists and other Illuminati. Also translations from the Vedas; Brahm; the Song of Brahm; and the Smaragdine Table.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE.

IT COSTS

Only about one third Bookbinders' prices to do binding handsomely by the use of Alden's Ready Book-Binder. Sizes suited to any publication, from the smallest Pamphlet to the largest Weekly. Price circular free. Send 50 cents for samples of both styles and "Binder." Size for the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL, No. 19; price $1.20 and $1.50. Address, RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

THE CAREER OF THE CHRIST-IDEA IN HISTORY.

A COMPANION VOLUME TO

"THE CAREER OF THE GOD-IDEA."

BY ROBSON TUTTLE.

CONTENTS.

I Introductory; II Career of the Christ-idea in Hindostan and among other Races; III Prophecies of the Advent of Jesus; IV Conception and Genealogy; V Birth of Jesus; VI John the Baptist—his relation to Jesus; VII The sermon on the Mount; VIII Miracles; IX Standing forth the Anointed Social Journey; X Burial and Resurrection; XII The Descent into Hell XIII The Gospels; XIV Resume of the Life and Character of Jesus; XV Causes of the Extension of Christianity; XVI The ultimate of the Christ-Idea.

Price $1.25. Postage 16 cents.

The demand for these new works of Hudson Tuttle both in this country and Europe, is unprecedented.

For sale at the Religio-Philosophical Journal Office, or address,

MEDICINA PSYCHICA! ANIMA MEDICA!!

☞ "Dico hominem externum esse animal: Internum vero non animal sed imaginem DEI VERAM!"—VAN HELMONT.

THIERS' ODYLLIC WAFERS.

The most safe, salutatory, and effectual Nervine Medium Developer and Curative in all

DISEASES OF THE NERVES,

Including Neuralgia, Epilepsy, Hysteria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Chorea, (St. Vitus' Dance) Depression of Spirits, Melancholy, etc.

Sent per mail, in letter form. Price $1.00 per package. Ten or six packages mailed free for 25 cents.

Address, W. F. J. THIERS, M.D., NEUROPATHIST, No. 72 1 St., Washington, D. C.

v10 n11 tf

THE

Descent of Man,

AND

Selections in Relation to Sex;

By Charles Darwin, M.A.F.R.S. With Illustrations.

Two Vols., over 600 pp. each, Price $2.00 per Vol.; postage 24 cts.

☞ For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

C SUBSCRIBERS TO PETERS' MUSICAL M
H MONTHLY get all the latest and best Mu- U
O sic at one and two cents a piece. Every num- S
E ber contains from $4 to $5 worth of new Music; I
A and it can be had for 3 cents. The July and C
August numbers contain Thirty Pieces of Mu- A
P sic. (74 pages, sheet music size.) and will be I mailed for 50 cents. Address J. L. PETERS, C 599 Broadway, New York.

v10 n24 3t

JETS! JETS! JETS! JETS! JETS! JETS!

A New Book, by Andrew Jackson Davis,

ENTITLED,

"THE FOUNTAIN,

WITH JETS OF NEW MEANINGS."

ILLUSTRATED WITH ONE HUNDRED AND FORTY-TWO ENGRAVINGS.

Beautiful Paper, Fine Pressmork, Superior Binding.

Price only $1.00; postage 16 cents.

This Book is Freighted with Thoughts for Men and Pictures for Children.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING House, 189 Clark Street, Chicago.

MEDIUMS.

James Brooks

Is holding Developing Circles at 148 Fourth Ave., with good success. Those wishing to develop their mediumistic powers should consult him. His instructions never fail to develop all phases of mediumship when closely observed.

Call at 148 Fourth Ave., or address 306 S. Clark street, Chicago.

Dr. Abba Lord Palmer,

BOX 101, NEW BOSTON, ILLINOIS

WONDERFUL PSYCHOMETRIST AND CLAIRVOYAN PHYSICIAN, SOUL READER AND BUSINESS MEDIUM.

Can diagnose disease by Rhenom, autograph, lock of hair, without a failure, and give prescription, which, if followed, will surely cure.

Can trace stolen property, tell the past, present and future —advise concerning business, and give written communications from spirit friends.

Diagnosis of disease, with prescription, $2.00. Communications from spirit friends, $3.00. Delineation of character with advice concerning marriage, $1.00.

al v10 tf.

MRS. A. H. ROBINSON,

Healing, Psychometric and Business Medium

148 Fourth Avenue, Chicago.

MRS. ROBINSON, while under spirit control, on receiving a lock of hair of a sick patient, will diagnose the nature of the disease most perfectly, and prescribe the proper remedy. Yet, as the most speedy cure is the essential object in view, rather than to gratify idle curiosity, the better practice is to send along with a lock of hair, a brief statement of the sex, age, leading symptoms and duration of the disease of the sick person, when she will without delay return a most potent prescription and remedy for eradicating the disease and permanently curing the patient in all curable cases.

Of herself she claims no knowledge of the healing art, but when her spirit guides are brought "en-rapport" with a sick person through her mediumship, they never fail to give immediate and permanent relief, in curable cases, though the remedies and restorative forces latent in the system and in nature. This prescription is sent by mail, and be it an internal remedy, or an external application, it should be given or applied precisely as directed in the accompanying letter of instructions, however simple it may seem to be; remember it is not the quantity of the compound, but the chemical effect that is produced, that science takes cognizance of.

One prescription is usually sufficient, in any case the patient is not permanently cured by one prescription, the application for a second, or more if required, should be made in about ten days after the last, each time stating any changes that may be apparent in the symptoms of the disease.

Mrs. ROBINSON also, through her mediumship, diagnoses the diseases of any one who calls upon her at her residence. The facility with which the spirits controlling her accomplish the same, is done as well who the application is by letter as when the the patient is present. Her gifts are very remarkable, not only in the healing art, but as a psychometric, test, business and trance medium.

Terms:—Diagnosis and first prescription, $2.00; each subsequent, $1.00; Psychometric Delineation of Character, $1; answering Business Letters, $3. The money should accompany the application, to insure a reply.

DR. SAMUEL MAXWELL,

MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN,

Takes the sick by magnetic touch, and the use of appropriate magnetized remedies. Also makes clairvoyant examinations. Patients to be treated by letter should send age, sex, and leading symptoms. Boxed in private families if desired. Come to, or address,

SAMUEL MAXWELL, M. D.

72 South Sixth St., RICHMOND, IND.

v10 n11f

SPIRIT PHOTOGRAPHS.

Madison Doherty, having severed his connection with A. D. Willis, at Chicago, has opened a Gallery, at Indianapolis, Indiana, where he will sit for spirit pictures.

Parties at a distance wishing these pictures can get the same result as if present, by inclosing a lock of hair, a picture, and the fee of five dollars, and post office money, stating the day and hour they wish a trial. Money refunded if no result is obtained.

DOHERTY & PURSELL, PHOTOGRAPHERS,

Nos. 94 & 96 East Washington street,

Indianapolis Indiana.

v10 n17 3m

DR. S. L. McFADDEN AND WIFE, MAGNETIC PHYSICIAN, Spiritual Test Mediums, Business Clairvoyants, etc., have located at No. 348 W. Madison St., corner of May, up stairs, Chicago.

They invite those who wish the benefit of their mediumistic powers to call and see them. They hold developing circles, diagnose disease without any previous knowledge of the patient, tell of the past, present and future, bring tests from absent and departed friends, etc. They also explain the laws of life and death, good and evil, the cause and cure of inharmony, etc., thereby enabling persons to be a law unto themselves, to be their own thinkers, teachers, doctors and preachers. All mediums are invited to attend free of charge. The Ouija (Spirit Writing Spirits, and false communications philosophically explained. Sittings for the examination of diseases, and private seances, forenoon, 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. Circles each evening; Sundays not expected.

N. B.—Can accommodate a few Boarders.

v10 n18 13t

GROSVENOR SWAN, M. D.

DR. SWAN MAY BE FOUND AT ALL hours, at 117 Wabash Ave., Chicago, where he will be happy to receive calls from his old friends and patrons, and all who may require his services. v9 n8 tf

A. B. Severance,

The Well-Known Psychometrist,

Will give to those who visit him in person, or from autograph or from lock of hair, readings of character; select charges, past and future; advice in regard to business; diagnosis of disease, with prescription; adaptation of those intending marriage; directions for the management of children; advice to the inharmoniously married, etc.

TERMS—$2.00 for full Delineation; brief Delineation—$1.

A. B. SEVERANCE,

457 Milwaukee St., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

v7n18tf.

CLAIRVOYANCE.

DR. F. T. JOHNSON examines diseases by receiving lock of hair, name, and age, stating sex,—one dollar accompanying the order. He also prepares a sure antidote for OPIUM AND MORPHINE EATERS; three months will cure the most inveterate case. Charges, six dollars per month. He also prepares a Sure Cure for Ague.—50 cents per box. Will be sent by express. Address Ann Ypsilanti, Mich.

v10 n17 tf

MRS. F. W. CALKINS,

BUSINESS, TEST, AND HEALING MEDIUM,

Prescribes medicines for the sick. Spirits communicate through her quite frequently—give name, disease they died with, &c. Satisfaction warranted. Address her, enclosing a lock of hair and two dollars at Green Garden, Will Co., Ill.

MRS. C. H. LELAND,

Wonderful Psychometrist, Soul Reader, and Business Medium, will, upon receipt of photograph, lock of hair, whether married or single, send to any person a correct delineation of character, with leading events in the past and future life, for one dollar. Advice concerning business, two dollars. Written communications from friends in spirit life, two dollars. Satisfaction guaranteed. Instructions for psychometric development, one dollar. Address, Tamico, Ill.

v10 n10 tf

Original Essays.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

SPIRITUALISM AND SORCERY.

By Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson.

NUMBER FOUR.

Granting, then, that the millions who are yearly passing out of the body linger for a time within the earth-sphere, or are held by the law of attraction to their old haunts, the inevitable conclusion is, that they will continue to work out their loves and desires in agreement with their state of unfoldment. One "dying" a Catholic, if ignorant and bigoted, remains a Catholic still, because his big try prevents his reasoning for himself the same there as here. And so on through the whole calendar of the creeds, one whose mind has become petrified and perfectly shaped by any sectarian education, remains so, till at last he is forced to recognize his blindness and error by the positive revelations of the new life. Thus, again, whatever the moral standard may be at the hour of death or change, it continues on with the life of the translated, till natural growth and overwhelming truth force the individual upon a higher plane. How many thousands pass away yearly with all the rank Pharisaism of the creed clinging to their lives—spirits as thoroughly imbued with the hatred of the Church against all "heretics" as it is possible for those to be while still remain in the body—souls hedged in their dying hour, and by solemn oath to die only in the faith of Christianity—which means that they die not to any hatred of fancied "heresy," or mean to be any more truly Christlike, in a life of spiritual devotion to his example, should they recover! But this dying pledge is supposed to mean, they accept all the creed, regardless of individual light and reason, leaving a final testimony for and with the Church and its established means of grace, as not to be doubted or questioned. Granting, too, that thousands pass on with a relentless grasp upon their golden gods, having no sort of attraction to any plane which deprives them of former associations, how naturally they gravitate to those worlds where they mingle in the turbid streams of selfish, artful policy, which run counter to the truly spiritual currents of the soul, and for an indefinite period of time, afflict like with these embodied spirits who are upon the same plane of unfoldment. And if the truth of "physical manifestations" is once granted, it is plain to be seen that the whole modus operandi of spirit control belongs to the same law. Sorcery, then, is but the action of adverse, antagonistic malignant, and destructive influences, which, under certain favorable conditions, are able to destroy, or vitiate at least, the control of the more wise and peaceful spirits, who may seek to overcome, and thus confusion, disorder, and other failure or deception temporarily follow. We say temporarily, because truth is never more than temporarily defeated or suspended. Here is a medium—just baptized with the pentecost of spirit power, artless, and unsophisticated, comparatively free from all magnetic influences of a promiscuous or earthly nature—just picked up, like a fresh-blown flower, from the humble paths of private life; utterly ignorant of the laws of this mysterious magnetic inspiration, which now thrills the whole being, and opens a new empire of investigation, this ignorant, but passive instrument of the angels is no sooner chosen by them, and made the vehicle of spirit communications, than a starving, eager, restless, exacting, and excited crowd begin to surround the life of the sensitive subject with countless demands, and conditions more or less fatal to a sovereign, steady, and harmonious control. Every operator having a smatterme of the law of psychological influence, heedlessly, and almost criminally, rushes upon the new candidate, and if possible crowds his or her mediumship in his own right; and even old heads, and professors and doctors in the new science, "very learned and able men," good, staunch, unswerving Spiritualists, must rashly lend a helping hand, and magnetically treat and operate upon the medium, while sometimes ignorance, and sometimes a desire to please, or not offend, holds the delicate instrument in submission to a course which his own band did not fail to condemn. Our heavenly teachers know just how subtle and powerful for weal or woe are these exquisitely fine and ethereal forces which they depend upon in securing their most perfect revelations. And invariably do they warn their mediums against these disturbing and baneful experiments, which to the end must destroy all perfect control unless prevented. Now, our medium is a wonderfully perfect instrument. Every manifestation is a bona fide reality. The spirits use him charmingly. Everybody is delighted. Everybody else must be, —and they shall be, think the eager, proselyting wise ones. Then begins the struggle. Sceptics are marshalling their forces. It is "humbug," "witch craft," "heresy," "diabolism." Medium has consented to meet the skeptics. True, the kind, watchful, guardian keepers, the pilots on the great sea of public duty, have cautioned the medium to observe implicitly the necessary conditions; and these apply to the daily life—the daily habits—the daily associations—the daily influences—habits of temporary seclusion and retirement from all outside influence at necessary periods, etc. The stoics and philosophers (?) of the day, many of them professed Spiritualists hold up their hands in protestation, and ejaculate, "Pshaw! this is all a mere question of imagination!" So the fine spun go and wheels of the angel timepiece must not have any protection—it does not need it! It must take upon its polished surfaces all the dust and storm of constant use, till the machinery becomes clogged and loaded with foreign obstructions, and at last it becomes irregular in its action; when asked the time of day it tells a lie! deceives,—is caught in the act! or will not go at all! We have been forced out or our best conditions enough to know something of this, from bitter experience. We have seen the finest mediums that ever walked the earth daily subjected to all that we have portrayed, and that from their "best friends," and in addition, at every public seance, the most bitter, inexorable skeptics have been called up as a committee, to stand a full half hour, or three quarters of an hour, in close contact with the medium—eying him and looking upon him with all the antagonism of an implacable judge—and can any one be familiar with the psychological and mesmeric power of Prof. Britten and others eminent in the science, without at once seeing how this must affect the magnetic sphere of the subject? Granting that the medium is surrounded by the opposite forces, are not those attended by their sympathetic inspirits? Are not Catholics attended by Catholic spirits?—Protestants by Protestant spirits? and all sceptics by ignorant, antagonistic spirits just emitted from the body, and living in affinity with their like here? True if my clairvoyance has ever been reliable, I know I have seen among our most wicked opponents, adverse spirit conditions, night after night, have completely impaired the magnetic sphere of the medium, and then opened the way for their own spirits to control the manifestations. They were determined to prove it a "humbug," and Catholic, Protestant, and skeptical helpers on the other side, stood with them, eager to accomplish the work. If they can only dispossess the regular controlling power—infuse their magnetic forces into the sphere of the medium, what shall prevent them from controlling? This I have seen clairvoyantly; and I mark that usually, indeed, almost invariably, it is our freest, best mediums who, being extremely susceptible, and very negative, are thus overcome. Some have naturally a vigorous, independent power of resistance of their own, but the majority of sensitives are below the average in this. Those who are thus fortified by a vigorous magnetic life of their own, do not so easily yield their best condition to the interference or importunity of others—consequently they do not so often fall when brought in contact with skeptical influences. We do not argue by this that dissenters or even fierce skeptics, should be excluded from a fair and impartial investigation, but we have a right to object to all that is unfair. And it is just as reasonable that we demand conditions of them, in all experiments of this kind as that they should exact them of us. We have heard even Spiritualists complain in this respect, that too much stress was laid upon the subject of "conditions," too little liberty granted to honest skeptics, etc. We only ask them to apply the same course of trifling to a fine watch or musical instrument, and tell us the result. It is a very easy matter to destroy a fine instrument, but those who most indifferently and persistently do this, are not often capable of manufacturing another. There is no safer rule for a medium to follow than that laid before him by his guides—granting he has come into harmonious relation with them. It is dangerous, when thus kindly, wisely guided, to suffer any innovation from careless or conceited meddlers For the few clear-thoughted, inspired, and faithful co-workers who unite with the spirit world in the great work for humanity, there is a crowd of selfish, ambitious, and worldly-minded souls, who disregard entirely the wishes and direct counsels of our guides in these things, and too often, indeed, the medium becomes an assenting party. "I do not allow spirits to control me!" "I do not give up my individuality to them!" "I find spirits are as liable to mistake as mortals," etc., etc. Such sweeping assertions are coming now from the lips of many who were formerly the meek and powerful exponents of our saving philosophy! Having seen the "pillar of fire by night, the cloud by day," they still could not cross the desert of unfoldment, though the heavenly manna fell plenteously around them, and angels were leading them proud forward, without turning back to the Egypt of popular opinion, and now stand shorn of their best powers of inspiration. The object of our heavenly teachers is to remove the scales of superstition from all eyes, to unstop all ears deaf to the living revelation, and bring home to all bereaved and hungry souls the blessed realities of immortal life, divine equality, true Spiritualism is iconoclastic. It deals death blows to a sectarianism of religion. Upon this question of a living inspiration hangs our future happiness, and we may say our present integrity and usefulness. No religion that justifies despotism can give toleration or sanction to Spiritualism. Therefore, it must arouse the implacable enmity of the Mosaic spirit, and, in turn, all who bend the knee to Baal, all who seek the subjection of the reason, all who hate liberty, the liberty of private judgment and opinion, independent of the creed, will call to their aid their own kindred spirits. "Like attracts like." It was our fortune to fall in with a young lady of seventeen, just brought out before large audiences by her enthusiastic manager. The demonstrations were perfectly astounding. The manager challenged, and promised the most unreasonable things; seemingly adrift on the fathomless waters of credulity, he seemed to forget that some things might be impossible. The poor girl was nightly subjected to a boisterous crowd. This crowd forced the most bitter and unprincipled skeptics upon the committee; this committee outraged every sense of honor and humanity in the performances of their part. They one evening tied the cords so tightly as to reveal to the audience her purple, swollen hands from the cabinet. A doctor commanded in an indignant voice, "Loosen those cords." He was a sworn skeptic, too, but had not laid down his manhood with the investigation. The riotous friends of the committee shouted, "Stop—don't untie her!" "Shall we?" barbarian committee responded. "No!" "No!" "No!" thundered the gang. Some of these men were church members in high standing! Amid great excitement the ropes were loosened—the police preventing an outbreak. The performance proceeded, while one of the committee from the platform leered and winked at his companions in the audience. The young lady about this time grew sad and nervous, but still continued to baffle all the wiles of her adversaries by the most astounding performances, night after night. A challenge was given; a cabinet sixteen feet high was built by the opposition, the musical instruments hung aloft, beyond the reach of the medium. All the manifestations proceeded as usual. A few weeks after this, the medium was accused of imposture, and all the papers in the interest of the case published her. A worthy gentleman of Baltimore sought to do her justice, but at last all withdrew from her, and left her with the terrible stigma upon her life. I afterward found her in seclusion, and kindly questioned her, begging her to commit the truth to me, for I only sought to obtain a better understanding of facts. She told me in solemn, earnest words, that at first the manifestations were all they claimed for them,—performed without any human hands,—but after a time the influences changed, and she would, as usual, pass into the trance, only to arise therefrom, and find herself loosened from the ropes or fetters, and performing the physical feats of ringing the bells, beating the drum, etc. But she solemnly affirmed that she could not tell how she was loosened, nor did she know the truth until she woke from this trance or somnambulic state. She complained bitterly of the terrible, persecuting influences which followed her in her public career, and which seemed to change entirely the character of her surroundings. Now, did the sympathizing spirits of her opposers at last crowd in and take possession, in order to accomplish their designs in her conviction of "imposture," "humbug," "heresy," etc., etc? If such sought to do it, would not their invisible helpers prove as artful as they? Where is the inconsistency of such a conclusion?

—Elizabeth Stuart Phelps thinks there is more downright misery among women between the ages of eighteen and thirty than among any other class of people. This may be true. If [illegible] to do" is at the root of the [illegible] girl slept twenty-two days, [illegible] plot, and abused her friends [illegible] her "for over sleeping an hour in the morning." They told her it was lucky that they had n't buried her.

—O, Knave! who thinkest to cheat others, when thou cheatest only thyself. Dost thou think to go through this universe and continue to buy something with nothing?

—It is a very difficult thing to reconstruct a fool.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

STATUVOLISM OR ARTIFICIAL SOMNAMBULISM.

The Statuvolic Art—Its Cure in Pain, Inflammation, and Swelling—Case of Slip Disease—Incident of Dr. H. T. Child—Vital Force—Mental Aura—Some Spirits on a Very Low Plane.

BROTHER JONES—I have been asked the question, "What is the use of learning the statuvolic art—especially when there is nothing the matter with you?"

With your permission I will answer, that independent of the delightful feelings always experienced by those who enter that state deeply, and the pleasure and advantage of being clairvoyant or clear minded, the capability of entering the condition at will and independent of any one in case of an accident or illness of any kind, when in positions where the usual aid can not be rendered, then the importance of being able to exercise this art is fully realized.

Suppose that under such circumstances an arm was fractured, and aid could not be had for some hours, the consequence would be, that the person would be obliged to suffer pain, inflamation, and swelling of the parts, which would render the setting and dressing more difficult and painful.

Compare this with a case where the person, at will, could throw the limb into the statuvolic or insensible condition. In this case, pain, inflammation, swelling, and their consequences, would be impossible, and even after many hours of neglect upon the battle-field, the limb could be set and dressed without suffering, and the process of re-union would take place without any other inconvenience than to await its perfect restoration. Thousands of limbs and lives could have been saved in this way that otherwise were sacrificed, and as this remedy is always at hand, no time is lost or suffering endured.

Still further to illustrate the uses of this condition, I will give the following in detail:

Mrs. B. about one year ago was afflicted with hip disease, and was entirely relieved by keeping the hip in the insensible condition. On the 1st of August, 1871, as she was passing an old building that was being unroofed, she trod upon a nail, which entered the fleshy part of her foot through the shoe, so deeply, that it struck the central bones of the foot, and from the symptoms which ensued, must also have injured an important branch of the plantar nerve, for she said to have become quite pale and dejected immediately after the accident.

From some cause, which I mainly ascribed to a want of confidence upon her part—she could not, or did not, throw herself into the statuvolic condition, and by the next morning alarming feelings of lymphology supervened, which induced her parents to send for me.

I found her laboring under very uneasy feelings ab ut the head, neck, and back, accompanied by pain in all these parts. She was feverish, with flushed countenance, had no appetite, and was so much dejected that she took no interest in anything.

The foot, though somewhat swollen, was not very painful, and the wound, upon which some bacon and herbs had been tied, was discharging a little thin, unhealthy looking matter.

After some cheering and encouraging remarks, I insisted upon the necessity of throwing herself into the statuvolic condition, which she then, as usual, effected in an instant, and was as suddenly relieved. This time, however, before she threw herself out of the condition, I requested her to make a positive resolution that all pains, spasms, and uneasy feelings should subside, and that she would feel perfectly well, when she threw herself out of the condition. Upon my next visit, two days after, I found her in fine spirits, and perfectly well. She had kept the shoe on, and she kept the foot in an insensible condition, she walked about as if nothing bad happened. I have but to add, that if it be possible for the will to cure, it is also possible for it to create disease, and as no good ever results from entering the state, unless the mind of the subject is properly directed (whether by themselves or others), the necessity of a thorough knowledge of the true nature of the condition is the more imperative.

This was lately illustrated in the case of Dr. Henry T. Child, of Philadelphia, who had been in the condition hundreds of times, without permanent benefit to a poisoned hand (received at a post mortem examination three years and eight months ago), and was relieved of pain at the proper direction of his mind, and he now keeps the hand in an insensible condition, by an act of his will, and is getting better every day. A positive resolution upon his part, when in the condition, will render the cure permanent.

I have but to say in answer to a column and a half of imaginary seelings, crude objections, assertions, personalities, and self-praise, that as I have written nothing but the truth, I have nothing to regret.

In answer to the remarks of Dr. Child in regard to the existence of a "vital force," I would state, that as forces have no intelligence, what is seen by clairvoyants must either be a physical emanation (which is not necessarily "rotten" because it is physical) or a mental aura, which is more refined. Both these I admit are seen by clairvoyants, but because they are seen, is no proof that they are forces outside of an intelligent power in the faculties of man. If the Doctor means that "vital force" is something outside of the powers of intelligent faculties, I can not agree with him. It is true that children will walk in mazes, will often without any volition, recognize those who are well or ill-disposed to them, but do they not rather do so because their faculties reach out and perceive their surroundings, instead of getting that important information through a force that has no qualities of mind? Is not this vital force devoid of intelligence, and if so, how can it transmit that which it does not possess? and if individuals can throw themselves into a statuvolic condition—which he admits—what use can there be for an outside force?

Again: If mind can cure disease, it can also create it. What force can do this? Was it not the mind or a power in the faculties that the Doctor very (and so beautifully described) when the faculties were centre? Was it not the mental aura, which in spirits emerges to what Doctor Hare calls the "spiritual sun?" Why not ascribe what is seen to the operation of mind, instead of to an imaginary force which no one has ever been able to demonstrate? If the activity of the faculties, or of the functions of the faculties, does not produce the various modifications of mind, and their results, can we ascribe them to a blind force, that had neither will, motive, or power to think, much less to compare, imagine, or reflect?

The Doctor, I fear, is like many others, partly upon the magnetic plane, but is in a fair way of escaping its thralldom, as he is now making the necessary examinations for himself, and will soon be where I can intrust to him my hand, and my convictions are, that everything in nature eliminates a physical and a spiritual aura, according to its peculiar constitution, and that these in the Spirit World become more refined bodily as well as spiritually as they are good and pure, and that these eliminations are what is seen by clairvoyants; the one coming from matter, the other from Spirit, and in both cases are bright only as they are pure. Here they serve as a bond of union with spirits in the Spirit World—they are an eternal source of light.

I will conclude with a few words about spirits; and it gives me no pleasure to state that it can not be denied, that there are spirits who are still upon a very low plane in knowledge as well as conditions, and that having been educated (whether as men or spirits) in the magnetic school, most of them are still upon that plane, and as many of them upon the lower planes are jealous of an advancement above their stand-point, and by any one upon the earth sphere, they will use every means in their power to thwart any thing that would be likely to elevate the race above them. I would, therefore, say to all "prove the spirits," examine every thing for yourself and hold on only to that which is true and good.

WM. B. FAHNESTOCK.

LANCASTER, PENN.

Written for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

A SEARCH AFTER GOD'S PEOPLE.

An Open Letter to the Editor of the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

BY EDWIN ABNER DAVIS.

ED. JOURNAL—DEAR BROTHER:—Will you please to inform me where I can find God's people? I have heard of them so often, and listened to such frequent allusions to those paragons of excellence as God's people must necessarily be, that my desire to see them is unbounded. I have searched for this "very peculiar" people unremittingly, up to date, without the least shadow of success. I have been constantly on the wrong trail.

Can you give me any information concerning their whereabouts? You have traveled more than I, perhaps, and have had a better chance to meet with some of these people—God's people—his "peculiar" people.

When I was a boy my parents used to stick me all up nice on Sundays, and I had, oh, ever such shiny boots and clean clothes, and a slick head and clean face. In fact, I was scoured from head to foot regularly for the benefit of every week. Why, I hardly knew, myself, after crawling from the rusty shell worn during the six sinful days of the week.

My good father said this was done because it was the Lord's day—just as if the rest of the six days of the week wasn't the Lord's days, too! and we were going to God's house to worship, and meet with God's people, and that God didn't love dirty little boys who ran about the streets, or who stayed away from Sunday school and meeting.

It used to be a terrible task for me to sit in Sunday school an hour or more, and then remain a couple of hours for morning service, then a couple of hours more in the afternoon for the Bible class, and then through the evening services, which were sometimes protracted.

I never understood much that the minister said, only when he talked about God eternally damning somebody, and roasting them in sulphur if they did not repent and be baptized, etc. This tale used to make me shudder. I got to be terribly afraid of God. I used to fear him, and I never manifested any particular love for him. The church people's God, or the God of the Bible, was n't exactly a lovely kind, jolly sort of a fellow.

I used to wonder why God let the devil go about the world making people act wickedly, and then damn them for what the devil did! That puzzled me. If the devil really had so much power over mankind that he was enabling nine tenths of the people to destruction, why, it was the devil who ought to be damned, and not poor weak mankind. So I thought. In fact, I never could understand the whole business, somehow or other, any more than I could understand the affairs of the other chap. The gospel plan of salvation I could not see into, either. I was in a muddle about it. I had Adam and Eve and the devil and the forbidden fruit, and the devil being cast out of heaven, and Jesus Christ and the Virgin Mary, and the immaculate conception, and the crucifixion and resurrection, and day of judgment, and hell and an angry God, all mixed up. Our preacher would throw over the "mysteries of godliness," that the ways of God were past finding out, etc. And in the next breath he would say the bible was written by divine dictation, very, very plain to be understood, indeed! But the whole thing was Greek to me. I never could get it through my thick skull and arrange it systematically, mathematically, philosophically and reasonably.

So I got to where I thought I had a faint insight into this "mystery of godliness," and that the whole thing was all square, easy to comprehend, and all that, but in a little while I would have my dose upset again, and would be in a more bewildered state of mind than ever.

My family and Christian friends said this was because of the wickedness of my heart, that I hadn't been "born again" quite enough; that the devil was still busy with me; that I was full of bitterness and bonds of iniquity," and very many were the prayers offered up in my behalf, but seemingly in vain. Finally it was said I had refused the grace of God; and was given over entirely to the wicked one!

It's wonderful strange how cool my family take this matter even to the present day. Why, if I knew one of my children was in deadly peril, I would risk my life to extricate that child, or forever would avail, I would be on my bended knees continually until the threatened danger was over. I would know no rest, day or night until I had the child safe. I would even go to h—l for it. Now, good Christian parents don't appear half so anxious about the eternal welfare of their children as they do about their temporal welfare, and some parents care very little for the temporal welfare of their children in their own pursuit after wealth, luxury and ease.

But about God's people. I am searching for them. If you do not know where they can be found, perhaps you have some friends or pals from who can give me the desired information. Rumor says such a people do actually exist. I am certain I did not find these people I am in search of in the big church I went to every Sunday. That is to say, the people who met there to worship were not "peculiarly" such a people as the God of the universe would especially delight in owning. So I think. For some of them would lie and cheat, and do all manner of mean things, and there would be jealousies and backbitings, and ill-feeling and contentions, and strifes one with another. I am quite confident the All-Father would never select such people to fill up and inhabit his "mansions in the skies" (?) to the exclusion of every body else. Others, "not of that fold," though perhaps just as good, who do not accept the teachings of old theology, or believe in a literal hell, literally burning, to be roasted in sulphur, spitted, grilled, fried, boiled, steamed, baked and damned forever. Mercy! forever! Yes. Well, that's a long time, ain't it?

So I have come to the conclusion that the God of the universe don't have any more regard for church people than he does for outside heathen. I find men as good people, just as honest people, and far more liberal people outside the churches than in them. I find I would as soon have a man who would drive a beggar from his door and allow him to die neglected in the gutter, I would greet the loudest praying Christian in the orthodox churches. This may seem harsh, but it is nevertheless true. I have known such Christians. I have one in my mind's eye now, whose son, living in a distant state, became very much distressed by poverty and reduced by sickness. His family were almost on the verge of utter destitution and want. As a last resort, son wrote to his father, who was abundantly able to help him, begging a little aid. The father, a shining light in one of the churches treated the appeal from his suffering child with disdain, remarking that he had worked for his money, and his son must do the same. And yet this Christian father expects to be one of the jewels gathered up by Jesus at the last day; expects to sit at the right hand of God in the "bright sometime over there;" expects to receive a crown of glory in the everlasting kingdom of the faithful!

Comment is unnecessary. It is, perhaps, one of the "mysteries of godliness," which I can not understand, that the Christian religion is alleged to has fall faith that he will be saved at the last grand day.

God's people! The orthodox God may have a people peculiarly his own. I will not dispute this. But when Brother Francis, after nearly a year's search after this mysterious personage, declares he is not to be found, that the orthodox God is a myth, a nonentity, what then? If such a being is altogether a mere idea, having no real existence, certainly he can have no people, and the churches are worshiping an ideal creation of their own, and instead of them being God's peculiar people, they are a people with a peculiar God!

I have a deep and abiding reverence for the God of the universe. No Christian worships his God more than I do mine. The mighty power which framed the universe, and the countless worlds which abound in it; the unseen force which fashioned the sun, the moon and the stars, through occult, and beyond my comprehension, almost, is to me a grand theme for thought.

The kind of Nature which they claim my holiest thoughts, for I know he never repented, never made a mistake, never turned back, never sends "strong delusions" upon mankind, "that they should believe a lie and be damned." The God of Nature never made a wicked devil, with more power than himself, for the purpose of leading his children into snares, and into the bubbling, unending fires of an orthodox hell. Not at all. The great father of the universe never did anything of the kind. The "every day sinners with the wicked" orthodox God is reported to be guilty of such things, but not my God—the God of Nature.

God's people! Do you know where they reside? Tell me, for there I wish to locate. There will I cast my lot, and say with one of old, "Thy people shall be my people, thy God my God!"

I feel assured that the ministers appointed to preside over such a people would not be guilty of incontinence. I hardly believe they would elope with any of the sisters of their congregation, or seduce any of the fair daughters of the flock. Do you? You have traveled, and ought to know.

If you know where the peculiar people are—God's peculiar people—please to inform me immediately on receipt of this. I have no doubt about them that I would almost be willing to take a trip to Chicago to get a glimpse of their heavenly countenances.

Do they live at, or near Chicago? Are they white, black, or copper colored, yellow or brown? Are a people here on earth peculiarly God's? Just think of it! Why as honest, intelligent, truthful, loving, affectionate meek, humble, charitable, kind and virtuous people as I have ever found yet anywhere, mind you; no cheating, lying, stealing, backbiting, gambling or jealousies; no hatred in families. No ostracising sons or daughters; no petty meanness. All is peace, love, harmony. All work together, for and another and for humanity. What a happy family!

If you know of no such people near Chicago, please designate the exact spot on the world's map where they can be found, and if you do not wish to so, please write to the New York Ledger. I feel very confident a truthful and sensible answer will be found to your query in its "Answers to Correspondents."

You need not look in the churches for God's people. I have searched them pretty thoroughly, and can find nothing there to answer the description. As I have said before, I find the churches have peculiar Gods, and peculiar ways of doing peculiarly like their God in character, and act just like he is represented to act—but when we square the matter with level and compass, we say emphatically that such a people as the God of the universe would pick out as his own, can not be found in the church. From pagan, ossenical Catholicism, to bigoted, gloomy Adventism, no such people, possessing the attributes of the God of nature. For God's special people would certainly be like him in many ways. At all events, they would certainly have the Christ spirit, which the majority of church people most lamentably lack.

If God's peculiar people can not be found in the orthodox churches, where shall we look for them? The churches have monopolized the bible, and their priests profess to hold in their hands the keys of heaven, and say who shall or who shall not go into the kingdom.

The Catholic church says, "We are the one infallible true church. Outside of Catholicism there is no salvation." The Protestant says, "You must repent and be baptized, and subscribe to our church, and live up to the rules of the church, or ye can in nowise enter the kingdom of heaven."

The Methodist says, "The Bible way also exactly right. You must be sprinkled. Jesus was sprinkled. Baptism be all, our 'Church Discipline' must be rigidly observed, and our love feasts and prayer meetings regularly attended, and the contributions box well filled."

The Presbyterian don't agree with any of them. He believes in fore-ordination. If a man is born to be hanged he will never be drowned. He teaches that certain ones will be saved and certain ones damned, and that God knows his fate of persons as soon as they enter the world. I would like to ask right here: Suppose one of the wretches who are fore ordained to be damned, by some means or other becomes a pious man, and for years prays, and lives always a good consistent Christian, faithfully observing the church rules, will that one be lost or saved? Or, do such cases never happen? Or, do the elect invariably become Presbyterians? I would like to know something about this.

We find the churches all clashing—each trying to pull down the other and build upon its ruins. Each one interprets God's holy word (?), the bible, in a different way. Each one is full of bitterness, strife, discord and bitterness among the christian sects. And each claims to have God's special favor, to be his "peculiar people." Well, they certainly are peculiar—very peculiar.

We will take a look, some time, outside the churches, for God's people, and see if they can be found. We will peer among the high and low, rich and poor, in legislatures and in the halls of congress, among all kinds of trades men and grades of people. We shall not anticipate success or failure, but leave the subject to the logic of events.

St. Joseph, Mo.

CLAIRVOYANCE.

Letter from Brush Creek, Kansas.

BROTHER JONES:—In a small clairvoyant state, I have been taught many beautiful lessons. Long had I pondered on the various conditions under which different persons are born—some at the Five Points, where every influence is calculated to stamp them for deep degradation and vice, and these conditions entirely beyond their control; others come into existence under favorable conditions, so that without an effort they can attain heights of moral beauty and purity, and all this by no merit of their own. Some have great intellects, capable of enjoying so much, others almost idiotic. Why is my mind so shallow, while my brother can grasp so much? I know these are natural causes for all these things, but where the justice to the individual?

While pondering these things there was presented to my vision a dark mountain with a ladder reaching against it, and many persons were on the steps. At last I seemed to be laid way on the ladder, climbing, making every effort to reach the topmost round, when a voice said to me, "Do not try to get up faster than you can rest."

I looked, and saw a few young converts, of different sects, ascending the ladder, and the same voice said, "These are blind, and can not see when they arrive at the top."

At last I said, "I can see, daylight is breaking." At the same time I saw the beautiful dawn appearing over the top and around the side of the mountain.

JANE M——.

Price-List Of Books.

LIST OF BOOKS FOR SALE AT THIS OFFICE.

All orders by mail, with the price of books desired, and the additional amount mentioned in the following list of prices for postage, will meet with prompt attention.

	Postage	Price
Age of Reason and Examination of the Prophecies	12	10
Artificial Somnambulism. By Dr. Johnson	1.50	30
A Revelation of Departed Spirits among the Shakers	.20	05
Alton Vale, a Story for the times, by Lois Waisbrooker	1.20	16
American Crisis, by Warren Chase	.16	02
Answers to Questions Practical and Spiritual. Device	1.60	20
Apocryphal New Testament	1.20	16
A Test into Sacred Theology, by Rev. Orrin Abbot. Paper	.50	02
Age of Reason, by Thomas Paine. Cloth	.50	16
A Lecture in Rhyme—The Past, Present and Future, by Mrs. F. A. Logan	.15
Annals of History, or History and Laws of Creation, Vol I, by Hudson Tuttle	1.20	20
Arcana of Nature, or the Philosophy of Spiritual Existence, and of the Spirit-World, Vol I, by Hudson Tuttle	1.20	20
A B C of Life, by A. B. Child	.25	02
Answers to Questions, by Warren Chase	1.20	20
After Death, or Disembodied Man, by Randolph	1.60	20
Cloth	1.80	30
Answering Critic, by A. J. Davis	1.60	16
Apostles, (translated from the French) by Renan	1.75	20
A Stellar Key to the Summer Land by A. J. Davis	1.60	16
Astro-Theological Lectures by Rev. Robert Taylor	2.00	24
A Kiss for a Blow, a Book for children by H. C. Wright, small edition	.25	12
Large do	.50	16
Antiquity and Duration of the World by G. H. Toulmin, M. D.	.20	1
An Ass in the Sponser, by Sopa. Cloth,	75	12
Paper,	.50	04
A Roman Lawyer in Jerusalem in the first century by W. W. Story	.15	2
Address on Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster	.15	.02
Analogy Between the Facts of the Bible and the Facts of Order: Spiritualism, by T. G. Forster	.15	.02
Arcana of Spiritualism, by H. Tuttle	2.00	.24
Biography of Satan, By E. Graves Price 35 Cents	40
Better Views of Living, by A. B. Child	1.00	12
Bible of Bibles, by Kneeland (a Poetic Work,) by Hudson and Emma Tuttle	1.25	16
Beyond the Breakers, a Tale of Village Life in the West, by Robert Dale Owen	1.60	24
Book of Poems, by J. Wm. Van Namee. Cloth	.75	8
Business of Police, by Mrs. J. S. Adams, a book for every Householder	1.20	16
Bethesda, by Professor W. Denton	.20	2
Blagvat-Geeta, or Hindoo New Testament	1.20	.16
Compound Rise natural Laws of Life and Health, by A. E. Gardner, A. M. M. D. Paper	1.00	06
Cloth	1.50	10
Gumbor Constitution of Man	1.75	12
Common Sense Thoughts on the Bible, by William Denton	.10	02
Cosmology, by G. W. Rumney, M. D	1.50	20
Christianity and Infidelity	1.20	20
Christ Idea in History, H. Tuttle	1.75	16
Chester Family, or the Curse of the Drunkard's Apple-tree, by Judge M. Friend, with an introduction by Mrs. H. Wright	1.50	12
Christ and the people, by A. B. Child, M.D	1.25	16
Christianity Not Older nor Spiritualism Superior to Christianity, —Wm. Denton	.10	02
Criticism on the Theological Idea of Deity, by H. D. Graves	1.60	.16
Descent of Man, by Darwin Two Vols. ($8.00 per Vol)	4.00	.48
Davenport Brothers, their Remarkable and Interesting History	1.60	20
Day of Doom, A Poetical Description of the Great and Last Judgment with other pieces, from the Seventeenth Century	1.60	15
Devil's Pulpit, by Rev. Robert Taylor, with Sketch of the Author's Life	1.60	20
Dawn, A Novel of intense interest to progressive people	1.75	24
Dealings with the Dead, by P. B. Randolph	75	12
Death and the After Life, by A. J. Davis, paper 60, postage 4, cloth	75	12
Errors of the Bible, (Demonstrated by the Truths of Nature. By Rodny. G. Wright. Paper, 35 cts; postage 4 cts. Cloth	.50	8
Easter Hall, a Theological Romance	.50	04
Empire of the Mother, over the Character and Destiny of the Sex. H. C. G. Wright paper	.50	04
Cloth	.75	12
Footfalls on the Boundary of Another World, by Robert Dale Owen	1.75	24
Free Thoughts Concerning Religion, or Nature vs Theology, by A. J. Davis	.20	2
Fugitive Wife, by Warren Chase. Paper	.25	4
Festival Night, an Inspirational Poem, Mrs. M. J. Wilcoxson, Medium	.5	1
Gentle, a Tale of the Great Rebellion, by Emma Hardinge	1.20	12
Gist of Spiritualism, by Warren Chase	.50	04
Great Harmonia, by A. J. Davis. 5 vols, viz: Vol. I The Physician; Vol. II The Teacher; Vol. III The Seer; Vol. IV The Reformer; Vol. V. The Thinker. Each	1.60	20
Gymnastic Manual for Students and Students	1.50	20
God in his Unity, by Hudson Tuttle	1.20	16
God Dealing with Slavery, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. Paper,	.75	08
Habits of Good Society	1.75	.20
Hierophant, or Glimpses from the Past, by O. C. Hewett	1.00	.08
Health by Good Living W. W. Hall M. D	1.50	20
Harbinger of Health, by A. J. Davis	1.60	20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper	.50	5
Cloth	.75	12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism	1.50	24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. G. Wright	.30	02
How and Why I became a Spiritualist	.75	12
How to Live in Harmony, by Hudson Tuttle	1.20	16
God Dealing with Slavery, by Thomas Richmond. Cloth, $1.00; postage, 12 cents. Paper,	.75	08
Habits of Good Society	1.75	.20
Hierophant, or Glimpses from the Past, by O. C. Hewett	1.00	.08
Health by Good Living W. W. Hall M. D	1.50	20
Harbinger of Health, by A. J. Davis	1.60	20
Harmonial Man, or Thoughts for the Age, by A. J. Davis, Paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	12
History and Philosophy of Evil, by A. J. Davis Paper	.50	5
Cloth	.75	12
Hayward's Book of all Religions, including Spiritualism	1.50	24
Holy Bible and Mother Goose, by H. G. Wright	.30	02
How and Why I became a Spiritualist	.75	12
How to Live in Harmony, by Hudson Tuttle	1.20	16
Hudson Harlow's Poem, by Fullmer	.25	02
Hell: Is Endless Punishment Scriptural	.10	02
How to Babe, by J. F. Miller, M. D. Paper	.50	02
Cloth	.75	12
Hebrolia, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, cents cts; cloth	.50	12
Hollow Globe	2.00	.20
History and Philosophy of Marriage, or Polygamy and Monogamy	1.20	16
History of the Intellectual Development of Europe, by J. W. Draper, M. D., L. L. D. 2 vols	3.00	.60
Harmonial Philosophy, Standard and Dictionary, of the Conditions and Course of the Life of Man, by J. W. Draper, M. D., L. L. D. 600 pages, cloth $3.00	.60
History of the supernatural, (2 Vols., 640 pages each)	3.00	.45
Hit, by Dr. Mary E. Walker	1.50	.16
Immortality, by A. J. Davis	1.75	20
Important Truths, a book for every child	.25	2
Is the Bible Divine? by S. J. Finney, paper	.25	2
Cloth	.50	12
Is there a Devil? The argument Pro and Con	.25	2
Inspirer's Text Book, by Robert Cooper	1.25	16
Interpretive Communications from Spirit Land, Mrs. H. B. Parks, Medium	1.25	16
Incidents in my Life, by Dr. D. D. Home, Introduction by Judge Edmonds	1.25	16
Infidel, or Engineer's Text Book by Robert Cooper	.25	2
Is It the Despair of Science? by W. D. Gunning	.15	02
Issue of Hippocrates, by Samuel Forster	.50	06
Jehovah Unveiled, or the Character of the Jewish Deity Delineated	.50	4
Jesus of Nazareth, not Divine, but Inspired from the Throne, by Sarah H. Brimhall	1.60	12
Kidder's Secrets of Bee Keeping. Price, paper bound 50 cents	.10	02
Koran, with explanatory notes, by George Sale 2 vo. 670 pages, best edition yet published	3.00	40
Kamet. Or, Life of Mohammed, Translated by George Sale. 12 mo. 447 pages	1.60	.24
Life Scenes of the Rose Cro, by Warren Jones	1.50	12
Love's Unfolding	1.50	12
Lectures on Geology, with critical and explanatory observations of his writings, by G. Vale	1.50	16
Life of Jesus, by Renan	1.75	20
Love and its Various History, by P. B. Randolph	1.50	16
Lands of the Golden Age, by T. L. Harris	1.50	16
Lyceum Declamations, by Hamilton, as in 8, and as in 12	.10	02
Lyceum Manual, by C. S. Woodruff, M. D	1.00	16
Life and Moral Actions of Gautama, by H. H. C. Wright	.25	02
Letter to Elder Miles Grant by Rev. Moses Hull	.25	02
Living Present, Dead Past, by S. Wright. Cloth, Paper,	.50	4
Lyceum Guide. Cloth cover	1.50	16
Lyceum Guide, 12 cents. Paper	.25	24
My Love and I, by Abby M. Laffin Paper	.50	04
Magic Staff, an Auto-Biography of A. J. Davis	1.75	24
Manual, by Hydes Spiritual Telegraph	.50	04
Mediums, their Development and Power, by S. Wright	.50	04
Mystery of Angels Explained, by A. E. Newton	.50	8
Manual of Prayer	.25	02
Manual of Freemasonry	1.50	20
Mrs. Tuttle's Poem Life	1.50	20
Mystery of the Beast of Life, by D. S. Gallwallader	.50	.06
Manual for Children, (for Lyceums,) by A. J. Davis	.25	2
Mediums	.10	2
Marriage, Its	.25	4
Marriage, Celibacy and Love	1.50	20
Mental Alchemy, by H. Wm. Percival	1.50	20
Nature's Divine Revelations, by Andrew Jackson Davis	2.50	40
New Testament Miracles, and Modern Miracles, by J. H. Fowler	.10	4
Night Side of Nature, by Crow	1.25	.20
Outcast of Life. Through Dr. J. C. Grimal, Medium,	.25	04
Orthodoxy Error, and Spiritualism Is True, by Wm. Denton	.10	02
Our Planet, Geology by Denton	1.50	20
Optimism. The Lesson of Love	1.50	20
Origin of Species Darwin	2.00	.24
Origin of Species, and Primitive Condition of Man, by John Lubbock	2.00	.24
One Religion, Many Creeds, by Ross Winans	1.50	.25
Origin of Species, with Notes and References, by G. F. Kittredge	.10	.02
Persons and Events, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Present and Future, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Pre-Existence Man, by Randolph	1.50	20
Psychology of Nature, by C. Morris, M. D	1.00	12
Pleasantville—The despair of Science, by Spes Sargent	1.25	16
Philosophy of Spiritual Intercourse. A. J. Davis. Paper 60 cts; postage 8 cts Cloth	1.00	.16
Principles of Nature, by Mrs. M. M. King	1.75	.24
Poems from the Inner Life, by Lords Dolon,	1.50	16
Philosophy of Creation, by Thomas Paine, through Horace Wood, Medium. Cloth,	.60	06
Paper,	.30	04
Real Life in Spirit Land given Inspirationally by Mrs. Maria M. King	1.00	12
Rules for forming Spiritual Circles. by Emma Hardinge	.5	02
Sexual Physiology, by E. T. Trall, M. D	1.00	20
Summer Visitors, Dictated through a clairvoyant	1.25	20
Spiritual Harp	2.00	24
Abridged Edition	1.00	16
Sequel to the Love Life, by the Spirit of Dr. R. E. Rose	.20	2
Spiritual Tracts by Judge Edmonds	.50	4
Self Abnegation; or the true King and Queen, by H. C. Wright. Paper	.50	4
Cloth	.75	12
Spiritualism, or Directions in Development, by A. M. Ladis Focus	.20	2
Soul Affinity, by A. B. Child, M. D.	.25	02
Synopsis to the Philosophy of Life, by Mrs. R. G. Willard	2.00	24
Six Lectures on Theology and Nature, by Emma Hardinge, Paper	.75	08
Cloth	1.00
Soul of Things, by William and Elizabeth Denton	1.50	20
Spirit Manifestations, by Adin Ballou	1.25	20
Spirit Mysteries Explained, by A. J. Davis	1.50	20
Supremacy of Heaven, by Moses Hull	.10	.02
Social Evil, by Mrs. M. M. King	.20
Spiritual Philosophy versus Diabolism, by Mrs. M. M. King	.20
Sound and Nonsense, S. M. Landis, M. D	1.50	20
Songs of Life,—S. W. Tucker	20	02
Spiritual Songs, S. W. Tucker	15	02
Spirit Life, by Modern Parker, through the Mediumship of Miss B. Ramsdell	.50	06
Seven Hour System of Grammar, by Prof. D. P. Howe	1.50	20
Paper,	.50	.04
Seize on Evil, by Joel Moody	1.75	.20
See-ship, Ship-ship	1.50	20
Spiritual Manifestations by J. S. Rue	10	.05
Sunday Question and self contradictions of the Bible	.50	.06
Synagogue	1.00	.12
The Feminist, by A. J. Davis	1.00	12
The tresco citable Records, or Genesis and Geology, by Wm. Denton,	.25	04
Cloth,	.40	06
The Bible in India,	2.00	30
The Pathway of Woman, an Inspirational Story, by J. William Van Namee,	1.50	16
The Mole in the Balance,	1.50	16
That Terrible Question, by Moses Hull	.10	.02
True Love. What it is, and What it is not, by A. B. Davis	.5	02
The Present Crisis, by Leroy Sunderland	$1.50	16
Tale of A Physician, by A. J. Davis,	$1.50	16
The Future Life, by Mrs. Sweet,	1.50	20
The Present Life, by Mrs. Sweet Hull,	1.50	20
The Gates Wide Open, by George Wood,	1.50	20
The Gates Ajar, by Miss. E. S. Phelps	1.50	16
The Spirit Minister, by H. C. Gross,	.75	12
The Pearl Diver by Dr. O. W. Kirby	.15
The Gospel of Good and Evil, by Silver	1.50	16
The Trance, by Leroy Sunderland	1.50	16
The Great Secret, by W. Nicolay	1.00	14
The Merits of Jesus Christ and the Merits of Thomas Paine as a substitute for Morals in others. What is the difference between them? H. C. Wright	.25	2
The Philosophical Dictionary of Voltaire. Fifth American Edition, fifty octavo pages, two compact pages, forming the most correct edition in the English Language. Contains more matter than the London Edition, which sells for $10.00	5.00	60
The Diegesis, by Rev. Robert Taylor, written by him while imprisoned for blasphemy. This work is a history of the origin, evidence, and early history of Christianity.	1.50	20
The Inner Mystery, an Inspirational Poem by Lizzie Doten	.20	02
The Debtor, William Denton	.10	2
The Voice, by Warren Sumner Barlow	1.25	16
The Ignorant Philosopher, volume	1.50	20
The Universe of Spirit, by P. B. Randolph	1.50	20
Theological and Miscellaneous Writings of Thomas Paine	1.50	16
Thomas Paine's Pilgrimage in the Spirit World	.75	.08
The System of Nature, or Laws of the Moral and Physical World, Baron D' Holbach	3.50	24
The Psalms of Life, by J. S. Adams. Paper cover,	.50	04
Board cover	.75	12
Cloth	1.00	16
Tobacco and its Effects, by H. Gibbons, M. D	.20	02
The Penetralia, by A. J. Davis	1.75	24
The Tale of a Lifetime Tragedy	.75	.12
The Restoration Dream Book, compiled from all long ag s, by P. B. Randolph	.50	.04
The Art of Conversation	1.50	.16
The Age of Wonders, Reading, and Speaking	1.50	.16
Undersell on Mesmerism, Post-paid	1.50
Unhappy Marriage, by A. B. Child	.25	2
Unwelcome Child, by Henry C. Wright, Paper	.25	2
Cloth	.50	12
Voice of Prayer, by Barlow	.25	.02
Vestiges of Creation,	.75	.08
Vital Force, tested and how preserved, by F. F. Miller, M. D. Paper, 50 cts; Cloth,	1.00	12
Volney's Ruins; or Meditations on the Revolutions of Empires, with Biographical Notice by Count Daru	1.00	12
What is Right, William Denton	.10	2
What is Spiritualism, and what Spiritualists Have a Creed? by Mrs. M. M. King	.25
Whatever is, is Right, A. B. Child, M.D	1.00	16
Who Wrote the Bible	.75	12
Wolf in sheep's Clothing, or God in the Constitution. Moses Hull	.10	.02
Your Book of Spiritualism. Cloth,	1.25	20
Paper	1.00	08

WE ARE ALSO NOW IN A SITUATION TO FURNISH Miscellaneous books of any kind published at regular prices, on receipt of the money, will send them by mail or express as may be desired. If sent by mail, one fifth more than the regular cost of the book will be required to pay postage. The patronage of our friends is solicited. In making remittances for books, buy postal orders when practicable. If postal orders cannot be had, register your letters.

H. SNOW,

319 KEARNEY ST., (Up Stairs,) SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

Keeps for sale the

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL,

And a general variety of

Spiritualist and Reform Books,

At Eastern prices. Also, Oriental Tobacco Preparations, Spencer's Positive and Negative Powders, Adams & Co.'s Golden Pinocleon, Dr. Storer's Nitrite Compound, etc. Catalogues and Circulars mailed free. Remittances in U. S. currency and postage stamps received at par. Address, MESSIAH SNOW, P. O. Box 117, San Francisco, Cal.

WARREN CHASE & CO.,

No. 614 NORTH FIFTH ST., ST LOUIS, MO.,

KEEP constantly on hand all the publications of the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, Wm. White & Co., J. P. Mendum, Adams & Co., and all other popular liberal literature, including RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL and BANNER OF LIGHT, Magazines, Photographs, Parlor Games, Golden Pens, Stationery, etc.

PARKER'S
BREECH-LOADING DOUBLE BARRELED
SHOT GUN
BEST IN THE WORLD.
PARKER BROTHERS, WEST MERIDEN, CONN.
SEND FOR A CIRCULAR.
New York Office, 97 REEKMAN ST.

THE MACHINE THAT PAYS!
SEND THE CENTS TO 27 PARK PLACE, NEW YORK CITY, and obtain a Sample, Machine and Terms. Agents wanted in every County in the United States.

Rail-Roads.

SUMMER ARRANGEMENT.

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF TRAINS.

Chicago and Northwestern Railroad—Council Bluffs and Omaha Line—Depot North Wells street

Ticket Office, South-east corner of Clark and Lake streets.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Cedar Rapids Passenger	8.30 a. m.	6.50 p. m.
Council Bluffs Express	*10.45 a. m.	8.30 p. m.
Rock Island Express	10.30 a. m.	*2.30 p. m.
Pacific Night Express	12.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.
Rock Island Night Passenger	*10.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.
Dixon Passenger	*4.00 p. m.	*12.10 a. m.

Prospect Line.

Prospect and Dunleith Pass	*9.00 a. m.	*7.15 a. m.
Prospect and Dunleith Pass	*6.05 p. m.	*2.00 p. m.
Rockford, Rigin, Fox River and State Line	*4.00 p. m.	*11.10 a. m.
St. Charles and High Passenger	*3.15 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Junction Passenger	4.30 p. m.	10.30 a. m.
Lombard Accommodation	*6.10 p. m.	*8.54 a. m.

Milwaukee Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street.

Milwaukee Mail	*9.00 a. m.	*10.10 a. m.
Day Express	*9.45 a. m.	*6.40 p. m.
Evanston Accommodation	*1.00 a. m.	*2.50 p. m.
Niles Hill, Evanston, and Highland Park	1.00 p. m.	3.40 p. m.
Afternoon Pass	*5.45 p. m.	*8.10 a. m.
Kenosha Pass	*6.10 p. m.	*9.15 a. m.
Waukegan Passenger	*6.30 p. m.	*8.45 a. m.
Waukegan do	11.00 p. m.	5.00 a. m.
Milwaukee do	11.00 p. m.	5.00 a. m.

Kenosha and Waukegan trains leave from Wells street Depot.

Wisconsin Division—Depot corner of Canal and Kinzie street

St. Paul Express	*10.30 a. m.	*7.15 p. m.
Night Passenger	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.
Janesville Accommodation	*8.00 p. m.	*1.00 p. m.
Woodstock Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*10.50 a. m.
Barrington Accommodation	6.15 p. m.	7.05 a. m.

GEO. L. DUNLAP, General Superintendent.

H. P. Stanwood, General Ticket Agent

Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Rail-Road.

Depot corner Van Buren and Sherman streets. Ticket Office 56 South Clark street.

Mail	*9.30 a. m.	*7.50 p. m.
Special N Y Express	*9.30 a. m.	*4.00 p. m.
Hilsdrath Accommodation	*8.30 p. m.	*10.30 a. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	3.30 p. m.	7.20 a. m.
Night Express	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

Detroit and Grand Rapids Line.

Day Express	*7.30 a. m.	*7.50 p. m.
Night "	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.

P. B. Moran, Gen'l Pass. Agt., 56 Clark st., Chicago.

Michigan Central Railroad—Union Depot, foot of Lake street

Ticket Office-Lake st., cor. Dearborn—Passenger trains of this company leave and arrive at Chicago as follows:

Mail Train	*8.25 a. m.	*9.05 p. m
Past New York Express	*9.00 a. m.	*6.00 p. m.
Atlantic Express (daily)	12.15 p. m.	10.00 a. m.
Night Express	*9.00 p. m.	*6.30 a. m.
Kalamazoo Accommodation	*4.10 p. m.	*12.00 m

Chatsworth and Louisville Trains

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*9.20 p. m
Through Express	10.30 p. m.	10.30 a. m

for St. Joseph via New Buffalo.

Day Express	*9.00 a. m.	*11.30 a. m
Accommodation	*4.30 p. m.	*6.50 p. m

HENRY C. WENTWORTH, General Passenger Agent.

S. B. SANBORN, Gen'l Superintendent, Chicago.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy

Ticket Office 63 Clark St., opposite Sherman House. Union Depot, foot of Lake St.

Hinsdale Accommodation	*7.05 a. m.	*8.15 p. m
Mail and Express	7.30 a. m.	5.00 p. m.
Pacific Past Line	*11.45 a. m.	*8.15 p.m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*1.05 p. m.	*8.50 p. m.
Mendota Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	*9.45 a. m.
Mendota Express	*6.00 p. m.	*10.45 a. m.
Aurora Passenger	*6.30 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Hinsdale Accommodation	*6.15 p. m.	*8.50 a. m.
Pacific Night Express	10.00 p. m.	7.00 a. m.

ROBERT HARRIS, Superintendent.

SAMUEL POWELL, Gen'l Ticket Agt. Office in Gt. Cent. Depot

Illinois Central—Depot, Foot of Lake street.

Cairo Mail	*9.30 a. m.	*7.45 p. m
Cairo Express	10.30 a. m.	10.30 p. m.
Kankak Day Passenger	*4.30 p. m.	*7.45 p. m.
Kankak Night Passenger	*8.30 p. m.	*7.00 a. m.

On Saturdays the train will leave at 4.45 p. m.

Chicago Express	*4.00 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.
Hyde Park and Oak Woods	*9.30 a. m.	*10.30 a. m.
" " " "	*2.30 p. m.	*3.30 p. m.
" " " "	*5.30 p. m.	*6.30 p. m.
" " " "	*12.15 p. m.	*1.45 p. m.
" " " "	*3.15 p. m.	*4.45 p. m.
Lightning Express	2.00 p. m.	*9.30 a. m.

*Except Sundays. †Runs through to St. Louis every night. ‡Saturdays and Sundays excepted. §Except Monday.

T. B. BLACKSTONE, Pres. & Gen'l Superintendent.

A. HOWARD, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Office 56 Dearborn st.

CHICAGO, DANVILLE AND VINCENNES RAILROAD.

Milwaukee Depot—Corner Canal and Kinzie Sts., West Side. Freight Office at G., G. & I. C. Co.'s Office, corner Halsted and Carroll sts.

Mail Train Chicago time, ... 3.45 p. m. 9.15 a. m.

Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad.

cor Van Buren and Sherman Streets.

Pacific day Express	10.00 a.m.	6.15 p.m.
" Accommodation	*3.30 p.m.	*9.00 a.m.
Pacific Night Express	11.45 p.m.	7.00 a.m.

An elegant parlor sleeping car is attached to the 10 a. m. train, running through to Council Bluffs and Omaha.

E. H. SANFORD, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

E. St. JOHN, Gen'l Ticket Agent.

Pittsburg, Cincinnati, & St. Louis R. R.—Cincinnati Air Line.

Cincinnati Express	*9.05 a. m.	9.00 a. m.
Fast Line	*11.45 a. m.	11.40 p. m.
Cincinnati Night Express	*7.45 p. m.	*8.25 p. m.
Columbus Night Express	*7.45 p. m.
Cincinnati Night Express	11.40 p. m.	9.35 a. m.

H. B. Ledyard, Gen'l Pass. Agt., United States Express Building and Dearborn streets.

Goodrich's Passenger Steamers.

For Milwaukee and West Shore ports *daily at 9.30 a. m.
For Grand Haven and West Shore ports *daily at 7.00 p. m.
For Muskegon and Newton Harbor, *daily at 10 a. m.
Green Bay Ports, Tuesdays and Fridays at 7 p. m.

*Sundays excepted. †Mondays excepted. ‡Saturdays excepted.

CARRIAGE MANUFACTORY.

Waverly, N. Y.

THE UNDERSIGNED MANUFACTURES TO ORDER, and keeps on hand all varieties of Open and Top Buggies of the Best Styles; Platform Spring Wagons, with two or more seats, with or without Jop. This wagon is an improvement on the old two-spring wagon, and as a business wagon, or for family use, is unsurpassed. Best quality of material and first-class workmen employed, and all work WARRANTED.

Situated on the Erie R. R., we have good facilities for shipping, and are constantly sending work to all parts of the country.

H. KINNEY.

v9 n23 6m.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF CREATION

Unfolding the laws of the Progressive Development of Nature, and comprising the Philosophy of Mind, Spirit, and Spirit world. By Thomas Paine, through the Instrumentality of Horace G. Wood, Medium.

Price 75 cents, postage 6 cents. For sale at this office

NEW EDITION—REVISED AND CORRECTED.

THE VOICES

Three Poems.

VOICE OF SUPERSTITION.

VOICE OF NATURE.

VOICE OF A PEBBLE.

By Warren Sumner Barlow.

THIS volume is startling in its originality of purpose, and is destined to make deeper inroads among sectarian bigots than any work that has hitherto appeared. THE VOICE OF SUPERSTITION takes the creeds at their word, and proves by numerous passages from the Bible that the God of Moses has been defeated by Satan, now the Savior of Eden to Mount Calvary!

THE VOICE OF NATURE represents God in the light of Reason and Philosophy—His unchangeable and glorious attributes. While others have too often only demolished, this author has erected a beautiful Temple on the ruins of its partition. Judge Baker, of New York, in his review of this poem, says: "It will unquestionably cause the author to be classed among the ablest and most gifted didactic poets of the age."

THE VOICE OF A PEBBLE delineates the individuality in matter and Mind, fraternal Charity and Love.

The book is a repository of original thought, awaking noble conceptions of God and man, forcible and pleasing in style, and is one of the few works that we grow with its years and mature with the centuries. It is already admired by its thousands of readers.

Printed in beautiful type, on heavy, fine paper, bound in bevelled boards, in good style; nearly 300 pages. Price $1.50, postage 16 cents. Very liberal discount to the trade.

For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 South Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

LYCEUM GUIDE,

A Collection of

SONGS, HYMNS, AND CHANTS,

Lessons, Readings and Recitations,

MARCHES AND CALISTHENICS,

(With Illustrations,)

TOGETHER WITH

Programmes and Exercises,

The Whole Designed for the Use of PROGRESSIVE SUNDAY LYCEUMS.

THIS NEW BOOK FOR SUNDAY LYCEUMS CONtains all the excellent features of previous works, with such improvements as the practical experience of Lyceums during the past six years have suggested.

Its appendix contains a large number of letters from Conductors of Lyceums and friends of the Institution, illustrating its beneficial influence, and giving much valuable information relating thereto.

This book is complete in every particular, and is illustrated with THIRTY FINE ENGRAVINGS of Banners, Emblematic Stands for Groups, Calisthenics, etc.

PRICE—In paper cover, 60 cents; postage, six cents. In boards, neat, strong, and durable, 75 cents; postage, 12 cents. In cloth, extra, gold lettered sides, $1 00; postage, 16 cents. From which prices liberal discount will be made on quantities for Lyceums.

MRS. MARIA M. KING'S WORKS.

THE PRINCIPLES OF NATURE, as discovered in the Development and Progress of the Universe; The Solar System—Laws and Methods of its Development; Earth—History of its Development; Exposition of the Spiritual Universe. Price reduced to $1.75; postage, 24 cents.

REAL LIFE IN THE SPIRIT LAND, Being Life Experience,—Scenes, Incidents, and Conditions, Illustrative of Spirit Life and the Principles of the Spiritual Philosophy. Price, $1.00; postage, 16 cents.

SOCIAL EVILS: Their Causes and Cure,—Being a Brief Discussion of the Social Status, with reference to Methods of Reform. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

THE SPIRITUAL PHILOSOPHY VS. DIABOLISM. In two lectures. Price, 15 cents; postage free.

WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM? and SHALL SPIRITUALISTS HAVE A CREED? In two lectures. Price, 25 cents; postage free.

GOD THE FATHER and MAN THE IMAGE OF GOD. In two lectures. Price, 15 cents; postage free.

* For sale, wholesale and retail, by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

VINE COTTAGE STORIES.

LITTLE HARRY'S WISH

OR

PLAYING SOLDIER.

BY MRS. H. N. GREEN.

ALSO

THE LITTLE FLOWER GIRL

AND

THE ORPHAN'S STRUGGLE,

By the Same Author.

S. S. JONES, Publisher,

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL OFFICE,

South Clark Street.

Chicago Ill.

The above named little works of about thirty pages each, are fresh from the press and belong to a series designed especially for children, youth and children in Progressive Lyceums or Libraries.

Mrs. H. N. Greene is one of the most popular writers of the present age and especially adapted to the writing of popular liberal books for Children.

This series of Books which we have entered upon publishing are designed for the youth everywhere, but of course their tone and philosophy will confine their sale principally to the families of Spiritualists, Liberalists and the Children's Progressive Lyceums.

Price, 15 cents each; postage 2 cents.

SECOND EDITION.

A WORK OF GREAT RESEARCH.

ONE RELIGION: MANY CREEDS.

BY ROSS WINANS.

"We object to what the Church demands, an unbounded and unjustifiable confidence in the infallibility of the writings of Moses and the prophets, and the Evangelists and the Apostles, and to the creeds as a result, a system cemented to an impossible compound of God and man. We protest that Christian theology, as we have it, is not taught by God himself, nor by Christ and his Apostles, but by men with established facts, nor is it comprehensible by our reason. We would show you that Christian ty, as taught among us is no better than other systems of religion in the Christian countries, and in some respects not so good.

"In the historic part of the Bible, in relation to the creation of the world, it has the common part also with several systems of theology here mentioned. They all had their cosmologies based on equally good authority and equally wide of the truth, and that found in the Bible. The time and manner of the creation, no man has ever known, or ever will know, in this life; nor is such knowledge of importance in preparing us for the life to come."—Extract from Preface.

This book is a large 12 mo. of nearly 400 pages, printed on fine, heavy-tint-d paper, and is sold at much

Frontier Department.

BY.....E. V. WILSON

Apotheosis.

Gone on to the gardens of the Summer Land, from Beaver Dam, Wis., in company with the angels, Ingraham Gould, in the 61st year of his earth-life.

My brother was born into this life at Leeds, Kennebec County, Me., on the 19th of January, 1811; born into the superior life on the 16th of July, 1871.

In his exchange from this to a higher life, he has gained; we have lost a friend and a brother; Beaver Dam has lost a citizen that cannot be replaced. His genius, enterprise, and ambition led him to do what few men will undertake to do—that is, to adorn the homes of the many as well as his own. His nursery was the pride of the city and will long remain, a green and beautiful monument to his memory. Everywhere throughout the West may be found the weeping willow, the mountain ash, and other ornamental trees from "Gould's Nursery."

Fruit trees bearing rich and luscious fruits, now testify to his earnest nature, "We are the works of thy hands." Vines bearing flowers and fruit are found throughout the West,—enduring monuments uttering his praise through nature's eternal laws, beautiful and silent witnesses. "Oakwood Cemetery," a beautiful shady place, where his ashes may rest undisturbed, where the living may wander, in spirit holding sweet communion with the past, present and future,—the creation of his brain, the fruit of his toil, a nobler monument to his memory than all that art could create out of the granite and marble ever produced from the hills of his native New England.

The gardener of Beaver Dam, the nurseryman of Wisconsin, has been promoted to the gardens as a nurseryman of the Summer Land. The trees of his nursery, in the pale starlight, bowed to the silent flowers and wept as he left for the gardens of Eden; and the flowers and trees of the Summer Land rejoiced when he came to their blooming paths and evergreen glades. "Welcome," the angels cried, "to our bowers of love!" Turning with a loving look toward his beautiful home in the Summer Land, then backward gazing, he saw behind him his own sweet home—his home, his flowers, trees, the fruit of his life-toil, and in their midst his sons, daughters, and wife, all blending their sorrows in the shadowy evening hour of their loss. Weep on, dear ones; it is well that you should weep, for tears are a means of relief to our over-taxed nature. Then, turning his gaze toward "Oakwood," he beheld fifteen hundred friends standing in silence and profound grief around his grave through the long and imposing service of the brotherhood to which he belonged.

Then he beheld the house in which he had so long dwelt lowered to its last resting-place—himself enfranchised, an immortal; and knew that he lived to be remembered on the shores of time and in the Summerland,—thus fully realising the gracious gospel of our Christ, Modern Spiritualism; for he was a Spiritualist, pure and true, and tender in soul.

To the dear ones left behind he sends greetings from his home divine.

"My sons and daughters,—children mine,—I greet you from the gardens of Eden, from beyond the shores of time. I charge you all, my works continue. The nursery keep, and Oakwood, where my ashes rest, develop into full fruition, as I designed.

"My companion, wife, and mate of mine, I thank thee for thy devotion and care through the long nights and days of watching, while my form burned with fever, wasting away. 'Tis past, Hannah. With sudden shock nature's wheels stood still, and I knew but this: that time had ceased and eternity began.

"To all who around my narrow grave gathered weeping, in spirit I send you greeting. Weep no more for me; for I am he that liveth and was dead. And behold I am alive evermore. Amen."

From the Tecumseh Chieftain.

The Death Change of G. M. Henderson.

On Wednesday morning, Aug. 23, in Brownville, Nebraska, passed into spirit life.

He was fully prepared for the death change; his high spiritual culture had taken all the sting from death,—the grave had no horrors for him; it was only a resting-place for the material form, not now needed when he had ascended and put on the spiritual body.

All who conversed with him on spiritual things, knew well his exalted state of mind; he was ready at any time to depart and be with the angels, "which is far better."

He was a man of rare delicacy of thought, and high refinement of sentiment. Such natures cannot be comprehended by those who are walking in the dark ways of material night. Yet brother Henderson with his genial presence and cordial smile, made many friends and no enemies, as he moved among all the varied conditions of mind in all its different states of moral and spiritual darkness. He was courteous, as all cultured minds are, and dealt gently with all, yet with firmness and dignity. He challenged respect; no one dared to treat him with disrespect. He had learned the great and beautiful lesson, which seems so hard for many to learn: "To take the beam out of his own eye before he took the mote out of his neighbor's eye." No harsh epithets, no severe denunciations, ever came from his lips for those who differed with him. Such things spring from dark and narrow minds.

Like Paul of old, our brother Henderson knew "the time of his departure was at hand," and like Paul, he could say, "I have fought the fight; I have kept the faith, and am now ready to be offered up." He talked freely of his departure; he cheerfully told his family he was going on a journey, and he bade them good-by; a short struggle of the spirit to disengage itself from the mortal body, and he was born into spirit-life.

Twice during his earth-life apoplexy had seized upon him; he felt the third approach was near, and he knew it would be fatal. But his departure is a triumph over death. No waiting and watching of anxious friends over his sick couch; no testing of medical skill; no bitter potions to swallow. He was needed on the "other side." The messenger came, the process of change was speedy, and in a few minutes he was in the lovely gardens of the Summer Land.

Sister Henderson and her children have the sympathy of many hearts. It is well known what a friend, a husband, a father, has passed into the skies. But we are glad to know they have had spiritual influence to enable them to prove the blessedness of spirit communion. They have still the same counselor and guide. They have our Canadian spirit mom. May [illegible] upon [illegible] into the spirit world; for we shall be judged by deeds done in the body.

"Friends of faith let graceless blasts fight,
He can't be wrong whose life is in the right."

Let us be continually striving to clothe our spirits in the pure white robes of truth and love and innocence and virtue; looking deeper and deeper into the eternities, so as to get larger and more comprehensive views of things, to enable us to have good will to all men, perform well our earth mission, and then go joyously to our beautiful home in the Summer Land.

London, Nebraska.

REMARKS.—We knew Geo. M. Henderson, formerly of Wisconsin, near Ripon, and know him to be a true man and full of good works, and in his place.

With sudden shock nature's physical organization stood still, and he knows that there is no such thing as death, but change; and now from the Summer Land he calls:

"I am he that liveth and was dead. And behold I am alive evermore. Amen."

Yes, brother, thou art alive evermore, amen; and on the royal journey of life thou wilt not forget thy friends. We are coming, too, brother, and in joy expect thy greetings.

Good-by. Remember us.

"THE HEATHEN CHINEE."

Miss Maloney on the Chinese Question.

[As there has been not a little curiosity to know who is the author of this exceedingly graphic and very popular sketch, which first appeared in Scribner's Monthly, we are glad to be able to inform the public that it was written by Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Dodge, author of "Hans Brinker" and the "Irvington Stories," and now one of the editors of The Hearth and Home.]

Och! don't be talkin'. Is it howld on, ye say? An' didn't I howld on till the heart of me was close broke entirely, and me waistin' that thin you could clutch me wid yer two hands? To think o' me tollin' like a nager for the six years I've been in Amerikey—bad luck to the day I iver left the ould country!—to be bate by the likes o' them! (faix an' I'll sit down when I'm ready, so I will, Ann Ryan, an' ye'd better be listenin' than drawin' your remarks). An' is it myself, with five good karacters from respectable places, would be herdin' wid the haythens? The saints forgive me, but I'd be buried alive sooner'n put up wid it a day longer. Shure an' I was the graneburn not to be layin' at wanst when the misess kim into me kitchen wid her palaver about the new waiterman which was brought out from Californy. "Hi'rish be handy to a night, Miss she," and Kitty, li'l crayture, looks to you to be kind and patient wid him, for he's a furriner," says she, a kind o' lookin' off. "Shure an' it's little I'll hinder nor interfere wid him nor any other, mum," sez I, a kind o' stiff, for I minded me how these French waithers, wid their pawper collars and brass rings on their fingers, is n't company for no gurril brought up dacint and honest. Och! sorra a bit I knew what was comin' till the misess walked into me kitchen smilin', and sez kind o' schared: "Here's Ping Wing, Kitty; an' you'll have too much sinse to mind his bein' a little shtrange." Wid that she shoots the doore, and I, misthrusting if I was tidied up sufficient for me fine buy, wid his pawper collar, looks up and—Howly fathers! may I nivir brathe another breath, but there stud a rale haythen Chineser s-grinnin' like he'd just come off a tay-box! It you'll belave me, the crayther was that yallow it 'nd sicken you to see him; and sorra stitch was on him but a black night gown over his throwers, and the front of his head shaved clane nor a copper biler, and a black tail hanging down from it brished, with his two feet shtuck into the haythenishest shoes you ever set eyes on. Och! but I was up stairs afore you could turn about, a-givin' the misess warnin', an' only shtoped wid her by her raisin, me wages two dollars, and playdin' wid me how it was a burnin' shame intirely to bear wid haythens and tache 'em all in our power—the saints save us! Well, the ways and trials I had wid that Chineser, Ann Ryan, I couldn't be tellin'. Not a blissid thing cud I do but he'd be lookin' on wid his eyes cocked up'ard like two pump-handles, an' he without a shpeck or smitch o' wh'shkers on him, an' his finger-nails full a yard long, bad cess to thim! you'd have to see the misess a-larnin' him, an' he grinnin' an' waggin' his pig-tail which was pieced out long wid some black shtuff (the haythen chate!) and gettin' into her ways wonderful quick, I don't deny, imitatin' that sharp you'd be surprised, an' ketchin' an' copyin' things the best uv us will do a hurried wid work, yet don't want comin' to the knowledge of the family—and back to him!

Is it ate wid him? Arrah, an would I be sittin' wid a haythen an' he a-sittin wid drumsticks—yes, an' atin' dogs an cats unknowst to me; I warrant you which it is the custom of them Chinesers, till the thought made me that sick I could die. An' did n't the crayther proffer to help me a week ago come Tooesday, an' me a-scrubbin' down me clane clothes for the ironin' an' fill his haythen mouth wid wather, an afore I could hinder squirrit it through his teeth strate over the best linen table-cloth, and fold it up tight, as innercent now as a baby, the dirty baste! But the worrest of it all was the copyin' he'd be doin' till ye'd be distharacted. It's yerself knows the tender feet that's on me since ever I've been in this counthry. Well and ivery that, I fell into a way o' slippin' me shoes off when I'd be sittin' down to pale the prateos or the likes o' that; and, do ye mind! that haythen would do the same thing after me whinever the misess set him to parin' apples or tomatoroes. The saints in Heaven couldn't have made him believe he could keep the shoes on him when he'd be paylin anything.

Did I have for that? Faix an' I did n't. Did n't he get me into trouble wid my misess, the haythen? You're aware yerself how the bundles comin' in from the grocery often contains more'n'll go into anything dacently. So for that matther, I'd now and then take out a cup o' sugar, or flour, or tay, an' wrap it in paper, an' put it in me bit of a box tucked under the ironin' blanket, the how it could n't be botherin' anyone. Well, what should it be, but this blissid Saturday mornin' the misess was a spakin' pleasant and respectful wid me in me kitchen when the grocer-boy comes in an' stands forninst her wid his bundles, an' she mentions like to Ping Wing (which I never could call him by that name nor any other but just haythen)—she motions to him, she does, for to take the boundles an' empty out the sugar an' what not where they belongs. If you'll believe me, Ann Ryan, what did that blasted Chineser do but take out a cup o' sugar, an' a handful o' tay, an' a bit o' chaze, right along the paper, wrap them into bits o' paper, an' I spachaless wid surprise, an' he the next minnit up wid the ironin' blanket and pullin' out me box, wid a shew o' bein' sly to put them in. Och, the Lord forgive me, but I cracked it, and the misses seein'—O Kitty [illegible] time to [illegible] fun is gone.

Spiritual Grove Meeting.

[Reported for the Religio-Philosophical Journal.]

According to previous notice, a Spiritual Grove Meeting was held at Oakfields, Wisconsin, Aug. 19th and 20th.

The weather was such that our first session was held in the Union church.

The meeting was called to order by Rev. J. O. Barrett, State Missionary. Mr. Orvis appointed Chairman; Mrs. F. A. Logan, Secretary.

Short speeches were made by Spiritualists, Universalists, and Baptists.

Rev. J. O. Barrett spoke of the rise and progress of Spiritualism in the State; thought the cause was rapidly advancing.

Dr. Dunn dwelt upon the happy influences of our faith.

Dr. Underhill thought that we were in need of more Spirituality, more life.

Mrs. Logan hoped we had met not only for the purpose of having our spiritual strength renewed, but to devise plans and purposes for more earnest efforts in the cause of human advancement.

Rev. W. J. Gosse, Universalist, said he could see no difference in the fundamental teachings of Spiritualism and Universalism, except in spirit communion. Said he would give all the world to have the evidence that we have.

Then followed a little friendly discussion on doctrinal points, when the meeting adjourned to meet at 8 o'clock.

The evening session opened with good music and an original poem, composed on seeing a beautiful bouquet made from flowers cultivated by Waupun prisoners, and brought to our meeting by the matron, Mrs. Benjamin, who is, with her husband, a Spiritualist. The poem was written by Mrs. F. A. Logan.

Dr. Dunn gave a fine address upon the rise, growth, and progress of Spiritualism, and answered some of the popular objections to it.

Convened Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

The conference was opened by the Rev. McNeill, Universalist. He spoke at some length; said the points of disagreement between Universalists and Spiritualists were so few that they should forever be buried out of sight. He hailed every movement that was calculated to humanize the world; believed in continued inspiration from time immemorial to the present; that all who could stand before a congregation and instruct them were inspired.

Rev. Gosse thought a belief in an omnipresent God would tend to spiritualize, even without the belief in spirit guides.

Dr. Underhill spoke over an hour on the sciences of mind, of chemistry, and of the wonderful results of mesmerism. His well-stored mind always interests and holds his hearers. Although over seventy-five years of age, yet young and hopeful in spirit.

Adjourned to meet at two o'clock in the grove.

Music by the choir from the Spiritual Harp. Dr. Dunn explained spirit control. Rev. J. O. Barrett gave a fine lecture; wished that all men might see the truth as he saw it.

Mrs. Mattie Hulett Parry followed with an address on "Practical Christianity as Theoretical Christianity," to the point and purpose. Theoretical Christianity sits her subjects down in cushioned pews; makes long prayers to be seen of men. Practical Christianity aids the poor, the fallen, the outcasts to a higher plane.

The evening session was devoted to earnest and eloquent speeches by Dr. Underhill, Mrs. F. A. Logan, Dr. Dunn, and Mrs. Parry.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the citizens for their hospitality, and to the speakers for their able addresses.

Time fails me to give even a synopsis of all the good things spoken—not only by those named above, but by others who do not claim to be public speakers.

Dr. Underhill repeated many beautiful poems, also Mrs. Logan, which helped to make up variety, and give point and pathos to sentiments advanced during the meeting.

Thus ended one of our best grove meetings, which are calculated to do much good. They seem but the prelude to that promised gathering in the Summer Land.

MRS. F. A. LOGAN.

Genesee, Wis.

Meeting at North Collins, N. Y.

The annual meeting of the friends of human progress, of North Collins, commenced here on Friday last, continuing through three days. It was not as largely attended as usual, on account of a very heavy rain which continued without intermission through the last two days, notwithstanding which, old Hemlock Hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, holding about one thousand people. All of them appeared to manifest a deep and abiding interest in our great and glorious cause.

During every session of the entire three days the meeting was ably addressed by that great advocate of liberty and religious freedom, G. B. Stebbins, of Detroit. Also by that highly gifted speaker, Mrs. L. Watson, of Titusville, Pa. We were also favored by the presence of Wm. Loyd, of Philadelphia, L. B. Howe, of Fredonia, Mr. Murray, of Chicago, Geo. W. Taylor, and others. All gave good satisfaction, which was made manifest by a vote of thanks from the entire audience.

H. SMITH.

North Collins, N. Y.

Fraternal Calls.

Bros. Hon. Paul Bremond and General W. H. Parsons, of Houston, TEXAS, Dr. Y. A. Carr, of Mobile, Alabama, and E. V. Littlepage, Esq., of Guatamala, Central America, all gentlemen of education and eminent business talents, gave us fraternal calls during the last week.

Each of these gentlemen speak in high terms of the advancement of the cause of Spiritualism, and manifest a deep interest in its phenomena and philosophy,—physical and mental.

Biography of Satan.

The Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, of Chicago, issue "The Biography of Satan; or a Historical Exposition of the Devil and his Fiery Dominions," by K. Graves. It aims to show the Oriental origin of the belief in a devil and future punishment, also the Pagan origin of such scriptural terms as "Bottomless Pit," "Lake of Fire and Brimstone," "Keys of Hell," &c. &c. It is just the issue for these breaking-up times of old blind Theology, and will do great good in advancing the welcome work.—Banner of Light.

THOSE WHO WISH to have this paper discontinued when the time is up to which it is paid for, should notify us of that wish two weeks be- time to [illegible] an or-

Mrs. Addie L. Ballou.

Mrs. Ballou has labored efficiently during the past year in Kentucky, Illinois and Indiana. On Friday last she passed through the city on her way to Cambridge, Ill.

The card of James Brooks, the developing medium, will be found in another column of this paper. He is reported by those who have patronized him, as a very good developing medium.

Mrs. Robinson's Tobacco Antidote.

The most certain and perfectly harmless antidote for the poisonous effects, and remedy for the tobacco appetite, is known by the above name.

It is compounded by Mrs. A. H. Robinson, the celebrated medium of Chicago, while entranced by a celebrated chemist, long in spirit life. This antidote is warranted to break the habit of using tobacco by the inveterate lover of the weed, when the directions (on each box) are followed.

Agents for selling the same throughout the country are wanted. For sale, wholesale and retail, at this office. Price $2.00 per box—sent by mail free of postage, on receipt of the money.

An Entirely New Proposition.

We now have in press, and will be ready to fill orders before this notice reaches our readers a splendid new book, entitled THE SUNDAY QUESTION, and SELF-CONTRADICTIONS OF THE BIBLE.

This work consists of 123 large, closely printed pages. It is an exhaustive review of the so-called Sunday question, and self-contradictions of the Bible. The work shows the so-called divine authority for the supposed holy day, to be the cunning device of designing priests rather than the inspiration of a Infinite God! This work, which we sell for the low price of fifty cents, and send the same free of postage on the receipt of the money, we will send to any old subscriber on receipt of seventy-five cents, together with the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL to any new subscriber on trial for three months; or, we will send the same work and the JOURNAL for three months on trial direct to a new subscriber, on the receipt of seventy-five cents. For one dollar, we will send for a new subscriber, the JOURNAL three months and the above-named book, together with that very remarkable book called LIFE'S UNFOLDINGS, or The Wonders of the Universe Revealed to Man.

We hope that every subscriber to whom we are now sending the JOURNAL will avail him or herself of this generous offer, and thus secure these books, as well as to thus aid in doubling the number of the subscribers to the JOURNAL.

Address S. S. Jones, 189 South Clark street Chicago, Ill.

[THIRD EDITION, REVISED AND CORRECTED.]

JUST PUBLISHED!

A Complete and Truthful History of that Good Man and

PRINCE OF MEDIUMS,

Jesus of Nazareth

BY

PAUL AND JUDAS,

Through Alexander Smyth, Medium.

This work has been read with intense interest by thousands, and is universally pronounced the most

REMARKABLE WORK

in the whole line of Spiritualistic Literature. It is the only true and reliable history of the remarkable medium called Jesus, ever written. After waiting eighteen hundred years, PAUL and JUDAS, finding the times propitious, and an excellent medium through whom to communicate, have given to the world a book of lasting interest, by taking possession of Mr. Smyth about one hour in every twenty-four, assuring all his powers, giving a continued series of well-connected scenes, presenting scenery, characters and personages, dialogues and actions in their regular order and succession, embracing all the most important personages and incidents which occurred during the sojourn of Jesus upon earth. There was, probably, no book ever written in which such perfect life-pictures occur; every city and country village, every river, brook and mountain, and scenery in general, is so vividly portrayed that an actual journey through the country could hardly be more interesting. The characters in this unexampled drama are so faithfully portrayed, that, as you are introduced to each in turn, you seem well acquainted and delighted with your company, and the many points of interest you are called to visit. The book is replete with interest from beginning to end, and contains 319 closely printed pages.

PRICE, $1.50; postage, 20 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 South Clark St. Chicago.

MICROSCOPES.

We are happy to announce to our numerous readers that we have made arrangements to be supplied with the very best COMPOUND MICROSCOPES that are manufactured. Those we are now handling have none of the deficiencies complained of in most cheap microscopes. They are made of the best materials, are finished to order in every part, and are not only well adapted for use, but are also ORNAMENTAL.

No. 1655 MICROSCOPE,—Brass body,—6 inches high,—One Object Lens:—POWER 40 DIAMETERS.

Neatly packed in a Mahogany Case, with one prepared object, and sold for the low price of $3.00.

No. 1660, The UNIVERSAL HOUSEHOLD MICROSCOPE,—Price $5.50.—The Most Convenient, Complete, and Powerful Microscope ever offered for this low price.

It has the important parts of a first-class instrument, is readily adjusted, and will command at once any object to inspection. It has a firm tripod base of cast iron, and the facility for inclining to any angle, for convenience of observation; an adjustable eye-piece for draw-tube, and two object glasses of different powers, with one prepared object, all packed in a neat walnut case with hinged hooks. It has a magnifying power of 20 to 100 diameters, or 400 to 10,000 times the area.

We can heartily recommend either of the above instruments, and feel confident that every purchaser will be pleased, and need not be ashamed from meeting for the other, for it will give them perfect satisfaction, and the possessing of so wide a range of observation and study.

☞ These Microscopes can be sent only by express; they cannot go by the mails. Our friends will please recollect this when ordering and giving shipping directions.

PREPARED OBJECTS.

We have a large variety of objects neatly prepared and mounted for the Microscope, which will command for either of the above instruments, $2.50 per doz., or 25 cts. each. These to be ordered by express.

BOOK OF THE MICROSCOPE.

An interesting book on the Microscope, with over 400 illustrations, and directions for collecting and preserving the objects can be sent to any address on receipt of 25 cents.

☞ For any or all of the above goods, address the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE

HOLLOW GLOBE;

Or, the World's Agitator and Reconciler.

A Treatise on the Physical Conformation of the Earth.

PRESENTED THROUGH THE ORGANISM OF M. L. SHERMAN, M.D.,

AND WRITTEN BY

PROF. WM. F. LYON.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"THIS book is addressed to the reasoning intelligence Humanity,—to all inquiring and reflective minds, everywhere upon the earth.

"We earnestly request the reader to suspend his judgement concerning the ideas advanced, until he has carefully perused its pages; when he may be better prepared to form his opinions, and offer his criticisms.

"We do not claim that the startling teachings contained in this work are infallible, neither are they presented in an authoritative manner. But we do claim that it contains more original, natural and startling ideas, which are of great interest to civilized humanity, and which seem to be entirely irrefutable, than any book of its size that has made its appearance in modern times.

"We, therefore, commend it to the careful consideration of the modern thinker, being fully persuaded that its pages contain a large fund of thought which may open to his mind new fields of research, thus tending to enlarge his understanding, and enlighten his intellect."

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION.

"THE central idea contained in the following work, and the one that most of these chapters are designed to substantiate, is, that this globe is constructed, not in the form of a hollow sphere, with a shell some thirty to forty miles in thickness, and that the interior surface, which is a beautiful world in a more highly developed condition than the exterior, is accessible by a circuitous and spirally formed aperture that may be found in the unexplored open Polar Sea, and in opening affords an easy passage by land and deep channel leading from one surface to the other, and that the largest ships of commerce may sail or steam quite the way with no more facility as they now pass through any other winding or somewhat crooked channel. And we have endeavored to show as clearly as possible, that the physical formation of the globe is such as to be perfectly compatible with an outer and inner world, or two worlds instead of one."

12 mo., 447 pp. Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

☞ For sale by the RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL PUBLISHING HOUSE, 189 S. Clark St., Chicago.

ATTRACTIVE NEW BOOKS.

ERNEST RENAN'S WORKS.

THE LIFE OF JESUS.—THE LIFE OF SAINT PAUL.—AND THE LIVES OF THE APOSTLES.

These three remarkable books, by the great French Philosopher, are attracting the earnest attention of all readers. If They are of great power and originality, eloquently and honestly written, beautiful in style, admirable in treatment, and filled with reverence, tenderness, and warmth of heart.

☞ Price $1.75 each; postage 20 cents.

THE BIBLE IN INDIA;

Or; the Hindoo Origin of Hebrew and Christian Revelation. Translated from the French of Louis Jacolliot. A remarkable volume, which is making a great sensation in Europe, and which has the profoundest attention of thinking people. ☞ Price $2.00; postage 20 cents.

HABITS OF GOOD SOCIETY.

A hand Book for Ladies and Gentlemen; with hints and anecdotes concerning nice points of taste, good breeding, and the art of making one's self agreeable. The best and most entertaining book on the subject ever published.

☞ Price $1.75; postage 20 cents.

THE ART OF CONVERSATION,

With directions for Self-Culture. Teaching the art of conversing with ease and propriety, and acting forth the literary knowledge requisite to appear to advantage in good society. A book of practical and invaluable worth.

Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

THE ARTS OF WRITING, READING, AND SPEAKING.

A remarkably clever book that every one, whether educated or not, will find of immense advantage and profit. A capital companion for that ever popular work, THE ART OF CONVERSATION. ☞ Price $1.50; postage 20 cents.

☞ These books are all beautifully printed and handsomely bound in cloth covers, with gilt backs.

For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio Philosophical Publishing House, 189 S. Clark street, Chicago, Ill.

[Reprinted from the London edition of 1788 by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, Chicago.]

THE

BHAGVAT-GEETA,

Or Dialogues of

KREESHNA AND ARJOON.

In eighteen lectures, with notes. Translated from the original Sanskrit, or ancient language of the Brahmins.

BY CHARLES WILKINS,

Senior merchant in the service of the Honorable, the East India Company, in their Bengal Establishment.

The antiquity of the original and the veneration in which it has been held for so many ages by a very considerable portion of the human race, renders it one of the greatest curiosities ever presented to the literary world.

Our edition of the BHAGVAT-GEETA (sometimes called the Hindoo New Testament) is printed on laid, tinted paper and beautifully bound. It is in great demand, orders for nearly all of the first edition having been received before it left the binder's hands.

Price $1.25; postage, 12 cents.

☞ For sale, wholesale and retail, by the Religio-Philosophical Publishing House, 187 & 189 S. Clark st., Chicago.

BELVIDERE SEMINARY,

FOR YOUTHS OF BOTH SEXES,

Belvidere New Jersey. Fall Term begins Wednesday, Sept. 13th. One of the most liberal institutions in the land, being strictly non-sectarian. It has the superior advantages of a healthful and beautiful location, added to the comforts and genial influences of a pleasant home, with excellent opportunities for obtaining a practical education in any or all of its several departments, English, Classical, Literary, and Scientific. Pupils graduate in each department in Gymnastics.

For catalogues, address MISSES BUSH, Principals.

v10 n17 9t.

WANTED AGENTS

In every Town and City, to sell an article needed in every household. SELLS RAPIDLY. Large PROFITS to AGENTS. Send Stamp for Circulars. C. H. WOOLLEY & Co., Room 28, No. 161 Lasalle St., Chicago.

v10 n12 tf

EMPRESS!

THE "EMPRESS" and other Rubber Goods FOR

The Use of Ladies and Gentlemen.

Send stamp for circulars. Address "EMPRESS" Co. [illegible] Third St., Room 14 Cincinnati.

ROCHELLE!

Extremely Resistive and Negative Fabrics, for [illegible] of this color.

RELIGIO-PHILOSOPHICAL JOURNAL.

HARMONIAL PHILOSOPHY

DEVOTED TO THE ARTS AND SCIENCES, LITERATURE, ROMANCE AND GENERAL REFORM.

$3.00 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.] Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause: she only asks a hearing. [SINGLE COPIES EIGHT CENTS.

S. S. JONES, PUBLISHER AND PROPRIETOR. CHICAGO, SEPTEMBER 23, 1871. VOL. XI.—NO. 1.

From the Quarterly Journal of Science, July, 1871.

AN EXPERIMENTAL INVESTIGATION OF A NEW FORCE.

By William Crookes, F.R.S.

Twelve months ago, in this journal, I wrote an article, in which, after expressing in the most emphatic manner my belief in the occurrence, under certain circumstances, of phenomena inexplicable by any known natural laws, I indicated several tests which men of science had a right to demand before giving credence to the genuineness of these phenomena. Among the tests pointed out were, "that a delicately poised balance should be moved under test conditions;" and that some exhibition of power equivalent to so many "foot-pounds" should be "manifested in his laboratory, where the experimentalist could weigh, measure, and submit it to proper tests." I said, too, that I could not promise to enter fully into this subject, owing to the difficulties of obtaining opportunities, and the numerous failures attending the inquiry; moreover, that "the persons in whose presence these phenomena take place are few in number, and opportunities for experimenting with previously arranged apparatus are rarer still."

Opportunities having since offered for pursuing the investigation, I have gladly availed myself of them for applying to these phenomena careful scientific testing experiments, and I have thus arrived at certain definite results which I think it right should be published. These experiments appear conclusively to establish the existence of a new force, in some unknown manner connected with the human organization, which for convenience may be called the "Psychic Force."

Of all the persons endowed with a powerful development of this Psychic Force, and who have been termed "mediums" upon quite another theory of its origin, Mr. Daniel Dunglass Home is the most remarkable, and it is mainly owing to the many opportunities I have had of carrying on my investigation in his presence, that I am enabled to affirm so conclusively the existence of this force. The experiments I have tried have been very numerous, but owing to our imperfect knowledge of the conditions which favor or oppose the manifestations of this force, to the apparently capricious manner in which it is exerted, and to the fact that Mr. Home himself is subject to unaccountable ebbs and flows of the force, it has but seldom happened that a result obtained on one occasion could be subsequently confirmed and tested with apparatus specially contrived for the purpose.

Among the remarkable phenomena which occur under Mr. Home's influence, the most striking, as well as the most easily tested with scientific accuracy are: (1) the alternation in the weight of bodies, and (2) the playing of tunes upon musical instruments (generally an accordion, for convience of portability) without direct human intervention, under conditions rendering contact or connection with the keys impossible. Not until I had witnessed these facts some half dozen times, and scrutinized them with all the critical acumen I possess, did I become convinced of their objective reality. Still, desiring to place the matter beyond the shadow of a doubt, I invited Mr. Home on several occasions to come to my own house, where, in the presence of a few scientific inquirers, these phenomena could be submitted to crucial experiments.

The meetings took place in the evening, in a large room lighted by gas. The apparatus prepared for the purpose of testing the movements of the accordion, consisted of a cage formed of two wooden hoops, respectively 1 foot 10 inches and 2 feet in diameter, connected together by twelve narrow laths, each 1 one foot 10 inches long, so as to form a drum-shaped frame, open at the top and bottom; round this 50 yards of insulated copper wire were wound in twenty-four rounds, each being rather less than an inch from its neighbor. These horizontal strands of wire were then netted together firmly with string, so as to form meshes rather less than 2 inches long by 1 inch high. The height of this cage was such that it would just slip under my dining table, but be too close to the top to allow of the hand being introduced into the interior, or to admit of a foot being pushed underneath it. In another room were two Grove's cells, wires being led from them into the dining-room for connection, if desirable, with the wire surrounding the cage.

The accordion was a new one, having been purchased for these experiments at Wheatstone's, in Conduit Street. Mr. Home had neither handled nor seen the instrument before the commencement of the test experiments.

In another part of the room an apparatus was fitted up for experimenting on the alteration in the weight of a body. It consisted of a mahogany board, 36 inches long by 9½ inches wide and 1 inch thick. At each end a strip of mahogany, 1½ inches wide, was screwed on, forming feet. One end of the board rested on a firm table, whilst the other end was supported by a [illegible] from a substantial tripod, [illegible] was fitted with a self-[illegible] a manner that it [illegible] weight indicated by [illegible] was adjusted to [illegible] board was horizontal, its foot resting flat on the support. In this position its weight was 3 lbs., as marked by the pointer of the balance.

Before Mr. Home entered the room, the apparatus had been arranged in position, and he had not even had the object of it explained to him before sitting down. It may, perhaps, be worth while to add, for the purpose of anticipating some critical remarks which are likely to be made, that in the afternoon I called for Mr. Home at his apartments, and when there, he suggested that as he had to change his dress, perhaps I should not object to continue our conversation in his bed-room. I am, therefore, enabled to state positively that no machinery, apparatus, or contrivance of any sort was secreted about him.

The investigators present on the test occasion were an eminent physicist, high in the ranks of the Royal Society, whom I will call Dr. A. B.; a well-known sergeant-at-law, whom I will call Sergeant C. D.; my brother; and my chemical assistant.

Mr. Home sat in a low easy chair at the side of the table. Close in front under the table was the aforesaid cage, one of his legs being on each side of it. I sat close to him on his left, and another observer sat close on his right, the rest of the party being seated at convenient distances round the table.

For the greater part of the evening, particularly when anything of importance was going forward, the observers on each side of Mr. Home kept their feet respectively on his feet, so as to be able to detect his least movement.

The temperature of the room varied from 68 to 70 F.

Mr. Home took the accordion between the thumb and middle finger of one hand at the opposite end to the keys (to save repetition, this will be subsequently called 'in the usual manner'). Having previously opened the bass key myself, and the cage being drawn from under the table so as just to allow the accordion to be passed in keys downwards, it was pushed back as close as Mr. Home's arm would permit, but without hiding his hand from those next to him. Very soon the accordion was seen by those on each side to be waving about in a somewhat curious manner; then sounds came from it, and finally several notes were played in succession. Whilst this was going on, my assistant got under the table, and reported that the accordion was expanding and contracting; at the same time it was seen that Mr. Home's hand which held it was quite still, his other hand resting on the table.

Presently the accordion was seen by those on either side of Mr. Home to move about, oscillating and going round and round the cage, and playing at the same time. Dr. A. B now looked under the table, and said that Mr. Home's hand appeared quite still, whilst the accordion was moving about emitting distinct sounds.

Mr. Home still holding the accordion in the usual manner in the cage, his feet being held by those next him, and his other hand resting on the table, we heard distinct and separate notes sounded in succession, and then a simple air was played. As such a result could only have been produced by the various keys of the instrument being acted upon in harmonious succession, this was considered by those present to be a crucial experiment. But the sequel was still more striking, for Mr. Home then actually let go the accordion, removed his hand quite out of the cage, and placed it in the hand of the person next to him, the instrument then continuing to play whilst no one was touching it.

I was now desirous of trying what would be the effect of passing the battery current round the insulated wire of the cage, and my assistant accordingly made the connection with the wires from the two Grove's cells. Mr. Home again held the instrument inside the cage in the same manner as before, when it immediately sounded and moved about vigorously. But whether the electric current passing round the cage assisted the manifestation of force inside, it is impossible to say.

The accordion was now again taken without any visible touch from Mr. Home's hand, which he removed from it entirely; I and two of the others present not only seeing his release, but the accordion also floating about with no visible support inside the cage. This was repeated a second time, after a short interval. Mr. Home presently re-inserted his hand in the cage, and again took hold of the accordion. It then commenced to play, at first chords and runs, and afterwards a well-known sweet and plaintive melody which it executed perfectly in a very beautiful manner. Whilst this tune was being played, I took hold of Mr. Home's arm below the elbow, and gently slid my hand down it until I touched the top of the accordion. He was not moving a muscle. His other hand was on the table, visible to all, and his feet were under the feet of those next to him.

Having met with such striking results in the experiments with the accordion in the cage, we turned to the balance apparatus already described. Mr. Home placed the tips of his fingers lightly on the extreme end of the mahogany board which was resting on the support, whilst Dr. A. B. and myself sat, one on each side of it, watching for any effect which might be produced. Almost immediately the pointer of the balance was seen to descend. After a few seconds it rose again. This movement was repeated several times, as if by successive waves of the Psychic Force. The end of the board was observed to oscillate slowly up and down during the time.

Mr. Home now of his own accord took a small hand-bell and a little card match-box, which happened to be near and placed one under each hand, to satisfy us, as he said, that he was not producing the downward pressure. The very slow oscillation of the spring balance became more marked, and Dr. A. B., on watching the index, said that he saw it descend to 6½ lbs. The normal weight of the board as so suspended being 3 lbs., the additional downward pull was therefore 3½ lbs. On looking immediately afterwards at the automatic register, we saw that the index had at one time descended so low, as 9 lbs., showing a maximum pull of 6 lbs.

In order to see whether it was possible to produce much effect on the spring balance by pressure at the place where Mr. Home's fingers had been, I stepped upon the table and stood on one foot at the end of the board. Dr. A. B., who was observing the index of the balance, said that the whole weight of my body (140 lbs.) so applied only sunk the index 1¼ lbs., or two 2 lbs. when I jerked up and down. Mr. Home had been sitting in a low easy-chair, and could not, therefore, had he tried his utmost, have exerted any material influence on these results. I need scarcely add that his feet as well as his hands were closely watched by all in the room.

This experiment to me appears, if possible, more striking than the one with the accordion. As will be seen by the description, the board was arranged perfectly horizontally, and it was particularly noticed that Mr. Home's fingers were not at any time advanced more than 1½ inches from the extreme end, as shown by a pencil-mark, which, with Dr. A. B.'s acquiescence, I made at the time. Now, the wooden board being also 1½ inches wide, and resting flat on the table, it is evident that no amount of pressure exerted within this space of 1½ inches could produce any action on the balance. Again, it is also evident that when the end furtherest from Mr. Home sank, the board would turn on the further edge of this foot as on a fulcrum. The arrangements was consequently that of a see-saw, 36 inches in length, the fulcrum being 1½ inches from one end; were he therefore to have exerted a downward pressure, it would have been in opposition to the force which was causing the other end of the board to move down.

The slight downward pressure shown by the balance when I stood on the board was owing probably to my foot extending beyond this fulcrum.

I have now given a plain unvarnished statement of the facts from copious notes written at the time the occurrences were taking place and copied out in full immediately after. Indeed, it would be fatal to the object I have in view—that of urging the scientific investigation of these phenomena—were I to exaggerate ever so little; for although to my readers Dr. A. B. is at present represented by incorporeal initials, to me the letters represent a power in the scientific world that would certainly convict me if I were to prove an untrustworthy narrator.

I confess I am surprised and pained at the timidity shown by known men of scientific men in reference to this subject. Some little time ago, when an opportunity was first presented to me of examining into the subject, I invited the cooperation of some scientific friends in a systematic investigation; but I soon found out that to obtain a scientific committee for the investigation of this class of facts was out of the question, and that I must be content to rely on my own endeavors, aided by the co-operation from time to time of the new scientific and learned friends who were willing to join in the inquiry. I still feel that it would be better were such a committee of known men to be formed, who would meet Mr. Home in a fair and unbiassed manner, and I would gladly assist in its formation; but the difficulties in the way are great.

A committee of scientific men met Mr. Home some months ago at St. Petersburg. They had one meeting only, which was attended with negative results; and on the strength of this they published a report highly unfavorable to Mr. Home. The explanation of this failure, which is all they have accused him of, appears to me quite simple. Whatever the nature of Mr. Home's power, it is very variable, and at times entirely absent. It is obvious that the Russian experiment was tried when this force was at a minimum. The same thing has frequently happened within my own experience. A party of scientific men met Mr. Home at my house, and the results were as negative as those at St. Petersburg. Instead, however, of throwing up the inquiry, we patiently repeated the trial a second and a third time, when we met with results which are positive.

